as this little child. A little child's humility, want of assumption, sense of helplessness and perfect trust, and teachableness should be, and are in fact, the characteristics of those who have been truly converted. They seek to know what the will of God is, so that they can intelligently and faithfully do it. Like Paul, the language of their hearts is, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do, and when the answer is found they confer not with flesh and blood but

AT ONCE OBEY.

To Paul it was said: "Arise;"—he was still prostrate—and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do. These commands were the first given and the first to be obeyed, the first test of an obedient mind. Had he rebelled at the start the further instruction would never have been given, the first commands take for granted that they will be obeyed. Jesus when in flesh even, knew what was in man, would he know less after the power of an endless life had taken possession of him? No! Ananias who who was sent to Saul's relief was told that the former persecutor of the saints was a chosen vessel of the Lord's before the Gentiles, and kings and the children of Israel." And when Ananias came and said, "Brother Saul receive thy sight. The God of our fathers hath chosen thee that thou shouldst know his will, and see that Just One, and shouldest hear the voice of his mouth: for thou shalt be witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard. And now, why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized, and calling on the name of the Lord;" and the testimony says he arose and was baptized. Was he not baptized for the purpose stated by the Lord's messenger? If he was to be rid of his sins on complying with that ordinance, would he not have died in his sins if he had not complied with it? And now let us see if this was an exceptional case, or if it was one of the conditions attached to God's

TO BEAR HIS NAME

WASH AWAY THY SINS

UNIVERSAL LAW OF PARDON—

we mean, was it one of the conditions of the Salvation offered to mankind in the name and by the authority of the resurrected and ascended and glorified Jesus? How can we doubt the latter conclusion after reading the commission given to his disciples? He said "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." This verse in the Diaglott, Campbell's, Young's, Rotherham's, Alford's, Lange's, Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's, Henderson's, Sawyer's Bible Union Revised and Adam Clark's Translations reads. "Disciple all nations," instead of teach all nations, either in the text or margin, quite a consensus of learned opinion, but the meaning is about the same. A disciple in the New Testament sense is, says the Diaglott,

"A FOLLOWER OF CHRIST, etc., or a convert to his gospel," what we call Christian, or saint. (Acts vi. 1) a member of the congregation of God (Rom. i. 2) the Disciples were first called Christians in Antioch. Acts xi. 26. The Disciples came together to break bread on the first day of the week. See Acts xx. 7. But besides instructing them in gospel promises, the Disciples were commanded to baptize the converts they were to make, or may make. Their minds were first to be changed, and then their state or condition, or relation (Mind and Christ had to be changed before no benefit would result from baptism, and therefore

THEY MUST BE BAPTIZED

into the name of the Father Son and Spirit.—and were thenceforth spoken of as the Church of God (i. e congregation) see 1 Cor. i. 2; and the Church in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ, see 1 Thess. i. 1; and "Holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling," or invitation. The commission tells now they came to be in God and Christ. They were commanded to be baptized into them, and as the same Spirit which gave the command afterwards recognized these converts as

BEING IN GOD AND CHRIST

there can be no serious doubt in any intelligent mind in regard to the process or means employed. This was no new way of making disciples. He made and baptized more disciples than John, even,—but the instruction devolved upon him, and the baptizing upon the little flock who had previously been made disciples, see John iv. 1. Will any one have the hardihood to say that those said to be

IN GOD AND CHRIST

and in the Church of God, would have been thus in God and Christ and the Church of God if they had not obeyed the instruction given for thus initiating, so to speak? The next thing is, to ascertain if the instruction given in Matt. xxxviii. 19 was obeyed by the disciples who were addressed in the words "Go ye,"—Turn to the history of the doings of the Apostles almost immediately after the Lord left them to execute the commission given them, and read the grand outline of the truth as it is in Jesus inspired by the Spirit promised them: note well the

DO NOT TURN THE AUDIENCE,

and the reply to the question, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" The Spirit in Peter commanded them to repent, and be baptized, every one of you" [who believe the gospel, and ask what you shall do to save yourselves from this untoward generation] yes; "Reform and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins." Is this only a news item, or is it the universal

LAW OF PARDON?

If it is, we shall see reference to it, and observance of it, throughout the Apostolic ministry, for the book lies wide open. We refer to a few references to it and leave those interested to continue investigation. Those who gladly received Peter's words were baptized. Acts ii. 41. When the things of the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus were believed by the Samaritans they were baptized, not before. Acts viii. 12. Philip taught the Eunuch and then baptized him. Acts viii. 38. Saul arose after receiving sight and was baptized. Acts ix. 18. Peter commanded Cornelius and his friends to be baptized. Acts x. 48. Lydia and her household were baptized, the jailer and all his were baptized, many Corinthians are baptized, certain at Ephesus who had been baptized without proper instruction were rebaptized. Acts xix. 8. See also particularly, Rom. vi. 3, 4, 5; Gal. iii. 27; Col. ii. 12; 1 Pet. iii. 21; Eph. v. 26, and Titus iii 5.

The testimony is so simple, and so uniform and consistent throughout, that no one who can read and reject it, is one of those who will not endure sound doctrine and who turns away his ears from it. We tremble for those who become the apologists of such, and inspire in them vain hopes.

Will some brother or sister please explain through THE RESTITUTION the 5th chapter of 2 Cor. from first to sixteenth verse and oblige,

CHURCH OF THE BLESSED HOPE, CLEVELAND, O.—BIBLE CLASS PAPERS.

NO 4.

"For none of us liveth to himself, and none dieth to himself: For whether we live we live unto the Lord; or whether we die we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die we are the Lord's." R. V. Rom. xiv. 7, 8.

There is such a thing as a person being so wrapped up in [his own selfish plans that he is virtually living to himself—or alone. Such an one must be an alien from the commonwealth of Israel and a stranger to the covenant of promise. Such an one belongs to the class alluded to by the same writer, as "having no hope and without God in the world." They may live to themselves and never realize their hopeless condition while strength and pride are their's. But robbed of these by misfortune, disease or old age, or all these combined, where is their help in the time of trouble? Alone, he lives, doubly alone he dies. Truly without hope and without God. Not so the class Paul is writing to, and with whom he never fails to number himself. It is always a source of pleasure and satisfaction to read PAUL'S "WE" AND "US," to feel ourselves included in his noble company. Do you ask why? Who was Paul? and who was he writing to? If you will look back to the 1st chapter of Romans you will find the answer to both questions. Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ called to be an apostle—To all that be at Rome,"—Does he mean to all the citizens of Rome—bond and free—rich or poor—good or bad? No he does not stop there—"beloved of God, called to be saints." You know who the saints are for you have often exhorted one another to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered unto the saints"—thus quoting the very words of one of the apostles.

Those who are contending for the faith which has been delivered to them are the called ones—they are the class Paul is talking to in our text. "None of them liveth unto himself, nor dieth to himself." The best example of what this means is furnished by the apostle himself in Phillipians 1st chap. 20-21st verses. "So now, also, Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death. For to me, to live is Christ and to die is gain." This is the of self to Christ—the determination that whether he lived or whether he died it should be to the Lord—as he says to the Romans—For whether we live, we live unto the Lord, and whether we die, we die unto the Lord,—therefore whether we live or die we are the Lord's. Such as Paul would have us all be, have this promise:—"I will never leave thee nor forsake thee, so that they may boldly say. The Lord is my helper: and I will not fear what man shall do unto me." Heb. xiii. 6 and 7.

For unto you, it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake." Phil. i. 29.

We cannot think of this verse too often. We need it when we think we are unjustly or unkindly treated. We need it when the voice of the scoffer rings in our ears, and need it when natural ties and family cares and responsibilities conflict with our call to service for the Master. Also to remember the words—And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily, I say unto you; Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Matt. xxxv. 40.

There is a bond of unity which unites all his brethren to each other, and all to God through him; and as he pictures himself as the King speaking to those who have done good unto these his brethren and inviting them to come and inherit the kingdom prepared for them, we find that to do ought for his brethren—yes, even the least of them—is to do so for him.

Do you brethren and sisters discern and count Christ into that brotherhood of which we so often speak to each other? Are you making him the chief one, the elder Brother; serving him in your desire to help them?

My prayer and hope is that we may all go home to-night with an earnest desire to serve the King our Master by serving each other, building up in our most holy faith, exhorting and teaching according as we have received the truth.

"Whether we live therefore, or die: we are the Lord's." What a volume is compressed into that line, if we are of the "we" the apostle refers to. In one place he says "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable."

BUT NOW IS CHRIST RISEN

from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept. Christ the the first fruits, afterward they that are Christ's, at his coming. 1 Cor. xv. Therefore we can, in the words of Peter, say, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a living hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. 1 Peter i. 2. Why this hope, Peter, and how are we benefitted by the resurrection of another? A world of man's wisdom could not answer it, nor his philosophy explain it, but those who sat in darkness have come to this Book and found the light. Peter says that this hope leads to, and takes hold of an inheritance, incorruptable, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you who are kept by the power of God through faith, unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. Therefore let them that according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls (themselves) to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator.

Obituary.

John S. Squires was born in Washington County, Salem Township, State of New York, on September 2, 1814. Moved to Canada in 1823; married to Melissa Deugos November 17, 1839. Moved to Carroll County, Missouri in 1866; moved to Sullivan County, Missouri in 1875; then to Harper County, Kansas in 1880; then to Glasco, Kansas in 1892. Returned to Harper County, Kansas in July, 1897. Died Sept. 25, 1897; aged 83 years and 23 days. Brother Squires died firm in the faith of the mortality of man and the unconscious sleep of death and the gift of eternal life through Christ at his coming. He was a zealous advocate of the faith of the Bible, always ready to give a reason of his faith. A regular attendant at meeting, always occupying a seat near the pulpit, always ready to express his hope or give a word of encouragement or instruction.

Sleep on, dear brother,
All anxieties of our gloom,
Jesus is soon coming,
To call thee from the tomb.

The writer talked with him a short time before his death. He said that he did not fear to die; but that he loved to live, but he knew the great Being behind all this was good and would not do anything but what was for the best. And that Being whom he loved and served would remember him, and do what was right. He said that his sleep would be short. Funeral services at the house of his son Peter, five miles northeast of Attica, conducted by the writer, assisted by Elder Scouce of the Christian Church, after which we laid him away to wait the Master's call.

Sleep on, sleep on, our brother dear,
Thy work was faithfully done while here;
Thy rest is sweet, thy hope is sure,
To meet the faithful on the better shore;
O faithful one, in God we trust,
To raise thee again from out the dust,
To enjoy that day of eternal rest
Promised to all the faithful and blest.

S. C. OLIVER.

Our daughter Sarah died without a moment's warning at our home 2½ miles northwest of Columbus, Neb., Sept. 30, 1897, at 7 o'clock P. M., aged 26 years, 9 months and 10 days, of heart disease. She was married July 25 to John Snodgrass at our home, and the next day went with her husband out to Phelps County, this State about 150 miles southwest; enjoyed her new home only a short time. She came home on a visit on Monday September 27th, visited neighbors, on Thursday went to Columbus and bought herself new furniture to take home. She came home and put the horse into the barn, went to the house and told her mother what she had done. She also told her mother that she had all the money with her that we had given her to start to housekeeping. Shortly after my wife was out in the kitchen getting supper ready when she heard something in the bed room. She opened the door and found Sarah unconsciously dropped on her bed. We sent for the doctor but she was cold in death before he came, for although we did all we could she passed away. The doctor found he could have done nothing and he been there. We buried her Sunday, October 3rd, at ten o'clock, services by Rev. Mickel, pastor of the M. E. Church, in our cemetery, followed by an unusually large gathering to her resting place. Hoping to meet her again in the kingdom of God, at the triumphal resurrection.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
J. W. SISSLE.

Another pioneer of the gospel has gone to rest to await the second coming of Jesus, the Christ, in the person of Brother William P. Ryland of the Church of God, Mt. Pleasant Congregation, near Friendship, Hot Springs County, Arkansas. He departed this life tranquilly, resigned to his Master's will, May 22, 1897, in his eighty-sixth year. He was born in Mecklenburg County, Virginia, Sept. 22nd, 1811. He was a member of the Methodist Church sixteen years; but after hearing Dr. John D. Thomas in a series of lectures on the doctrine of the gospel of the kingdom of God, his mind was enlightened concerning the salvation of man, and he embraced the truths of the gospel plan of future life and was baptized by Bro. Albert Anderson. This was in the year 1844. He was a reader of THE RESTITUTION from the first. During the year 1847, with his wife and daughter (sister A. A. Russel) he moved to the State of Arkansas, and built up a good congregation of Christians in Dallas County, Ark. He served as Elder of this body until 1864, when he moved to Hot Springs County, Arkansas. Here with others he was instrumental in organizing another Church in the faith he loved. He held the Eldership over this body until old age and declining strength incapacited him for the business. He died without pain sitting on his chair. He said he had served the Lord the best he knew how for a long time, and felt perfectly assured that he would rise to meet him when he comes the seventh time. What a hope and consolation, may we all have it. The value of such a hope cannot be estimated. He leaves a wife and daughter, some grandchildren and many friends to mourn his loss. Now my brethren, everywhere, let us strive to overcome that we may be considered worthy of resurrection life; and thereby obtain inheritance in the Mighty Kingdom of God when Jesus comes again.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

Bro. D. M. Hadler has just closed a two weeks meeting at Hickory Grove, Ia. He delivered eleven sermons in his able, earnest manner. The interest was very good, the house being filled to overflowing at almost every meeting. Although none obeyed, several are almost persuaded to put on Christ by baptism. We all feel greatly strengthened and that his visit was a rare treat indeed. We have a church of about thirty-five members which are alive to their duties. We meet every Sunday for Sunday School and have preaching every fourth Sunday. Brothers and Sisters, let us not grow weary in such a grand cause. Let us put on the whole armor of faith and work with a will. When the Master comes we will be rewarded according as our works have been. We ask an interest in the prayers of all the brothers and sisters. That we may be counted worthy of a place in the kingdom when the dear Lord appears to make up his jewels. Oh, what a grand and glorious meeting that will be. No sickness, no sorrow, no death, but one eternal joy to all the faithful.

Hoping to meet you all very soon in the kingdom I remain your Sister waiting for the King,

MRS. JNO. D. GALLAGHER.

On the 8th day of October more than 10,000 students were on the rolls as members of the first Freshman class of the Cosmopolitan University. The confusion into which the plans regarding the Cosmopolitan's educational work were thrown by the retirement of President Andrews, in order to meet the urgent wishes of his friends at Brown University, has been met by the acceptance of the Presidency by Dr. Elphalet N. Potter. President Potter has been at the head of two great colleges for nearly twenty-five years, and brings to the work exceptional talents as an organizer and man of broad culture and common-sense ideas. He is already at Irvington engaged in organizing his staff of professors. The work of the University has been grouped under fifteen heads, covering the various branches of knowledge. Each of those will be in charge of a professor. As soon as the task of selection is complete, the students will be assigned their work and the largest Freshman class in the history of the universities of the world will begin its studies. The extraordinary dimensions of the class thus formed has opened the eyes of the public to the importance of the gap in educational facilities which the Cosmopolitan has undertaken to fill. Knowing that the appropriation made by the Cosmopolitan is a limited one and that the entries are far beyond the most sanguine expectations, embarrassing the work by their proportions, many professors and other prominent men have already made the offer of advice and assistance without pay.

Declaration of Principles and Constitution of the Indiana State Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith.

ADOPTED AT THE ANNUAL MEETING HELD AT ARGOS, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 10, 1896.

Church of God in Conference assembled at Argos, Ind., September 10, 1896.

We, the members of the several churches represented by delegation, feeling deeply the necessity of closer union and better co-operation in the proclamation of the Truth, and the promotion of the cause of Christ among us, as preliminary to this end, do set forth the following declaration of principles as the foundation of our faith:

We accept the Bible as the only rule of faith and practice.

We believe in the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."

As a means to this end, the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as the King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead, the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ.

A hearty belief in the gospel, repentance, and immersion as pre requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

We believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

And further to secure this end we reorganize this our State Conference.

CONSTITUTION.

1. This Conference shall be known under the name of "The Indiana State Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith."

2. It shall be composed of the organized churches of the State of Indiana, which churches shall be represented in the Conference by duly authorized delegates.

3. This Conference shall, at each annual meeting elect the following named officers: A President, 1st and 2nd Vice President, one Secretary, and one Treasurer, these officers to be an Executive Board to transact business.

4. The Secretary shall keep a record of the proceedings of each meeting, of all business transacted, and enter the same in a book kept for the purpose of future reference; which book shall be open to the inspection of any member of the Conference.

5. The Treasurer shall keep an account of all money received, from whatever source, and of its expenditure under the direction of the Conference, or of its Executive Board; said account to be open to the inspection of any member of the Conference.

6. Any organized Church within the State, may be admitted into the Conference upon application and approval.

7. Letters of commendation may be granted to Ministers of the Word, upon recommendation of the local church to which each applicant belongs. Such letters shall be for one year, and may be rescinded at any time, for sufficient cause, by the Conference, if in session, or by the Executive Board, when the Conference is not in session.

8. Each church shall be entitled to one vote at all meetings of the Conference for every ten members, and one for every fraction of six, said votes to be cast by the delegates of the several churches. Each organized church, no matter how small the number, shall be entitled to one vote.

9. This Conference shall meet not less than three nor more than four times a year, for the transaction of business, at such place and time as may be determined by the Executive Board, timely notice being given through THE RESTITUTION.

10. This Conference adopts THE RESTITUTION as its organ, and recommends the brethren everywhere to give it their support.

11. This Constitution may be revised, altered, or amended, by a two-thirds vote of the members present at any regular meeting, notice having been previously given of the proposed change.

God's Gift—the Christ's Possession.

"Christians are the property of Christ. "Ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's." 1 Cor. iii. 23.

"Whether we live we live unto the Lord; and whether we die we die unto the Lord: whether we live, therefore, or die, we are the Lord's." Rom. xiv. 8.

"If any man trust to himself that he is Christ's let him of himself think this again, that as he is Christ's, even so are we Christ's."2 Cor. x. 7.

"For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward." Mark ix. 41.

They are given of God to him. "And again, Behold I, and the children which God hath given me." Heb. ii. 13; Isa. viii. 18.

"Thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him."

"I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: Thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy Word.....I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine.....Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world." John xvii. 2, 6, 9, 24.

"All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.....And this is the Father's will that hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up at the last day.....It is written in the prophets, And they shall all be taught of God. Every man, therefore, that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." John vi. 37, 39, 45.

"My Father, which gaveth them me, is greater than all: and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand." John x. 29.

Yet they are a purchased possession. "Ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are his." 1 Cor. vi. 20.

"Ye are bought with a price: be not ye the servants of men." 1 Cor. vii. 23.

"Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a purchased people; that ye should show forth the virtues of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light." 1 Pet. ii. 9.

His blood was the cost. "Take heed, therefore, unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." Acts xx. 28.

"Ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, such as silver and gold, from your vain conversation, received by tradition from your fathers: but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot: who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifested in these last times for you." 1 Pet. i. 18, 19, 19, 20.

"Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ, to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the Beloved. In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins." Eph. v. 6, 7.

"And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. v. 9.

The Price is also said to be "himself." See Gal. i. 4; 2 Cor. 20; Heb. vii. 27; ix. 14, 26; x. 10 12.

And his "life." See 1 John iii. 16, etc.

I. They are redeemed from their sins.—"And he shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." Matt. i. 21.....

"For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures." 1 Cor. xv. 3.

II. From the curse of the law, which is death.—"Cursed is he that confirmeth not all the words of this law to do them." Deut. xxvii. 26. "He [that] hath despised the Word of the Lord, and hath broken his commandment, that soul shall be utterly cut off; his iniquity upon him." Num. xv. 31.....

"Christ hast redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree." Gal. iii. 13. "For he was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was the stroke upon him." Isa. liii. 8.

Therefore Christians are not their own. "What! Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?" 1 Cor. vi. 19.

The privileges obtained by being Christ's are "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs, according to the promise." Gal. iii. 19.

Christ's love of his own. "Now before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew that his hour was come that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end." John xiii. 1.

"For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, that he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is breadth, and length, and depth, and height, and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye may be filled with all the fullness of God." Eph. iii. 14.

Read Rom. viii. 35, to the end.

Our personal reception by Christ for his own, "Wherefore, receive ye one another, as Christ also received us, to the glory of God." Rom. xv. 7.

Our comfort when we are unrecognized by men. "Nevertheless, the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his. And let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." 2 Tim. ii. 19.

Are you Christ's? "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, with the passions and lusts." Gal. v. 4.

A final truth. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. viii. 19.

Christ's are also called by the following possessional terms, "my sheep," "his body," "his seed," "an heritage," "his inheritance," etc. They are a property for Christ to dwell in. 1 John iii. 24; John xv. 4.

"Remind Me of the King."

La Fontaine, chaplin of the Russian army, once preached a very earnest and eloquent sermon on the sin and folly of yielding to a hasty temper. The next day he was accosted by a major of the regiment with these words—"Well, sir! I think you made use of the prerogatives of your office to give me some very sharp hits yesterday."

"I certainly thought of you while I was preparing the sermon," was the answer; "but I had no intention of being either personal or sharp."

"Well, it is of no use," said the major; "I have a hasty temper, and I cannot help it, and I cannot control it. It is impossible."

And, still adhering to this opinion, after some further conversation he went his way.

The next Sabbath La Fontaine preached upon self-deception, and the vain excuses which men are wont to make.

"Why," said he, "a man will declare that it is impossible for him to control his temper, when he very well knows that were the same provocation to happen in the presence of his sovereign, he not only could, but would control himself entirely. And yet he dares to say that the continual presence of the King of kings and Lord of lords imposes upon him neither restraint nor fear!"

The next day his friend, the major, again accosted him.

"You were right yesterday, chaplain," he said humbly. "Hereafter, whenever you see me in danger of failing, remind me of the King."

And so, Christian friends, do not we need to be reminded of the King! The cross which, in our weariness, we are fain to lay down, is borne for his sake. His all-seeing eye notes the "patient continuance in well-doing," as surely as it searches out the hidden wrong—the poor and pitiful excuse.

Bishop Hooper was martyred in 1555. When he came to die, one said to him, "O, sir, consider life is sweet and death is bitter." To which he replied, "Life to come is more sweet; and death to come more bitter." And so he went quietly to the stake. The way to save our life for ever, if we are indeed the Christ's disciples, is to lose it here, if need be, for his sake. "He that loseth his life shall find it." If we are self-considering, and will spare ourselves at the Master's cost, we do so to our eternal cost. Let us look on ourselves as beasts of slaughter, and suffer patiently the injuries of the wicked.

Poetry.

Our Savior.

"In Judea," the land of old,
By prophet's long ago foretold,
"Is born a Savior which is Christ the Lord,"
He of whom John did say,
Whom he wrote in his day:—
"With God, in the beginning, was the Word."

On Jordan's bank he stands
And of John the Baptist demands—
"Bury me beneath the cleansing wave,"
There buried in the flood,
That his redeeming blood
Might all repenting, believing mortals save.

On the plain of Galilee—
"Leave your nets and follow me,
And I will make you fishers of the sea."
The chosen twelve arose,
Taking up their cross with those—
They thought not of the coming sorrow then.

Go out in all the world,
Let Truth's banner be unfurled,
"Preach the gospel to every living man
The multitudes worked,
Cause raised from the dead;
Troubled people eager ran.

The court of Pilate stood
The door of Herod—
"Art thou ——?" "Thou sayst that I am,
On the accusation mouth,
When the saint of God are born,
As King he'll sit—and all the earth be calm.

No more will sin bring he,
But peace on land and sea,
When David's throne the rightful heir shall hold.
From the least unto the great
They shall enter through the gate
Into Jerusalem the "Beautiful City of Gold."

On the cross he hung alone,
God's love upon him shone,
"Forgive them, for they know not what they do."
Even at the door of death,
With his last expiring breath,
Forgive he them—and sinners, why not you?

The angel of the Lord
Spoke the awe-inspiring word—
"He is risen, he is risen from the dead."
The stone had rolled away,
The morn of another day
Found the golden empty—he had fled.

Forty days he tarried here,
With all his disciples near,
Ere he rose to Jehovah's heavenly domain;
And as he rose on high
They heard the angel's cry—
"This same Jesus will surely come again."

Now many a weary heart,
As they from this life depart,
And sleep the sleep of death—are free from care—
When Gentile times are o'er
Will meet him on that shore
And rise to meet their Savior in the air.

Now brothers, sisters, all,
Let us patiently await the call
To that realm of bliss, that other, better land.
It will not, we hope be long
Until we join the throng—
The chosen of God, the elect, immortal band.

The Great Zionist Congress at Basle.

"For Zion's sake will I not be [literal], still."—Isaiah lxii. 1.

God moves in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform: whether his ends are accomplished through an Abraham, a Joseph, a Moses, a Cyrus, or a Herzl, their value is as instruments only, God alone is the mover thereof. It is, therefore, of paramount importance to ascertain first, whether such an extraordinary movement as the world-wide Zionist Congress at Basle was a God-inspired idea, or merely the outcome of a self-imposed task by a number of enthusiasts to attempt great things, doomed to failure by the very vastness of their proportions. To this I reply, as an eye-witness of all the proceedings during the Congress, that to me the idea appears to be a God-inspired one, which, barring some difficulties, not insurmountable, has every element of success in it. God was at the Congress; and a Herzl, Nordau, Lippe, Birnbaum [illegible]stein, Landau, Sokolow (Editor of the Hebrew paper Hazefira), and others, only tried to carry out his purposes for Israel according to the Scriptures, whether they are conscious of it or not. He that said of Cyrus, "He is my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure, even saying to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be built," has raised up these Hebrew patriots to devise legitimate means by which the return of Israel to the land of their fathers might be accomplished; and, if I interpret Scripture aright, it is my firm conviction that God will move the nations to join these heroes in this God-glorifying work by using their powerful influence, and by a peaceful arrangement to bring about the restoration of our brethren to their own land. If I am asked to produce credentials to warrant such opinion, I have them contained in the Scripture of Truth: "I will lift up Mine hand to the Gentiles, and set up My standard to the people; and they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders, and kings shall be thy nursing fathers and queens thy nursing mothers." Isaiah xlix. 22, 23.

THE COMPOSITION OF THE CONGRESS.

As I watched the countenances of those assembled, I was struck with the intense earnestness of every delegate in this all-absorbing subject. Never has it been my privilege to behold such an assembly of representative men who might very aptly be termed the princes in Israel, by their splendid physique, high state of culture, gentlemanly manners, and good common sense. I have listened to speeches in Hebrew, German, Russian, and French, and after the close of the Congress in Yiddish, which stirred my soul; and I am fully convinced that our Jewish nation could furnish at this time orators and statesmen of the stamp of Gladstone, Disraeli, and others; and that Dr. Herzl, whose name is now received everywhere with acclamation, is a born leader, and would certainly make one of the best Speakers in any House of Commons. Such is the stuff of which the Zionist Congress was made.

TONE OF THE CONGRESS.

Though nearly every country where Jews reside was represented, there was not a word of disloyalty heard from any lip at any time. The miseries of the Jews were depicted as they existed among the 5,000,000 in Russia, among the 250,000 in Roumania, and the vast populations in Galicia, where men walk about in a forlorn condition, without bread, without homes, and without hope, seeking out their miserable existence in penury, dirt and squalour. The stoutest heart was moved to sobbing when these tales of woe were graphically described by eye witnesses; but never was there an unkind word uttered against any of the rulers of those countries where oppression, and misery the outcome of such oppression, prevailed; and no parliament in Europe could have been conducted with greater decorum, tact and loyalty than was the case at the Congress at Basle, under the Speakership of the great Jewish patriot, Dr. Herzl.

ANTI-SEMITISM.

It is a noted fact that the 204 delegates present at the Congress were men ready to make any sacrifice for the cause they espoused. Being highly gifted in all that pertained to culture, rich in mental development as well as occupying good positions in life, they could have tranquilly pursued their avocations with advantage and profit, without throwing in their lot in this Zionist movement; but these men, Moses-like, felt the embittered lives of their brethren, and the anti-Semites have now discovered that there are men in Israel whose love for humanity far exceeds their proverbial love for money, and that they rather choose to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. If anti-Semites hate the race as a race, because they are a race, Providence has been all the time working out this grand scheme of cementing the hearts of the remnant of Israel with one common hope and aspiration, throwing in their fortunes with their persecuted brethren: and when such nations will have none of them, God says, "I will bring you to Zion." Jer. iii. 14.—Aaron Sternberg, in Jewish Herald.

"A mass-meeting of the Hebrews of Chicago was held yesterday afternoon in Porges' Hall, Jefferson and Maxwell streets. B. Howitz, President of the Zion association, an organization formed for the purpose of establishing a colony for persecuted Jews in Palestine, presided. Speeches were made by Dr. Felzenthal, rabbi of the Zion Congregation, by L. Zolotoff, H. Horowitz, and W. Shur.

The day being the second of the feast of the tabernacle, was a holiday, and the hall was filled to its utmost capacity, nearly a thousand persons being present. The object of the meeting was to present the matter of colonization to the people and to urge their co-operation. No definite action will be taken until the association learns from Dr. Herzel and Max Nordau, who are the originators of the colonization scheme, what action was taken in regard to colonization in the great convention held last month in Basle, Austria. The speakers urged the necessity of the movement, declaring that the time for such an action was now ripe."—Chicago Tribune.

The prophecies were not written to make prophets of us; but indifference to prophetic themes and to the signs of our times is no mark of ardent Christian faith. Events move with startling velocity, and we need to be awake and alert to keep pace with them.

On the 29th of August, 1897, there convened in Basle, Switzerland, a congress of 200 Jewish delegates from different parts of Europe. The object of their gathering was to consider Dr. Herzl's plan for re-establishing the Hebrews in Palestine. A telegram from Basle, August 30, says Dr. Herzl's plan "was unanimously approved with great enthusiasm by the Zionist Congress."

Dr. Theodore Herzl, of Vienna, the so-called "new Moses" and the originator of the latest scheme to buy Palestine and organize a Hebrew State there, was elected President, and Dr. Max Nordau, Vice-President.

Dr. Herzl, a tall, handsome, courtly, literary man, described his project in an interview in this way:

"Within a year or so of Palestine being acquired from the Turk I shall have a million colonists in the country. The watchword, 'Jewish State,' has roused the Israelites to the remotest corners of the earth.

"My plan is simple enough. We must obtain sovereignty over Palestine—our never-to-be-forgotten, historical home. At the head of the movement will be two powerful agents—the Society of Jews and the Jewish Company. The first named will be a political organization and the latter a limited liability company under English laws, having headquarters in London, and a capital of, say, $250,000,000.

"At first we shall send only skilled labor—that is, the very poorest—who will make the land arable, lay out streets, build bridges and railroads, regulate rivers and construct telegraph lines. Their work will bring trade, their trade the market, and the market will cause new settlers to flock to the country. Every one will go there voluntarily, at his or her own risk, but under the watchful eye and protection of the organization."

What the outcome of this enterprise will be, or how far these anticipations may be realized, we cannot tell. We simply chronicle these events as they pass, and wait the unfolding of the divine purpose. If, as the Scriptures seem to assert, there are great and terrible events to occur "upon the mountains of Israel" in connection with the close of this dispensation, it behooves us with all other Christians to be watchful and diligent, that we may be found in peace when the day of trouble comes. "Therefore wait ye upon me, saith the Lord, until the day that I rise up to the prey; for my determination is to gather the nations that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy." Zeph. iii. 8.—The Christian.

Probably the oldest timber in the world is found in the ancient temples of Egypt, in connection with stonework which is known to be 4,000 years old. This, the only wood used in the construction of temples, is in the form of ties, holding the end of one stone to another.

The silk industry of China employs, it is estimated, from 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 people.

Temperence.

Water.

Through well-transparent glass of crystal pure
How lustres it in mountain cup!
So beautiful that one might sip
Could maiden young, gallant, priest or boor,
With visage pale, or as the Moor,
Forget more choice in any beaker grasp?

A thousand times the modest gem has met my gaze
And most delicious coolness
And new life to body given,
But never the richest wound admire and praise
Like the first time in childhood days,
Here was it pealing through a grassy nook!

Home has since the present wine,
In crystals reject with force and fire,
But rather strike the fearful lyre,
To celebrate in numbers more divine
Above the red blood of the Vine,
What kindness neither Barons of Diet nor fire,

What seals the lovers lips and burning brow
When sick, we seek the weary couch
Or coolness, or the blight of shades,
Withers the heart, like leaves upon the bough,
Ah then! the coolness yellow,
It outgrows brought the vintage most in fame

Poland, or on the wild, or in the deep,
Or Nectar that which thirst satisfies,
Made sweeth pure clear deep mild refines,
Or fragrant wines, but nature's first keeps
And Lakes, the cells, and clouds that weep
And drinks come, thoughts or [illegible] views.

First in the dawn of sublunary things,
Pure as the Crystal found it flowed,
Long may it [illegible] make,
As of even the [illegible] springs
Where Desire might dip its fond gent wings,
Nor bee more pure its virgin blooms corrode.

But turned by vice mental that near the brain,
The child, of earth would turn from these,
And drinking, locked more like wines,
That lead him captive to an iron chain;
And still, for warnings plead in vain,
Men spoil the cup, and life in darkness close.

Oh! that the ones who trick themselves on mind
Out-reaching theirs that roam the dale,
Would ever opposite prevail:
And vigor and relief of daily mud,
At home and [illegible] contained,—
Wrongs would be done, and Gaseous cease to wail

[Selected by J. T. Wilcox.]

"Touch not, Taste not, Handle not."

I have read of a town meeting in Pennsylvania where this question of license was to be decided. As the question was about to be put, there arose from one corner of the room a miserable female, wrinkled and gaunt, and stretching out her arms, in a shrill voice she cried: "Look upon me. You all know me, or once did. You all know I was once the mistress of the best farm in town. You all know, too, I had one of the best—the most devoted of husbands. You all know I had five noble-hearted, industrious boys. Where are they now? Doctor, where are they now? You all know. You all know they lie in a row, side by side, in yonder churchyard; all—every one of them filling the drunkard's grave! They were all taught to believe that temperate drinking was safe,—excess alone ought to be avoided; and they never acknowledged excess. They quoted you, and you, and you," pointing with her shred of a finger to the priest, deacon, and doctor, "as authority." They thought themselves safe under such teachers. But I saw the gradual change coming over my family and prospects, with dismay and horror: I felt we were all to be overwhelmed in one common ruin. I tried to ward off the blow, I tried to break the spell—the delusive spell—in which the idea of the benefits of temperate drinking had involved my husband and sons. I begged, I prayed: but the odds were against me. The minister said the poison that was destroying my husband and boys was a good creature of God; the deacon (who sits under the pulpit there, and took our farm to pay his rum bills) sold them the poison; the doctor said that a little was good, and excess ought to be avoided. My poor husband and my dear boys fell into the snare, and they could not escape; and, one after another, were conveyed to the sorrowful grave of the drunkard. Now look at me again. You probably see me for the last time—my sand has almost run—I have dragged my exhausted frame from my present home—your poorhouse—to warn you all—to warn you, Deacon! to warn you, false teacher of God's Word!" and with her arms high flung, and her tall form stretched to its utmost, and her voice raised to an unearthly pitch, she exclaimed; "I shall soon stand before the judgment-seat of God—I shall meet you there, you false guides, and be as a witness against you all!"

She spoke and vanished. But when the chairman put the question: "Shall any license be granted for the sale of spirituous liquors?" the response was unanimous—"No!"

Announcement.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith, will convene at Plymouth, Ind., Thursday evening Nov. 18, 1897 and continue over the following Sunday.

Now brethren and sisters of the faith in Indiana, the time is almost at hand for another meeting wherein we can come together and strengthen and encourage each other by prayer and exhortation, and we earnestly urge that each and every one who possibly can arrange to be at our meeting, come with hearts full of love and for the advancement of the cause.

You who have read THE RESTITUTION have no doubt seen there is being a renewed effort put forth for more effective evangelizing and we are glad to say is meeting with quite a degree of success and the outlook is very promising if it continues, therefore we urge that every church organization as far as possible be represented by delegates that you may take part in whatever business may come up before the Conference. We invite all who are interested to be with and share with us.

F. L. AUSTIN, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec

Brothers and Sisters of Indiana:

I wish to call the attention of all in Indiana to the article on Editorial page of THE RESTITUTION of Sept. 15, entitled "To the Brothers and Sisters of Indiana." Also to the article entitled "Indiana Workers" in issue of Sept. 22. Some I learn have overlooked both of these articles. Please do not delay in answering these requests. Many reports have come in and thus far they are without exception, truly encouraging. With the earnest and prompt co-operation of all concerned a general report can soon be given that will be welcomed by every member of our State. Please do not delay.

Attention is also called to the fact that Bro. D. E. Vancastor, 1st Vice Pres. of Argos, has, by request, accepted the responsibility of acting as State S. S. Supt. Will you kindly give him all the assistance in your power. Yours seeking the co-workers.

F. L. AUSTIN.

Dear Restitution:

Will you please give place in Your columns for one more call—this may be the last one. At our Annual Conference, Sept., 96, a vote was taken to convene in Conference again in Sept., 97. A committee was appointed to take charge of the arranging of this meeting. In the absence of the Sec. Wm. Vickery, I have been requested to send this notice. This meeting will be held near the Crescent school house, Sumner Co., Kan., as near the place center on as the committee can conveniently arrange. This meeting will commence Friday, October 29th, a month later than was voted on. This was done to give ample time for seeding and past the extreme hot weather. Now brethren, we had a splendid meeting last fall under the teaching of Bro. L. E. Conner; its effects have shown its worth. Now we propose to try and have another good meeting with Bro. J. P. Wilcox and others to assist us. A large attendance is expected and the invitation is to all who can and will come. Come prepared to care for yourselves and others. Just a word, don't go to town just before you come to this meeting and deposit all the money you have, but bring your money along and divide up a little. Deposit a part of your means with the Lord, he has made the demand, don't fail to respond, our help is needed in defraying expenses. I am not authorized to say how long this meeting will continue, but it will be for several days if the interest demands and the brethren will satisfy the laborers. Those coming by railroad from north, south or east will stop at Arkansas City. Notify the committee in good time and you will be met at the train. The committee are Wm. Hodika, Geuda Springs, and Wm. Vickery, Sewkirk, O. T. We would love to see a goodly number from every point of the compass. Come with song, come with prayers, come with exhortation, these are all good. if you should fail in any of these things you can help by your money. Bro. Wilcox and family have to live and we must not forget this. Those coming by private conveyance will find meeting near southeast corner of Sumner Co., Kansas. Committee:

Books and Tract List.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

We have received a new supply of this valuable work, which treats of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the one hope, one faith, one baptism, by the late Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. This will need no introduction to many of our readers, as they already know of the good that has been accomplished through its circulation. 10 cents each. Send to this office.

FUTURE PROBATION.

Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 160-page pamphlet by Wm. Oliver Stonehill. This work was issued and sold at 25 cents. We have a good supply now, will send them post paid for 2 cents per copy. This is an excellent opportunity for any who are interested in this subject to get their work by a talented author. Send two cents to this office for one copy.

QUESTIONS FOR THINKERS AND THEOLOGIANS FOR THE THEOLOGICAL.

In the title of a pamphlet of 96 pages by H. W. Bowman, concerning questions on the Lord's Coming to Earth, Pivotal Question, Hell and Kindred Words. It is well worth reading and will help many who are bothered to give answers many times. We can supply you for 15 cents a copy.

HEAD THINGS OF THE SECOND OF ESDRAS.

This is the title of a tract containing 12 large size pages, and is a reprint of a work issued many years ago, and we suppose was written by Brother Benjamin Wilson. It is clear and comprehensive, and can be had for 2 cts each or 20 for $1.00.

THE COMING NATION.

A lecture delivered by H. V. Reed. This clearly sets forth the idea that the Coming Nation will be the nation or Israel restored to Palestine, and the Scriptural reasons are given. 26 pages price 10 cts or three or 25 cts.

A PARALLEL BATTLE FIELD, OR ERNEST'S WATCHMAN.

Is the title of a tract of 32 pages by H. W. Bowman, and is devoted to an exposition of the Rich Man and Lazarus Question. 10 cents a copy.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

A popular lecture by M. Joblin. Very good to put in the hands of those searching for truth. 16 pages 2 cents each.

Necessity of Baptism. A 4-page tract, written some years ago by Brother J. M. Stephenson, and it appeared as a newspaper article. It is so good we thought best to preserve it in this way and offer it at 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Bible Plan of Salvation. A 4-page tract telling how to interpret the Scriptures, the development of God's plan, etc. 2 cts each or 15 cts per dozen.

An open Letter to J. A. Conant. A 4-page tract being a letter written by Brother Daniel Howard and printed in RESTITUTION, April 22, 1896. 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Letter to Dr. Talmage. A 4-page tract being a letter written by Sister Addie A. Howard to Dr. Talmage and printed in the RESTITUTION of April 22, 1896. 2 cents each or 15 cts per dozen.

Modern Events in the Light of Prophecy.—This is the sermon preached by H. V. Reed at Antioch, which has since been printed in tract form, and may be had at this office for five cents each, or 30 copies for $1.00.

Passages Supposed to Teach Consciousness after Death, by W. H. Wilson, which shows that eternal life is conditional and not inherited. 3 cents each, or 25 cents a dozen.

Where Do the Dead Sleep. These are Bible texts given in answer to this question. A 3-page tract 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Hades. A Bible account of this place with proof texts. Ten copies for 5 cents.

Death Compared to a Sleep. This represents death as a sleep and proof texts are given. Ten copies for 5 cts.

The Wicked Dead and Plain Truths. The two combined, 2 pages 6 in copies for 10 cents

Poetry.

Rejoice Evermore.

"Rejoice though storms assail thee;
Rejoice when skies are bright;
Rejoice though round my pathway
Is spread the gloom of night.

If the good hope be in thee,
That all at last be well;
Then let thy happy spirit
With joyful feelings swell."

Communicated.

A Request Granted.

A brother requests me to write upon a topic suggested by the following questions:

1. Will rantized and immortal soul-believers form a portion of the innumerable company of Rev. vii. 9?

2. Will any one be condemned because he cannot pronounce our shiboleth?

3. Will people who are sending tons of so-called Christian literature to the heathen, be given eternal life for their reward?

NONE ARE RANTIZED.

With regard to question 1. See Rev. vii. 14, and you will learn that they are a "WASHED," and not a rantized company. "Have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Sin is the filth cleansed by washing in the blood of the Lamb. See Acts xxii. 16, and you will definitely learn when the blood of the Lamb becomes efficacious in washing away sin. "And now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized, and WASH away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." Or calling on them the name of the Lord in baptism, they then become name-bearers.

Acts ii. 38: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

Rantism is not baptism. A woman never washes clothes by rantism or sprinkling. She dips and soaks, and plunges them in water. Some of these theological tinkerers ought to have their dirty shirts sprinkled, dried, and given to them to wear as a washed shirt. I think they would begin to loose confidence in their nonsensical quackery.

The "innumerable company" are all of them "washed," hence there are no rantized believers in paganism there.

THERE ARE NO IMMORTAL SOUL BELIEV-ERS IN THE INNUMERABLE COMPANY.

"He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar: because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life: and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." 1 John v. 10-12.

This Scripture describes people who make God a liar by disbelieving the record God gave with regard to his Son, saying that he has given his people eternal life, but as yet the life is NOT in them, "IN HIS SON."

"Your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. iii. 3, 4.

There cannot be any immortal soul believers in that company because they displease God in making him a "liar," in saying our eternal life is not in his Son, but in us, even now, and always has been. "Ye shall not surely die." "He that hath not the Son of God hath not life," and none can have the Son of God save by faith and obedience.

Rantized immortal soul believers disobey Christ's command to believe the gospel and be baptized. They can not believe the gospel message and the devil's lie at the same time, they are in complete antagonism one to the other. Neither is rantism baptism. Disobedience again.

Rantized immortal soul believers disbelieve and disobey every fundamental doctrine of a Biblical saving faith. Immortal-soulism makes God a liar, and robs Christ of his mission as the life-giver. "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." Rantism changes completely the Divine order of obedience.

With regard to the innumerable company we read: "They shall hunger more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

Tell me, is it possible, that such magnificent blessings can come to those who dishonor God, by making him a liar, and also rob Christ of his glory and mission as the life-giver, and by rantism set aside the God-given plan of being inducted into Christ?

See 1 John ii. 22: "Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ?" What is the value of believing that Jesus is the Christ? See John xx. 31: "These are written that ye might believe Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." The belief that "Jesus is the Christ," is the way to get "LIFE through his name." Immortal soul believers claim to have immortal life from birth, perfectly independent of believing that Jesus is the Christ." And the Divine Word as we have seen makes those who deny that "Jesus is the Christ," all liars. Will God lead liars, or those who make God a liar, to "living fountains of waters," and "wipe away all tears from their eyes?" Impossible. The thought seems sacrilegious.

I cannot at this time enter into what it means to "believe that Jesus is the Christ," but every one who is instructed in what it means to believe in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ," know full well, that rantized, sky-kingdom, immortal soul believers do not know what it is to believe that "Jesus is the Christ."

Listen to the note of warning, and be not deceived: "For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist. Look to yourselves, that we loose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward. Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. And if there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: For he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds." 2 John vii. 11.

Do rantized, sky-kingdom, immortal soul believers "abide in the doctrine of Christ?" If not, listen: "Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God." Will he that "hath not God" be led unto "living fountains of waters," and have "all tears" wiped away "from his eyes?"

SECOND QUESTION.

"Will any one be condemned because he cannot pronounce our shiboleth?"

Of course not, "our shiboleth," is nothing, but to "abide in the doctrine of Christ," is everything. I will let the Bible say who will be condemned.

"Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark xvi. 15.

Never mind "our shiboleth" if you cannot pronounce the above "shiboleth," you will be condemned sure.

2 Thess. i. 7-9: "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

2 Thess. ii. 12: "That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

Can you pronounce this "shiboleth," my friend?

THIRD QUESTION.

"Will people who are sending tons of so-called Christian literature to the heathen, be given eternal life?"

"Works without faith are dead," and beside, that kind of literature, is more or less permeated with the fictions of pagan philosophy, where in many cases blind, instead of open the eyes to saving truth.

Eternal life is only promised to those who believe and obey the saving faith of the gospel. I know full well that we are living in an age of liberalism, when men will not endure "sound doctrine," but will heap to themselves teachers who will tickle their eyes by preaching to please, and entertain, rather than preach the plain sound truth of God. That will often grate hard upon the feelings and impulses of the flesh, and they will affect liberalists, and cry out, "Will any one be condemned because he cannot pronounce our shiboleth?"

When the Son of Man cometh will he find faith on the earth? He will find some, but it will be a severe article, and happy will be the one who possesses it. Any one who holds a true fidelity to the one faith of the gospel will have a hard time of it in this life, but an eternal weight of glory in the age to come. Hold fast the form of sound words.

W. H. WILSON.

The Ten Virgins.

When we read any exposition of a parable or figure that seems to be well applied, we are apt to settle down upon it, and cousing to seek for any thing different, we will fail to see inconsistencies it may contain. Let us not try either to avoid conclusions of others, nor to follow them, but simply seek for truth and harmony.

This parable of Matt. xxv. has so long been applied to Miller's work, previous to 1844, that we have sought for no better explanation.

1. We admit that such a warning is necessary before Christ's coming, or it would not be as it was in the days of Noah.

2. Christ did tarry after 1844, yet I do not think that this was the tarrying of Matt. xxv. 5, for the following reasons.

1. The first word in v. 1 is "then," or Diaglott, "at that time." leads us to the previous chapter to see when. Here we read of the coming of the Son of Man. Two in a field, one taken, the other left. The wise and evil servants. The chapter concludes with the good servant's reward, and the evil servant cut off with hypocrites. Were these things done in 1844? Yet it is "at that time that the kingdom is like ten virgins.

2. It is not the church of this age that is like ten virgins, but "the kingdom," which is the future.

3. The bride will not be asleep (2 Thess. v. 4-6) "Ye brethren are not in darkness—ye are children of light. Let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober." Hence the virgins are not the bride.

4. In Psa. xlv. 13, 14, the bride, the king's daughter is described in her beautiful garments:—"She shall be brought unto the king in a raiment of needlework: the virgins, her companions that follow her, shall be brought unto thee." So these ten virgins are the bridesmaids or servants of the bride, the church.

5. The Syriac renders the last clause of v. 1, "went out to meet the bride groom and the bride." Did the Adventists do this in 1843-4? No, there was no bride to meet them, nor will there be till the church is resurrected.

6. The virgins of the parable went out to meet the bride and groom before the midnight cry was sounded. This was not true of the Adventists, for they did not go out till after the cry.

7. During the tarrying period the Diaglott says, "they all nodded and slept." Will Adventists admit that they have all been asleep since 1844? May it not be that the living are those who "nodded" and the dead those who "slept," and they "arise," v. 7; one class from spiritual lethargy, and the other from the death sleep, to trim their lamps? May not the midnight cry be the "last trump" or the jubilee trump which wakes the dead, re-unites families, releases servants, and proclaims liberty throughout all the land to all the inhabitants thereof? Lev. xxv.

These blessings will not immediately follow the resurrection. The marriage, I think, will be on the earth. But some would object to having any but the bride rise from the dead in the first resurrection. It is the "dead in Christ who rise first." But might not some of the servants of the bride be among the "dead in Christ?" Might not the bride's companions be immortal as well as she? I know of no Scripture against it. Or will the bride's companions be taken entirely from among the living? If the midnight cry is the trump that awakes the saints, both living and dead will hear, and arise to trim their lamps, and go out to meet the groom and bride. But the bride cannot go to meet herself. So I would judge that though the virgins arose with the bride they are not caught away with her, but are ready to meet her when Christ and his saints descend upon the Mount of Olives. Thus, as he says in the same chapter, he will separate the sheep and goats. The sheep may be the wise virgins, the goats the foolish virgins. The foolish virgins are told "I know you not." The goats "depart." However the fulfilment is future, and these thoughts may elicit thoughts from others.

I think that the three parables, the householder. (Matt. xxi. 33), and the marriage. (ch. xxii. 1), and the virgins (ch. xxv.) are in chronological order. In the first the householder is God, the vineyard Israel. (Isa. v.) a fenced off people, the husbandmen, the priests. The first servants, the judges and prophets whom Jezebel and others of their rulers slew.

"Again God sent other servants, prophets, John the Baptist, etc., whom they killed. "Least he sends his Son, Jesus, whom they kill. Hence the vineyard is taken from them and given to other husbandmen—the Gentiles. "The kingdom" v. 43—"shall be given to a nation that will bring forth the fruits thereof."—the church of Christ.

The parable of ch. xxii. begins here, with the gospel call to the marriage. John the Baptist calls, and Jesus and his disciples call to the future wedding. But the Jews slay the servants, therefore the king burns up their city, which took place A. D. 70. The parable then brings us back to the call of the Gentiles after the stoning of Stephen. The servants gather from the highways both good and bad.

Some of those who are called now, and obey, will lack the garment of righteousness, when the King comes, and will be speechless. They will be bound, and cast out, "for many are called but few chosen."

The parable of ch. xxv. begins where this one ends, showing us the fate of the foolish virgins, who have been baptized into Christ, but who lack the garment of righteousness, and the oil or Spirit. These will not even be the servants of the bride.

Report of Labor.

The readers of THE RESTITUTION will remember that a meeting of a week's duration was announced through our paper to commence Oct. 9, four miles south of Frankfort, Ind. The meeting was also announced through three papers published in Frankfort, also by printed bills posted to aid in giving publicity to the meeting. The friends who had extended the invitation to me had as they supposed secured the Christian Church in which to hold the meetings, in fact the house had been tendered to them by the church members. The friends of the truth had intended to hold the meetings, in the school house, but as the school term had commenced and it was deemed advisable to accept the offer of the house, and especially as they had contributed liberally when the house was built. The subject announced in city papers and posters was "The Eternal Purpose of God." The attendance on Saturday night was good and close attention was paid to "God's purpose in creating the Earth." On Sunday morning a large audience assembled to which I discoursed upon the "Covenant God made with the fathers." During this discourse groups of people left the house being unable to endure sound doctrine. After the services closed I was waited upon by the janitor who informed me that his instructions were "not to open the house to me after the Sunday night service unless the trustees consented to it." This to me was somewhat embarassing as I had announced at the morning service for the week, closing Friday night. One of the trustees and the deacon were not consulted, but the order to close the house was given and an abrupt closing of our meetings seemed to be a thing determined. Here a scene followed that almost duplicated Paul's experience in the temple. "Some cried one thing, some another among the multitude," and confusion reigned supreme. The wife of the loyal trustee came to me in great distress saying: "Will you preach at our dwelling house?" Certainly, said I, if so desired. The announcement was then made for meeting Monday night at the residence of Labon Hodgen which was filled with eager listeners to whom I unfolded the wonderful purpose of God in the redemptive scheme. Each night the interest increased as attested by the remark "each night it gets better and better." People living in Frankfort attended each service, coming a distance of five miles, some of whom had reached the allotted period of three score and ten. The eager earnest look testified plainly that the truth was appreciated. The tears plainly visible told most eloquently of the softening influences of the truth, of the searching nature of the gospel of Christ which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Our regular appointment at Hillisburg was to begin on Saturday night, but being urgently requested to speak on the "signs that precede Christ's coming" we arranged with the brethren at Hillisburg to withdraw my appointment for Saturday night. The best of attention was paid as proof was given that we stand upon the crumbling verge of a closing age, and stand face to face with the grandest events in human history. This theme never fails to interest for the proofs of holy writ are plainly before us, thus confirming the truths uttered by God's holy ones. The meetings throughout were characterized by a spirit of investigation, the controversial element was almost wanting. To further the honest inquirers after truth visits were made the searcher assisted in the examination of the evidences upon which faith must be predicted. While no direct results of this meeting can be reported, may we not hope that investigation will continue until the errors and prejudices that have been honestly received through a long course of erroneous teaching may result in noble confessions of faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. As an evidence of the spirit we manifested toward those who turned us out of the house we give the expressions of some who wished me to refutiate, saying, "Why don't he pitch into the people who locked him out?" Oh no! friends we have neither the time nor the disposition to abuse people who are simply repeating what has been done all along the line of the history of God's faithful servants. On the other hand some said, "I am glad they turned us out, for we have had a better meeting, and it has raised up friends for the truth." God grant that this all may work together for good to the cause of truth. We are assured that God "compelled the wrath of man to praise him, and restraineth the remainder of wrath." The trustee who was consulted in the matter of turning me out, in whose house the meetings were held submitted this to his former brethren as the only basis of a settlement of the trouble. First that they should apologize to me for turning me out, and that they must also offer me the use of their house to hold a series of meetings in when I could again visit the place, and if they refused to do this to take his name off the church book. I believe he means every word in that offer. Placed thus between two fires what will they do? To refuse his request they will lose him and his wife; to grant it will perhaps cause a loss of several who are almost persuaded. Those who turned us out were trying very hard to explain their action. One trustee said to me that they closed the house because I was "preaching doctrinal sermons," to another they expressed the fear that if I was "suffered to continue the meetings I would destroy their church and build upon their ruins our own faith." This now makes three times that I have been locked out just as the interest began to be manifested and I hereby give kindly notice to all who solicit my services for a series of meetings, under no circumstances accept the house under a verbal contract, let the contract be in writing that will legally bind both parties. Even in that event I should prefer a hall or private house. The sword in its sheath is a harmless weapon, so also is the Sword of the Spirit, closed or its doctrines not insisted upon and it is free in all pulpits, but oh, how different the result when the Sword of the Spirit is drawn from its soft velvet sheath and its keen double edge cuts horrid gashes in the traditions of men! Is it any wonder they flinch? Among the last words at the close of the meeting were "When can you visit us again?" To which I replied whenever you need my services. In closing this report I wish to thank the loved ones who so nobly assisted during the meeting, coming as they did fifteen miles is proof of their interest, and of the sacrifice they made. To Bro. and Sister Hook of Boon Co. I am under especial obligations for the timely aid and encouragement furnished. And to our dear friends Thomas and Emma McKinsey from whose eyes the sweet light of day has ever been excluded, but whose musical voices must compensate in a measure for the loss of sight, thanks for the sweet melodies that yet linger as the odors of sweet flowers, yes, I hear the music again "He is standing at the door," and let the sentiment infuse every heart, and if we cannot sing it let each heart earnestly say "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly." And finally to the household who so kindly administered to my wants and to whose unceasing care for my comfort, and their kindly remembrance of the finished needs of those who labor in word and doctrine my thanks are especially due. And that the Word spoken may have fallen in good and honest hearts that may bring forth fruit that will be to the glory and honor of God is my fervent prayer.

As ever in the blessed hope,
J. F. WAGONER.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the month of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 3, 1897. NUMBER 41.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this and the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

It is said that, owing to the persistent work done in Italy during the last four decades by English and Scotch Bible societies, there is now no book so widely possessed and read in that country as the Bible. About 3,000,000 copies of the book, entire or in portions, have been distributed altogether.

The development of suburban London moves on apace. A sign of the times is noted in the recent opening of large estates, where there are miles of roads lined on either side with dwellings, villas, etc., where legal provision is made and security given that at no time shall liquor-selling be permitted.

Jerusalem has today seventy synagogues. Of the twenty-four religious sects represented in the city, twelve are Christian. Among the inhabitants the Mohammedans are already in a minority, which is constantly growing smaller.

When Christ implants the well of living water in a man's heart, it will have not merely a refreshing influence, but a cleansing and purifying effect. If there be none of the latter, the absence of the living water may well be argued.

The history of the world teaches no lesson with more impressive solemnity than this; that the only safe guide of a great intellect is a pure heart; that evil no sooner takes possession of the heart, than folly commences the conquest of the mind.—C. C. Bonney.

Christ's sweet presence eateth out the bitterness of sorrow.

IT is well said that "there is no conflict between science and the Bible. There is a conflict between scientific theories and systems of theology: but there is no conflict between the work of God and the Word of God."

ANOTHER joyful day was spent by the Church in Cleveland on Sunday Oct. 24th when two more were added to the Body of Christ. Brother F. Minor, and Brother Charles Frauboner then took upon them the Sacred Name of Jesus. Yes we rejoiced greatly to see two men in the vigor of young manhood renouncing the world with all its allurements and throw in their lot with the people of God. The Lord bless them, and make them a blessing to others, we pray, so that they may have crowns of reioicing in that day. Thank God that others are enquiring the way to Zion with their faces thitherward.

THE Sword and Shield advises its readers to read such books as John, Romans, Ephesians and others of like character through at the same time, if they really desire to see the connecting links. In our opinion the advice is excellent. It also says: "When you read any other book than the Bible, you do not open it in a haphazard way and read just a few verses. You commence at the beginning, and read it through page after page." Surely the Book of God is worthy of the same treatment; but after having been read through, it strikes us that it should be studied topically. One topic thoroughly mastered will make the rest much easier of acquisition. It also says neither Jesus nor Philip were Higher Critics. The first mentioned began at Moses and all the prophets and expounded unto them in all Scriptures the things concerning himself; and when Philip found the Ethiopians reading the 53rd chapter of Isaiah, he did not talk learnedly about two Isaiah's, but he simply began at the same Scripture and preached unto him Jesus.

In Memorium.

It was our painful duty to conduct the funeral services of another faithful witness for the truth as it is in Jesus on Tuesday 26th inst. The icy hand of death was laid upon our beloved Sister in the Lord, Sister Rachel Townsend, of the Church of God at Salem. She had been in delicate health for some two years or more,—and on several occasions it seemed doubtful if she would rally; but for sometime she had been somewhat better, and on the preceding Sunday was able to break bread with the little group who show forth the Lord's death on the First day of the week, five miles from her home. On Friday the 22nd she walked quite a little distance to see a friend at one of her neighbor's houses; and after returning she assisted in the preparation of some fruit.—retired at the usual hour feeling comfortable; but soon after midnight she became suddenly very ill and died in about an hour. Happily for her she had long since insured her life with Jesus, and, by a life of faith and prayer and watchfulness had kept her title clear to a mansion in her Father's house. In a community singularly deaf to God's gracious proposition, her consistent walk and conversation commanded the respect of all who knew her. The Methodist Church Building at Bunker's Hill was courteously granted for the funeral services,—and it was estimated that no less than five hundred people were shown that death is a fact; man does die; that death came by sin; that in death every faculty of mind and body entirely ceases; and that future life can only be obtained as a gift from God through Christ, the conditions being faith in the gospel of the kingdom of God, reformation of life, baptism for remission of past sin and a godly life, waiting for the Lord from heaven.

Our heart goes out in sympathy for our dear Brother Townsend and his family, and those of the household of faith, among whom the enemy has been reaping a great harvest. May he whose voice shall awake the dead soon appear and end the night of weeping, and usher in the better day, we humbly pray.

Sound Doctrine No. 4.

"Hold fast the form of sound doctrine which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus." 2 Tim. i. 13.

The three preceding articles of this series were written to introduce the 4th and 5th. Would it be too much to ask that they be carefully read again before reading further of the present number?

In combatting the idea that the class of Rev. vii. 9. 13 is the same class as that of Rev. ii. 26 a certain writer said it was "not according to sound reasoning." Leaving him and his opponent to settle that particular matter, we feel in duty bound to examine the objector's reasoning and opinions. We pray God that we may be able to do it without exciting the flesh, although plainly and pointedly done.

The first point we will examine is the argument that the "innumerable company" are not virgins, because they have been washed, and because a virgin once defiled can never be washed or cleansed so as to restore her virginity. But the company on Mount Zion are called virgins. "These were redeemed from among men, being the first fruits unto God and the Lamb."

What an anomaly! Here we have a writer who commonly only THINKS he can see what the conditions of pardon and adoption are, although couched in the simplest and most literal language! And yet presumes to expound the most symbolic of all God's books.

And now as to the reasoning:

1. He says, "A virgin once defiled can never be washed or cleansed so as to restore her virginity." This is in reference to nature, and is true. The claim is that the innumerable company had been defiled, but had washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb; but upon the writer's hypothesis, the company seen on Mount Zion had not been defiled.—were simply redeemed: they needed not to wash their robes and make them white in the blood of the Lamb. They were white enough without that.

Every line makes it painfully evident that the objector has gotten beyond his depth. Does it not say that the company on Mount Zion were redeemed from among men? If so, what were they redeemed with? Were they redeemed from their foolish conduct transmitted from their fathers by such corruptible things as silver or gold, or, as Peter says, "By the Precious Blood of Christ, as of a spotless and unblemished Lamb?" If this is what they were redeemed from among men with, did they not as well as the "innumerable company?" From objector's point of view, what did virginity consist of, if they, like the innumerable company, needed to be redeemed by the same blood? Does not the Lord himself say, Rev. v. 9, that the overcomers will sing, "Thou hast redeemed us by thy blood?" Did not John in Rev. i. 5, 6, give glory "Unto him that loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood?" He did. If they had not been defiled by sin they would not have needed washing?

But we must not dismiss the virgins yet. Of course our objector will not say that the word virgin could apply to persons before they had been begotten and born, and lived purely, and therefore we may enquire when were the virgins on Mount Zion begotten and born—when did they so live as that they were entitled to be called virgins when standing on Mount Zion?

Says Paul to the Church at Corinth, "For I am jealous over you with a godly jealousy; for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you a chaste virgin to Christ." A short time before they were pagans: now they are addressed as The "Congregation of God," "the Sanctified in Christ Jesus," "called saints," and "God's children." How had the great change been brought about? Why, in Acts xviii. we learn that Paul went to Corinth and preached the gospel,—the Word of truth, and organized the Church to which the two Epistles to the Corinthians were written. Remember the Corinthians were heathens, and grossly immoral heathens, and the preaching the gospel there, by Paul, and its result, illustrates what James says in his first chapter and 18th verse:—

"Of his own will begat he us, with the Word of Truth, that we should be a kind of first-fruits of his creatures..... Wherefore lay apart all filthiness, and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted Word which is able to save your souls: but be ye doers of the Word, and not hearers only?" Could they have been virgins before Paul visited them with the Word?

Any person can see from this what the first-fruits unto God were raised from: and who the chaste virgins are, who will be presented to him. They will have been evolved from those of the vilest habits, and in some respects, the lowest specimens of humanity; but still susceptible of impregnation by the Word of truth, while the mass of Jewish religionists had no ear to hear whatever. Yes, they were begotten by the Word of God, born of water, fed by the milk of the Word till able to digest, and appropriate strong food; and if faithful to the end—i. e. adhere steadfastly to the doctrine of the Anointed, and not corrupted by the idolatrous worship of the beast nor the doctrine of Anti Christian churches, they are virgins, and will be presented as chaste virgins to him whom they have been espoused to. See 2 Cor. xi. 2. after having born from the dead—born of the Spirit.

Objector asks if the Revelator used a dark lantern or used language so difficult in describing the same class of persons? We say to him that the Spirit often compares the kingdom to many very different things, to illustrate different phases of it. And the Ecclesia is symbolized by a "persecuted woman," by "144,000," by "a Temple," by the "Holy City," "Lamb's Wife," etc.

He says there are evidently two classes under consideration. "Evidently"—well if there be, there is evidence of it. It is evidence that makes things evident. All we ask is the evidence. Where is the evidence? Human reason is not evidence if it be ever so perfect. If there be evidence of two classes,—divine evidence, we mean, it is all we ask,—and it will please us, because God arranges all things in infinite wisdom.

He continues: "One class (is) to sit on his throne and to reign with him a thousand years, the other class are for servants. This is intended to be included in the "evidently."—but the evidence is not in sight.

Will the objector note well:—

1. That the little flock, to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom, and therefore attain to royalty, are the servants who are found watching.

2. That the Lord whom they serve in his absence, and whom he served while at the Father's right hand, will make them sit down to meat.—gird himself and come forth and serve them, King of kings though he be.

3. That the glorified Son of David and Son of God will be his [Jehovah's] Servant in the age to come to raise up the tribes of Israel and to restore the preserved of Israel, a light to the Gentiles and Jehovah's salvation unto the end of the earth. Is. xlix. 6. He comes to work. His work is before him when he comes. "His reward is with him, and his work before him." Isa. xl. 10; and lxii. 11.

4. That the description of the Holy City, New Jerusalem descending from God out of heaven prepared as a bride adorned for her husband, is such as to exclude the idea of its being a real city; but a body of people, who, when on probation even, were the bride-elect,—that is espoused, or betrothed or engaged to Christ; see 2 Cor. xi. 2; and whose duty it was to invite others to come and take of the water of life freely. Rev. xxii. 17. But at this time will have become a spiritual community.

5. That the union of these with Christ the Lamb of God is to be consummated. The marriage will take place; it has been decreed by God, Rev. xix. 7, 8, And when it says the wife hath made herself ready, we know a city could not make herself ready, a city could not be the Lamb's wife. And when it says she shall be arrayed in fine linen clean and white, and explains that the fine linen is the righteousness of saints,—we are certain that those who wear that raiment are saints, and that it is those saints who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb who are to be married to the Lamb. What now becomes of that writer's "objection?"

6. That Rev. xxi. 22 shows that the Lord God and the Lamb are the Temple of that heavenly community called the Holy City, New Jerusalem. This is descriptive of the same class spoken of in the day of flesh and blood and trial, even as the temple of the living God, and that God dwelt in them and walked in them: see 2 Cor. vi. 16. Yes, this is the same class in Rev. xxi. 22, but in a perfect state, and symbolized by a city, instead of a temple as in the Corinthians; and here the Lord God Almighty is said to be the temple, and the light of that city, and the nations of the saved shall walk in the light of it, and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it. The Lord God Almighty is the Temple, and they have been made partakers of Christ,—made like to his most glorious body and appear with him in glory,—being pure and joined of him,—constituents of him,—actually living stones of that temple, and serve the Father continually.

7. That after the thousand years, and there is NO MORE curse, no more death, Rev. xxii. 3, and God is all in all,—then even his servants shall serve him. And we humbly conceive our writer's objections are founded in error.

Parables of Salomoon. Chapter 20.

1. Wine is an unbridled thing and strong drink insolent; and with such things every person without good sense becometh entangled.

2. A king threatening doth not differ from a lion's anger: and the one who provoketh it is sinning against his own soul

3. It is a man's glory to turn away from abusive talk; but with such things doth every person without good sense become entangled.

4. A sluggard when reproached is not ashamed; even so also he who borroweth food in early harvest.

5. Counsel in a man's heart is deep water, and a thoughtful man will draw it.

6. A mere man is a great thing and a merciful man a precious thing, but to find a faithful man is a work.

7. He who conducteth himself blamelessly in righteousness will leave behind him blessed-happy children.

8. Whenever a justified king shall sit upon a throne no wickedness will withstand in his sight.

9. Who will boast that he hath a pure heart; or who will boldly say that he is clean from sins?

(The order of the verses changed here to agree with the order in C. V. and R. V.)

20. His lamp will be extinguished, who speaketh ill of father or mother; and the pupils of his eyes will see darkness.

21. A portion that hasteth at first will not have been blessed at last.

22. Say not, I will punish my enemy, but wait for the Lord, that he may become thy responsive-helper.

10. A great and a small weight and double measures are useless in the sight of the Lord, both they,

11. And the one who maketh them. A young man in his devices with a holy one will have been bound hand and foot and his way is a straight way.

12. An ear heareth, and an eye seeth, and both are the Lord's works.

13. Love not to talk against one, that thou mayest not be destroyed. Open thine eyes and be filled with bread.

23. An abomination to the Lord is a double weight, and a deceitful balance is not a good thing in his sight.

24. From the Lord are a man's steps made right; but how will a mortal apprehend his ways?

25. For a man to quickly sanctify any of his own things is a snare; For after he hath vowed he comes to repent (change his mind, you see "repentance" means).

26. A winower of the irreverent is a wise king, and he will put a wheel (a threshing wheel) upon them.

27. The Lord's light is man's breath; and he will search the inner chambers of one's body.

28. Mercy and truth are a king's watch-guard; and they surround his throne with righteousness;

29. Wisdom is a cosmos (a thing of beauty) for young men; but a glory for elders is their gray hair.

30. Bruises and breakages meet the bad, and blows into the inner-chambers of their body.

CHAPTER 21.

1. Even as the movement of water is a king's heart in God's hand: Whoever he willeth to, doth he incline it.

2. Every man seemeth to himself to be justified: but the Lord maketh hearts upright.

3. To do right and to assert the best truth in the estimation of God is very much more than blood of sacrifices.

4. To be high-minded with haughty pride is to be bald-hearted; and the lamp of the irreverent is sin.

There is no fifth verse in the text.

6. He who promoteth inutile treasures with a lying tongue is pursuing them over snares of death.

7. Destruction will have been entertained as a guest by the irreverent: For they do not desire to do the right things.

8. Unto the crooked God seemeth crooked ways: For his works are pure and upright.

9. Better is it to dwell in a corner out of doors than in stuccoed walls with iniquity and in a house in common with it.

10. An irreverent man's soul will not have been shown mercy by any man.

11. When an unbridled man is paying the penalty the guileless becometh more subtile, and a wise man who understandeth will receive comprehension.

12. A justified man understandeth the hearts of the irreverent and boldeth the irreverent faulty in their evil doings.

13. He who stoppeth his ears so as not to hear the weak, will himself invoke and there will be no one to hear.

14. Secret giving turneth away feelings of wrath; but the one who is sparing of his gifts stirreth up strong anger.

15. To act judicially is a matter of rejoicing for the justified; but a holy one is useless in the estimation of evil-doers.

16. A man who is erring from the way of righteousness will pause in an assembly of giants.

17. A man in want loveth rejoicing, being friendly to wine and olive-oil for riches.

18. But a transgressor is an object for purification for a justified person.

19. Better is it to dwell in the wilderness than with a contentious and tongueey and wrathful woman.

20. A treasure to be desired will pause in the mouth of a wise man; but thoughtless men drink it down.

21. A way of righteousness and merciful-doing will find life and glory.

22. A wise man hath gone against walled cities, and torn down the fortification in which the irreverent trusted.

23. He who watcheth to guard his mouth and his tongue will watch to keep his soul from tribulation.

24. A bold and audacious person and a braggart is called a scourge, and he who cherisheth malice is an evader of law.

25. Inordinate desires slay the sluggard; For his hands are not extended to do any thing.

26. An irreverent man hath inordinate desires all the day long; but the justified man showeth mercy and pity without stint.

27 The sacrifices of irreverent men are an abomination to the Lord; Yea, for they offer them in a way avasive of law.

28. A false witness will perish; but an obedient man will talk guardedly.

29. An irreverent man withstandeth a face shamelessly; but the upright himself understandeth his own ways.

30. There is no wisdom, there is no unskilfulness, there is no counsel according to the irreverent man.

31. A horse is made ready for a day of war; but from the Lord is the responsive-help.

The road of life is a turnpike road. It is a path which every one must find for himself, by the help of such directions as God has given us; and there are so many other paths crossing the true one in all quarters, and the wrong paths are so well beaten, and the true path in places is so faintly marked, so many, too, are always going the wrong way, that between the number of paths to puzzle him and the number of wrong examples to lead him astray, a man, if he does not take continual heed, is in great danger of turning into a wrong path, almost without perceiving it.

Learning will accumulate wonderfully if you add a little every day. Do not wait for a long period of leisure. Pick up the book and gain one new idea, if no more. Save that one, and add another as soon as you can. Says an old Scotch adage: "Many a little makes a mickle."

If books do not make one good or bad, they at least make one better or worse.

Quarrelsome persons are very dangerous companions.

Indiana Conference.

The following Programme has been prepared for the First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Indiana, to be held at Plymouth, Nov. 18 to and including Nov. 21, 1897.

As it is to be a religious meeting it is thought best to devote more time to religious work and less time to neighborly visiting.

PREPARATORY PROGRAMME.

Churches, choose delegates at once.

Sunday Schools, select delegates early.

Churches and Sunday Schools, instruct delegates and provide with carfare.

Delegates, prepare your reports.

Everybody, (who can) prepare to attend the first meeting on Thursday evening.

Do not expect a feast in the semblance of a religious meeting. God dislikes such gatherings. Isa. i, 14. But to assist one another spiritually is commended. Heb. iii. 13; x. 24–25. "Mary sat at Jesus' feet and heard his Word, but Martha was cumbered about much serving. But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken from her." Luke x. 38–42.

PROGRAMME.

THURSDAY, Nov. 18.

A. C. ROGERS, Secy.

When sorrow is asleep, wake it not.

In vain we climb the hills of earth
In search of some fair spot
Where human sin is unsullied by sin,
And curse has rested not.
Eternal beauty is to come,
When earthly things will seem,
To those who see the glory grand,
Like memory of a dream.

Reflections.

While sitting at my window reflecting, and watching the leaves as they gently drift down from the parent tree, and trampled under foot to be numbered with the forgotten, regardless of the position they once occupied, beautiful were they to deck nature's form. I thought of the analogy between the life of the leaves and the life of mankind, and these inspired words of the Sacred Writer, in Isa. lxiv., came to my mind, "They all do fade as a leaf," and suggested the following lines.

With autumn has come, as the hands of time remain
In dreary winds, of driving rain,
The time now has come for the fading of the leaves.
Gone has summer, with her balmy breeze.

The stately elm sighs as he waves his long arms
In wild despair at the loss of his charms,
Which nature has ripened, and one by one
Its season is severed, its race is run.

The beautiful trees of hill and dell
Have all heard the sound of the autumn knell,
They know that the time has come to fall,
When the beautiful treasures of summer pall.

They are falling by wild Niagara's shore,
And floating away 'mid the silent roar
Of the ceaseless tide as it madly raves,
Borne onward to their watery graves.

They are rolling in wonder-gray and there,
And scattered about with imperial care
That the rich and the poor alike may share
The covering of autumn's treasures fair.

They are calling in rustling accents revealed
Floating softly through the air,
Those robbed of leaves in spring so green,
Now clad in dark with wire, robust sheen.

We pass them by with thoughtless ——,
These withered leaves, types of our dead
We do not realize, we pass as the wind,
But what? We shall also be so fed.

We are not favored as the golden shore
And even favored as the dancing rye.
They have their season to grow and fade,
We can say time in the grave may be laid.

Hoar-frost at the cemetery and the scene is told
Here lie the rich, the poor, the young and the old.
We walk o'er their graves with heavy tread
As we do over the leaves of the autumn dead

Some pleasure the leaves lie thick on the ground,
While still on the trees are some to be found.
And all in motion they seem to be
And the tinted leaves still hail from the tree.

As we journey life's pathway many we see
Who have faded away like the leaves on the tree.
Away with false hopes and allurements, one all,
Like the leaves do wither and continually fall.

There will come a spring as we gladly hail
When the leaves of earth shall again beauty wear.
We will rise together and in Eden's bowers,
Shall in golden summer pluck earth's sweet flowers.

We will meet our loved ones in that happy land,
We will hear the voices of that bright happy band.
We will shout with them the glad refrain,
The leaves of earth are redeemed again.

Redeemed by our Savior, and ransomed from the grave
He suffered for our wrongs, He is to be save.
He wept and groaned and died upon the tree,
That withered leaves might new life see.

At roll call they'll come from every land,
Before his throne earth's kindreds shall stand.
Gathered there with him at his right hand.
Happy are they to do his commands.

ANGELINE LANT.

Communicated.

"And the Holy City shall they trend under foot forty and two months." Rev. xi. 2.

No. I.

In looking over Professor Dimble-bey's work we find that the above months is one of the many measuring lines with which he closes out Gentile times. Now, the months are all right but his application of them may be all wrong. I was amazed at his positive assertion, "Jerusalem cannot be trodden down a moment longer than 1295½ unless we can quench the Sun or stop the rotation of the earth." We have no desire to interfere with the sun and the earth, but we have a desire for the redemption of Jerusalem, and this prompts us to examine some of the Professor's measuring rods. Three of these lines are all that we wish to examine.

Seven times 2300 days and 42 months he makes of seven times a measuring line, that is, 2520 years long. From Daniel iv. we learn that a certain King was to herd with the beasts and feed on grass until seven times passed over him. 2520 years would be a long while for even a king, to feed on grass. In Lev. xxvi. we find the word repeated for the fourth time, "I will yet punish you seven times more for your sins. I will bring seven times more plagues upon you. I will yet punish you seven fold more for your sins." Seven times longer is not once named. The plain inference is seven-fold more, surely. Seven times more plagues. Their plagues were to be sore and of long duration, but how long was not revealed unless it be found in the seventy full weeks of Daniel ix.

2520 years is the Professor's longest measuring line. With this he measures both Jewish and Gentile times. Israel's times as a nation began when they entered into the covenant at Sinai. Their times as a kingdom under that covenant began when the nation was merged into a kingdom. Their times as a kingdom ended when the kingdom was overturned. Their times as a nation under said covenant ended when the nation fell at the hand of Rome. The times of their afflictions and plagues for their sins began in the wilderness, there has been short seasons of respite, but they are still in exile. Their times as a separate and distinct race in the earth began with Abraham, but the Professor's line of 2520 years will not fit any of these times. He must have spun the line and then assumed a starting point. Now when did Gentile times begin? The Professor says B. C. 622. Now if their times began as he states and just 2520 years was allotted to them, they of course would end in 1898, but there were Gentile rulers nine nations before B. C. 622. We find that an idle Queen was made to the nations to say back at the tower of Babel, but it was an allotment of their inheritance and not of their times and seasons. When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the children of Israel for the Lord's portion is his people, Jacob is the lot of his inheritance. Deut. 32-40.

There is no measuring line of their times in this. The sons of Adam were separated at the tower of Babel, and nations were bidden along the line of confused tongues. If we are looking for the beginning of Gentile times why not go back to the beginning. A man is the federal head of all races. He is the federal head of all Gentile nations and their times date from the commission given to the federal head to rule over the earth, and their times end when the second Adam receives the first dominion, but the duration of their times from start to finish was not revealed. The measuring rod of 2520 years is an assumption. It is an assumption that seven times is 2520 years. Call a time one year, then seven times would be seven years. A time, times and half a time being three years and a half would be seven years. In the law seven days was a full period or cycle of time. Seven times seven days another. Seven years another, and seven times seven years another. Take the longest of these full cycles of time or 50 years and multiply by seven and we have 350 years. Multiply this by seven and we have 2450, even this will not fit the Professor's line. They were punished in the first captivity seventy years multiply this by seven we have 490, bringing them near the time of their second captivity, then if the rule of seven times longer was correct the 490 would be multiplied by seven, making 3430 years of punishment due to them. It is evident that Gentile dominion reached the summit of its power under the golden head of the image, but it was long ages according to this summit, as it has been long ages on the down grade. To determine the length of Gentile times, why lay down a measuring line on the head of gold? Time their times from this date and onward to the end could have been measured by Him who declared the end from the beginning. But the seven times of the law will not fill the bill. As to the 2520 days of Dan. viii., many have blundered in making a measuring line of days, if the days stood for years. If the sanctuary of this vision was the temple in Jerusalem, and the host was the Jews, then the 2300 must begin when the city and the sanctuary was destroyed by the Romans. But here again the Professor's measuring rod will not fit. The bed is too short for a man to stretch himself on it, and the blanket is too narrow to wrap him up. A few words as to Dan. viii. An event marks the opening of the vision of the pushing of the ram, an event marks the closing vision of the sanctuary and the host are given over to be trodden under foot. Daniel heard two parties speaking. Thereupon to the question, how long is the vision continued concerning the transgression and making desolate, to give up both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot, the answer is 2300 days and the sanctuary is cleansed. This is what Daniel heard, but did not understand. This was what the man Gabriel was to explain to him. Now let us hear the explanation given us. He said, I am understand, O son of man, for at the time of the end is the vision." But what end? Answer. "The last end of the indignation. The vision of the sanctuary and the host is placed at the last end of the indignation, and here the 2300 days belong. No question was raised between the two saints that were speaking as to the length of the career of the ram, the goat his four horns or as to the career of the little horn. The question related to the giving up the host and the sanctuary to be trodden under foot, and this is placed at the last end of the indignation. This is called the vision of the evening and morning. But will the last end of the indignation be a period of 2300 years? Will the seven angels be 2300 years in pouring out the seven last plagues?

In Daniel ix., we have the first end of the indignation from Daniel's standpoint, brought to view. The city and the sanctuary was to be desolate until the consummation, and that which is determined shall be poured upon the desolator. Now, this brings again to the last end of the indignation when the nations are marshalled against Jerusalem and God's wrath is poured out upon them. In the last end of the indignation the little horn, the king of a lawless face will become great and his power will be great, yet it is not his own power if it must be derived from confederates. He will stand up against the prince of princes and will be broken without hand.

Believing as I do that the forty two months of Rev. xi is a measuring line of importance to us, I will ask for space in THE RESTITUTION to consider them.

Bible-Class Paper.

The lesson for consideration to-night is found in Eph. iv. 3, where it speaks of endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit, in the bonds of peace. It is a short verse, but the foundation principle contained therein, takes weeks of study and months of practice to understand and work out. The unity of the Spirit. Unity means to join together portions as one, to be inseparable, to be united, to be one, so then it is the oneness of the Spirit we are to endeavor to keep.

How do we become of one Spirit? The Word of God, reveals to man the will of God, and when man believes that Word, and declares he will be obedient to it, he has no longer a will or purpose of his own, but is of one mind and purpose with God. He is then a child of God working together with God for one and the same end. It is the Spirit of God, through his Word, working in us and through us, that makes us of one mind and one Spirit. It is the oneness of our faith and practice, as the children of God, that will keep us in the unity of the Spirit. Paul in writing to the Corinthians says, "I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, that there be no division among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment." To speak the same thing we must believe and practice the same thing. Christ went about preaching and teaching the gospel of the kingdom, and the disciples were sent to preach the same gospel of the kingdom, and the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ, baptizing as many as believed. And it is this same gospel of the kingdom and the things concerning the name of the same Jesus Christ, that we believe and teach,—also baptizing as many as believe. If a stranger were among us, and spoke for five minutes of his faith, we would know whether he or she were of the household of faith. As to our faith there we are united, we are one, we do as Paul beseeches us, we do speak the same thing. Now faith brings forth works, and we ought also to be of one mind concerning the works which faith brings forth, if they are as necessary for our salvation as faith, (and they are) for faith without works is dead, being alone. It is the faith that brings forth the works, and if works do not follow faith, then that faith is dead, because fruitless. It is the works that tell us whether faith is dead or alive. If we can, (and we do) speak the same thing when speaking of our faith, ought it not to be not the same of the works? Jesus does not speak one thing of works and the disciples another; they speak the same thing. There is an abundance of Scriptural teaching concerning works, and it all points in one line, and that is, to cease to be flesh with all its passions and lusts, crucify the flesh with its affections and lusts, and to be zealous and pray lest we enter into temptation. We are to walk and live as strangers and pilgrims on the earth, looking and praying for the coming of the Lord. We are to walk and hear, exactly the reverse of the flesh. If there is no harm in the dance, in the card party, in the theatre, and in the pleasures of the ungodly, if there is no harm in drinking, smoking, and deceiving ourselves, no harm in being selfish, unkind, impatient and untrue, no harm in anger, wrath, malice, strife, covetousness, etc., if there is no harm in these things, (which are all of the flesh, and not of God,) then what are the things we are to daily and hourly strive to overcome. Ah! loved ones these are surely not the works faith brings forth. If we do these things, we are surely sowing to the flesh, and whatsoever we sow, that will we reap. Paul writing to the Colossians says, it was these that brought the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience, in which we one time walked but now have put off, having buried the old man with his deeds. We are now to walk in the Spirit. Jesus says it is the Spirit that quickeneth, and the words that I speak unto you, they are Spirit and they are life, he bids us follow him, unto where does he lead? The way he leads in is very narrow, and few there be that find it, but it leads on to everlasting life. For a moment, listen to the words of the prayer he offers to his heavenly Father in behalf of those who follow him. He had seen praying for the disciples, and then goes on to say, "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their Word, that they all may be one, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us. That the world may believe that thou hast sent me. I in them and thou in me, that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me." that prayer was offered up for us, because we have believed on him, as believed that God gave him to be the Savior of the world. Will we let it help us to be united to Him? When we look upon ourselves the name of that dear Savior, we pledged ourselves to leave all and follow him, that we would love and serve God with all our heart, and all our understanding, and with all our strength, do we do it? If we do, does it leave any room for the things of the flesh? If we do, ought we not to be of the same mind, and of one heart, walking carefully together, hand in hand along the narrow way that leadeth to life? I have been slow in learning, how narrow the way is, out-side I think I have learned it, or almost, and I pray that I may be always found walking in it, and oh, that we all who are here tonight, might pledge ourselves anew, to serve our God with singleness of heart, with our faces set Zionward, with Jesus as our example, and, we will keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace.

MATTIE NEAL.

Report of Work in Washington.

Dear Restitution:

I will write and let your readers know what we have been doing in this part of the Lord's field. (The world is the field.)

The Northwest Conference was held at Lake Shore School House, commencing on Friday the 8th of Oct., with a good attendance throughout from the churches at Schoolls, Camas, Flatwoods and Lake Shore. The preaching was done by Elders W. L. Skeels, Wm. Prosser and Bro. Eggleston. The interest was good throughout. The business meetings were a failure for want of harmony. No new officers were elected; and no Evangelist was elected for this Conference year; each of the several ministers declining to act under the existing circumstances. The main hindrance seems to be the lack of an evangelist fund sufficient to keep an evangelist in the field. The Conference adjourned on Sunday evening the 17th inst.

Elder W. L. Skeels, who has been in eastern Washington, at Waterville and other points was with us, and decided to continue the meetings. There was much interest manifested throughout. The meetings were continued for two weeks, and closed last evening (Sunday the 24th inst). The result was twenty-four baptized, five more to be baptized, and five reclaimed and joined with the church at Lake Shore. The church at this place now has eighty-three members. The interest was good and great zeal was shown, and we trust that much good will yet result to the community at Lake Shore. Sixty-one members partook of the emblems at communion, at the close of these meetings last night.

At a meeting of the committee, Eld. W. L. Skeels was appointed evangelist, and he accepted the appointment to preach for our churches and to go out into new fields when deemed practicable.

At a business meeting held on the 24th it was also decided to begin a Sunday School and social meetings on each Sunday. The Sunday School at 10:30 A. M. and the social meetings at night. Officers were chosen to conduct these meetings.

Great credit is due to Elder Skeels, for the able manner in which the Word was preached. The gospel was shown to be "the power of God unto salvation" to those believing it.

It was decided to have the next annual meeting at Lake Shore on the first Saturday in June, 1898.

Now, we trust that all those who have started, and are about to start in "the narrow way," will never falter, or turn back, but press on toward the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus.

Your Brother in the one hope.

J. M. FISK.

OUR LOVE FEAST.

Dear Restitution:

It is such a joy to read the letters of the love feast, to know that there are a few scattered up and down the land that understand God's Word. We have no preaching here, so THE RESTITUTION and our Bible are all we have. Enclosed please find money order to pay for ——— per as we cannot well do without it.

With love to you and all of the blessed household.

MRS. C. C. PERRINE.

Dear Restitution:

I am still living in hope of the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The waiting time seems long, but when we reflect, what are we doing? What can we do? What ought we to do to improve the time? I have dreams of me loosing our reward by lack of work, or is our faith sufficient? I am frequently engaged in thoughts like these, but it seems all to no purpose. When I try to interest others in the things concerning the Kingdom of God of the Lord Jesus Christ, they have no ears, or else they consider me (to use a common expression) a crank. So to sum up, I am just drifting along trying to keep myself unspotted from the world, dropping a word here and there as I have opportunity, but it avails little so far as I can see.

L. W. NOBLES.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Pray for me that I may have my loins girt about with truth; that I have on the whole armor of God, that I may be able stand fast in this evil day. Oh, how much we need to exhort one another and pray for one another. How much we need to be knit together in love, compassion, tenderheartedness; with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit, striving to be of one mind. And so in this day of so many winds of doctrine, I ask again "pray for me" that I may be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, but the righteousness which comes by faith in God through the Lord Jesus Christ, that my life may be hid with Christ in God.

From one who hopes for the restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. The Lord help all who are striving to be like him,

B. W. WAGGONER.

Dear Restitution:

As I see our Love feast still continues I would like to say a few words in favor of our joys and faith in the promises. Dear brothers and sisters have we really got a sufficient quantity of faith to do us any good? I believe there is a way to know whether we have or not. I think if we go to the concordance and find the word faith, and spend a few hours hunting the references, I believe we will know whether we have got faith or not. And Paul says in Heb. xi. 6, "Without faith it is impossible to please him (God)." And James says in James ii. 17, "Faith if it hath not works is dead being alone." Dear brethren, when I come to investigate, I believe my faith has been a dead faith a great portion of the time since I first believed, but I will try by the help of God to have a live faith from now onward, the little time that I have left to work. I have often said, O if I could only preach like some of our brethren can, I would spend all the time I could possibly spare in preaching the gospel of the kingdom. There are probably more that have thought as I have about that. I think we are deceiving ourselves in that thought, if we don't give all we can spare of our earnings to assist them that can preach. What I give proves to my mind how much time I would spend preaching if I could preach. We have many good proclaimers of truth that I believe would spend all of their time preaching the gospel if they could live by preaching.

Dear brethren, I think if we are exempt from preaching the gospel of the kingdom because we have weak lungs, and are not educated and gifted that way, (which is my case) I can't see why we would not be exempt from the inheritance in the kingdom. I don't think there are any exempt (I mean any Christian) if they can't preach with their voice, they can with their money. If there are some that have no money and cannot work to get it, they can preach to the little children, if not by words, they can teach some by their looks and actions. Another bad mistake I have made, and I have known of others making the same mistake, and that is in saying I would give for this or that purpose if I knew it would be used right or would do any good; if we wait until we know that, we will never do anything for the truth, for that is a thing that we can't know; but if we give (not merely as a duty) with the right spirit, through love for the truth, I think we will have credit for the amount given, in the Lamb's Book of Life. When the books are opened if our names are not there, O how sad it will be. I am afraid we would be among that class that will cry for the rocks and the mountains to fall on them. I believe if we had as much faith in the promises as many have in the prospect of gaining wealth in Alaska, we would keep at least one out of every ten in the field preaching the gospel all the time. Many do their best in trying to get riches in this life, and fail. Even though some succeed, there is no certainty of enjoying it for one day. But not so in the Christian's case, (and professed Christians merely) he lays up his treasures in heaven where moth does not corrupt, and thieves can't break through and steal, and that kind of wealth gives perfect health and happiness eternally. Just think of it a few minutes. All the wealth in the world is not equal to one rain drop in the ocean compared with such treasures, and the beauty of it is, that great wealth is in reach of the poorest of us. I would like very much to attend the good conference meetings that I read accounts of in THE RESTITUTION, and also the Iowa and Kansas and Missouri tent meetings. As I esteem it a great privilege to help the good work along. I can hardly tell how highly I prize THE RESTITUTION, so much so that I am very careful to not let any of them be destroyed around home. I scatter them around on the street, in peoples' buggies and wagons, in stores and reading rooms, thinking they possibly may save a soul from death. To destroy them at home I would know that they had done nobody good but myself. Just think of this, dear brothers and sisters, James v. 20, "Let him know, that he which converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins."

In love to all, your Brother in Christ.

A LOVER OF TRUTH.

Common failings are the strongest lessons in mutual forbearance.

The smallest perfect achievement is nobler than the grandest failure.

No amusement is innocent which takes away the soul from Jesus.

The Scriptures have lights in them that are not seen by common gazers.

The elements of success are within a man, but the chances are outside of him.

"What men want is not talent, it is purpose; in other words, not the power to achieve, but the will to labor."

In matters of conscience, first thoughts are best; in matters of prudence, last thoughts are best.

To prize ourselves by what we have, and not by what we are, is to estimate the value of the pearl by the golden frame which contains it.

Upon what condition may we obtain immortality? "Fight the good fight of faith lay hold on eternal life." 1 Tim. vi. 12.

Miseries come unbidden and always stay too long, while joys must be sought for, and when found are liable to slip away unawares.

Nothing is more calculated to quiet the mind in trouble than viewing all things in the hands of God; and that God as our friend.

The Danger of Riches.

Ah! the rust of riches! Not that portion of them which is kept bright in good and holy uses, "and the consuming fire" of the passions which wealth engenders! No rich man—I lay it down as an axiom of all experience—no rich man is safe, who is not a benevolent man; no rich man is safe but in the imitation of that benevolent God, who is the possessor and disposer of all the riches of the universe. What else mean the miseries of a selfish, luxurious, and fashionable life everywhere? What mean the signs that come up from the purlieus, and couches, and most secret haunts of all splendid and indulgent opulence? Do not tell me that other men are sufferers too. Say not that the poor, and destitute, and forlorn, are miserable also. Ah! just heaven! thou hast in thy mysterious wisdom appointed to those a lot hard, full hard, to bear. Poor houseless wretches! who "eat the bitter bread of penury, and drink the baleful cup of misery;" the winter winds blow keenly through your "looped and windowed raggedness;" your children wander about unshod, unclothed, and untended; I wonder not that ye sigh. But why should they, who are surrounded by everything that heart can wish, or everything that heart can conceive—the very crumbs that fall from whose table of prosperity might feed hundreds—why should they sigh amidst their profusion and splendor? They have broken the bond that should connect power with usefulness, and opulence with misery. This is the reason. They have taken up their treasures, and wandered away into a forbidden world of their own far from the sympathies of suffering humanity; and the heavy night dews are descending upon their splendid revels; and the all-gladdening light of heavenly beneficence is exchanged for the sickly glare of selfish enjoyment; and happiness, the blessed angel that hovers over generous deeds and heroic virtue, has fled away from the world of false gaiety and fashionable exclusion. —Dr. Dewey.

Sectarianism.

Sectarianism has done more to injure the truth of God than all the writings of Hume, Gibbon, Voltaire and Paine. Human creeds prevent men from studying the Bible, as they are supposed to be a sufficient guide without it. Men who ascribe to certain articles of faith, are accepted as church members, whether they have ever experienced that deep and abiding faith in God or not.

Sectarianism leads to alienate men from each other, and makes them clannish and exclusive in their feelings, their sympathies become contracted, and they only feel an interest in those who are of their view, or pronounce their shibboleth.

Sectarianism leads to persecution. Men who cannot religiously ascribe to certain articles of faith, have been burnt at the stake, and made to suffer all kinds of death, simply because they would not sell their souls to the blind and bewildering creeds made by synods and councils. Woe unto that man or body of men who dare claim a free spirit not bound to some formula of faith forged in the conventions of finite man.

The Divine Father has given us our guide, and we should not seek to supersede it by inventing systems of our own, lest we go beyond the power given us, and shut out the only light which shines across our path. The resolutions and creeds of men will all perish, but the Word of God "liveth and abideth forever." Happy is he who accepts it as his chart, hopes in its promises, obeys its instructions, and has an abiding faith in its Author, who will bless us forevermore.—H. V. Reed.

Our Times.

The times in which we live are eventful and solemn. All things seem hastening to a point—to some great and inevitable crisis. So rapidly does the mighty wheel of Providence now revolve, that Prophecy is daily passing into history. Institutions, the work of centuries, that seemed stable as the mountains, are giving way. Principles, that seemed forever secured, are again denied and denounced. Controversies, that have lain for ages in silent oblivion, are again revived, and are engaging thousands in keenest warfare. The church is rapidly separating from the world—the men of God from the men of earth, to range themselves on opposite sides; and few now doubt that, if not the last, yet certainly some dread momentous struggle between light and darkness, between the Seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent, is at hand. In such circumstances, what a blessing is it that we are not left to grope in the dark, or trust to vague conjectures? No! we have a more sure Word of Prophecy, unto which we do well to take heed; for it is as a light shining in a dark place, as a pilot in the storm, as a note of warning in a time of peace, and as a voice of encouragement in the hour of conflict; for while it tells of a night of deepest darkness, it also tells of an immediately succeeding day of brightest light—a day of universal righteousness, rest, and glory.

Announcement.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith, will convene at Plymouth, Ind., Thursday evening Nov. 18, 1897 and continue over the following Sunday.

Now brethren and sisters of the faith in Indiana, the time is almost at hand for another meeting wherein we can come together and strengthen and encourage each other by prayer and exhortation, and we earnestly urge that each and every one who possibly can arrange to be at our meeting, come with hearts full of love and for the advancement of the cause.

You who have read THE RESTITUTION have no doubt seen there is being a renewed effort put forth for more effective evangelizing and we are glad to say is meeting with quite a degree of success and the outlook is very promising if it continues, therefore we urge that every church organization as far as possible be represented by delegates that you may take part in whatever business may come up before the Conference. We invite all who are interested to be with and share with us.

F. L. AUSTIN, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec.

Brothers and Sisters of Indiana:

I wish to call the attention of all in Indiana to the article on Editorial page of THE RESTITUTION of Sept. 15, entitled "To the Brothers and Sisters of Indiana." Also to the article entitled "Indiana Workers" in issue of Sept. 22. Some I learn have overlooked both of these articles. Please do not delay in answering these requests. Many reports have come in and thus far they are without exception, truly encouraging. With the earnest and prompt co-operation of all concerned a general report can soon be given that will be welcomed by every member of our State. Please do not delay.

Attention is also called to the fact that Bro. D. E. Vauvactor, 1st Vice Pres. of Argos, has, by request, accepted the responsibility of acting as State S. S. Supt. Will you kindly give him all the assistance in your power. Yours seeking the co-workers.

F. L. AUSTIN.

Notice.

Dear Restitution:

I wish to say through THE RESTITUTION, I am expecting to go South through the coming winter. Nothing preventing, I expect to beat Memphis, Tennessee, Dec. 14th, for one week. After the above date if any of the brethren in the South will write me at Memphis I will arrange to preach for them until the first of March, after which time I shall go to Willmington, Newbern, and Goldsborough, N. C.

Yours in hope of the soon coming kingdom of God,

D. M. HUDLER.

Philanthropy is not religion, but there is no religion without philanthropy.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Notice.

WILL our friends please remember that we do not have the books and tracts at this office that are advertized by Brother Joblin, or Brother Wiley Jones. Do not send to this office for them, but send to their address as given in the advertisement. This will save both trouble and delay. PLEASE REMEMBER.

Tract Fund.

We the undersigned, realizing that the distributing of tracts is a good way to spread the truth, and that the time is short in which we can work for the Master, do hereby agree to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purpose of raising a fund to be used in supplying tracts to those who will distribute them free.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

We have received a new supply of this valuable work, which treats of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the one hope, one faith, one baptism, by the late Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. This will need no introduction to many of our readers as they already know of the good that has been accomplished through its circulation. 10 cents each, or add to this office.

FUTURE PROBATION.

Is that awaiting any of the unbelieving? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Glean Moorhead. This work was issued and sold at 25 cents. We have a good supply and will send them post paid for ten cents per copy. This is an excellent opportunity for any who are interested in this subject to get this work by a talented author. Send ten cents and receive one copy.

QUESTIONS FOR CHURCHES AND PREACHERS ON THE IMMORTALITY

Is the title of a pamphlet of 80 pages by H. W. Bowman, containing questions on the Eternity of Evil, Predestination, Election and kindred points. It is well worth reading and will help many who are bothered to give answers many times. We can supply you for 10 cents a copy.

GLAD TIDINGS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

This is the title of a tract containing 122 pages, and is a reprint of a work issued many years ago and we suppose was written by Brother Benjamin Wilson. It is clear and comprehensive, and can be had for 5cts each or 50 cts for $1.00.

THE COMING NATION.

A lecture delivered by H. V. Reed. This clearly sets forth the fact that the Coming Nation will be the nation of Israel restored to Palestine, and the Scriptural reasons are given. 26 pages price 10 cts or three for 25 cts.

A PARALLEL BATTLE-FIELD, OR JACOB'S WATERLOO.

Is the title of a tract of 32 pages by H. W. Bowman and is devoted to an exposition of the Rich Man and Lazarus Question. 10 cents a copy.

THE SALVATION OF GOD.

A popular lecture by M. Joblin. Very good to put in the hands of those searching for truth. 16 pages 5cents each.

Necessity of Baptism. A 4-page tract, written some years ago by Brother J. M. Stephenson, and it appeared as a newspaper article. It is so good we thought best to preserve it in this way, and offer it at 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Bible Plan of Salvation. A 4-page tract telling how to interpret the Scriptures, the development of God's plan, etc. 2 cts each or 15 cts per dozen.

An open Letter to J. A. Conard. A 4 page tract being a letter written by Brother Daniel Howard and printed in RESTITUTION, April 28, 1896. 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Letter to Dr. Talmage. A 4-page tract being a letter written by Sister Abbie A. Howard to Dr. Talmage and printed in the RESTITUTION of April 22, 1896. 2 cents each or 15 cts per dozen.

Passages Supposed to Teach Consciousness after Death, by W. H. Wilson, which shows that eternal life is conditional and not inherited. 3 cents each, or 25 cents a dozen.

Where Do the Dead Sleep. These are Bible texts given in answer to this question. A 3-page tract 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Hades. A Bible account of this place with proof texts. Ten copies for 5 cents.

Death Compared to a Sleep. This represents death as a sleep and proof texts are given. Ten copies for 5 cts.

The Wicked Dead and Plain Truths. The two combined. 2 pages ten copies for 10 cents

"Word of Man, vs. Word of God," by H. V. Reed. A contrast between the two. Can be had at this office for 2cts each, or one dozen for 15 cts.

Address, THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Backbone.

When you see a fellow mortal
Without fixed or fearless views,
Hanging on the skirts of others,
Walking in their cast-off shoes;
Bowing more to wealth in favor,
With abject, unconcealed bend,
Ready to retreat or waver,
Willing to be driven or led:
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your moral shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow,
Just the things which life most lack.
A stronger word
Was never heard
Than this—Backbone.

The Gospel Recovered. No. 3.

"REFORMATION" MOVEMENT OF WALTER SCOTT AND ALEXANDER CAMPBELL.

In the second article on this subject, reference was made to the revival of certain Bible truths in the centuries following the Reformation. Special authors were named, and extracts from the published confessions of the English Baptists, in which the Reign of Christ on the earth" over the nations during the Millenium was earnestly contended for.

These great and important truths, however, had not been held and exhibited by any one as forming any part of the gospel of salvation. The subject was treated very much as a mere question concerning our Lord's second appearing before or after the thousand years' reign. Hence we find much about the pre-millennial advent, pre-millenarians, etc. The real question, however, is—Will the Messiah return AT ANY TIME to "restore again the kingdom to Israel?"

For the last fifty years, however, the case has been different. In the United States, in Canada and in Great Britain, there has been a more or less general and continuous testimony in favor of these truths referred to as constituting the very foundation of the glad tidings necessary to be believed for salvation. And not only so, but necessary to render baptism valid as the means of introducing the believer into Christ. The history of this movement to be intelligently understood must commence as far back as the year A. D. 1809. During the earliest one-third part of the present century, three young men of considerable force of character arrived at different times as emigrants in the United States from the old country. Through their instrumentality the development of the knowledge concerning the glad tidings proclaimed by our Lord and his Apostles was effected.

Alexander Campbell, born in 1788 in County Antrim, Ireland, arrived in the United States 1809; died 1865.

Walter Scott, born in 1796 in County of Dumfries, Scotland, arrived in the United States 1818; died 1861.

John Thomas, born in 1805 in London, England, arrived in the United States, 1832; died 1871.

In the early period of their career these three men had a remarkable experience with regard to the importance of Bible truth. This became so characteristic of each of them in his subsequent history that it deserves to be mentioned in this connection. In the cases of Alexander Campbell and John Thomas this experience was in its nature almost identical. During their voyage from the old country they each suffered shipwreck, and that under circumstances extremely alarming. The danger to life was so imminent, and his religious knowledge and experience, although brought up in a religious household, so defective that, in the case of John Thomas, he "resolved that if ever he set foot on terra firma again, he would not rest until he had discovered beyond all doubt, what was necessary to be believed and done for salvation." In the case of Alexander Campbell, he "decided that if he were spared, he would devote himself to the ministry of the gospel." Possibly his aim at this time was undecided as in youth he had been accustomed to farming. Walter Scott did not suffer shipwreck; but he had [illegible] received the idea that "the Bible alone was the sole authority in matters of religion," and was of so earnest a disposition that "midnight often found him engaged in the study of the sacred volume; and he made a solemn vow to God, that if he, for Christ's sake, would grant him just and comprehensive views of his religion, he would subordinate all his present and future attainments to the glory of his Son and his religion." Preface to The Messiahship p. 7.

Again on the text (p. 8). "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God." He says, "Having looked on this celebrated saying of the Redeemer for nearly forty years without understanding it, and having eagerly seized and carefully examined every exposition that happened to come before him, the author ever felt that the verse remained unexplained. Impatient of his consummate ignorance of this deep saying of the blessed, he took the liberty, in humble prayer, to ask with holy reverence whether his great Redeemer had spoken that saying never to be understood? If not, the author prayed he might be enlightened. The interpretation found in the body of this book was shortly afterward suggested. The case may perhaps illustrate this saying of James—"If any man lack wisdom let him ask of God, who giveth liberally to all men, and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him." The Lord, as of old, may have said, "Gabriel, show this man the Scripture." It may be added that "the interpretation found in the body of the book" is the immersion of a believer, followed by the gift of the Holy Spirit—"promised to all who believe, and given to all who obey" p. 48.

Alexander Campbell and Walter Scott had received an education for the ministry of the Presbyterian Church. The former says "My faith in creeds and confessions of human device had been greatly shaken before leaving Scotland." (He had studied at the University of Glasgow.) Landing in New York in 1809, he went a month later, to Washington in Pennsylvania. He says "I commenced my career in this country under the conviction that nothing that was not as old as the New Testament should be an article of faith, a rule of practice, or a term of communion amongst Christians." He adds, "the whole of the Christian religion exhibited in prophecy and type in the Old Testament, was presented in the fullest, clearest and most perfect manner in the New Testament, by the Spirit of wisdom and revelation." He says, "On July 15, 1810, I publicly avowed my conviction of the independency of the Church of Christ, in a discourse from the last section of what is commonly called "Christ's sermon on the Mount." ....."On the 12th day of March, 1811, I took to myself a wife of the Presbyterian connection, and.....became a resident of Virginia. I became a citizen of Virginia as soon as the laws of the State permitted.....I was led to question the claims of infant sprinkling to Divine authority.....I was baptized on the 12th day of June, 1812. In the meantime I pursued the avocations of a husbandman as the means of my subsistence." Christian Baptist. p. 92. For about ten years, that is, "up to the time when he met with Walter Scott, the winter of 1821-22, Mr. Campbell's efforts had been mainly directed against the errors prevalent among those professing godliness, with a view to the promotion of union among them." Shortly after this (in August, 1823) Campbell started a periodical entitled The Christian Baptist. Upon consultation with Scott, who became a regular contributor to it, he adopted this title for it in preference to The Christian, which he had originally intended. Scott's Biographer, William Baxter, writing in 1874, says this work "produced the greatest revolution in religious thought in this century." It was carried on for seven years, and was afterwards republished in one large closely printed volume of 670 pages, which went through at least [illegible] promoters. Mr. Campbell followed up the Christian Baptist magazine with the issue of another in 1830 or 1831 which he entitled the Millenial Harbinger, of which more in the sequel. The zeal manifested throughout this movement so far, was only equaled by the ability shown by Mr. Campbell in the conducting of the works mentioned, and in the production of many series of papers on the various topics dealt with throughout, besides public addresses in many places. This remark also applies to Mr. Scott.

At this point it is desirable to notice the early operations of Walter Scott. Like Campbell he was educated for the ministry of the Presbyterian Church. He studied at Edinburgh; but shortly after the completion of his education, he, on the invitation of an uncle in New York, emigrated to the United States. He was engaged for some time as Latin tutor in a classical academy on Long Island. Hearing glowing reports of the West, he, along with a young man of his own age set out on foot for Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where he arrived on the 7th of May, 1819. He soon found employment as assistant teacher in the school of Mr. George Forrester, a fellow-countryman. Forrester was a Baptist, and his peculiarity consisted in making the Bible his only authority and guide in matters of religion." Scott was baptized and joined a small church which had been gathered together by Mr. Forrester. Mr. Forrester was accidentally drowned, and upon Scott, who had previously succeeded to the school-mastership, now, for a short time, devolved the care of the church. The study of the Bible had begun to open his mind to great discrepancies between the orthodox creeds and the plain teachings of Scripture, and "he began to feel more strongly than ever that there were thousands as sincere and earnest as himself who were yet under the bondage of the system from which he had been emancipated, and he desired that they should enjoy like freedom."

Parables of Saloomoon, Chapter 22.

1. A good name is more to be preferred than great riches; and more than silver and gold is good grace.

2. A rich man and a beggar have met one another; but the Lord made them both.

3. A subtile man when he hath seen a wicked man punished is himself chastened in a controlling way; but the thoughtless have gone on and paid the penalty.

4. Fear of the Lord is a generation of wisdom and riches and glory and life.

5. Thorns and snares are in perverse ways; but the one who watcheth to guard his own soul will ward them off.

6th verse omitted in the text.

7. The rich will rule over beggars, and house servants will lend to their own masters.

8. The one who soweth faults will reap evil things. And will get as a result a blow for his works. A cheerful man and a giver God blesseth; but he will get as a result for his works inutility ("vanity").

9. He who is merciful to a beggar will be supported through (tribulation understood). For he gave his own bread to the beggar. He who hath given bribes getteth victory and honor, though he taketh away the soul of those who get possession of them.

10. Cast out of a synedrion (a joint-council) a pestilent fellow and strife will go out along with him; For whenever he sitteth in synedrion he dishonoreth them all.

11. The Lord loveth holy hearts, and acceptable to him are all blameless ones; With lips doth a king shepherd them.

12. The eyes of the Lord watch to [illegible] exceptive thought; but an [illegible] holdeth words cheap.

13. [illegible] and saith, There is a lion in the streets and he is giving voice in the public squares.

14. The mouth of an evader of law is a deep pit, and the one hated by the Lord will fall into it. There are ways that are evil in the sight of a man, and he doth not love to turn away from them; but it behoveth him to turn away from a crooked and evil way.

15. Folly hath kindled the heart of a young man; but a scepter of rule and chastening are far from him.

16. The one who cheateth a needy one and so maketh his own things more forsooth is giving to a wealthy one for less.

17. Place thine ear alongside words of wise men and hearken to my Word and make thy heart to know precisely that thou mayest comprehend that they are good:

18. And if thou put them in thy heart (commit them by heart) they will make thee to rejoice at the same time in thy lips.

19. That thy hope may come to be in the Lord, and he may make known to thee thy way.

20. Yea and do thou write them for thyself three times for counsel and comprehension on the breadth of thy heart.

21. I am teaching thee accordingly to hearken to a true word and good comprehension that thou mayest answer words of truth to those who give thee problems to solve.

22. Do not repulse a needy one with violence; For he is a beggar; And do not disbonor a weak one in gateways, (where judgments were rendered);

23. For the Lord is presiding as [illegible] his trial and thou wilt deliver thy soul inviolate.

24. Do not be a comrade of a passionate man and do not camp out with a man easily moved to wrath,

25. Lest perchance thou mayest have learned his ways, and taken snares for thy soul.

26. Do not give thyself for surety because abashed at a face.

27. For if thou shalt not have wherefrom to pay the penalty, they will take thy bed from under thy sides.

28. Do not change age-lasting boundaries which thy fathers have placed.

29. An observing man and one swift in his deeds, it behooveth such a man to stand beside kings and to stand along side dull men.

COMMENT.

The 20th chapter opens with specific statement of good counsel and there is very little of the antithetical in this chapter "This is the way. Walk thou in it" is the general burden of the inspired teaching. The practical wisdom of the 6th verse calls for special mention as containing so much philosophy in so few words. The 8th verse is clearly Messianic and prophetic in its import; the 9th also in the answer that the Christian Church can boldly give now in the light of eighteen hundred years. These verses are true to their number. Observe moreover how somebody has tinkered with the numbering in this chapter. The 26th verse again is specially messianic in its esoteric significance! Also the 28th. Look and see.

The 21st chapter also has very little of the antithetical in it. The numbering of this chapter is regular with exception that the 5th verse is entirely omitted—probably inserted in some other chapter, but this fact not noted in the text. Such changes generally noted in the best text.

A good Illustration of the truth of the first verse is given in the book of Esther where God changes the heart of the king instantly toward Esther enters his presence and he holds out to her the golden sceptre as the result of this change.

The gist of the gospel is in the 3rd verse. Some of our leading financial promoters ought to read the 6th verse every morning before breakfast. such men as those who promoted the Union Pacific R. R. in its infancy. The 7th 8th and 9th verses might with profit be added to these same promoters repertoire. The tenor will [illegible] and incidentally solve the mental and moral philosophy of the 8th verse. Find the true relation between man and God that must necessarily bring about such a result as here stated.

True love in a cottage is the companion picture of the one seen in the 9th verse.

One of the great truths of the gospel is told in the 13th verse. Two more great truths are announciated in the 15th. The unmarried of both sexes will do well to commit the 19th verse by heart and we need a great many more sermons on the 21st verse as a text than we do just now on "the perseverance of the saints."

I hope such public men as Seth Low, Gov. Pingree and Alderman Harlan are familiar with the 22nd verse and have full faith in the truth of it. There are some good definitions in the 23rd, 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th and 30th verses and there is a thought for the soldier in the 31st verse. The numbering of the 22nd chapter is regular with the exception that the 5th verse is omitted, but not marked as inserted elsewhere in the text. The wisdom oracularly expressed, didactic in form, occasionally antithetical and nothing if not practical and adapted to the ordinary conduct of life and its vital issues.

The mayor and people of Chicago ought to act at once upon the directions given in the 10th verse.

The remembrance of the 11th and 12th verses ought to be more vital in the Christian of today than it is. There are too many "evaders of law" in the church now.

The sluggard and the unwary will do well to familiarize themselves with the 18th and 14th verses.

The young man starting out in life cannot fortify himself any better for life's trials and temptations than by adopting the first principles of good conduct suggested in the 14th and 15th verses. The 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st emphasize again the importance and value of God's oracular Word and the wisdom of those who have familiarized themselves with it. The balance of the chapter is preeminently hypostatical in its teaching, and as I said at the outset—"This is the way, walk thou in it" is the burden of the wisdom in these three chapters.

Report of Labor.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

According to promise I will give a brief report of my travels and labors in the vineyard of my heavenly Father.

On the 12th of July we left Phoenix, Arizona, for Parsons, Kansas, where we arrived on the 16th. Here we met our four children. On the 3rd Sunday in July we preached in the Christian church at Shaw, near the place where I preached 27 years ago, and continued to for 25 years. Then we met our worthy Brother Delos Johnson at Erie. We had a good meeting, two put on Christ by baptism. We spent the 4th Sunday at Lightning Creek. Here I met a number of old time brethren. While here I preached the funeral of Sister Una Smith, wife of John Smith. She was an exemplary Christian, having been baptized 22 years ago by the writer. The church at that place is without a preacher.

I spent the 1st Sunday in August in Buffalo, Kansas, where we were offered the use of three different churches. Our oldest daughter lives here, and we had a very good meeting. From here we went to Boxworth, Mo. While at Kansas City we had our pockets picked of $18.00, had 30cts left. Bro. Winslow lent me money to go to Boxworth. On the 2nd Sunday I preached at the Brown School house. We had a large audience, and one put on Christ by baptism. On Thursday evening we met at the house of Sister Sturgeon and broke bread, there were about twelve present. From here we went to Ripley, Ill., where we met Bro Isaac Lanning and his faithful wife, Sister Jennie Cox and a number of others. The brethren here aim to meet every Sunday for Bible Lessons. We next went to Blue Mound, Mo. At Chelsea we met Brother James Bowen. On the 4th Sunday we had a good meeting, also a basket dinner and a visit with several of the faith. We next went to Neosho Co., Kansas. We spoke in the Christian Church and had a good meeting. The 1st Sunday in September we spent at Neodesha, but as Sister Sallie Black has already reported it I will not repeat it. A lady from the Methodist Church put on Christ by baptism. At Cherryvale I met Brother Alva Russell, and at that place I preached in the Christian Church. We had an interesting meeting. The 2nd Sunday in September I spent at Meadow, Mo., where I met Brother Hiram Morrow. The interest was good and one more put on Christ by baptism. The next place we visited was Lightning Creek church, but they failed to get out the appointment very far and only a small turn-out. The 4th Sunday I spent at Galesburgh, in the Methodist Church, where I spoke to a large and interested audience. I preached at this place 27 years ago.

I traveled 4300 miles, preached 58 sermons, baptized 5 and made many friends. I am now nearly 65 years of age and as for laboring with my hands I am nearly done, and I feel that a few more years will close my work for the Master.

Dear ones if you are out of the ark of safety, prepare to meet thy God. Enter now; for when Jesus comes to make up his Jewels there will be no time for preparation. This word, "prepare" has a world of meaning. It means, to get ready. In every work that we undertake we must get ready or prepare for it. Now, our heavenly Father has given to mankind many glorious and precious promises, and has made it possible for every one to attain unto them, therefore get ready, do not delay, Jesus is coming. Do you want to clasp glad hands once more with father, mother, brother, sister, husband or wife? If you do, get ready. We all know how sad it is to part with those we love for only a short time, but think of that eternal separation if you fail to prepare yourself. God the Father invites you, the Savior is pleading for you, angels are hovering around you, the church is praying for you. The Savior said to his chosen witnesses, "Let not your hearts be troubled, ye believe in God believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." Prepare to meet Jesus when he comes. Let us work in the Master's cause with all our might and means that the Lord saw fit to give us as his stewards. Brethren, the time is short, the Lord is coming. Dear Brothers and Sisters, may God bless you both spiritually and temporally is my prayer.

JOHN FOORE.

Before the evening shades appear,
Before the night of death draws near,
The smallest service for your Lord
Can never lose the sure reward.
Though late, still hear the Master say,
The eleventh hour receives its pay;
Then what thy hand doth find to do,
Delay not, but at once pursue.

I have heard that in the deserts, when the caravans are in want of water, they are accustomed to send on a camel with its rider some distances in advance; then after a little space, follows another; and then at a short interval another. As soon as the first man finds water, almost before he stoops down to drink, he shouts aloud, "Come!" The next one, hearing his voice, repeats the word, "Come!" while the nearest again takes up the cry, "Come!" until the whole wilderness echoes with the word, "Come!" So in that verse the Spirit and the bride say, first of all, "Come," and and then let him that heareth, say "Come;" and whosoever is athirst let him take of the water of life freely.—Spurgeon.

Those are the best Christians who are more careful to reform themselves than to censure others. Thomas Fuller.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 10, 1897. NUMBER 42.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

EXAMINE

The label on your paper, and if it bears a date previous to this time please RENEW NOW. Do not wait for other notice to be sent, but PLEASE RENEW TODAY.

WE are glad to hear so much encouraging news from different parts of the country. Bro. Wilson has some especially good news, and we are pleased that God's chosen ones are having the truth so presented to them that they gladly accept it. May the good work go on.

IT was our happy privilege to bury another joyful truster in the liquid grave on Sunday Oct. 31st, Sister Daisy Mason, (daughter of our beloved brother, Dr. Mason, late of Cleveland, now of Toronto,) took upon her the saving name after witnessing a good confession. That she may ever adorn the doctrine of Christ our Savior, and be found of him in peace, we fervently pray.

WHILE attending the Conference in Iowa, our Sister Hester V. Cummins, presented us with a copy of her book, "A Bundle of Twigs." In some way the book was misplaced and now that we have found it, we are pleased to tell to our friends that it is delightful reading for young, also older persons, and we can think of nothing better for a Christmas present than one of these books. This Sister will be pleased to have you order a copy from her at Laporte City, Iowa. Price $1.00. She also has a smaller book for 10 cts. which is very good.

WE hope that many of our friends are making arrangements to come to the Conference in Plymouth. If those that are not able to be present themselves will send a word of exhortation by letter it will be very much appreciated. We want, this coming year, to push the work of evangelizing in Indiana more than ever before. Bro. Austin has made several requests to the brethren and sisters in regard to this work. Will you grant them? If every member of the Church in Indiana could only answer to roll call at this meeting, just think of what it would mean. Let us hear from you in some way.

Sound Doctrine No. 5.

"Hold fast the form of sound doctrine which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus." 2 Tim. i. 13.

In further prosecuting a work we regret the necessity of, we notice the assumption or suspicion that a "hatred of the rantized Christians has something to do with the contortion and conscription of language in order to merge these two classes into one..... I cannot bear any hatred towards them because they cannot see all that I think I can see. I can love them for what they do, nor hate them for what they do not do. They are sending Bibles and truth literature by the tons to the heathen, and men and women to teach them to read it in their own languages. These workers are leaving their homes, their brethren and sisters, etc.,

FOR CHRIST'S SAKE,

and shall they be punished with everlasting destruction at the revelation of Jesus Christ because they have not been baptized? The Savior says NO, see Mark x. 29, 30. They will be rewarded in the world to come with eternal life. See Rom. x. 9; Matt. x. 32. But will they get into the kingdom of God? Jesus said NO. See John iii. 7. The Savior made no mistake here." Let us examine in detail; and

1. As to hatred of the rantized Christians. Does he know what is in man as did the Lord Jesus? If not, why does he suspect or accuse his opponent of hatred? History seems to repeat itself here. The words of Paul in Gal. iv. 16 apply to him. He said: "Am I therefore become your enemy, because

I TELL YOU THE TRUTH?"

Could any one do another a kinder act than to tell him the truth? Let the critic remember that "love thinketh no evil."

2. He speaks of "rantized Christians." We do not think there were ever any such people. We understand a Christian to be a person in Christ Jesus, who believes his doctrine and practices his precepts. And inasmuch as we read in Gal. iii. 27 that "As many of you as have been BAPTIZED into Christ, have put on Christ," can a Christian out of Christ be thought of or imagined? One critic admits that is not baptism, and therefore he must admit that a rantized person is not in Christ; and yet he says that such will be rewarded with everlasting life. Let us see now to whom that unspeakable gift,—that inestimable boon of eternal life is awarded:

(A). In Hebrews v. 9, it is recorded of Christ as follows: "And though he was a son, yet, from the fear and the sufferings he endured, he learned obedience, and thus he was perfected, and became to all them that obey him." (Syriac Trans.) Do rantized people obey Jesus when he says they must be baptized into his name for the remission of sins? If not, how do they get rid of their sins? Does he bestow eternal life upon people who are not fit for the kingdom of God, and who are in their sins? If so, for what purpose? Where do they spend or enjoy their eternal life? Does not the kingdom extend to earth's remotest bounds—under the whole heavens? Does he mean that they shall be rewarded with eternal life and be eternally subjects, but do not attain to royalty? If so, we brand it as most pernicious, delusive idea, destructive to man, and dishonoring to God, and his truth.

(B). In John iii. 16 we read from the lips of Jesus these words: "For God so loved the world [of mankind] that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Do men who utterly disregard one of the most precious items of the gospel of the grace of God, viz: remission of all past sin when obedient to the faith in baptism—Do such men believe what he says, or do what he commands? If not, where is the evidence of their love for him?

(C). In John x. 27, 28, Jesus says his sheep hear his voice and he knows them, and they follow him: and adds: "I give unto them eternal life." Plainer evidence that those who do not follow him, will not have eternal life does not seem possible. As rantized people do not follow either his example in being baptized, nor obey his command to be baptized, they are not his sheep, not having entered the fold, and he will not give them eternal life; the objector to the contrary notwithstanding.

(D). In Rom. ii. 7 we are told that eternal life is obtained by those who patiently continue in well doing. Can people in their sins do well in this sense? If not, is not baptism for the remission of sins the beginning of well doing? If so, how can any one continue to do, what is not begun? And if well doing is not begun nor continued how can they obtain eternal life under the Pauline rule?

(E). In Rom. vi. 23 we are told that "the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." In the light of this Scripture, is it not astounding to find a poor mortal man telling us that a certain class of people who object to God's law of pardon, can secure pardon and adoption without it,—be Christians without it; and that they can earn eternal life by sending tons of Bibles to the heathen and sending teachers to teach them to read it. Where does stand in this writer's estimation? He says the GIFT of God is eternal life. That's the capital prize—Jehovah's own nature of existence. Just think of people whose breath is in their nostrils giving value for value—paying an equivalent for God's own nature!!! Look at the price it is said these people pay for eternal life, and then wonder at our critic's estimate of it. And wonder again that any one could say these people will be REWARDED with eternal life by carrying Bibles and teachers, when God says through Paul, that it is HIS GIFT!!! It is a Gift, it is no reward. It cannot, in the nature of things, be both. Taking Paul as authority, then, it is a grand mistake to say people willfully disobedient, can, of their own notion,—their voluntary action obtain eternal life. Our critic did run well,

WHO HAS HINDERED HIM

Word in 1 Sam. xv. 22, "Behold to OBEY is better than sacrifice, and to HEARKEN than the fat of rams; for REBELLION is as the sin of witchcraft, and STUBBORNESS is as INIQUITY and IDOLATRY; because thou hast rejected the Word of the Lord he hath also rejected thee from being king. And Saul said unto Samuel, I HAVE SINNED. If our critic has done his duty as Samuel did his, did those people say like Saul,

"I HAVE SINNED?"

Just like Saul they reject the Word of the Lord to be baptized into Jesus' name for remission of sins and baptized into his death, and vain is their own way of obtaining eternal life,—he will reject them unless they repent. It is evident from the above Scripture that God's Word cannot be tampered with, with impunity. Saul had some excuse, but they have none.—Saul's own way in preference to God's was rebellion, and a sin equal to witchcraft, and is declared to be on the level of iniquity and idolatry. Sin is sin, in the sight of God; with him there are no little sins, or white ones.

(F). We read in Ephesians ii. 8, "For by grace, (favor) ye are saved, through faith, and this [has come to pass) not from you,—God's the free gift: not from works,—[such as carrying Bibles and teachers, etc.,] lest any should boast, for are we, having been created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God before prepared, that herein we might walk. Rotherham's translation.

The Diaglott trans. is as follows: "By favor, indeed, you have been saved, through the Faith; and this is not from you; it is God's gift, not from works, so that no one may boast." The last words show that salvation is God's gift through the instrumentality of faith on our part. In a word, the origin of salvation is God's grace or favor; its reception is by faith; it is so that our writer should quit boasting about what a certain class will obtain by works of their own choice, although they do not obey the commands of Jesus. The position taken by him is utterly subversive of the truth, and a death-trap to [illegible] who believe it. It is without foundation in truth,—and his opinions are worthless, worse than worthless,—positively injurious; it may

CONFESSED AS A GIFT;

LURE HUNDREDS TO DESTRUCTION.

That sort of teaching just suits the flesh. That sort of seed grows like the seed of weeds,—without cultivation and chokes out the seed of the kingdom in the absence of vigilant watchfulness and prayer; and in all tenderness we say to him, he himself stands upon slippery places. We urge him to repent before it is too late.

He further says:—"I believe rantized, and immortal soul believers will help make up the innumerable multitude of Rev. vii. 9." This is rapid progress backward. We do not wish to be discourteous, but duty compels us to tell him he believes no such thing! How can a person believe without evidence? If he had evidence of his faith to rely upon,

HE IS HIGHLY CULPABLE

for not giving it. He started out "to show mine opinion;" by what process pray, has opinion become faith in the same paragraph? Is it not true that the immortal soul doctrine is the very essence of the lie the belief of which brought death and a thousand ills into the world? Was not death the penalty for that sin? If that law has been repealed why do men still die? If the law of sin and death is still in force and death seizes all there is of man, he can only live again by a resurrection. Knowing nothing to the contrary, we assume that Alliance people die like all others. Now, what about dead Alliance people? Will they have a resurrection? If so, when? Paul says: "the dead in Christ shall rise first." Are the Alliance people in Christ. Have they been

BAPTIZED INTO HIM?

If not how did they get into him? Have they discovered a new way? If not, they are not in him, and are not raised with those in him, because the planting together in the likeness of his death is in order to have a resurrection like his. Rom. vi. 5. In 1 Cor. xv. 23 the order of the resurrection is stated to be,

"CHRIST THE FIRST-FRUITS;

afterwards they that are his at his coming. If dead alliance people are not his, then surely living alliance people are not his; so in that case none of the living alliance people will be changed at that time, if ever. Paul made an agonizing effort to obtain a resurrection out from among the dead, (Phil. iii. 8,) in order to be one of those who "live and

REIGN WITH CHRIST

a thousand years;" Rev. xx. 6. These are the blessed to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom. Luke xii. 32. Nothing whatever is said about any cells, or second class ones—that is,—such as our writer would half-way bless because they did many wonderful works in his name; no; not a word. This whole company live and reign with Christ as

KINGS AND PRIESTS.

And what more does it say? It says, "the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years are finished." That is enough! No dead "rantized Christians," or immortalized immortal-soul-believers will stand before the throne as servants, and why should that class of living ones have that privilege? Enough space has been devoted to our opinion, we think.

We are next told that the trouble with what we call kingdom believers, is: they believe all who are saved will be rewarded with royalty,—to reign over the nations when the kingdom is set up. This I believe is a very great and sad mistake." Why is the evidence omitted? Is he forming an opinion of his own, and then believing it? Is not this what makes the belief of the royalty of all saved ones appear to be a great and sad mistake? We maintain that he believes nothing about it except his opinion.

He next authoratively says: "Very few, comparatively, of those who have believed and have been baptized will attain to royalty." In proof of this, or illustrative of the statement that very few attaining to royalty,—a case occurs to him of one who believed and had been baptized and yet had "no part nor lot in this matter. The trouble with him was his "heart was not in the sight of God right."

IS THIS SOUND REASONING?

One case to prove a broad principle? But why did he not say that "We are made partakers of Christ if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end? Why, because to partake of Christ is to be endowed with his everliving nature, divine of nature, to have eternal life. Imagine any thus endued, and yet not attain to royalty, if you can? A partaker of the King of kings,

AND YET NOT ROYAL!

Why did he not say, "With the heart (affection) man believes unto righteousness?" Because this would exclude the class he is the apologist of. They have not faith enough to cause them to get rid of sin past by baptism, and so have a righteous standing before God. They have not believed with the heart, then. We challenge apostate Christendom to prove that faithless, disobedient or rantized professors will obtain

ANYTHING BUT DEATH!

Did our writer, who talks of some being saved with eternal life, without the kingdom ever read the words of the Spirit by Peter in 1 letter, 3rd chapter, 21st verse? "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us.....the answer of a good conscience toward God? Have his friends a good conscience without this? If so, how did they obtain it? Was it by carrying Bibles to the heathen?

He continues: I do not find any proof that simply belief and baptism will entitle any one to royalty." Does any one claim that simply belief and baptism will entitle one to royalty? If not, what was this written for? Does it not contain an unjust insendo? We never knew of one, that did, to the best our belief and knowledge.

He says Mark xvi. 16 is seized upon for proof. By whom, when, where is it seized to prove belief and baptism entitles to royalty? Does he not know that Matthew's account is more specific than Mark's, and adds: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded, and that Matt. xxviii. 19, 20 is as often quoted as Mark xvi. 16?

He says Mark xvi. 16 is of doubtful authenticity and is rejected by some of the best scholars. Only some of the best scholars reject this passage,—and some of the best scholars do not reject it. So all of the best scholars are not good authority. Does our critic know which of these two companies of best scholars are reliable? If so, how? How did he arrive at a decision? Was it by superior knowledge of the subject, or was he influenced by a prediliction for sincerity as a saving power, instead of the gospel of Christ, or as equal to it? Does our critic know that the Acts of the Apostles prove the fulfillment of a prediction made in the passage rejected by some of the best scholars? What does their rejection weigh in view of this?

He next says, "Belief and baptism only entitle a man to salvation." It is positively painful to have to reply to such a statement. Reader, this is a serious matter, and you should read, especially, Acts xiii. 20; Acts xvi. 17; Acts xxviii. 28; Rom. xi. 11; 2 Cor. vi. 2; 2 Cor. vii. 10; Eph. i. 13; Eph. vi. 17; Phil. ii. 12; 1 Thess. v. 8, 9; 2 Thess. ii. 13; 2 Tim. ii. 10; 2 Tim. iii. 15; Titus xi. 10; Heb. i. 14; ii. 3; v. 9; ix. 28; 1 Pet. i. 5, 9, 10; 2 Pet. iii. 15; Jude 3. Yes, reader, if you are a believer you owe it to God, and truth, and the church, and to yourself to turn to these passages and see if the salvation spoken of can refer to the immortality of rantized Christians, so-called, and believers of the Serpent's lie, and if the Apostle Paul and the Thessalonians are to be immortalized servants only. For what purpose did Jesus command believers of the gospel to be baptized? Peter tells us in Acts ii. 38 it was in order to remission of sins so that men could be SAVED. Of course we cannot expect to benefit a person who does not know the salvation of God, the ONLY SALVATION offered to man is comprised of Eternal life in the kingdom of God. Absolutely no salvation without the kingdom is offered to men in this dispensation, and the commission extends no further.

He says I think I have proved beyond controversy that the multitude of Rev. vii. 9, 13 will be saved but only as servants." Yes; if opinions and misapplication of Scripture are proofs.

Then he says, suppose that a man believes the gospel and has suffered himself to be baptized, because some one has told him so, but his faith and hope are founded upon what his friend has told him. He does not believe because God says so. Will our King entrust him with royalty and appoint him to reign over the nations? A thousand times no! But think of it, our critic needs to be told what he is teaching, viz., that royalty is and Eternal life secondary. Not so, Jesus, he says, "I am come that they may have life,"—that includes the kingdom. Again in John xvii. 3 he says, "And this is eternal life, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent!" Is not eternal life the capital prize? And this can be obtained, according to our critic, by second rate "material," while the best are entrusted with royalty. Paul says in Rom. ii. 7 eternal life is awarded to those patiently continuing to do well —continuing. One must begin before he can continue.

THE CAPITAL PRIZE,

HE MUST COMMENCE

before he can continue. After faith and repentance the first act of obedience or well-doing is Baptism. If he skips that and begins in the middle he will end nowhere, because he is a sinner all the time,—the wages of sin being death.

Our critic further says, "I sometimes fear that I will not be accounted an overcomer. I sometimes get out of patience with the horse, the hens or cat." This is not a good recommendation for his opinion, but it is not to be wondered at; indeed there is in this state of mind. How could he expect to have assurance of hope when he teaches that immortal-soul believers will have eternal life without coming to Christ for it." Eternal life thrust upon them although they would not seek it; it is no wonder he is afraid, having apparently forgotten that a family throne of favor has been established, by which pardon for trespasses can be obtained, viz: confessing and forsaking them, and asking forgiveness in Jesus' name, and thus maintain his righteous standing, and be

AN OVERCOMER AT LAST.

See how his theory has borne fruit in himself: Instead of accepting the above gracious provision he is partly expecting a portion only of the great salvation. We affectionately say to him, he will receive all or none! He has need to fear. But why did he write this? Did he wish others to accompany him on his fearful way? Faithfully we remind him of the Master's Words about the millstone.

We would gladly rest here, but we failed to insert the following in its proper place. He says, These workers are leaving their homes, brethren and sisters, etc. for Christ's sake, and shall they be punished with everlasting destruction at the revelation.....because they have not been baptized? The Savior says no, see Mark x. 29, 30. They will be rewarded in the world to come with eternal life See Rom. x. 9." We reply they may think like those (see Matt. vii.) who pleaded wonderful works as cause for recognition, but did not succeed. Jesus in the passage quoted, (Mark x. 29, 30) plainly shows that a love of his person or character alone will not be rewarded with eternal life. Jesus says, "FOR MY SAKE AND THE GOSPEL'S." It is our solemn that they do not believe much of the gospel, if any. They teach some things concerning the kingdom that are true, perhaps; but they furnish us with the proof that they do not believe them as GOSPEL TRUTH, by the fact that they are in fellowship with those who do not believe the gospel of the kingdom Jesus in Matt. xxiv. 14 said should be preached in all the world, at all. And both of these parties reject one of the most precious items of the gospel of Christ—remission of sins on being baptized into Jesus' name. In view of the perils of the last days and the many, many substitutes for the gospel of Christ are being constantly offered, we were earnestly importuned to take up this task: and, amid many other pressing duties, we have performed it with the fear of God before our eyes, although doubtless marked by many imperfections. And if the writer of the article reviewed should be induced to call a halt, and return to his first love, and others be led to realize more clearly how essential to salvation the gospel of Christ is, we will give God the glory.

The Work in Chicago.

It is with great pleasure that I announce that on Sunday we buried five more in baptism.

Of the five three were Jews, and one a Jewess, a daughter of a noted Rabbi, but now cast off and disowned. It thrills one with joy to see these children of Abraham according to the flesh acknowledging Jesus as the Christ, their Messiah, and entering into the Christ through baptism, (the circumcision of Christ—the seal) may God bless them.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Kathleen Mrazik a converted Hungarian Jewess, gave us one of the most powerful discourses on the Second Coming of Christ to reign on David's throne we have ever listened to. She sent it home with such effect that many eyes were wet with tears.

Bro. Hudler is much interested in the work among the Jews. I wish to say to him that many Jews are willing to accept of Jesus, as the Christ, if undoubted evidence can be given that he is truly their Messiah. Press the truth home on that line, my brother, and I think fruit will follow your labors.

Mrs. Mrazik will speak to us again on Sunday morning November 14th. If any brother or sister happen to pass through the City at that time, call in and hear this Jewess speak on the Restoration of Israel. A Jewess can speak on that topic as no Gentile can do. A Jew loves Jerusalem, he has a natural yearning for the land of his forefathers, and when the heart is fired with the knowledge Jesus is the coming King of the Jews, the rightful heir to David's throne, the truth is sent forth from the heart. Come, if you can.

W. H. WILSON.

Dear Brother Underwood:

My husband and I began meetings at Pleasant View Church, Oct. 7th remaining with the brethren over two Sundays. Three were immersed into the dear Christ's name. The sudden death of so valuable a man as Bro. Wm. Evans, was very depressing to all, and laid its sad effect upon the meeting. My husband went from this place to Salem, Ohio, where D. V. he will remain over two Sundays. Then he will return to the church at Pleasant View, from there by request of the church at Plymouth he will go to the Annual Conference where the Lord willing I may join him. I have been attending to some Mich. work in his absence. O how badly laborers are needed in the vineyard, so many calling for help, so few to respond, and right here I think Bro. Gill's question may be answered. Why do our people build up churches and leave them without a pastor? Because there is not enough ministers that are able to leave other employment and depend wholly on the preacher's income for a living. When our people are all willing to do some sacrificing for the cause of truth, much more will be accomplished in the gospel work. We are glad to know that many are adopting the system of giving one tenth of their income. When we all can see that there will be no lack in the Lord's treasury. May God help us to see how we are robbing him and withholding, not only a blessing for ourselves, but keeping some one from hearing the gospel, which save men and women from eternal death

Poetry.

[Selected by Agnes Dilworth.]

Thy Will be Done.

"We see not, know not; all our way
Is night—with thee alone is day.
From out the torrent's troubled drift,
Above the storm our prayers we lift,
Thy will be done!

"The flesh may fail, the heart may faint,
But who are we to make complaint,
Or dare to plead, in times like these,
The weakness of our love of ease?
Thy will be done!

"We take with solemn thankfulness our burden up, nor ask it less
And count it joy that even we
May suffer, serve or wait for thee,
Whose will be done!

"Though dim as yet in blood and fire
We trace thy pierced hand's wise design,
And thank thee that to range supplies
Its dark relief of sacrifice,
Thy will be done!

"If, for the age to come, this hour
Of trial hath vicarious power,
And, blest by thee, our present pain,
Be Liberty's eternal gain,
Thy will be done!

"Strike, through the Master, we thy keys,
The anthem of the destinies!
The minor of thy better strain,
Our hearts shall learn the old refrain,
Thy will be done."

The Free and the Bond, of Gal. iv. 21-26. No. 1.

In reading and rightly understanding, concerning the people in this allegory, it will be necessary to see the meaning of an allegory, and the component parts relative to both parties.

Webster gives the key to the solution thus, "A figurative sentence, or discourse in which the principle subject is described by another subject resembling it in its proportion and circumstances."

Now, if we solve this problem by its proportions and circumstances, we feel confident of reaching results concerning the two seeds here in allegory; that have hitherto been under a cloud. As to God's purpose in putting the Israelites in bondage under the law, and the affinity they held with their Ishmelitish brethren. We believe it has always been held by us as a people, that Jacob's posterity, alone, were in bondage to Egypt, but as we proceed, we are confident we will show this not to be the fact. Let us first revert to the promise of God to Abraham, before he even had a child, bond or free, and see what is therein revealed. We find in the reading of Gen. xv. 12-18, God causes "a deep sleep to fall on Abraham, or Abram" as here written; and revealed to him his seed in bondage 400 years. Now to say this was his free seed only, when there is no allusion to any such division seems to do injustice to the understanding of Abram, and also to proof in the matter.

Let us drop this line for a brief moment and step to the front a pace, say to Jacob's time, and see what is said of his sons and how many of them as free sons went into Egypt. Please read Gen. xxxv. 21-26, and there we find eight out of the twelve free seed, yet they are counted as children of Israel.

Now, we will return again to the promise to Abram, in Gen. xv., and learn what should take place after the bondage of his seed in Egypt, "They (his seed bond and free) shall come hither again." Where? To the promised land of 18th verse. Do we find the two seeds in the Egyptian bondage? Perhaps not only under the title Jacob, but as soon as their journey was organized we find these words recorded in Exodus xii. 37, 38. "And the children of Israel journeyed from Rameses to Succoth, about 600,000 miles on foot, that there were men besides children, and a mixed multitude went up also with them that is with children of Israel?

In Numbers xi. 10, are these words. "And the mixed multitude that was among them, that loathing Israelites) fell a lusting, and the children of Israel also wept again." This was not the first time they were thus afflicted. And said—"Who shall give us flesh to eat," etc. Who were these people but aliens? And how could Israel be alienated from the covenants of promise in the unit seed Isaac, without an alienator.

We will go back to the casting out of the bond woman and son from their parental abode, and look at the words there written, and see what Ishmael sustained in the promise to Abraham. Was he not included in the limited promise, and has he not always remained there, in the territory described in the promise, and received the seal with Abraham in his flesh? Some find in Gen. xvii. 1-8 about 23 24 Verses, understand us right here, our view of the Word teaches us that the promise of the land, and in Isaac are two distinct promises. The first promise to which Abram was called into was for his seed, free or bond, to possess in this natural life co-equal, but through Isaac the unit seed, in the life to come, through the promised Seed, Christ Jesus, our Redeemer.

We will now return to our starting point in Galatians, and see if our premises are true. Now let us read 24th and 25th verses of the 4th chapter. Paul writing concerning the bond and free, speaks in this manner, "For these are the two covenants: the one from the Mount, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar, or Hagar. Diaglott, 25th verse, "for this Agar is but Sinai in Arabia:" which can be proven as correct, by history as well as by Scripture, and also the declaration St. Paul makes here bears weight to the statements we have herein made, that "Agar is Mount Sinai." And the allegorical comparison is in Jerusalem, being like that Ishmaelitish bond seed of Abraham. The fact that the Ishmaelites inhabited the Peninsula of Mount Sinai, is further proven by the statement made of Hagar's exile from parental abode. Hagar's abode was placed at Ben Sheba on the southwest side of the Desert of Arabia, or in Scripture language, in the wilderness of Paran. See 21st chapter Gen. After the offering up of Isaac, Abraham rose up with his young men, and went to Beer Sheba. Gen. xxii. 19. Ishmael was present at the burial of his father Abraham. Gen. xxv. 9, which occurred 50 years after he was cast from his father's abode. From the casting out of Ishmael to Joseph's being sold to the Ishmaelites was 163 years. Gen. xxxvii. 2. One of Esau's wives was a daughter of Ishmael. And so we find as we trace Scripture and history, that the promises of God to Hagar at her first casting out into the wilderness by the fountain in the way to Shur, Gen. xvi. 7, which is at the head of the Red Sea. That he (her son) should be, "A wild man his hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him: and he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren." Gen. xvi. 12. And he is called son of Abraham, 14-15 verses. And by referring to your Bibles, the marginal reference is to xv. 18 the line is drawn that encircles this people, and encloses them in "promises that God made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob that he would give it them and their seed," when as yet they had no child, but Abraham understood the promise in this light, as to his landed inheritance. So we believe by the reading of the fifteenth and sixteenth chapters of Genesis; especially 18th ver. of 15th chapter from the River of Egypt unto the Great River. The River Euphrates,—the Nile of Egypt to the Euphrates at the head of the Persian Gulf, so our premises bear us out, before our hearers, in a light hitherto not well explained, and we hope that justice on our part, in relation to this subject, shall be rewarded, and eventually the spirit of grace that sanctifieth may prevail the whole lump, whether bond or Ishmaelite, or bond Israel, and make them meet for the Master's use in the reconstruction and restitution of all things. For we learn that Israel's seed is now bound under the Ishmaelitish law of Mount Sinai. Why do we say this:—please turn with us to Num. xi. 4. Who was it that caused the Israelites to lust? Was it not the mixed multitude that was amongst them? They caused the Israelites to complain and weep, thus binding them closer to the wants of the flesh, and casting them further from grace and supplication, until the ten commandments that were designed to regulate their lives, and lead them back to the unit seed promised in Christ, as a school master, became a burden that they nor their fathers could bear. Also see complaint of Saul. And as a memento of their sorrowful pilgrimage among their fleshly brethren, the Ishmaelites until Jerusalem the symbolic city of God, was bound down in a figurative sense, in like manner as Mt. Sinai of the Sinaitic peninsula, the home of the Ishmaelite, or natural seed of Abraham.

Believing and Doing.

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. Mark xvi. 16.

The above text teaches.

1st. Something to be believed.

2nd. Something to do.

3rd. The result of believing and doing.

The something to be believed is declared in it to be the gospel go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Gospel means good news or glad tidings. Gospel of the kingdom means glad tidings of the kingdom.

Pilate asked Jesus, art thou a King? Jesus said, to this end was I born, for this purpose came I into the world that I might witness to the truth, i. e. the truth in Pilate's question. Pilate afterward wrote upon the cross, "This is Jesus the King of the Jews." The wise men say, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? Angels answered, "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior which is Christ the Lord (or the anointed Lord). Jesus said the Son of man shall come in his glory and all the holy angels with him. then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. Again he said, He that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne even as I have overcome and am sit down with my Father in his throne.

Thus we see Christ on the Father's throne now and on David's or his own throne after he came and the overcomer to sit with him with him on David's throne, not on the Father's throne. Gabriel said to Mary, the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his Father David. if we can locate David's throne we can locate Christ's throne for they are identical).

The gospel of Glad tidings embrace the covenant and promises that God made with Abraham when he said "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." That seed is the Christ seed both head and body, bridegroom and bride, viz., Christ and his church.

The things to be believed, are the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus, such as his birth, his life and sayings, his death, resurrection, ascension, his return and kingdom.

2nd Proposition—Something to be done.

Be baptized, having believed then be baptized. How shall we be baptized? By being buried with Christ in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation (or energy of God who hath raised him from the dead,) Col. ii. 12.

Why should we be buried? Ver. 13, "And you being dead in your sin." If dead the next thing is to be buried with Christ by baptism. Here we see a death, burial and resurrection. If buried in baptism, then baptism must be a burial.

Paul in Rom. vi. asks, How shall we that are dead to sin live any longer? Then know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death. Therefore we are buried with him (or as he was) by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father even so we should walk in newness of life (or in the new life, the old life of sin being before our baptism, the new life in which we are to walk being after our baptismal resurrection.) "For if we have been planted (or covered) together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."

The apostle declares baptism to be a burial into death and would it not be into real death and eternal death if there was no resurrection even from the grave of water?

We remark nothing but an immersion can represent a burial and a resurrection ("Entombed with him by immersion into that death." Diaglott.)

Ver. 8. Now if we be dead with Christ we believe that we shall also live with him. Ver. 10. For if he died he died unto sin once but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. Here we observe that Christ died once, was buried once and was raised once. So also the believer dies unto sin once, is buried once and raised once, and as one baptism is commanded (and only one), so only one name is commanded (and only one) into which to be baptized. The name of him who died for our sins was buried and rose again is the only name that can legally be used.

We now call your attention to the history of apostolic baptism as rendered in the Book of Acts. There is no sprinkling no consecrated water, no exorcism, no sponsors, no trine immersion, no mention of Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Peter ordered them to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, Acts ii. 38. Phillip baptized the Samaritans on their belief in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of the Lord Jesus.

When Peter went to Cesarea to the house of Cornelius he first announced that Jesus was Lord of all, and been ordained of God to be the judge of the quick and the dead. to him gave all the prophets witness that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins. And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord.

Not long after Pentecost, Peter and John went up to the temple to pray, and got themselves into trouble by healing a lame man in the name of Jesus and when the people came running together Peter declared that the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob had glorified his Son Jesus, when they had denied and killed whom God hath raised from the dead whereof he and John were witnesses. And his name through faith in his name hath made his name strong. After about five thousand believed the doctrine of the resurrection the Sadducees who believed in no resurrection came upon them laid hands on them and cast them into prison. On the next day Annas, Caiaphas, John and Alexander and the whole brood of priestly kin, take Peter and John and set them in the midst. Poor Peter was he about to deny the Master again? No this is a different kind of a Peter this one was filled with the Holy Spirit, hear him. "Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel that by the name of Jesus, (yes but there were others by the name of Jesus among the Israelites, how can the proper one be identified,) that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead even by him doth this man stand here before you whole. This is the stone which was set at naught of you builders which is become the head of the corner neither is their salvation in any other." Why not? "For there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." What name is that? evidently the name Jesus. "Call his name Jesus for he shall save his people from their sins." Jesus said to his disciples "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and rise from the dead the third day. And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

The results of believing and doing are first remission of sins, then heirship heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ to the incorruptible inheritance. Let it be said of such who may read these lines, all things are yours and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's. All belong to God.

John says, "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth. Behold the tabernacle of God is with men and he will dwell with them and they shall be his people and God himself shall be with them and be their God."

No tears, death, sorrow, crying or pain for the former things are passed away (that is the things that ceased, tears, etc., are gone.)

The final result of believing and doing. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I shall be his God and he shall be my Son." So mote it be. C. C. Ramsay.

"And the Holy City shall they tread under foot forty and two months." Rev. xi. 2. No. 2.

Jerusalem was to be trodden down by the Gentiles until there times be fulfilled. The Romans, who destroyed the city and sanctuary were Gentiles, the Turks are Gentiles, and the Crusaders were Gentiles. For more than 1000 years the holy city has been under the heel of Gentiles.

If 42 months could be transformed into 1260 years, still the measuring line would be too short. Yet, these months have a beginning and an end. The inference is plain that when they end the holy city will be redeemed from Gentile power. The point is to find where these months begin. The 42 months of chapter xiii. 5, measure the career of the beast, he has power to act 42 months. He acts from the time he arises until he is taken and cast into the lake of fire. The 1260 days of chapter xi. measures the time that the witnesses prophecy and finish their testimony, the beast whose career is measured by 42 months, kills the witnesses after they have finished their testimony. If the career of the beast is in the past the killing of the witnesses is in the past also. This career of the beast that is measured by 42 months is his second and last career. Proof. The beast which thou sawest was, and is not, and is about to arise out of the abyss and to go into destruction. The beast that arises out of the sea is the beast that arises out of the abyss of waters and goes into destruction when he is taken by the king of Kings and Lord of lords and is cast into the lake of fire. His career of 42 months is three years and a half. This will be long enough for the monster to reign. 1260 days is the time allotted for the witnesses to finish their testimony in. The 42 months of chapter xi, 2, is the time allotted in which to measure the temple of God, the altar and them that worship in the temple, and to cast out the outer court. The outer court is not to be measured for it was given to Gentiles, and the holy city shall they tread 42 months. 42 months from the time the work of measuring the temple is began. Some one may say that John measured the temple in question. He did the work assigned to him, which was to prophecy. See chapter x 12 It is one thing to prophe[illegible] another thing to fulfil. Isaiah and Malachi prophecied of the mission of the Lord's fore-runner, but John the Baptist filled the mission and did the work and thus the prophecy was fulfilled. John the Revelator prophecied of seals to be opened, trumpets to be sounded, a temple to be measured, witnesses to be tested, beasts to arise, a harvest to be kept, plagues to be poured out. The fulfillment comes through other agents, as heaven was to be shut up and no rain fall. If those days stood for 1260 years and was in the past, this would be a noted period. Could some one have survived a drought of 1260 years to make a record of it. But the temple of God to be measured, was it a temple builded in a past age, or was it one to be built in the age to come, or was it a temple of God to be builded to a finish in this present evil age. A foundation for a holy temple was laid and some were builded thereon. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwells in you?" Again we read as follows:—"But ye are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ." 1 Peter, ii. 5. Now, where there is a priesthood and sacrifices to be offered there must needs be an altar. John prophecied of the golden altar that is before God, but back in the typical covenant the golden altar was the altar of incense; it is the altar of sacrifice, that is to be measured in connection with the temple of God and those who worship in it. Of this altar of sacrifice John had prophecied before he eat the little book, and was told to prophecy again. On this altar, some who were worshipers in God's temple had offered the sacrifice of their lives rather than abandon the Word of God, and the testimony which they held. They were to rest yet a little season, until their brethren were killed as they were. Their brethren finish the testimony concerning the Christ, and are killed by the beast that arises out of the abyss. Thus, we find the full dimensions of this altar of sacrifice. None will have to make this sacrifice after the witnesses who finish the testimony of Jesus are killed. Here also during these 42 months God's spiritual house builded of living stones will be finished, this chosen race, this royal priesthood, this holy nation will attain unto its full dimensions. And a reed was given unto me, like unto a rod, a reed, a measure of dimensions. The rod attachment would signify power. Power is measured out to those who worship in the temple of the living God. Power to shut heaven that it rains not and to smite the earth with plagues. These signs will confirm the testimony of the witnesses. Divine revelation is confirmed when it is due, in other words the confirmation of prophecy is due, when the fulfillment is due It was revealed to Abraham that his seed should be in bondage and serve 400 years. That they would be brought out and the nations to whom they were in bondage would be judged. The time of their deliverance came, and the judgment came also and signs and wonders were manifest in Egypt. The birth, the trials and the ministry of the Messiah had been foretold by the prophets. The time of fulfillment came and Jesus could say to the people the works that I do in my Father's name they bear witness of me. The time came for the door of faith to be opened to all the world, and the apostles went forth proclaiming the Word, the Lord working with them and confirming the Word by the signs following. But this Revelation which God gave to Jesus Christ, to point out to his servants the things that must be done in haste. When and where has it been confirmed. If the events are in the past, the confirmation is in the past. If the servants have finished the works assigned to them. then, like Jonah, they can sit down and await the result. Power from on high was given to the apostles to confirm the word of their testimony and power from on high will be given to those who worship in God's temple, to confirm the word of their testimony. Figure as men may, it still remains, that, this gospel of the kingdom will be proclaimed in all the world for a witness to all the nations, and then shall the end come. Being proclaimed for a witness it will be confirmed by the signs brought to view in this prophecy.

Editor Restitution:

I have frequently seen in The Restitution references made to John xiv. 3 as what we in common parlance at this time mean by house and mansion which I consider erroneous because, first, it don't make sense which is as now understood by the word; house and mansion would mean many houses in a house which is inadmissible and I think was not understood when our translation was made. We know that the English language is changing now and word, don't mean the same now that they did two or three hundred years ago. Now our New Testament Scriptures were written at about the same time, and in the same language that Josephus wrote and were translated into English about the same time; consequently the same words would be used in each to convey the same meaning. In antiquities of the Jews B. 15 chap. 10 Sec. 1, he speaks of the House of Lisanius and in another place he styles it the kingdom of Lisanius. And in B. 3, chap. xlii. Sec. 1. he says, (speaking of Moses.) A little while after this he rose up and went from Mount Sinai and having part, through several mansions.....he came to a place called Lazeroth. And in B. 16, chap. ix. Sec. 2, (speaking of the rapidity with which Herod invaded Arabia) he took an army and led it into Arabia and in three days marched seven mansions. So we see that house and mansion does not mean a domicil or mechanical structure to dwell in but means territory of greater or less extent. I think that some of our brethren or sisters who are so well qualified for teaching should throw some light on this subject and put it in a more presentable shape than I am capable of doing.

Yours for the Truth.

J. W. Sutton.

Report of Labor.

Dear Restitution:

By invitation of Bro. Wm. Woods, I left home, (Scipioville, Ind.,) on Oct. 21st, for Silverton, Ill., and began meetings on Saturday night, Oct. 23rd, and continued over the 4th and 5th Sundays. As a result, three were immersed, all young people, two of whom, a son and daughter, were children of Brother John W. Hull, of Dexter, Ill., an earnest worker in the cause. The third being a daughter of Brother and Sister Rogers, of Ingraham, Ill. Bros. Hull and Z. E. Brant assisted in the preaching and did efficient service. Brother Brant lives at Moriah, Ill. Others became interested and some prejudice was overcome, and it was pronounced the best series of meetings held in that neighborhood. One man especially was interested and it is hoped will finally embrace the truth. To those who have made the noble confession and were immersed into the saving name of Jesus Christ we say, "Press on toward the mark of the high calling in Christ Jesus," and trust always in him, and live upright, righteous lives, and an entrance shall be ministered to you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of God.

Announcement.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith, will convene at Plymouth, Ind., Thursday evening Nov. 18, 1897 and continue over the following Sunday.

Now brethren and sisters of the faith in Indiana, the time is almost at hand for another meeting wherein we can come together and strengthen and encourage each other by prayer and exhortation, and we earnestly urge that each and every one who possibly can arrange to be at our meeting, come with hearts full of love and for the advancement of the cause.

You who have read THE RESTITUTION have no doubt seen there is being a renewed effort put forth for more effective evangelizing and we are glad to say is meeting with quite a degree of success and the outlook is very promising if it continues, therefore we urge that every church organization as far as possible be represented by delegates that you may take part in whatever business may come up before the Conference. We invite all who are interested to be with and share with us.

F. L. AUSTIN, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec.

Brothers and Sisters of Indiana:

I wish to call the attention of all in Indiana to the article on Editorial page of THE RESTITUTION of Sept. 15, entitled "To the Brothers and Sisters of Indiana." Also to the article entitled "Indiana Workers" in issue of Sept. 22. Some I learn have overlooked both of these articles. Please do not delay in answering these requests. Many reports have come in and thus far they are without exception, truly encouraging. With the earnest and prompt co-operation of all concerned a general report can soon be given that will be welcomed by every member of our State. Please do not delay.

Attention is also called to the fact that Bro. D. E. Vanvactor, 1st Vice Pres. of Argos, has, by request, accepted the responsibility of acting as State S. S. Supt. Will you kindly give him all the assistance in your power. Yours seeking the co-workers.

F. L. AUSTIN.

Notice.

Dear Restitution:

I wish to say through THE RESTITUTION, I am expecting to go South through the coming winter. Nothing preventing, I expect to beat Memphis, Tennessee, Dec. 14th, for one week. After the above date if any of the brethren in the South will write me at Memphis I will arrange to preach for them until the first of March, after which time I shall go to Wilmington, Newbern, and Goldsborough, N. C.

Yours in hope of the soon coming kingdom of God,

D. M. HEDLER.

D. Fraser D. D., in speaking of the Jew's hope in the coming Messiah said: With this, too, Israel had hope of the resurrection of the dead. The heathen either sorrowed over the departed, as those who have no hope, or at the best, consoled themselves by the teaching of their philosophers and poets concerning the immortality of the soul, and the existence of the dead as shades that never more could occupy the earth. But the tribes of Israel had a better doctrine and a richer consolation. They hoped for a reversal of death in the whole frame of man—a resurrection of the dead. Acts xxiii. 6; xxvi. 6-8.

Short as life is, it is the seed-time for eternity. Whatsoever a man sows here he shall reap to all eternity. If he sows to the wind he shall reap the whirlwind. If he sows to the flesh he shall reap corruption. If he sows in righteousness he shall reap in mercy. If he sows to the Spirit he shall reap everlasting life. This life is the day of grace, the season mercy, when enduring riches may be secured. Many have seized the moments as they passed, and become immensely rich in faith, in good works, in bright hopes, and in a blessed inheritance beyond this life.

When you give alms, there are two that know all about it—the Master of the Treasury and the giver.

Happiness is a perfume which we cannot sprinkle over others without spilling a few drops on ourselves.

Hunter's Excursion Rates.

Parties of three or more may secure one fare rates to designated local points on the line of the Nickel Plate Road, in Western Ohio and Indiana, also single tickets will be sold to points in the Northwest and Southwest.—Nov. 15.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Notice.

WILL our friends please remember that we do not have the books and tracts at this office that are advertized by Brother Joblin, or Brother Wiley Jones. Do not send to this office for them, but send to their address as given in the advertisement. This will save both trouble and delay. PLEASE REMEMBER.

Tract Fund.

We the undersigned, realizing that the distributing of tracts is a good way to spread the truth, and that the time is short in which we can work for the Master, do hereby agree to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purpose of raising a fund to be used in supplying tracts to those who will distribute them free.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Recessional.

God our fathers, known of old—
Lord of our far-flung battle-line—
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

The tumult and the shouting dies—
The captains and the kings depart—
Still stands Thine ancient Sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart.
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

Far-called our navies melt away—
On dune and headland sinks the fire—
Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre.
Judge of the nations, spare us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

If drunk with sight of power we loose
Wild tongues that have not Thee in awe—
Such boasting as the Gentiles use
Or lesser breeds without the law—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

For heathen heart that puts her trust
In reeking tube and iron shard—
All valiant dust that builds on dust,
And guarding calls not Thee to guard—
For frantic boast and foolish word,
Thy mercy on Thy people, Lord. Amen.

"REFORMATION" MOVEMENT OF WALTER SCOTT AND ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, CONTINUED.

At the close of third paper under this heading we left Walter Scott in charge of a small Baptist church in Pittsburg, Penn. and deeply impressed with the desire to disseminate in a wider field the freedom he now enjoyed as a Bible student.

At this juncture a pamphlet fell into his hands.....circulated about 1820, by a small church in New York mainly composed of Scotch Baptists. This pamphlet is described by Scott's biographer as "setting forth with admirable simplicity and clearness.....the design of baptism.....Containing the germs of what was afterwards insisted on by Scott in his plea for baptism for the remission of sins, and also by Alex. Campbell in his celebrated extra on Remission".....The reading of this had much to do with the subsequent course of Mr. Scott.....He abruptly brought his school to a close, and set out for New York.....The result of his visit, however, was a sad disappointment; he found the practice of the church far in the rear of what he had been led to expect...nor did there seem to be any disposition .....for a radical reform. Here remained there three months." He then visited Peterson, New Jersey, Baltimore, and Washington City," all with no better results. He continued his travels on foot (300 miles) to Pittsburg, where he taught a few select pupils in the house of a Mr. Richardson, whose house became his home.....some of his pupils ranked among the finest scholars and most useful men in the State. Among them were Chief Justice Lowrey, and the eminent author and professor, Dr. Richardson," the biographer of Alexander Campbell.

"It was not long after Mr. Scott's return from New York; in 1821 that his mind became possessed by what proved to be the great thought of his life; namely, that the great central idea of the Christian religion is the Messiahship; that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God." This "he was wont in after years to call the 'Golden Oracle.'" His school gave such general satisfaction that he was urged to throw it open, when the number reached 140 pupils. His patrons were mainly Presbyterian, and they desired that the Westminster Confession should be taught in the school; Scott being in favor of the New Testament only being read daily. By a compromise, all catechisms were laid aside and a chapter in the New Testament allowed to be read every Saturday. Scott determined to make the most of this. .....and determined that the lessons should be drawn from the four evangelists, that Christ should be the theme of each lesson; and that the point might be kept before his pupils during the week, he wrote with chalk, in large letters, over the door of his academy, in the inside, the words 'Jesus is the Christ.'"

His biographer states that at this time "the people known as Christians, or Disciples of Christ, were unknown" .....The efforts of Alexander Campbell had been mainly directed against the errors prevalent amongst those professing godliness; but Scott perceived that in addition to the evils of partyism in the church, there was an equal defect in the presentation of the gospel to the world." High Criticism was the prevailing doctrine.

It was now, in the winter of 1821-22, in Pittsburg, that Scott first met Alexander Campbell, and shortly after Campbell's father, Thomas Campbell. The latter had preceded his son by two years to the United States, in search of health. Baxter says "at that time there were few, if any, better educated ministers in America than the elder Campbell." In the last number of the Christian Baptist, the Editor says— An unsuccessful effort by my father to reform the presbytery and synod to which he belonged, made me despair of reformation." The same writer, twenty years after meeting Scott, thus writes to him. "We were associated in the days of weakness..... while as yet there was but a handful. "My father, yourself, and myself, were the only three spirits that could co-operate in a great enterprise." Scott prepared an article for the first number of "Christian Baptist" with the caption "A Divinely authorized Plan of Teaching the Christian Religion;" A. Campbell had one headed "The Christian Religion;" and his father an essay on the "Primary Intention of the Gospel." This paper marked a new era in religious literature.....and created an interest and an inquiry such as had seldom been equalled. Scott wrote under the signature of 'Philip,' and the subject afore-named was continued through four numbers.

"Up to this time (1823) nearly all the efforts made by these advocates of reform were confined to the correcting of evils and abuses in the church, and comparatively little was done for the conversion of sinners. Scott remained in Pittsburg teaching his academy, and instructing the church till 1826, when he removed to Ohio. Here (August 1827) he was unanimously appointed evangelist by the Mahoning Baptist Association, which consisted of a number of churches in that district, known as the Western Reserve. Alexander Campbell was a member of this Association, being one of the "Messengers" representing the church at Wellsburgh, Virginia. He was "appointed to write the corresponding letter for this year;" also "to deliver the introductory discourse for next year." He was a member of the Committee appointed to nominate an evangelist. It was at New Lisbon, Ohio, that Scott, shortly after his appointment (November 1827) first proclaimed baptism for the remission of sins. This "formed an era in the religious history of the times." Scott himself, referring to this, says, "at the first offering of these generalizations some were alarmed, others fled, many were enraged, a thousand obeyed in one year." The Messiahship, p. 205. It is stated that "before Mr. Campbell knew what result, he sent a man after Mr. Scott to stop him; but his messenger was converted and joined him in the preaching." Herald of the Kingdom, Vol. x. p. 62. This is not mentioned in his biography by Baxter; but it is stated there that on a third visit to New Lisbon he was accompanied by Joseph Gaston, a minister of the Christian connection who had heartily embraced the truth," etc.

It is rather remarkable that within little more than a month after the New Lisbon movement, the first of a series of seven papers on Immersion appeared in the "Christian Baptist," for Jan. 1828. They were written by the editor, Mr. Campbell, and constituted an able plea for baptismal remission of sins. What is, perhaps, more remarkable still, he says, in the opening paragraph of first article (p. 401) "In my debate with Mr. Maccallas in Kentucky, 1823, on this topic, I contended that it was a divine institution, designed for putting the legitimate subject of it in actual possession of the remission of his sins—That to every believing subject it did formally, and in fact, convey to him the forgiveness of sins. It was with much hesitation I presented this view of the subject at that time, because of its perfect novelty. I was then assured of its truth, and, I think, presented sufficient evidence of its certainty." The probability is that Scott was cognizant of this, and in his zeal judged that the time had come for its promulgation; for which he certainly has the credit.

About the year 1830 Scott "began and completed his book called "The Gospel Restored," a full, clear and systematic view of the Christian Religion." Again, his biographer says. "Christ, his nature, offices, and work, were his chief—his almost constant themes—the alpha and omega, the all in all." Again, "he was accustomed to go to Christ rather than to the apostles—to draw from the Evangelists rather than to the Epistles. He was emphatically, a gospel preacher," etc. He says himself, I am not ashamed to acknowledge that twice a week for twenty-two months at a stretch have I discoursed on the Evangelist Matthew alone."....It has cost me ten years of labor to bring into order the thoughts which I have learned from the Scriptures; and I am perfectly willing to spend ten years more in order to increase my knowledge and improve the discourses which I deliver on these principles."

Messrs Scott and Campbell's Reformation examined in next paper.

J. CAMERON.

A Letter to a Friend.

To Mr. G.

I was much interested in the short interview I had with you when I saw you last. I was sorry that circumstances seemed to prevent us from having a more extensive one which I think might have been profitable.

To me the subject of Christianity is the most important of all subjects.

It proposes to take man out of this sinful, dying state in which the transgression of the commandment in the garden has put him, and to give him a life that never shall end to be enjoyed in the kingdom of God, or world to come.

It is a subject which I think is important to be right upon in order to obt. in those important blessings.

And in order to understand the subject properly, it is necessary to know our nature and destiny, that we may be able to comprehend the redemption which we have in Christ Jesus our blessed Savior. Let us enquire a little what do the Scriptures say about this important matter.

"To the law and testimony." We learn from the Bible account of the subject that God formed man out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and he became a living soul (or person) and he put him and his mate in the garden subject to a law the penalty of which is death.

They violated that law and God told them that on this account they should return to the ground, for dust thou were and unto dust they should return. The apostle Paul shows that on account of our connection with Adam we are exposed to the same result. (see Rom. v. 12.)

Now if God did not provide away whereby we can get out of this state or condition, what would have been the result? Simply after returning to dust, never to live again. You may see the proof of this by reading carefully 1 Cor. xv.

The apostle there shows conclusively that all future life after death, depends entirely and altogether on the resurrection of the dead. You will notice the apostle's reasoning in the above chapter is directly opposed to the immortality of the soul. That man after death is dependent on a resurrection for future life, and if there is no resurrection we may eat and drink; for tomorrow we die and that will be the end of us. But thanks be to God he has not left man to perish without offering him life on certain conditions.

He so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life. In harmony with this said Paul, "The wages of sin is death but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

In respect to the conditions on which this salvation can be obtained, Christ told the apostles to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature stating that, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned." In the 2nd chapter of the Acts we have an account of the first discourse preached by the Apostles after this commission was given to them. We are told that on that occasion they that gladly received the apostle's word were baptized. Space prevents me from showing the Scriptural teaching in respect to the action of baptism but would just say that it is a burial in the water. (See Col. ii. 12; Rom. vi. 3, 4, 5), for those who have ears to hear and a disposition to obey the Lord, how important to hear him who speaks from heaven. We are told that every soul who will not hear him shall be destroyed from among the people.

In respect to the future home of God's people, Jesus said, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." Said David, "The meek shall inherit the earth and delight themselves in the abundace of peace." Again, said David, "For such as are blessed of him shall inherit the earth, and they that are cursed of him shall be cut off." (See also Dan. vii. 27.) In short the Scriptures teach us very different to that which is generally believed by many at the present time.

You may think this strange, but Paul gives Timothy a most solemn charge. To preach the Word for he said the time would come when they would not endure sound doctrine but after their own lusts would heap to themselves teachers having itching ears and would turn their ears away from the truth unto fables.

Circumstances prove that we are living in that time now. (See 2nd Tim. iv. 1-4.

It can be shown that several important errors held by religionists at the present time have for their foundation, the doctrine of the immortality of the soul. Strange that a doctrine without foundation in the Bible should be so generally believed and taught. It has no text to support it. The word immortal is used but once in the Bible, and then it is applied to God alone. See 1 Tim. i. 17. The word immortality is used five times. 1st, Paul says the Lord only has it. See 1 Tim. vi. 16. 2nd, Christ has brought it to light through the gospel. See 2 Tim. i. 10. 3rd. It is to be sought for by a patient continuance in well doing. See Rom. ii. 7. And 4th and 5th, It is something to be obtained by those who do thus seek for it, at the sounding of the last trump which brings the resurrection of the dead. See 1 Cor. xv. 51-54.

We discover from the above considerations, that all future glory and reward depend upon the second coming of Christ and resurrection for a fulfillment.

The Christian would say, Come Lord Jesus and come quickly. Amen. In conclusion I would say, I hope you will take no offence at what I have written, I have the glory of God and your welfare in view. It is the truth only that will do us good. Error when received has an injurious effect. May the good Lord deliver us from all evil and preserve us blameless unto his kingdom and glory, when his will will be done on earth as it is in heaven. I hope you will not neglect to search the Scriptures, which are able to make us wise unto salvation through faith in Christ Jesus.

Yours in love,

P. H. BOYS.

Do those who Believe in Christ Die?

"Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." Jno. xi. 25, 26.

This is believed by many people to teach that the righteous never die, but by a careful reading of this passage of Scripture we see that there are two classes spoken of. Those who are dead and shall live, another class that shall never die.

If it were true that those who believe in Christ never die, but pass on to a higher life, "beyond the bound of time and space," (simply nowhere) then only one class would have been spoken of; those that never die.

The question is, what time did our Savior refer to, when he said, "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die?"

He was speaking of the time of the resurrection, when those who have died in the faith, will be raised from the dead, and those who are living and believing in Christ shall never die, but they will be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump. Read 1 Cor. xv.; also 1 Thess. iv. 13-18. Here it is plainly stated that the dead shall rise first, then the living ones shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. We are positively told here where the righteous ones are to meet their Savior. It is not in heaven, nor in some far away home of the soul; but it is in the air, near the earth's surface.

Rev. xx. tells us that the righteous ones, those who are to reign with Christ are raised at Christ's coming, and that the rest of the dead live not again until the thousand years are finished. Here we are plainly told that the wicked dead live not during the thousand years here spoken of. If it were true that the soul of man is immortal, then the wicked would be living all the time.

Reader, can you not see that the Bible teaches that the dead are really dead, and without a resurrection there will be no future life?

What benefit will it be to us to believe an error? We want the truth and the truth only. We cannot believe that the soul is immortal, because we cannot find one passage of Scripture that says so. Nor one that says man has a never-dying soul or soul that cannot die, deathless spirit; nor that speaks of the spirit land or land of spirits. Not one passage of Scripture that says that the righteous go to heaven at death or any other time. But we do read that, "The heaven even the heavens are the Lord's; but the earth hath he given to the children of men. The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down in silence. Psa. cxv. 16, 17. Also read Psa. xlix. 11-16; xxxi. 17; vi. 5; lxxxviii. 10-12; civ. 14; xvii. 15; cxlvi. 3, 4.; Eccl. iii. 18-20; ix. 3, 6. There are many other Scriptures but these are enough to prove to any one that the dead are really dead, and not alive in any place; but are unconscious or asleep. O, says one, I don't think it makes any difference whether we believe the soul is immortal or not. Well, my friend, I think it will make a very great difference whether we believe what God says or not. Adam and Eve were driven out of the garden of Eden because they believed Satan, or the Serpent as he is called in Genesis. "And the Serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die." A belief of this, "Ye shall not surely die," caused the death of our first parents, because God had said they should die if they ate of the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Gen. ii. 17. It is as wrong to believe Satan instead of God now as it was then, and God's Word teaches that man is of earth, earthy that he is of dust, that at the present time he is not in possession of eternal life. And that eternal life is a gift to be bestowed on those in Christ and those only. Read 1 John v. 11, 12; 2 Tim. ii. 11, 12; Rom. vi. 23; Acts iv. 10, 12; Jno. 47-53; v. 21, 22, 28, 29; iii. 36. For proof of the resurrection of the dead read, Matt. xxii. 29, 32; Mark xii. 24, 27; Acts xxiv. 15; Rev. xx. 6, 12, 13; Isa. xxvi. 19, 21. Reader, search the Scriptures, and believe what God says. We know nothing concerning the future of man except what God has made known to us through his Holy Word, the Bible. Let us believe God's Word and give up false doctrine, that is contrary to the Bible, and prepare to meet our Savior at his coming.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVI. Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 17, 1897. NUMBER 43.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

In The Field.

Dear Brethren:

We have just closed the Annual Gathering of the brethren for Southern Kansas and Oklahoma, and with it the tent season for the present year. The attendance has been good of brethren from all parts of the field and the local attendance generally satisfactory. With the exception of a few days the weather has been favorable and altogether the meeting may be regarded as a success. One of the chief results of the gathering has been a perfecting of their organization and the development of a greater feeling of unity and enthusiasm for the cause of the Master. We have reason to thank God for so successful a meeting, closing so auspiciously the labors of the tent season. And I am, personally, especially pleased with the many new acquaintances I have made among the friends of the truth in these parts. The tent has been carefully stored by Bro. I. M. Vickery, until another season; meanwhile I am ready to fill any calls in this field during the winter unless duty calls me into other and wider fields, or compels me to once more withdraw from the work altogether. I say this because a great calamity has just befallen me in the destruction by fire of everything I possess. I am now practically homeless and a pauper. My wife and daughter are staying with another daughter temporarily and I am not yet decided what course to pursue, or how I can best do my duty to my family and serve the cause of truth as well. I feel like one dazed for the time being, and do not at all understand the meaning of this great affliction. If I at all comprehend the workings of my own heart I have entered into this work in a spirit of self-sacrifice with an eye single to the glory of God and the salvation of men. I have been diligent and faithful and have been successful. God has blessed the cause committed unto me and yet I have "suffered the loss of all things" on account of it. Is it true that in the spiritual warfare in which we are engaged Satan is permitted to give blow for blow? If this be true, I reach the solution of the matter; for I have been delivering some telling blows against his Satanic majesty this summer and have often defied his power. God permitted him to afflict Job without cause—am I to be another Job? Pray for me brethren that God will restrain his malice and bring good out of the evil he designs. Until he is permitted to lay his hand on me or my family and bring us low I shall remain in the field, by the grace of God, and strive to do him greater damage still. My address will still be at St. Joseph, Missouri, until further light, and any Church desiring my labors may address me at that point.

Faithfully your Brother and companion in tribulation and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ.

J. F. WILCOX.

Certain insects assume the color of the leaves they feed upon; and they are but emblems of a great law of our being; our minds take the hue of the subjects whereon they think. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Readers of trash become trashy; lovers of sceptical books become sceptical; and students of the Bible, who are in real earnest, become biblical, and display the qualities of the Bible. If you read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest the word of God, the qualities of that word will be displayed in you. A man fed on Bibline is a man indeed. In the history of heroes, there are none who show so much moral muscle and spiritual sinew as those who make the word of God their necessary and daily food.

EXAMINE

The label on your paper, and if it bears a date previous to this time please RENEW NOW. Do not wait for other notice to be sent, but PLEASE RENEW TODAY.

WHAT we need, brethren, is to maintain a sound faith and a sound practice. Dead doctrine will avail us nothing: the teachings of Christ must be lived out in our lives.

THE first man being in a state of sin and death, and renouncing himself in the form of children, they, although guiltless of the action which brought him into a state of sin and death, are nevertheless in the same state, and subject to its penalties.

EVERY people whose temperament naturally inclines them to some one good quality, make a pet of it, and cultivate it to an extreme point where it begins to be a bad quality; and besides that neglect the cultivation of other very necessary virtues.

REMISSION of sin is not salvation; but it is a transcendant blessing without which salvation is not attainable. It is the means by which men have access to the way of the Lord, in which way they may progress onwards in laying hold of Eternal Life through a patient continuance in well doing.

A BROTHER sound in faith and practice and capable of good work in the gospel field is desirous of locating where there are brethren of the one Faith and Hope who could assist him to build up a practice as a hygienic doctor, and where he could hold forth the Word of life to them and others. Those who may know of such an opening may write to M. Joblin, 626 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, for particulars.

THE principal hindrances to the reconciliation of men to God are three. First, ignorance of the way; and second, a refusal to be reconciled after hearing it. God did not merely perfect the means for reconciling men, but sent the knowledge of what he had done to all men. The records of what he has done and promised to do are now found in almost every language of man; and thus, he did not merely send men, but carefully preserved the records and sent them that all may hear the joyful sound and live who would. The third great obstacle to the reception of the truth of God today, is the carriers of the message. So full are they of mysticism and tradition that the gospel message is nullified.

Still Another.

The evidence that the gospel has lost none of its saving power was again furnished to the household of faith in Cleveland, on Sunday Nov. 7, when Mrs. Mason, the beloved wife of our brother Andrew Mason, came out of the world religious and secular and united with the Body of Christ. For several years we have been hoping it would not be long before our brother would have a sister-wife; and at last the truth as it is in Jesus, commanded by his quiet consistent walk and conversation had its desired effect, and they now travel hand in hand the narrow way of life. What cause for rejoicing, that before the door is closed she ran into that name which is a strong tower (Prov. xviii. 10) and a part of safety to those who attain to the righteousness of God by faith. That she may be faithful unto death and receive a crown of life we sincerely pray.

The Sayings of Jesus.

Among the papyri disinterred from a mound at Oxyrhynchus, Egypt, by Messrs. Grenfell and Hunt, of the Egyptian Exploration Fund, was a leaf of papyrus containing eight Logia Ihkou, or "Sayings of Jesus, differing somewhat from the sayings recorded in the New Testament, but they leave no doubt on the mind that they were derived from the histories of the evangelists. The contents of the leaf, so far as decipherable have been published at Oxford for the Egyptian Exploration Fund, and are prefaced with an account of the find.

The leaf was found in a mound which produced a great number of papyri belonging to the first three centuries of our era—those in the immediate vicinity of the fragment belonging to the second and third centuries. This fact, and the character of the handwriting are held to fix with certainty 300 A. D. as the lowest limit for the date at which the papyrus was written, and it is possible that it may have been from a century to a century and a-half earlier. The opinion of the finders is that it does not date earlier than 150 A. D. One of the sayings is supposed to be founded upon the Apocryphal book of Baruch, and others cannot be exactly understood on account of the gaps in the original text. There are other sayings which are paralleled by passages in all four of the received gospels, such as the following: "Jesus saith, a prophet is not receptable in his own country, neither does a physician work cures upon them that know him not." "And Jesus saith, a city built upon the top of a hill and established, can neither fall nor be hid;" apparently an expansion of Matt. v. 14.

Another of the translated sayings is as follows: "And then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote that is in thy brothers eye," corresponding with Matt. vii. 45; and Luke vi. 42. Infidelity has doubtless had another hard knock.

Where is Heaven—And What is its Nature?

Some brother has sent us the "Memphis Appeal" of Oct. 17, containing the answer of eleven leading ministers of that city.

Dr. R. D. Smart of the First Methodist Church said he "believed heaven to be both a place and a state; but as to where it is located, we have no information." He believed this, he said, but gave no proof.

Dr. Davenport, rector of Calvary Episcopal Church said "heaven is described to be all space beyond our world."

The Rev. Mr. Moore, pastor of the Mississippi Avenue Christian Church said, "This is an old question. In one form or another it has been asked ever since paradise was lost. The world is good enough for some people. With others the future home of man is to be this world renovated. Others believe that heaven is to be nowhere at all.....It may be on this earth, or on the planet Jupiter, or in the Sun, or one of the fixed stars, say Alpha Centauri, or Sirius. Wherever the center of the universe is, there, no doubt God has his throne."

Father Larkin, Catholic, said, "heaven according to Catholic doctrine, is the vision of God as he is in his essence and attribute and triple personality."

Dr. Ramsey, Presbyterian, said, "Any attempt to answer the question, where is heaven? would be purely speculative and attended with little profit to any one."

Dr. Long, pastor of the Strangers' Congregational Church said he "believed heaven would be everywhere; that it was certainly a condition, not necessarily a locality. It may be somewhere; it may be anywhere, or it may be everywhere."

Rev. Mr. Forbush, Unitarian, said, "The soul will be its own world. Its thought will form its universe."

Dr. Taylor, Baptist, said, "the Bible does not locate it more definitely than where the Savior dwells."

Dr. Williams, Cumberland Pres. said, "Some say heaven is everywhere, anywhere, when and where man and God are in accord and harmony with each other,—hence, heaven is a condition rather than a place." [Just think of it—all this because some say, heaven is everywhere and anywhere," etc.]

Dr. Samfield, Hebrew, said, "In Hebrew literature the word heaven contained no other idea but that of an expanse of space surrounding the earth. At a later time it was used as a synonym of God: I have sinned against heaven. Another idea connected with heaven was that of a celestial abode of immortal beings, the place or state of blessed spirits after departure from earthly life. This conception is of pagan origin, and as a vestige of childish notions of the past, survives in a modified form in the orthox theology of our times," etc.

C. B. Galloway, Theosophist said, "The goal of man is not heaven, but is perfectability, which comes only after great numbers of incarnations." [More truth than all the rest.]

In view of all this religious nonsense—or baseless twaddle, as coolly given out in some instances as if in utter ignorance of the fact that God has provided a glorious home for man on his footstool—earth. And that he has never mentioned heaven above as the home of his saints; yes, in view of all this, how the humble believer should praise the Lord God for having shined in his heart, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. Oh, how true it is that the entrance of God's Word giveth light.

For Our Children.

A Fel'ow's Mother.

"A fellow's mother," said Fred the wise,
With his rosy cheeks and his merry eyes,
"Knows what trade it is a fellow gets hurt
By a thump, or a bruise, or a fall in the dirt.

A fellow's mother has bags and strings,
Rags and buttons and lots of things;
No matter how busy she is, she'll stop
To see how well you can spin your top.

She does not express—not much, I mean—
If a fellow's face is not quite clean;
And if you're a boy—as I was at the time—
She can put in a patch that you'd never see.

A fellow's mother is never mad,
And only sorry if you're bad;
And I'll tell you this, if you're only true,
She'll always forgive you, whate'er you do.

"I'm sure of this," said Fred the wise,
With a manly look in his kindling eyes,
"I'll mind my mother every day.
A fellow's a baby that won't obey."

Buying a Paper.

"Here, boy, let me have a 'Sun.'"
"Can't do now, mister."
"Why not? You've got them. I heard you a minute ago cry them loud enough to be heard to the City Hall."
"Yes, but that was down t'other block, ye know, where I hollered."
"What does that matter? Come now, no fooling; hand me out a paper. I'm in a hurry."
"Couldn't sell you no paper on this here block, mister, cos it b'longs to Limpy. He's just on the further end now; you'll meet him."
"And who is Limpy, pray? And why does he have this especial block?"
"Cos us other kids agreed to let him have it. Ye see it's a good run on 'count of the offices all along, and the poor chap is that lame he can't get around lively like the rest of us, so we agreed that the first one caught sellin' on his beat should be lit on and thrashed. See?"
"Yes, I do see. So you newsboys have a sort of brotherhood among yourselves?"
"Well, we're a goin' to look out for a little cove what's lame anyhow, you bet!"
"There comes Limpy now; he's a fortunate boy to have such kind friends."
The gentleman bought two papers of him, and went on his way down town, wondering how many men in business would refuse an opportunity to sell their wares in order to give a weak, halting brother a chance in a clear field.—Emma J. Leute, in Christian Intelligencer.

Star-Wagons.

Every young person is familiar with that famous sentence of Emerson's, "Hitch your wagon to a star." But how many of us have gone deeper than the striking beauty of the image, and thought out the full meaning of those pregnant words?

The star-wagon is the humble faculty or endeavor made a thousand times more effective by being united with a great law, or cause, or opportunity. You really hitch your wagon to a star when you roast down hill on your bicycle. It is the law of gravitation that is drawing you. Necessity, the Christian enlightener and educator of Japan, hitched his wagon to a star when he seized the opportunity to escape to America and fit himself to teach our religion, arts, and sciences.

To enforce our personal fitness and faculty, then, by allying ourselves with something greater and stronger and more vital than ourselves, is to ride in a star-wagon. It is a glorious opportunity, and particularly so in youth, with a lifetime of achievement before one. If from the very beginning we waste no time nor energy in ill-applied endeavor, but take advantage of every great force and principle and opportunity, how grand should be the achievement of a human life, every effort moving in the paths of the stars, every blow backed by the weight of the universe!

Hitch your wagon, first, to the star of faith. Believe in something.—believe in God! It is the grand inspiration for a life of noble achievement. If you believe in God, and God's truth, and the triumph of good over evil, and the final coming of heaven and heaven's redeemed, you have a star to hitch your wagon to that will lead you. There will be none of the inertia of despair, or cynicism, or pessimism, in your life. Believing in God and his Christ, you will believe in all good for yourself and all men. And you will work mightily, with all the forces of the universe, for the realization of that universal good.

Hitch your wagon also to truth. Here is a star that travels in forceful, unbroken orbit, that shall never change so long as God himself endures. He who travels the other way shall, sooner or later, be crushed by the star of truth. But he who travels with the star shall find nothing able to withstand his progress. You may gain a foot today by falsehood, but tomorrow, or sooner, and eternally, you shall lose a mile by it.

Hitch your wagon to work. Laziness may seem easier now, but by and by you will find it harder pulling away from a star than keeping pace with it. Honest work is every young person's opportunity, which, if he accepts it, will carry him on to surest success. Nothing has been accomplished, in all the economy of the universe, save by faithfulest, gradual labor; and, unless you hitch your wagon to the star of this law, the universe has nothing but contempt for you and your product.

Finally, hitch your wagon to love. Let the spirit that lies at the heart of the universe be the spirit that governs your life. Follow the star of goodwill, the star that sets the key-note to the music of the spheres. God is love, and the life that is founded upon that eternal law is God-like in its nature, and shall share God's eternal existence. To do unto others always as love prompts them to do unto you, is the supreme law of happiest, holiest, and most helpful life.—James Buckham.

OUR LOVE FEAST.

Dear Restitution:

I think THE RESTITUTION is the best paper we can put into the hands of thinking people, that they may gain some light on God's plan of salvation. We have a few loved ones here in Lanark, Ill., that I think are seeking for the truth. Yours in hope.

S. P. RENNER.

Dear Restitution:

Oh for the unity of the spirit that we may all speak the same thing, having the same mind—not our own opinions, but having the mind of Christ. One in Christ Jesus the Son of the living God. Filled with love and mercy and walking in his footsteps—can we say we are?

Pray for me. Ask of him who is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, that he may grant me according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his spirit in the inner man, that Christ may be in me. And not for me only, but all.

Yours in Christ,

B. W. WAGONER.

Dear Restitution:

Please find order for $1.50 for the good old paper another year, hope you will not think hard of me for not sending it sooner for I could not well help it. Hope I can do better hereafter as I can't well do without the paper as it is all the preacher we have here. I read it and study it and compare it with the Bible and with the help of both I feel that I am growing in grace and the knowledge of the truth. I would say to my brother Henry that I think my name will be on the list for the paper as long as I can raise the $1.50 to pay for it.

Yours with the love for the truth.

BIRAM CORDLE.

Editor Restitution:

I see my time is out so I will renew as I cannot do without it for it is a great help to me as I am unable to go to our Bible readings as I used to, but I would like to say to all the dear brothers and sisters of the one faith, that I am as strong in the faith as ever and ask them to pray for me that I may be faithful and I hope we may all be faithful and may all meet at the Master's feet and be worthy to enter in at the last day and be for ever with him.

MRS. LIZZIE JOHNSON.

Dear Restitution:

I do not like to be without the paper, 'tis such a help to me to read the letters from the brothers and sisters. My hearing is so poor, I can't hear the testimony of the few that gather in our church to speak a word for the Master. But I am trying to live so that I may have a share in the future life where all will be joy and peace. My dear ones let us have patience. I believe the time is very near, for the foe is before us in battle array but let us not waver nor turn from the way. For one thing assures us we cannot go wrong while trusting our Savior while marching along. Pray for me that I may be numbered with the blest when Jesus comes.

An Object Lesson.

The traditional "Sick Man of the East" is in trouble again. This time it is not Greece nor the Armenians who are vexing the "Sublime Porte," but a more formidable neighbor represented in the government of Austria-Hungary. This will be all the more annoying to the Sultan in view of the skill with which he has held "the allies" at bay while allowing his faithful subjects to rob and massacre the Armenians and his recent success in the Greco-Turkish war.

The cause of the "unspeakable Turk's" new trouble is characteristic, but, for the reasons given, no less surprising. It is simply another case of Turkish bad faith. An Austrian merchant named Brazzanoli, who also acted as agent of the Austrian Lloyd steamship company at Mersina, Asia Minor, was accused of crime of befriending fugitive Armenians and even of securing for some of the most necessitous cheap passage to enable them to escape from their Turkish oppressors. For this crime he was expelled from Mersina, but, on the protest of the Austrian government, was permitted to return. Then came a new phase of the situation when the merchant was maltreated by the local authorities, and the Austrian Consul, who attempted to protect him, was subjected to insult.

Now it appears that the Austrian government has ordered one of the cruisers to Mersina to protect its consulate and sent a strong note to the Porte demanding an apology and dismissal of the local governors responsible for the indignity committed against its subjects and representatives. In default of this it has instructed the Austrian Minister to demand his passports and quit Constantinople. If the facts are as reported by the Associated Press the prompt and decided action of the Austrian government is worthy of all praise.

This case should furnish an instructive object lesson to our own government. Had the United States government acted with the same decision and energy when the rights of American citizens were violated and its official representatives insulted in Cuba, there is reason to believe that the bloody Cuban war would have been brought to an end months ago.—Tribune.

Topics for the Times.

BEAR BREAD FOR THE POOR.

"The Boom in Wheat" is a profitable thing for speculators and Corn Exchange gamblers, who are, no doubt, ranking a good thing out of it. But it is a bad thing for the poor who, with but scant means at the best, find a full penny added to the cost of the loaf. With the farmers we must all rejoice, as far as they are profitted thereby, but it may be that the high standard of wheat will be only made an excuse of by landowners for raising rents.

In Russia the outlook is very serious, as large provinces, peopled by millions of peasants, will have to be kept at the expense of the State, both in bread and in seed-corn.

NO MORE JEWISH EMIGRATION TO SOUTH AMERICA.

The Argentine Colony of the late Baron Hirsch is to be abandoned, and the funds devoted to Jewish educational purposes on the Continent.

Such an event was freely forecasted in our pages long since, for there can be no Jewish Colony but that of the Restoration to Palestine. The abandonment of a generous and well-meant scheme, which was not on providential lines, will serve to clear the air for the true Jewish State.

THE SOUDAN AND ANGLO-EGYPT.

The Anglo-Egyptian forces are having nearly a "walk over" in the Eastern Soudan. This whole region is now reclaimed for civilization, justice and freedom. From Wady-Halfa to Abu-Hamed, Berber, and Suakim, is now British-Egyptian territory.

It is wonderful to most how Britain got, and now maintains and extends her influence and rule in Egypt; and in spite of the active ill-will and hostility to France. We are threatened with a combination of the Powers, to thrust us out of Egypt. Such a result would very much surprise the writer, who expects to see British influence supreme from Cairo to Cape Town; and, also, from the Suez Canal to the North of Syria (Palestine), and eastward to the Euphrates, and probably, the Tigris. "A large order" do you say? Well, we will wait and see.

AN ELECTION WITH A MORAL.

As an outside spectator of politics, we may be allowed, without bias, to note the significant Liberal victory in East Denbighshire, where the previous large majority of the late popular member was increased some 500 by his successor. What is the meaning of this? Chiefly a deep-rooted distrust of the Foreign policy of the country. A plain warning that Armenia, Crete, Greece are names which bring feelings of pain and shame to the British people. We trust this "bolt from the blue" will have its desired and designed effect in changing the Foreign policy of this nation.

TURKEY AND EUROPE.

The boasted "Concert of the Powers" has produced great evils in the East. Armenia lies hopeless and helpless at the feet of her cruel oppressor, and there are grave fears of a renewal of the awful experience of the past two years. Mighty Europe has condoned the Turkish Butcher in the past, and thus encouraged to repeat his vile work in the future. Crete is still in a state of lawless chaos, not one hair-breadth nearer settled and just government. The Turk is still there, and as defiant as ever; whilst Mussulman and Christian alike are still flying at each other's throats. Greece lies bleeding to death, her fairest and most fertile province still trampled on by the feet of the most ruthless soldiery of the modern world, fit creatures of the vile and inhuman despot they serve.

Yet Europe claims to be Christendom! And this is its Christian(?) work! Shame on it. A God of justice may well spue it out of his mouth.

The Divine regard for the Turk in Thessaly may be, perhaps, judged by the recorded fact that, besides a heavy death-rate in the invading army, not less than 10,000 soldiers have been invalid in three short months. The savage hordes of Turkey are melting away before the displeasure of the Lord of Hosts.

OUR BOASTED SCIENCE.

Scientific research has not yet inaugurated its promised millenium. We hear of the wide-spread ravages of the Plague in India, of Yellow Fever in the United States—in the region of the Mississippi—and Typhoid at Klondike, and at Maidstone—1500 hundred cases in the latter. No, we cannot do without the Christ, the Great Physician of the bodies and souls of men. The best cry for the times is "Even so Come, Lord Jesus, Come quickly."

KEEPING TO THE OLD PATHS.

Dr. Parker, of the City Temple, is credited with saying in connection with the induction service of a new pastor: "Don't make a fool of yourself by trying to invent a new Bible, or by trying to fettle up a new cheap gospel. Keep by the tried old ways, the turnpikes over which countless millions have passed." This homely truth may be of service to the "Higher Critics," whose zeal sorely needs to be tempered with discretion—it is so destructive.

THE POPE, THE JEWS, AND PALESTINE.

The Pope is reported to be bitterly resentful towards Dr. Herzl's proposal to a new Jewish State in Palestine. It is even said that he is using all his influence with the Sultan to prevent any encouragement being given the proposal by Turkey. This, if true, shows how important and influential the new Zionist movement is, since Papal Rome fears it is likely to interfere with its own ambitious designs in reference to the Holy City, Jerusalem, and its Holy Places. The Papacy is shrewd enough to see that it may ere long want a place of asylum, one where it can re-establish its Temporal Power. If driven out of Rome, what substitute so suitable as Jerusalem, with its Holy and powerful associations. Where, too, it would be within easy distance of Babylon, the last seat and centre of world power! So it is a case of "pull Pope pull Jew"—with probable advantage to the Turkish Butcher at Constantinople. It is of interest here to say that an American exchange reports, that a Flag—for the Jewish State in Palestine—has been prepared at Chicago, and that it is now in the hands of the leaders of the Zionist movement, and is to be used next spring, to head the procession which will inaugurate the New State in Jerusalem. We cannot verify this, but merely repeat the statement, and leave it without comment.—The Faith.

No man can be married to Christ till he is divorced from sin.

Poetry.

Which Road?

If you could go back to the forks of the road—
Back the long miles you have carried the load
Back to the place where you had to decide
By this way or that through your life to abide;
Back of the sorrow and back of the care
Back to the place where the future was fair—
If you were there now, a decision to make,
Oh, pilgrim of sorrow which road would you take?

Then, after you'd trodden the other long track,
Suppose that again to the forks you went back,
After you found that its promises fair
Were but a delusion that led to a snare—
That road you first traveled with sigh and unrest,
Though dreary and rough, was most graciously-blest
With balm for each bruise and unbarm for each ache—
Oh, pilgrim of sorrow, which road would you take?

The Free and the Bond. No. 2.

"And Moses said unto Hobab, the son of Raguel the Midianite, Moses' father-in-law, We are journeying unto the place of which the Lord said, I will give it you: come thou with us, and we will do thee good: for the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel. And he said unto him, I will not go; but I will depart to mine own land, and to my kindred. And he said, Leave us not, I pray thee; inasmuch as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness, and thou mayest be to us instead of eyes. And it shall be, if thou go with us, yea, it shall be that what goodness the Lord shall do unto us, the same will we do unto thee." Num. x. 29-32.

In this interview between Moses and his brother-in-law, there seems not to be the least of feeling existing; although Moses spoke to Hobab in a conciliatory way. Hobab was not inclined to accept the proposal advanced him. There is always a cause for nature to resent, and hard sometimes to resent, when backed by a promise from a source to which Moses appealed, that is by the Lord to Abraham, concerning his seed bond and free, which hath by nature inclined to by jealous rival. Now, Moses thought after Hobab refused to accept of his offer to advance another step, on a plea as wanting Hobab as a a guide out of the wilderness. See verse 31.

Look at the term Moses uses on this last occasion: appeals to the carnal senses: using the expression, "instead of eyes." As wanting this member as a guide instead of the Lord, who had so far delivered them, and was yet ready to guide them through to the Promised Land. Now, we see a unity professed by Moses in the 32nd of this 10th chapter in these words. "And it shall be, if thou go with us, (Israelites) yea, (an assurance) it shall be, that what goodness the Lord shall do unto us, the same will we do unto thee." Little did Moses think at this time he would never reach the Promised Land to which they were journeying, and the work he was accomplishing was to end just this side of Canaan; and as the law incorporate with self must necessarily, as a type, end before the promise was complete in him, we will here introduce to you Moses' father-in-law, who he was, and from whence his people sprung.

In Exodus 3rd chapter 1st ver. we read concerning Moses' keeping the flock of Jethro, a Midian priest. How he came to leave Egypt is explained in the 2nd chapter on the occasion of two of his brethren striving together,—his intervession.—their divulging the fact that he (Moses) had killed an Egyptian, and Pharaoh hearing of it sought to slay Moses, but Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of Midian.

Now, who was the Midian priest, whose daughter Moses married? In turning to Gen. xxv 1-4, we find this priest sprang from the fourth son of Abraham by Keturah, as by her Abraham had six sons, and their inheritance in the promise was Onward the East, where Abraham sent them after giving them gifts. But the bulk of his personal property he bestowed upon Isaac, as we read in 25th chap. of Gen. 5th verse. On this account the servant of Abraham boasted when sent to seek a wife for his son Isaac. See Gen. xxiv. 35-37.

We shall follow out this line of research as minutely as possible, so our understanding may grasp the idea advanced more fully, and to the understanding of these relative positions occupied by these two peoples of same parental head.

In 83rd Psalm, David the son of God takes up a lament against these people, in these words: "Keep not thou silence, O God: hold not thy peace, and be not still, O God." Why so, "For, lo, thine enemies make a tumult." We ask how? See by turning to Num. xi. 4, by causing the Israelites to lust, bringing them under condemnation to the law that was too pure for a sinful people to follow. And what more have these enemies done? "And they that hate thee have lifted up the head (not their head, but Abraham as a banner). They have taken crafty counsel against thy people, and consulted against thy hidden ones. They have said, Come, and let us cut them off from being a nation." What for, "that the name of Israel may be more in remembrance. For they have consulted together with one consent; they are confederate against thee."

In this complaint of David what people are enumerated? Let us read Psa. xciii. 6-9. "The tabernacle of Edom, Ishmaelites, Moab, Hagarenes, Gebal, Ammon, Amalek, Philistines, with the inhabitants of Tyre." Strong confederacy against Israel, their free seed brethren pitting against them with other nations as allies, causing David to offer up this request of 9th verse. "Do unto them as unto the Midianites." Now, what did God do unto the Midianites? Turn with us to Judges chap. 6 and see the judgments there executed. First Israel had sinned against God, or as in the Word, "Did evil in the sight of the Lord, and the Lord delivered them into the hand of Midian seven years." ver. 1. "And the hand of Midian prevailed against Israel: and because of the Midianites, the children of Israel made them the dens which are in the mountains, and caves, and strongholds." Pharaoh and down to now has the Israelites were wont to do their [illegible] that they should not be cut off because the Midianites were their natural seed brethren. The Philistines drove the Israelites to the same extreme we notice by reference to 1 Sam. xiii. 6.

Thus we might trace each one of David's actions in their dealings with Israel God's people. We will return to Israel and Midian: what did God do for Israel after their 7 years of bondage under Midian? "Sent them a prophet, one Gideon, whom the angel stood with his father threshing wheat, by the wine press to hide it from the Midianites." Judges vi. 11. And the Lord's promise to him was, "Surely I will be with thee, and thou shalt smite the Midianites as one man." Thus were God's dealings with the Midianites, that they were utterly discomfited, so those God used to mete out his judgments against a refractory chosen nation are in turn punished with a severer condemnation.

It is well here to mention what the evil was that caused God to deliver the children of Israel into the hand of Midian; by turning to the 2 chap. of Judges 19 verse, that after the judge was dead, they corrupted themselves more than their fathers had done, and for this reason God delivered them to the Midians, that they might be made repentant, and turn to him again, and as the sequel shows, worked admirably. But the Midianites took advantage of the opportunity in hand to retaliate, for supposed injuries from the Israelites concerning the inheritance of their father Abraham.

As we follow on this line, we see Moses' law carried out thus far, figuratively, "A tooth for a tooth, an eye for an eye." It is not our intention to follow out God's dealings with Israel in subjecting them under the hands of other nations, as under Chushan-rishathaim eight years. See Judges iii. 8. And under Eglon, king of Moab, 18 years; and so on, but show the two seeds were handled from the time of the promise of God to Abraham, in 15th chap Gen., the sojourn of 400 years in Egypt. Their exodus there from the giving of the law at Sinai, the people there concerned, and why the moral law (that is all that has not service) was given especially the ten commandments, which were so strict against the natural man,—placing Israel on the same level with Ishmael, and Media, that they both strove to introduce their gods to Israel, and lead them astray from the promises of God to Abraham through Isaac, concerning the Messias, the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world.

Let us review a few verses in the 18th chap. of Exodus, at the meeting of Moses and Jethro, his father-in-law, and note the conversation held between them, and the recognition of the gods they served. Commencing at the 7th verse, "And Moses went out to meet his father-in-law, and did obeisance, and kissed him; and they asked each other of their welfare; and they came into the tent." And Moses explained to his father-in-law all that the Lord had done unto Pharaoh and to the Egyptians, and how he had delivered them from the hand of the Egyptians and Jethro said, "Blessed be the Lord, who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh, and who hath delivered the people from under the hand of Egyptians. Now I know that the Lord is greater than all gods."

When we read these words of Jethro, we are not slack in saying he must have been well versed in God's dealing with Israel, their going into bondage to Egypt, Moses' sojourn with him at Mt. Horeb, his return to Egypt as a leader of the children of Israel toward the Promised Land, as he could not have been so prompt in meeting his son-in-law, bringing to Moses his wife and two sons. Jethro acknowledges the superiority of the God of Israel in whom Moses trusts when he says, "I know that the Lord is greater than all gods." They sink into nothingness when compared with the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, who has done this great work in behalf of Israel his people. "For in the thing wherein they (his gods) dealt proudly (that is pulling up a people without effect) he was above them." To bind this acknowledgement, "Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, took a burnt-offering and sacrifices for God." Exodus xviii. 7-12. Jethro tarried all night with Moses, and on the next day, and watched the procedure of Moses, as judge for this vast people, as complaint after complaint was entered, from morning till night, and seeing with what weariness his son-in-law cared the duties imposed upon himself, advanced a proposition which Moses readily accepted of, "to appoint [illegible] rulers of thousands, hundreds, fifties, and tens to lessen the burden then resting upon him, in making the people know the statutes of God, and his laws. For Jethro said the thing Moses did was not good, it would wear him out, "but thou and this people that is with thee." "Hearken now unto my voice," says Jethro, "And God shall be with thee." Be thou for the people to God-ward, that thou mayest bring the causes unto God." No better admonition could be given, or richer blessing by mortal man, than was here bestowed on Moses and his dependent people. "So Moses hearkened to the voice of his father-in-law, and did all that he had said." So Moses' father-in-law departed and went into his own land.

In this Moses obeyed a command, in which was the nucleus of one of the ten commandments, "Honor thy father and thy mother that thy life may be long in the land." Did Moses bear this same honor to his heavenly Parent, that he did to Jethro, his father-in-law;—he did not, for he rebelled against the Lord in the wilderness of Zion, therefore was not permitted to enter the Promised Land of Jacob.

Let us for a few moments before we dismiss this subject, for the present, notice briefly why God so distributed the natural seed of Abraham, so as to come in contact at every step with his free seed. We have already stated by Scripture, see Gen. xv., that God revealed to Abraham his decree that his seed should be in bondage 400 years, and should come out with great substance. Why so, and what for? Answer is that his law might be applied to his people to see whether they would be loyal to him as Divine Head, or to man in his fleshly convert. And the placing of the natural seed in the position he did, proved the Israelites unworthy of the Isaac portion of the promise: causing Paul to say concerning those under the law whether bond or free. Gal. iii 28, they were alike under condemnation.

We ask did God give the natural seed an inheritance among their free brethren? We say, yes. Please read Social Psalm cxxii. "Take notice of Edom, or Esau, Ishmaelites and children of Lot, Ishmaelites and Hagarenes. A tabernacle is a dwelling place, and David's complaint was, that they these people said, "Let us take to ourselves the houses of God in possession." 12 verse, which we truly say was a true version of their deeds, as the Israelites were from time to time, so reduced of their personal substance that life became a burden too heavy to bear.

For the benefit of those desiring to read for themselves we refer them to these Scriptures, 2 Chron. xx. 7-13; Deut. ii. 1-5; Num. xx. 7-13; Num. xxii. 4; xxxi. 2; Gen. xxxvi.; 1 Chron. vii. 43; Num. xxi. 28.

There is ever more sunshine than shadow;
In all lives more pleasure than pain;
There's never a year without summer,
And sunshine is brighter for rain.
The roses to we buddled and blossomed,
The leaves in their time all turned brown;
Then after the blossoms the winter;
But after the bride—the crown.

When the sun of virtue is set, the blush of shame is the twilight. When that dies all is darkness.

Gospel—Glad Tidings—Good News.

"Gospel,"—is a New Testament word; but although not mentioned in the Old Testament, the glad tidings were contained in the promises made unto the Fathers, and to the children of Israel in the wilderness. "For unto us was the gospel preached as well as unto them," Heb. iv. 2. It is called the gospel of God in Rom. 1. 1, because it came originally from the Father. It is called the "gospel of the grace of God" because it proceeds from and manifests his favor, and is the means whereby his grace is bestowed. It is called the gospel of Christ;" he is the immediate author and the subject matter of it. In the same passage it is said to be the power of God unto salvation to all those who believe. It is called the "glorious gospel of the blessed God," because it is a message of future glory, on account of which all that partake of it will call him blessed. It announces a good time coming when the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea. For Jehovah spake to Moses, "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with my glory." This is glorious good news from God to every one that believes it. God's gospel is also styled the gospel of the kingdom, because he purposes to manifest his glory and blessedness through a kingdom he declares he will set up in Canaan promised to Abraham.

To preach the "Gospel" and the Kingdom are synonymous, and are used as language in the Scriptures by Jesus and the apostles. So a person in preaching the gospel must preach the things concerning the kingdom of God; see Acts viii. 12 "I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also," says Jesus; for therefore am I sent.

The great salvation was associated with the good news. It was an invitation to this KINGDOM AND GLORY. "God now commandeth all men everywhere, to repent, because he has appointed a day in the which he will judge (rule) the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given assurance in raising him from the dead." If God has in this gospel placed a power for our salvation, is it not necessary to understand it, and know what we believe and why we believe it? It is called "the gospel of our salvation," Eph. i. 13. "Begotten through the gospel," 1 Cor. iv. 15. "Called by the gospel," 2 Thess. ii. 14. Its importance cannot be exaggerated, (Amen, Ed.) Our salvation depends upon belief of and obedience to the gospel. "Now to him that is of power to stablish you according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery which was kept secret since the world began, but now is made manifest, and by the Scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandments of the everlasting God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith." This obedience of faith is for the name of Jesus (That is, in order to the obtaining of the name of Jesus, Ed.) as Paul says in the first verse of this same letter, Rom. i. 5. We also read in Acts vi. 7, "A great company of priests were obedient to the faith;" evidently conveying the idea of immersion into the saving name of Jesus. "For there is no other name under heaven, given among men whereby we may be saved." "To him give all the prophets witness that through his name, whosoever believeth into him shall receive remission of sins. "Repent and be baptized every one of you into the name of Christ for the remission of sins." Thus will the language of the spirit in Peter, to the Jews on the day of Pentecost. Is not this overt act the obedience of faith? "He that believeth the gospel, and is baptized shall be saved."—Jesus.

Editor Restitution:

Will you please republish the following article which I found in an old Restitution. It was written by my brother who died a few years ago, and I thought it might be a benefit to some one to have it in print again.

Yours in Christ,
Hannah M. Barber.

The Tobacco Habit.

I want to say a few words through The Restitution in regard to this habit. I was addicted to it for about eight years. I commenced using the weed when about twelve years old; but when I became a disciple of the Lord Jesus, I was much impressed with the thought that if I would serve him acceptably I must abstain from its use; so I at once threw it away, and though it has been many years I have not since used a particle of it.

How any one who is a disciple of the Lord Jesus, can continue using tobacco, is more than I can comprehend. I know there are many excuses offered by those who continue using it; but with all the excuses that can be offered it still remains a wrong. Just think of the filthiness of the habit. The breath of a tobacco chewer, how offensive; the fumes of a smoker how disgusting. The apostle Paul taught that Christians should cleanse themselves from all filthiness of the flesh as as well as of the spirit. 2 Cor. vii. 1.

That to either smoke or chew tobacco is injurious to our health is too plain to need any argument. It causes inability, nervousness, dyspepsia, heart disease, and numerous other ailments. Besides the filthy and injurious features of this habit is the great waste of money; no doubt many professed Christians spend many times more each year for tobacco than for the cause of Christ. It certainly is a shame that those who profess to be the Lord's people will use money in this way. This one thought, a waste of money, worse than money thrown away, should be enough to convince any Christian that the habit is a sinful one.

Think of the good that might be done with the money that is squandered for tobacco.

Let those who are addicted to this habit ask themselves these questions. Am I end I receive the Lord? Would he be glad to have him come while I am a slave of such a habit? Can I expect to hear the glad words, "Well done thou good and faithful servant?" The apostle Paul in writing to the church, says, "The elders which are among you I exhort,..... Feed the flock of God that is among you, taking the oversight thereof,..... being examples to the flock." 1 Peter v. Now for us to feed the flock of God, to take the oversight thereof, to be examples to them, our walk must be such that it would be well for them to follow in our footsteps. Can those who are addicted to the use of tobacco say their example is a good one? Think of the injurious effects tobacco has upon the young, who are many of them professed Christians. It causes physical disorder such as indigestion, impared taste, defective eyesight, dull hearing, nervous affections, and diseases of the heart. It stunts their growth so that they never arrive at normal bodily development. It destroys their ability to apply themselves to study, and prevents their comprehending or remembering their lessons. A principal of a certain school says, "I have had numbers of cases of tobacco using students who remained in the same grade for four successive years, and then they were not ready to be advanced into the next higher grade."

But this is not all, think of the normal results of boys who are addicted to the habit, they are not truthful, they practice deception, and cannot be depended upon. Besides this they now lose their personal self respect and regard for the customs and wishes of others.

Awful as these effects are we find many professed Christians who are by their example teaching the young this sinful habit, which causes the ruin of so many of them. The example of Christians should be such that it would tend to lead the youth to righteousness instead of ruin and death.

While glorious promises are made to the followers of the Lord Jesus; they are to be rewarded with life eternal, and are to sit with him in his throne. They will have no sickness sorrow, nor pain, but in that life fulness will reign. How the Christian's reward ate them to purify themselves, even as he is pure."

C. F. Barber.

Attention!

To the Brethren in Michigan:

Will you please give me your attention for just a moment? Have you read The Restitution of recent date? Have you noticed what a splendid effort our brethren are making in Indiana, the object being to carry the glorious gospel to poor perishing men and women? We all believe the gospel is the power of God unto salvation. Rom. i. 16. Some of our churches, and individual brethren are doing nobly, others are making no effort to support meetings at home or any where else, why not be up and at work for the Master. Is this do-nothing policy a good thing; perhaps it is the cheaper now, financially speaking, but hark brother, your stewardship will be called for some day. Remember the Master is going to exact settlement, and no excuse; some poor soul's blood will be the seal on your garments and mine, guaranteeing our certain and just doom. If we have been unfaithful, the good Master will never say, "Well done," if not true.

We have two or three brethren in our State that God has given ability, they ought to be out doing work for the Master, but they have families and they must live and have support. Bro. Calvin Winchester, Bro. Cummings and Bro. Gill should have the necessary encouragement. Let the churches that have no meetings or preaching call a business meeting at once, and raise some money. Yes, I mean money, that is just what I mean, and start meetings, and let your poor perishing children and neighbors hear the all-saving gospel for once, which you pretend to believe and love. Some day perhaps they will rise up in the judgment and say, "Father, you were to blame for my destruction." My brother, did you read Bro. Eychaner's Scriptural article and Bro. Fred Austin's, or Bro. Gill's, or did you notice that it was about paying the Lord his part, then drop it quick. It is the worst cheating in the world to cheat the Lord. Israel tried that same caper once and they got a bad set back. Will a man rob God? "Yet ye have robbed me but ye say wherein have we robbed thee in tithes and offerings; ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation." God exacted his, or what belonged to him anciently, he will exact of us what belongs to him. Let each one do their whole duty. Then thousands could hear and believe and be saved. The Lord says bring in your tithes and offerings and prove me. Try the experiment for just once, brethren, and let us see what the effect will be. Let us remember covetousness is the bane of our time.

Yours in the blessed hope,
B. W. Woodward.

Obituary.

P. A. Moore, formerly wife of Z. Gower, aged 70 years, and 7 months, fell asleep in Christ, Sept. 16th 1897, at her son's, in Cleveland Co. Okla. Ter. Many of our brothers and sisters will remember Polly Gower, and her former husband Z. Gower. Bro. Gower was an able minister of the gospel. Sister Polly leaves several children to mourn the loss of a mother. And the church of God have a loss of a mother in Israel, but we sorrow not as those having no hope. We firmly believe when God's Trumpet shall sound, and the dead are raised, our Sister will be among the first to rise. And we expect to meet her in the kingdom of God. Where there will be no more death, nor sighing. Yes, blessed hope, may we all live so we may meet Sister Polly in the sweet-bye and bye. Funeral services conducted by the writer.

The man of principle needs not the restriction of seal or signature, or any legal instrument. He deals in solitude as in public, at midnight as in sunshine. His grasped hand is as good as a bond, and his promise as sterling gold. The complicated interests of men, which so often jar and conflict, are reconciled in him with beautiful harmony. He is himself the embodiment of justice, the symbol of a perfect society. His charities are not the droppings of a formal pity, but the ointment of a yearning love.

As there are flowers that bloom unseen in solitary glens, watered by him who forms the dew and sends the rain, so there are lowly children of the Most High, who, deprived of all human help and consolation, find their sufficiency in him who supplies all their needs according to the riches of his glory in Christ Jesus; and so have a plenty in the midst of famine, and living water amid the desert sand.

Japan has an income tax, and this is the way they enforce it. If a taxpayer protests that he is rated too high by the officials he is thrust into a dark room and told to "think it over carefully." Sometimes a man stays there twenty-four hours, buried in darkness and thought, and finally he is apt to agree with the officials that he is richer than he at first supposed.

It is the crushed olive that yields the oil; the pressed grape that gives forth the wine, and it was the smitten rock that gave the people water. So it is the broken, contrite heart, that is most rich in holiness, and most fragrant in grace.

Keep doing, always doing. Wishing, dreaming, intending, murmuring, sighing, thinking, and repining, are idle and profitless employments.

Indiana Conference.

The following Programme has been prepared for the First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Indiana, to be held at Plymouth, Nov. 18 to and including Nov. 21, 1897.

As it is to be a religious meeting it is thought best to devote more time to religious work and less time to neighborly visiting.

PREPARATORY PROGRAMME.

Churches, choose delegates at once.

Sunday Schools, select delegates early.

Churches and Sunday Schools, instruct delegates and provide with carfare.

Delegates, prepare your reports.

Everybody, (who can) prepare to attend the first meeting on Thursday evening.

Do not expect a feast in the semblance of a religious meeting. God dislikes such gatherings. Isa. i. 14. But to assist one another spiritually is commended. Heb. iii. 13; x. 24-25. "Mary sat at Jesus' feet and heard his Word, but Martha was cumbered about much serving. But one thing is needful; and Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken from her." Luke x. 38-42.

PROGRAMME.

THURSDAY, Nov. 18.

Announcement.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith, will convene at Plymouth, Ind., Thursday evening Nov. 18, 1897 and continue over the following Sunday.

Now brethren and sisters of the faith in Indiana, the time is almost at hand for another meeting wherein we can come together and strengthen and encourage each other by prayer and exhortation, and we earnestly urge that each and every one who possibly can arrange to be at our meeting, come with hearts full of love and for the advancement of the cause.

You who have read THE RESTITUTION have no doubt seen there is being a renewed effort put forth for more effective evangelizing and we are glad to say is meeting with quite a degree of success and the outlook is very promising if it continues, therefore we urge that every church organization as far as possible be represented by delegates that you may take part in whatever business may come up before the Conference. We invite all who are interested to be with and share with us.

P. L. AUSTIN, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec.

Brothers and Sisters of Indiana:

I wish to call the attention of all in Indiana to the article on Editorial page of THE RESTITUTION of Sept. 15, entitled "To the Brothers and Sisters of Indiana." Also to the article entitled "Indiana Workers" in issue of Sept. 22. Some I learn have overlooked both of these articles. Please do not delay in answering these requests. Many reports have come in and thus far they are without exception, truly encouraging. With the earnest and prompt co-operation of all concerned a general report can soon be given that will be welcomed by every member of our State. Please do not delay.

Attention is also called to the fact that Bro. D. E. Vanvactor, 1st Vice Pres. of Argos, has, by request, accepted the responsibility of acting as State S. S. Supt. Will you kindly give him all the assistance in your power. Yours seeking the co-workers.

F. L. AUSTIN.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Notice.

WILL our friends please remember that we do not have the books and tracts at this office that are advertized by Brother Joblin, or Brother Wiley Jones. Do not send to this office for them, but send to their address as given in the advertisement. This will save both trouble and delay. PLEASE REMEMBER.

Tract Fund.

We the undersigned, realizing that the distributing of tracts is a good way to spread the truth, and that the time is short in which we can work for the Master, do hereby agree to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purpose of raising a fund to be used in supplying tracts to those who will distribute them free.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and the amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

There is no scarceness when the Lord provides; and he who leadeth Israel like a flock, can spread a table in the wilderness, and cause crystal streams to burst from the smitten rock, and manna to fall along the desert way.

Books and Tract List.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

We have received a new supply of this valuable work, which treats of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the one hope, one faith, one baptism, by the late Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. This will need no introduction to many of our readers, as they already know of the good that has been accomplished through its circulation. 10 cents each. Send to this office.

FUTURE PROBATION.

Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff. This work was issued and sold at 25 cents. We have a good supply and will send them post paid for ten cents per copy. This is an excellent opportunity for any who are interested in this subject to get this work by a talented author. Send ten cents to this office for a copy.

QUESTIONS FOR THINKERS AND THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL.

Is the title of a pamphlet of 96 pages by H. W. Bowman, containing questions on the Eternity of Evil, Predestination, Hell and kindred points. It is well worth reading and will help many who are bothered to give answers many times. We can supply you for 15 cents a copy.

GLAD TIDINGS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

This is the title of a tract containing 12 large size pages, and is a reprint of a work issued many years ago, and we suppose was written by Brother Benjamin Wilson. It is clear and comprehensive, and can be had for 5cts each or 30 for $1.00.

THE COMING NATION.

A lecture delivered by H. W. Revel. Thinebarly sets forth the idea that the Coming Nation will be the nation of Israel restored to Palestine, and the Scriptural reasons are given. 26 pages price 10 cts or three or 25 cts.

A PARABOLIC BATTLEFIELD, OR KINGDOM'S WATCHING.

Is the title of a tract of 32 pages by H. W. Bowman, and is devoted to an exposition of the Rich Man and Lazarus Question. 10 cents a copy.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

A popular lecture by M. Joblin. Very good to put in the hands of those enquiring for truth. 16 pages 5cents each.

Necessity of Baptism. A 4-page tract, written some years ago by Brother J. M. Stephenson, and it appeared as a newspaper article. It is so good we thought best to preserve it in this way, and offer it at 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Bible Plan of Salvation. A 4-page tract telling how to interpret the Scriptures, the development of God's plan, etc. 2 cts each or 15 cts per dozen.

An open letter to J. A. Conant. A 4-page tract being a letter written by Brother Daniel Howard and printed in RESTITUTION, April 22, 1896. 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Letter to Dr. Talmage. A 4-page tract being a letter written by Sister Addie A. Howard to Dr. Talmage and printed in the RESTITUTION of April 22, 1896. 2 cents each or 15 cts per dozen.

Modern Events in the Light of Prophecy.—This is the sermon preached by H. V. Revel at Antioch, which has since been printed in tract form, and may be had at this office for five cents each, or 30 copies for $1.00.

Passages Supposed to Teach Consciousness after Death, by W. H. Wilson, which shows that eternal life is conditional and not inherited. 3 cents each, or 25 cents a dozen.

Where Do the Dead Sleep. These are Bible texts given in answer to this question. A 8-page tract 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Hades. A Bible account of this place with proof texts. Ten copies for 5 cents.

Birth Compared to a Sleep. This represents death as a sleep and proof texts are given. Ten copies for 5 cts.

The Wicked Dead and Plain Truths. The two combined. 2 pages ten copies for 10 cents

"Word of Man, vs. Word of God," by H. V. Revel. A contrast between the two. Can be had at this office for 2cts each, or one dozen for 15 cts.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Waiting.

Learn to wait—life's hardest lesson,
Conned, perchance, through blinding tears;
While the heart-throbs sadly echo
To the tread of passing years.

Learn to wait—hope's slow fruition,
Faint and though the way seeming long;
There is joy in each condition,
Hearts, though suffering, may grow strong.

Constant sunshine, however welcome,
Ne'er would ripen fruit or flower;
Giant oaks owe half their greatness
To the scathing tempest's power.

Thus a soul, untouched by sorrow,
Aims not at a higher state,
Joy seeks not a brighter morrow,
Only soul hearts learn to wait.

Human strength and human greatness
Spring not from life's sunny side,
Heroes must be more than drift wood,
Floating on a waveless tide.

The New Man.

Eph. iv. 24; Col. iii. 10-14.

The religion of Jesus Christ is the religion of newness. It is the outcome of a new covenant. It announces a new creation, it produces a new humanity, it colorces a new commandment, it teaches a new song, summons to a new life, infuses a new hope—the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and looks forward to the new heavens and earth as to the final home of God's redeemed.

Paul in speaking of the Christian, speaks of him as a new man, and it is to his writings we turn in order to get the fullest conception of what is meant by this expression. Especially in the Epistles to Colossians and Ephesians do we find its fullest exposition.

There seems to be two senses in which Paul uses the term "New Man," one in which the church is intended, the other in which the individual Christian is meant. In the former sense, Jew and Gentile are as believers, and made one new man. No longer is the distinction of Jew and Gentile recognized in the church, for as believers, both are made one in Christ, (see Eph. iii. 14, 15) "one new man." In the latter sense, the Christian, through the operation of God, has been made a new man, old things with him have passed away and all things have become new. 2 Cor. v. 17. It is of the Christian man we wish to speak.

1. THE NEW MAN.

(1). The meaning of the new man.

By the expression new man, we are reminded by contrast of the old man, which was to be put off with his deeds. The old man has been completely ruined by sin, so much so, that he can not be in any way improved and regulated. On this basis the new creation is a necessity, and the words of Jesus to Nicodemus need to be constantly pressed upon men "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

(2.) The origin of the new man.

The new man according to Paul's conception of him, originated with God, and is the result of his direct creation work. The new man is "created by God in righteousness and holiness of the truth." "We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus. Eph. ii. 10. It is clear then that the new man is not evolved out of the old man, a mere development the result of natural cultivation, but as direct, and complete a creation, as was the old creation, when out of the Chaos of an absolute ruin God said let there be light and there was light. In fact the old creation was a type of the new. See 2 Cor. v. 17, 18. The new man was created by God, according to God, and for God. Jesus Christ the typical new man, was not from the world or of the world, but in it and for it, so the new man of which Christ was the fullest exposition and pattern.

The perfected new man is not formed all at once, as an act of divine power, but there is a marked progress in his development recognized by those who have been created. There are great stages of his life clearly definable, although as in all life, too mysterious to be completely explained. Scripture however speaks of them, and as consequence we may.

The new man has to be "begotten," this term is frequently used in the Word of God to indicate his origin and method of formation. See the following Scriptures: Jno. i. 13; iii. 3, 8; 1 John ii. 29; iii. 9; iv. 7; v. 1, 4, 18. In all these instances the word is "begotten." The Word of God is the incorruptible seed which liveth and abideth forever, and by which we are begotten of God. 1 Pet. i. 23; Jas. i. 18; 1 Jno. ii. 9; v. 18. The Holy Spirit uses the Word of God, and thus life is begun in the soul. This life may at first be a sensibility, a very faint desire, but yet it is life.

After this divine begetting, there comes the fuller quickening of which Paul speaks in Eph. ii. 1-2. "You hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and in sins." In this there is that preparation for birth and independent life, which issues in the liberty and power of life, in birth. That groaning of hope through which both the believer and creation are now passing, preparatory to that birth into life which resurrection itself will be unto us, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ the head of the new man has already been born into resurrection life and all the members shall be. There will not be the completed new man until head and members are united. Christ is the first fruit of them that sleep, and resurrection will be our birth into fuller life, and fuller possibility of service.

The new man must have food in accord with his nature in order to his growth and perfecting. The same mystery meets us here as met us in the communication of his life. The life came down from heaven, and the food came down from heaven also. Earth cannot feed a heavenly life any more than the wilderness could supply food for God's Israel. The true bread is the gift of the Father, and is nothing less than the bread of God, on which he himself has fed and doth feed; and so we are called to have fellowship with him, in all the person of Christ, and in all the value of his atoning work. This bread only needs to be appropriated, and fed upon, in order to sustain, strengthen, and produce a fruitful life. Read John vi.

The perfecting of the new man is that process of his development which is being carried on in him by the constant renewal of his life by the Spirit of God, until perfected in resurrection at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

We have in Jesus Christ the perfected pattern of the new man. When on earth he said "The third day I shall be perfected," and this third day points to his resurrection as the time when he should be the new man perfected. The forty days after the resurrection represents the life in which we know him, and the life in which we shall be perfected. Every one that will be perfect must be as his Master, and as resurrection life was the perfecting of the head, so it will be of the members, and so of the completed new man.

Christ is the pattern of the whole life of God in the new man. In him we see an equally developed and an equally proportionate life. There was life without exaggeration or defect. He was the "tree planted beside the rivers of water, whose leaf never withered, and whatsoever he did it prospered."

The new man's life is regulated by a law in perfect accord with the life to be regulated. A heavenly life can only be governed by a heavenly law. It is the life of God that is to be regulated, and its law is the love of God, producing love to God. The incentive to holiness is not you must or you must not, but I desire and love to be holy, and cannot (as to the new) be or do anything else. Command, fear, threatening never produced holiness. The new man cannot sin, because he is begotten of God. 1 John iii. 9.

The service of the new man in the scheme of redemption.

The present redemption, or the redemption of the present time centres in the election, but the largest work of redemption is to be accomplished after the election has been gathered, in fact, it will be accomplished by the election now being gathered out. The election is for the world's redemption. Christ came into the world to reveal God, make atonement, and bring men to God, and the same purposes are to be secured in the believer. "As thou hast sent me even so have I also sent them. During the present time the only way man's eyes are opened are as seen by God, and a deepened conviction that only God as revealed in Christ can meet those needs.

We shall have a fuller spiritual harmony with God, and a purer spiritual adjustment, by which we shall not only know and respond, but be able to do all he requires. We shall not learn then as we do now, by processes of discipline and difficulty, but by a sensitiveness born of a fuller life, and harmony with the will of God. The deep things of God, and the coming things of God, will be made known by the Holy Spirit, and it is impossible to say how much God can teach and accomplish through us under these changed conditions.

There will be a proper adjustment of motives in service. In how many ways now the subtle flesh works in taking glory to itself for what only God can do. How many times we seem to be doing things for God and yet when we begin to analyze, we find other motives at work in us. The new man can only glorify God, and we shall only have the new man then. Success in work will no longer be before us as a motive or yet the conversion of souls, but his glory alone in bringing about that grand restitution spoken of by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.

Think of the enlarged sphere of service of the new man. How many Christians are laboring now for the conversion of the whole world, instead of for the gathering out of the whole world the people for his name. In the ages to come, however, the sphere of the service will be the whole world, and the object will be for the conversion of the whole world. What an enlarged meaning will the Missionary Commission have in those days. In the call to evangelistic effort at the present time, do we not see the world opening out and preparing for the work of the future? The world is preparing for the laborers, and God is preparing the laborers for the world in the present gathering out of the elect. As we think of these things, we ask who is sufficient? The answer is GOD. The encouragements of the new man are great, as we remember several things. 1st, The larger outpouring of the Spirit promised by God for the accomplishment of his work. 2nd, in the advantages of all previous work, and in the adaption and use of all modern invention, so far as it can be used in that condition of immortal life. God's purpose may well encourage, for he has declared the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord. God's power may well encourage, for he can do it. God's presence is an encouragement, "Lo, I am with you alway even to the end of the age. How such thoughts should enlarge our conception of the plan of God, and invest the present with an importance we otherwise should never dream of. What we do in the future is largely determined by what we do now. What are you doing now? How are you using the present? With a view to the work of the future, or as if this were all? God is giving you a grand opportunity of being associated with and prepared for the greatest work of God, a work which an angel might well desire to do.

[Selected by T. E. Adams.]

Peter in Jerusalem, and Paul in Philippi, Reconciled.

Thousands ask Peter, What shall we do? The jailor asks Paul, What shall I do? to be saved, if the reader please. Peter says, Reform and be baptized, every one of you, etc. Paul answers, Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, with thy family? How is this, Paul and Peter? Why do you not preach the same gospel, or I answer the same question in the same or similar terms? Paul, do you preach another gospel to the Gentiles, than that Peter preached to the Jews? What sayest thou, Paul? Paul replies —"Strike, but hear me. Had I been in Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost, I would have spoken as Peter did. Peter spoke to believing and penitent Jews; I spoke to an ignorant Roman jailor. I arrested his attention after the earthquake, by simply announcing that there was salvation for him and all his family through belief in Jesus." But why did you not mention repentance, baptism, and the Holy Spirit? "Who told you I did not?" Luke says nothing about it; and I concluded you said nothing about them. Luke was a faithful historian, was he not? "Yes, very faithful: and why do you not faithfully hearken to his account? Does he not immediately subjoin, that as soon as I got the jailor's ear, I spoke the Word of the Lord to him, and to all that were in his house? Why, you reason like a Paidobaptist. You think, do you, that the jailor's children were saved by his faith? I spoke the whole gospel, or word of the Lord, to the jailor and to his family. In speaking the Word of the Lord, I mentioned repentance, baptism, remission, the Holy Spirit, the resurrection, judgment, and eternal life; else why should I have baptized him and all of his house; and why should he have rejoiced afterwards with all his family?" Paul, I beg your pardon. I will not now interrogate Peter, for I know how he will answer me: he would say—Had I been in Philippi, I would have spoken to an ignorant pagan as Paul did, to show that salvation flowed through faith in Jesus; and when he believed this and repented, I would then have said, Be baptized for the remission of your sins." "And here I would ask the whole thinking community, one by one, whether, if the whole race of men had been assembled on Pentecost, or in Solomon's portico, and had asked Peter the same question, which the convicted proposed, would he, or would he not, have given them the same answer? Would he not have told the whole race to reform, and be immersed for the remission of their sins? or, to reform and be converted, that their sins might be blotted out?—to arise, and be immersed, and wash away their sins? If he would not, let them give a reason; and if they say he would, let them assign a reason why they do not go, and do likewise."—A. Campbell, in Christianity Restored, pp. 256 and 218.

The Living Way.

Under the teachings of Christ we have the assurance of life in almost every form of expression and doctrine. Indeed life seems to be the emblem used by all who have come into communion with the gospel of Christ.

If we speak of our approach toward God, the assurance is, that it is by a new and a living way. Those who hunger and thirst after righteousness are blessed with the living bread, and the living water. When doubts cloud the sky and darkness obscures the way, it is then that we feel the preciousness of the lively hope. The great offering which we are to make to God places our bodies upon the altar as a "living sacrifice holy and acceptable unto God."

The message which brought to us the blessed news of redemption is declared to be the "Word of God which liveth and abideth forever." The saints are compared to a magnificent temple shining in the brightness of God's own light. In this temple there are lively stones most precious.

Instead of being bound by the legal ceremonies of Moses we are to be led by "the law of the spirit of life." These foretastes are to us assurances of that eternal life which is promised to all who obey the lively oracles.

When the truth has quickened our hearts we are to be buried in the likeness of Christ's death, and beyond this there is a rising up into the newness of life.

Indeed the whole outline of inspired truth comes to us as a vitalizing power. The very words, spoken by our Lord, are declared to be "spirit" and "life;" they will impart a living faith, renew the heart, place us in the living temple and make us heirs of eternal life which shall be given when death is swallowed up in victory, and when we shall be led to living fountains of water.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Straining After Popularity.

The lack of piety shows itself in our day, in straining after popularity. One is truly popular by the force of his talents, and the fervor of his piety; another, because he seeks it as a main end. Between these there is a wide difference. One is simple and solemn; the other is magniloquent and affected. The one impresses by his thoughts; the other by his manner and words. The one attracts by the solemnity and power with which he presents and applies divine truth; the other, by his newspaper notices, his quaint subjects and texts, his odd illustrations. The one wins converts to Christ; the other, admirers of himself. The one preaches boldly the doctrines of the cross; the other withholds or modifies them lest they should offend, and blunts every arrow lest it should penetrate, ennobled only of the reputation of a popular preacher!

How many and sad are the lessons taught us by the history of the church, as to the great evils arising from an unconverted ministry! How sadly the Jewish church suffered from false prophets! It was an unconverted apostle that betrayed the Lord of glory! For how many ages were the boasted successors of the apostles the vilest of men! And how, even now, in Germany, lowest infidelity is decked in the robes of the ministry; and in England, the merest worldlings, because second or subsequent sons of the gentry, are promoted to church benefices; and how in communions regarded as evangelical, an unsanctified ministry are prostituting the order and ordinances of God's house to the purposes of superstition, and to the supplanting of a spiritual by a formal and ritual religion.

Piety, then, is the first great, essential element of a true minister of the gospel. Without this, a preacher is but sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. He is a minister only in the technical sense of the word.—Dr. Plummer.

One God there is: he rules above, below,
All forces move to do his perfect will.

Those who have little are always ready to strike an average with those who have much.

When a man has not one good reason for doing a thing, he has an excellent reason for not doing it.

If our religion is not true, we are bound to change it; if it is true we are bound to propagate it.—Archbishop Whately.

Give me a trust that makes its growth in deeds;
I ask not faith in creeds for chance remote,
But energy divine for work today.

Real faith is as satisfied, and rests as firmly on the abiding promises of Jehovah, as if it had all the blessings of grace and glory in hand.

"It is so sweet to trust thy Word alone:
I do not ask to see
The unveiling of thy purpose, or the shining
Of future light on mysteries entwining:
Thy promise-roll is all my own,—
Thy Word is enough for me.

A young man said to his father some little while ago, "Father, I am prospering in business wonderfully! If I get on at this rate what will it come to?" "Come to the grave," said his father.

Ah, deeply the minstrel has felt all he sings,
Every passion he paints his own bosom has known;
No note of wild music he sweeps from the strings,
But first his own feelings have echoed the tone.

The Rabbi said to the Nazarite who was not to drink wine or strong drink, "Oh, Nazarite, go about, go about; and do not pass through a vineyard." So, child of God, it will be well for you to go about, and not enter into temptation.

The Restitution.

EDITORIAL STAFF
Directors of the C. P. Association.

M. JOBLIN, Corresponding Editor.

PLYMOUTH, IND. NOVEMBER 24, 1897.

AT the Stockholders' Meeting held last Saturday (full report of which will be given next week) the following Board was selected, W. B. Thompson, Wm. Railsback, J. H. Willey, D. T. Halstead and A. R. Underwood. THE RESTITUTION will be issued the same as last year, and with like Editorial service, (D. V.).

"REJECT foolish and uninstructive questions, knowing that they produce contentions." 2 Tim. ii. 23.

IF the sun be eclipsed one day it attracts more attention than if it shone a whole year, so if the believer commits one sin, it will cause you many sorrows, and the world many triumphs.

IT rests with God to exalt both men and nations when his purpose requires it,—or to overwhelm them with disaster and destruction, where they fail to realize the objects for which he gave them existence.

THE original idea of a parable is that of comparing together or illustrating one thing by another. The parabolic method of teaching is very ancient—and has frequently a fascinating beauty about it which fixes attention and compels thought, and hence it has always been popular.

THE Conference held last week at this place was a very enjoyable meeting. The programme as published was carried out with slight variation, and we feel that a step forward in the work of spreading the gospel light has been taken. We hope to have the Secretary's report for next week, and shall also give the various papers that were read at the meeting.

How will the wicked perish? Answer, "he shall perish for ever, like his own ordure; they which have seen him shall say, where is he? He shall fly away as a dream and shall not be found; Yea, he shall be chased away as a vision of the night. The eye which saw him shall see him no more; neither shall his place any more behold him." Not much universalism in this passage,—and although it be said by Eliphaz, it is in harmony with numerous passages, and therefore the truth and not applicable to Job.

ERRATA.—In article, "Where is Heaven" in RESTITUTION for Nov. 17, the words in brackets [more truth than all the rest], should have followed the paragraph by Rabbi Saufield instead of that by C. C. Galloway, the Theosophist.

In editorial column, second paragraph, instead of "renouncing himself," read reproducing himself.

In article, "still another," 12th line from beginning, for "commanded by his quiet, consistent walk," read "commended," etc.

AMONG the friends from a distance who attended the meetings at Plymouth, were Bro. D. T. Halstead and wife of Andover, S. D., T. G. Bartlett of St. Paul, Neb., S. W. Woodward and wife, Dutton, Mich., F. L. Austin, Mrs. M. E. Thompson, Misses Benjamin, Hemphill and Molan of Rensselaer, J. H. Willey, Monon, Ind., J. F. Wagoner, Rochester, J. L. Wince and wife, Pierceton, G. M. Alexander, Valparaiso, besides others from different points. Their company was very pleasant, and we ask each one to come again.

WE are asked, frequently, where and by whom "Christian Science was originated and what its tenets?" A contemporary Journal says, It originated with the Rev. Mary Baker, G. Eddie of Boston, Mass., who organized the first association with 26 members. In 1866 the membership was 8,724. The destinctive features of this body are, "That they believe all consciousness is God,—that the spirit of man is a component part of God,—that the evil is of the flesh only,—that the soul is not evil and not mortal, that evil is simply the absence of good, and that the Divine power is able to bring all into harmony with itself—that sickness is a belief, a fear made manifest in the body in different forms,—if you rule out the sense of disease, you rule out disease itself. All drugs are therefore discarded.

THE characteristics of the kingdom of God for which we pray, will be "righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Spirit," and those who wish to "hunger no more, neither thirst any more" must manifest righteousness during probation, and then they will receive life forevermore in that kingdom when it is established on earth; so that life is worth living to the children of God who manifest a character like their Master's,—who in weal or woe strive to do his commandments, and thus show their love to him. When he returns he will make them partakers of divine nature, in which condition all tears shall have been wiped away, and to them there will be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain." Rev. xxi. 4. Blessed, happy, and glorious will it be to those who have seized the opportunity and accepted the invitation of Christ sent through his servant John while a prisoner in Patmos. "I am the root and the offspring of David, and the Bright and Morning Star. And the Spirit and the Bride say, Come, and let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst, come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." Rev. xxii. 17

IF the mission of Jesus be to destroy the devil, (Heb. ii. 14) and "the works of the devil," (1 John iii. 8), how can the existence of sinners and of sin be never ending?

If it be recorded that "The Lord preserveth all them that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy," (Psa. cxlv. 20), and that the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; into smoke shall they consume away." (Psa. xxxvii. 20), what right have any teachers to say that both the wicked and the righteous will live for ever?

THERE lies between this corrupt state of things and the perfection of the kingdom of God, an ordeal which will prevent the entrance of anything that defileth,—a fire that will try every man's work, and thin out the ranks of those who can only say, "Lord, Lord." Wrongful suffering will then be avenged, secret faithfulness openly acknowledged, unappreciated worth recognized and evil doing punished and held up to execration. This is part of the good news concerning Jesus Christ.

SAID Jesus:—"Seek and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." But what does he bid us seek? Hear him again,—"Seek first the kingdom of God, and his (God's) righteousness." Why? Because the good news concerning that kingdom "is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." It is the gospel that Paul declared concerning Jesus Christ, who was the Seed of David according to the flesh, but the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead. Yes: he is the true Heir to David's throne and kingdom, and God will in due time enthrone him on Zion's hill, God's holy mountain, because he became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. May reader and writer help to crown him Lord of all.

Lack of Knowledge.

Jehovah, said, Hosea iv. 6, "My people are destroyed (cut off) for lack of knowledge; because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee, and thou shalt be no priest to me: seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children." Parallel passages in the New Testament prove that this is a universal principle—in every age people are destroyed for lack of knowledge. DESTROYED! Says Jesus in John xvii. 3, "And this is Eternal Life, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." If they do not know the living and true God, and Jesus the Anointed, men will not have eternal life—destruction awaits them. The only alternative is the wages of sin,—death. The new man is renewal in knowledge. Col. iii. 10. Acknowledgement of the Truth is essential, 2 Tim. ii. 25. We are told in 2 Thess. i. 8, that vengeance will overtake those who know not God. There is no salvation without the knowledge of it, Luke i. 77. It is by truth God sanctifies,—how can one be sanctified by truth that he is ignorant of? John xvii. 17. It is evident from these testimonies that flesh and blood, in the shape of men and women is not what God delights in, be they ever so handsome, but characters developed in those organisms in harmony with his own; so that he can make princes of them in all the earth to execute his eternal purpose. These characters can only be developed on the principle of faith in, and obedience to, the revealed will of God. Sect's are purblind in obeying the truth: they must know it, then believe it, then obedience follows.

Second Coming of Christ.

Mr. Benjamin Douglas, a Hebrew scholar, of Santa Barbara, California, in the introduction to his translation of the "Minor Prophets," says he "united with the Bleecker Street Presbyterian Church in New York City, in March, 1831, and, horrible to relate, never heard a sermon or lecture on the Second Advent of the Lord Jesus Christ, or any reference to the subject for fifteen years thereafter."

We do not see that that is so very horrible from a Presbyterian point of view, and that seems to be what Mr. Douglas was, or else why did he join that Church? We think it consistent with their faith to omit all reference to

THE SECOND ADVENT

of the Lord Jesus. They have no use in their Church no use for his coming here again. Their system requires him to remain where he is, and receive them to his presence, where he can be glorified in them, and admired of them, having redeemed them by his blood, and made them kings and priests to reign for ever in heaven.—Under these circumstances why should they want him to come to earth? Whatever his mission to earth may be it would not concern them, except to deprive them of his presence while he was gone. Mr. Douglas may have since learned that the Coming of Christ again is

THE CHRISTIAN'S BLESSED HOPE

(Titus ii. 13,) and left that popular body; if so, he would, in company with all of like precious faith, think with sadness of heart of the myriads who cherish a hope which the Second Coming of Christ forms no part of. Brothers and sisters, this is a sign we can all understand. The departure of the faith has come. We know of a most estimable lady in this city who had to leave the Presbyterian Church because she persisted in teaching the truth concerning

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST

in the Sunday School. And one year ago we had the pleasure of baptizing a brother who was obliged to leave that Church for the same reason. For about seven years he gave little heed to the truth of God and was about disgusted with the whole religious business; till his steps were directed to the Church of the Blessed Hope, where he found a band who believed the Book of God on that subject and all others, and rejoiced in hope of the promises made unto the Fathers. How could they maintain any other attitude when they know by the Spirit in Heb. ix. 28 that he will appear the second time unto salvation, to

THOSE WHO LOOK FOR HIM.

Let us hope on, dear ones,—the morn without clouds will soon dawn. The King in his beauty will soon appear; and it should be the chief business of this life to so live as to meet his approving smile. We are aware that baptism symbolically proclaims our death to sin,—but indeed we have to die to sin daily. We are aware, too, that we put on the Lord Jesus in the same hallowed ordinance,—but we have to put him on every day afterward. We do not mean that we have also to put him off every day in order to put him on every day, but to imbibe more of his spirit, follow his footsteps more closely, obey his precepts more implicitly, and thus grow up into him our living Head in all things.

Beloved, we have oceans of truth that others are blind to: and our responsibilities are great. Of those to whom much is given, much will be required. It behooves each of us to be a living letter from God to our fellow men. Jesus is coming with his reward SOON.

The Congress of Baptists.

The fifteenth Annual Session of the Congress of Baptists convened at Immanuel Baptist Church, Chicago on the 16th inst. Many of the ablest ministers and theologians of the Baptist Church took part in the discussions. And we could hardly believe our own eyes when we read that the subject discussed in the afternoon, was, "Are the teachings of the Apostle's Equal Authority with those of Christ?" Is it possible that they are not ashamed to let it be known that they have never yet decided that question? Did not Christ commission them to preach, and command them what to preach and how to make disciples? Did he not command them to teach their converts all he had commanded them? Were not the miraculous gifts conferred upon them proof that they EXECUTED HIS COMMANDS?

Was not this positive evidence that they did not preach themselves, but Christ Jesus? If so, what need was there for a congress to decide as to the authority of their teachings in comparison with those of Christ? We seriously think that the question, "Are the teachings of Christ authority for us in matters relating to Salvation?" Would have been far more appropriate for this August Body, because the subject discussed in the evening was: "Is Baptism a pre-requisite to the Lord's Supper?" Do they not know that the Lord's table is spread for the LORD'S CHILDREN?

Do they not know that men and women in their sins are not the Lord's children, not having observed the ordinance in which their sins are remitted? Acts ii. 38. And in which they put on Christ? Gal. iii. 27. Oh, if they had wanted to know God's truth in the premises they might have known by simple faith in these two Scriptures, and saved all their expense and trouble in going to Chicago to learn how their greatest men settle it. Can it be possible that they think the Lord has left this vital subject at such loose ends that only the most learned can divine the truth? Question. Will it be a divine or human settlement when they get through with their papers and sermons? If human, it will not stay settled, if it is an important question now, has it not always been important? Have they hitherto gone it blind on this subject? If so, what will become of their flocks? Let the Lord's Word answer in Matt. xv. 14 and Luke vi. 39.

They do not believe that baptism is in order to remission of sins. That is the seat of their trouble—unbelief of this precious item of the gospel of Christ, and the consequence is, they flounder and flounder as if we had no revelation on the subject, but we have. Let us say to them kindly that as they will not baptize a person till that person confesses that his sins are already forgiven, such an immersed person is not baptized into Christ, and has no right to sit at the Lord's table.

Is it not painful to look upon a vast congregation of men and women who do not know the first principles of the gospel of the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and who profess to have remission of sin without baptism? Say it is the first Sunday of the month, and bread and wine are placed upon a table. To his disciples,—those who have entered his fold he says, "Take, eat, this is my body, which is broken for you, this do in remembrance of me."....and, "This cup is the New Testament in my blood; this do ye as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me: for as oft as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come"—till he come. Does this Great Body of people believe he is coming? Do they want him to come? Do they not expect, rather, to go to him?

BY THE DOOR,—

Is not the whole transaction a farce under this condition? Not intentional, of course,—but all the same, a farce.

In conclusion, then, it makes no difference to such, whether they are baptized at all or not; whether they partake of the bread and wine or not. They are not eligible to either, because aliens from the commonwealth of Israel,—strangers to the covenants of promise, that make up the gospel of God.

We do not expect this to reach that class; but the time is rolling on when every man's work will be tried, and Jesus says, "Every plant which my Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." Matt. xv. 13. And while life and strength lasts we want to stir up the pure minds of the brethren and sisters by way of remembrance, that it takes the gospel of God, from the heart believed, and obeyed, to save children of a mortal race.

Parables of Salomoon. Chapter 23.

1. If thou takest thy seat at the table of a man of influence to sup, apprehend well the things placed beside thee,

2. And put thy hand upon them, knowing that it behooveth thee to prepare such things thyself, and if thou be insatiate,

3. Do not long for his delicacies: For these things have to do with life's lie.

4. If needy, do not increase thyself by a rich man, but be self-contained in thine own reflective-thought.

5. If thou set thine eye to regard him, he will nowhere appear, and though he stands before thee he retireth into his house; for wings have been furnished him like an eagle's.

6. Do not sup with a man with an evil eye nor inordinately desire his food.

7. For in the way one swalloweth a hair even so he eateth and drinketh: Nor do thou conduct him in unto thyself and eat thy morsel with him.

8. For he will vomit out it and pollute thy good words.

9. Say nothing in the ear of a heedless person lest perchance he may mock at thy words of understanding.

10. Change not age-lasting (everlasting?) boundaries, and enter not into a possession of orphans.

11. For he who redeemeth them is a controling Lord, and he will be the judge at their trial with thee.

12. Give thy heart to chastening and make thine ears ready for words of apprehension.

13. Do not refrain from chastening a child, because if thou shalt smite him with a sceptre of rule he will not die.

14. For thou shouldst smite him with a sceptre of rule and deliver his soul from death.

15. O son of thy heart, become wise, then will cause my heart also to rejoice.

16. And thy lips will discourse words according to my lips, if they be upright.

17. May thy heart not be envious of obdurate-sinners, but be thou all the day long in fear of the Lord.

18. For if thou watch to keep them posterity will be thine and thy hope will not stand away from thee.

19. Hear, O son, and become wise, and restore to uprightness the reflective-thoughts of thy heart.

20. Do not be a wine-bibber, nor contribute to communal feasts of flesh and purchases in the market-place.

21. For every drunkard and every one who spieth for harlots will become a beggar and clothe himself in rags, and every sleepy-head will go ragged.

22. Hear the father who begot thee, O son, and despise not thy mother because she hath grown old.

23rd verse omitted in the text.

24. A justified father fostereth well, and his soul rejoiceth in a wise son.

25. Let thy father and mother rejoice in thee and the one who bore thee let her be glad.

26. My-son thou have given me thy heart, O son, and may thine eyes have watched to keep my ways.

27. For a pierced jar is an alien house, and an alien well is a narrow one.

28. Moreover this (house) will perish ruinously and every evader of law well have been lavishly destroyed.

29. Who hath woes; whose is tumult; who hath law suits; Whose are disgusting experiences and low-lodging-houses? Whose are bruises without cause; whose are blackened eyes?

30. Are they not the lot of those who spend their time with wine? Whose tracks are to the places where drinking-feasts occur?

31. Do not become drunken with wine, but associate with justified men, and associate with peripatetics (philosophers); For if thou givest thine eyes unto the mixing-bowls and drinking-cups, later thou wilt walk (a play on "peripatetic") more naked than a pestle;

32. And thy last experience will stretch thee out as though smitten by a serpent, and as though its venom was being sent through by a horned-serpent.

33. Then will thy mouth talk crooked things when thine eyes shall see an alien land;

34. And thou wilt lie down as it were in the heart of a sea and like a pilot even in a vast billowy sea;

35. And thou wilt say, They smite me and I have no pain, and they have made sport of me and I did not know it: When will it be morning that I may go and seek those with whom I may join myself.

COMMENT.

This 23d chapter abounds in precept and counsel for young and old in the ordinary practical affairs of everyday life. It is manifestly not being offered and ministered to the heedless and obdurate sinner; but to "the child of God." The exhortation frequently repeated throughout the chapter is "O son," meaning a son of God in promise under the covenant, and as we now understand, a Christian and follower of Christ the first-born and first-perfected Son. In these days of Sociology as a science, not to say a fad, we do well to go to such passages as these in the oracular-word for basic principles and rules for the conduct of life, both private and public. Where shall we look for the lines of demarkation in true social relations better than here, lines that demark "the first principles as they are in Christ" as Paul puts it? Lines for the individual, the state, the Church, the world, they are all here.

From the 29th to the 35th verse both inclusive, the incipient drunkard and glutton may see beforehand as in a mirror the end and outcome of indulgence in these inordinate desires that await him. Then if he live in Chicago let him visit the Bridewell and see the fulfilment of this prophecy and the realization of the picture here so vividly drawn.

OUR LOVE FEAST.

Dear Restitution:

I am so glad that I can speak of the loving kindness of our heavenly Father in the love feast, in giving his Son to die that he might be resurrected from the dead to bring life and immortality to light through the Christ as gospel of his Son Jesus, the first I cannot praise him aright. Lord, him for opening my eyes to see the truth as it is in Jesus that we have life only in Christ by believing in him and obedience to all of his commandments. My feet are fixed on the eternal truths in his word and the precious promises he has given to those that love him. It is all of rich, free, unmerited grace but I am what I am. How great and precious has been his love to one so unworthy. I want to sit at the feet of Jesus and be ever learning of him, watching and waiting for his coming from heaven to change this mortality to immortality, then we shall be ever with the Lord. No more sorrow or sighing or tears, where all will be harmony and love, we can see the budding fig-tree, the time of his coming cannot be very far off. Pray for me in my old age, past 75, 25 years in the faith of the soon coming of the dear Lord from heaven. May I be kept in the faith unspotted from the world is my prayer.

Yours in the faith of the coming kingdom.

H. S. DRESSER.

Dear Restitution:

I renew my subscription for another year by sending an Express money order for one dollar and fifty cents. I believe the time is not far distant when the kingdom of this world will become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ. I want to be one of the faithful ones who will be found watching. I am so thankful for the light that has shone in my pathway. May God bless and keep all the dear brothers and sisters who name his name, and may we all do his commandments that we may have a right to the tree of life and enter in through the gates into the city.

Yours in hope of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

MRS. J. WRIGHT.

Dear Restitution:

I feel that we should all be very prompt in well-doing. When I see the prophetic signs being fulfilled of which we are cited to the last days and the near coming of our Lord Jesus, our blessed Savior, who has promised us eternal life through obedience of his glorious gospel. I hope and pray that we all may be found ready and waiting with our lamps burning, and he will say to us well done, thou good and faithful servants, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord. Let us watch and pray lest we fall into temptation for the Father hath said, Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Dear brothers and sisters in Christ Jesus. If I could greet you all with a brotherly kiss, and a parting tear, then I could partly show the love which I have for you. My prayer is when he comes to gather his elect that we all may have a grand entrance into his glorious kingdom. I ask an interest in your prayers. I pray daily for you all. Amen.

MARRIED.

MOORE—WATKINS.—At the residence of the Bride's Sister, Mrs. Hugh W. Barnhill, on the Eve. of Nov. 23rd, 1897, Miss Cora Watkins of Plymouth, and Mr. John H. Moore of Elkhart were united in marriage by Elder B. W. Woodward, of Mich. Several young people, all members of the Church of God, were present, Sister Cora is the daughter of our beloved but deceased brother James Watkins of Raisin, Mich. Mr. and Mrs. Moore will go immediately to their home in Elkhart, where we pray God's blessings will attend them.

Poetry.

The Silent Life.

We lead two lives, the outward-seeming fair
And dull of smiles, that on the surface lie,
The other spent in many a silent prayer,
With thoughts and feelings hidden from the eye.

The secret, weary hours of mental pain,
The broken yearnings for the dear ones gone,
The wishes half-defined, yet resisted again,
Make up the secret life we lead alone.

And happy visions we may never show,
And all is silent. Ev'n with sweet rest-more
And they will look like sunset's rosy glow,
Not [illegible] golden glare.

[illegible] We still seek its power
[illegible] from our Comforter to [illegible]
[illegible] Him wander where [illegible] will.

[illegible] to the one those we love most close,
Though day by day we strive to draw them close;
Our sacred chamber—none may enter here.
Save that one Eye that never seeks repose.

And if beneath that Eye we do not quail,
Though all the world may turn from it aside,
We own a secret power that shall prevail
When every motive of our life is tried.

R. A. Torrey Vs. the Bible, on Hell.

The Chicago Tribune says:—"Hell," was the theme of the Rev. R. A. Torrey at the Chicago Avenue Church last evening, the text being found in the sermon on the mount, Matt. v., 29. He said in part: Common sense says there must come sooner or later when men become so confirmed in this in ernsing moral slavery, degradation, and vileness that repentance becomes practically impossible. What then is left? Only eternal hell.

"Hell is a place of physical anguish. Hell is a place of remorse of conscience. Hell is a place of unsatisfied and consuming desires. Hell is a place of ever increasing moral degradation. Hell is a place of shame. Hell is a place of vile associations. Finally, hell is a place without hope. One can endure great agony and shame if in the distance there shines some star of hope. "For ever and ever" is the constant, mourning wail of the restless sea of fire.

"How may we escape hell? There is but one way in which we can escape hell. That is by the personal acceptance of Jesus Christ as our Savior and Lord and the open confession of him before the world."

The text which Mr. Torrey based the above piece of heathen fiction upon is found in Matt. v. 29. To base such teaching upon this passage is to grossly deceive those who listen to, and trust his teaching. This I will proceed to show. The word hell in the above passage is translated from the Greek word Gehenna.

I will quote a few authorities as to what Gehenna is, so the readers will see that Mr. Torrey's use of the word in the above extract, is completely without foundation, and as false as any lie the devil ever uttered.

Says the Emphatic Diaglott: "Gehenna, the Greek word translated hell in the common version, occurs twelve times. It is the Grecian mode of spelling the Hebrew words which are translated 'the Valley of Hinnom.' This land was also called Tophet, a detestation, an abomination. Into this place were cast all kinds of filth, with the carcasses of beasts and the unburied bodies of criminals who had been executed. Continual fires were kept to consume these. Sennacherib's army of 185,000 men were slain here in one night. Here children were burnt to death in sacrifice to Moloch. Gehenna, then, as occurring in the New Testament, symbolizes death and utter destruction, but in no place symbolizes a place of eternal torment."

Parkhurst Greek Lexicon. "Our Lord seemd to allude to the worms which preyed on the dead carcasses that were cast into the Valley of Hinnom (Gehenna), and to the perpetual fire kept up to consume them, a place of abominable filthiness and pollution."

Calmet's Bible Dictionary says: "Gehenna, or Gehennom, or Valley of Hennom, or Valley of the Son of Hennom (See Josh. xv. 8; 2 Kings xxiii. 10), a valley adjacent to Jerusalem, through which the southern limits of the tribe of Benjamin passed."

Says Wiley Jones: Gehenna is the Greek form of what the Hebrews formerly called Ge Hinnem—the Valley of Hinnom; and its location is shown in Josh. xv. 8; 2 Kings xxiii. 10. In the Sep. of Josh. xviii. 16, it is called Gaienna. That valley on the West and South of Jerusalem, is called to this day by the native Arabs Wady Gehenam."

Webster says Gehenna is "The Valley of Hinnom near Jerusalem, where some of the Israelites sacrificed their children to Moloch, and which, on this account, was afterward regarded as a place of abomination, and made a receptical of all the refuse of the city, perpetual fires (the hell fire our Lord referred to) being kept up in order to prevent pestilential effluvia."

Says Roberts, an eminent Biblical Scholar: "The word (Gehenna) ought not to be translated at all. It is a proper name, and like all other proper names, should have been transferred to the English Version without alteration beyond the process known as anglicisation. It is a Greek compound signifying the Valley of the Son of Hinnom. In the days of Jesus, it was the highest mark of ignoring that the council of the Jews could inflict, to order a man to be buried in Gehenna."

Gehenna fire never preserved in torment, but always consumed the object upon which it preyed. Yet this is the place just outside the walls of Jerusalem. Mr. Torrey has selected by his use of Matt. v. 29, for the endless torment of immortal souls. The allegations of Mr. Torrey's stripe, tell us that immortal souls do not have body and parts, weight or extension, but are immaterial. Our Lord speaks of casting the whole body and bodily parts into Gehenna, and whatever was cast in was destroyed, and not preserved for torture. Our Lord also speaks of destroying both body and soul in Gehenna. Mr. Torrey says the soul is indestructible, but God's Word always speaks of it as being capable of destruction. The word soul occurs some 200 times in the Scriptures and the word immortal is never attached to it, but it does say: "The blessed and holy Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, WHO ONLY HATH IMMORTALITY." 1 Tim. vi. 15, 16. In spite of this Scripture this man Torrey says every body has it, whether good or bad, and as the bad cannot die, they must eternally burn and never consume.

The word soul is not peculiar to man. The Scriptures speak of animals, fish and trees having soul.

1. TREES.—"And shall consume the glory of his forest, and of his fruitful field, both SOUL and BODY." Isa. x. 18, 19.

2. FISH.—"Every LIVING SOUL died in the sea." Rev. xvi. 3.

3. ANIMALS.—"Levy a tribute unto the Lord of the men of war which went out to battle; ONE SOUL of five hundred, of the PERSONS, and of the BEEVES, and of the ASSES, and of the SHEEP." Numb. xxxi. 28.

Mr. Torrey says: "hell is a place of physical anguish." It is a puzzle to me how the soul can suffer physical anguish in hell fire, if it is immortal, does not possess body and parts, surface, extension or weight as his brother hell fire torment preacher affirm. How does the "physical" come in, Mr. Torrey?

There can be no physical suffering when physical consciousness ceases. The Scriptures are very explicit in affirming that consciousness ceases immediately at death.

1. "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the Son of man in whom there is no help, his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that VERY DAY his THOUGHTS perish." Psa. cxlvi. 3, 4. When man's "thoughts perish," consciousness is gone, all must admit, and God's Word affirms that takes place on "the very day," "his breath goeth forth."

Again. "In death there is no REMEMBRANCE of thee." Psa. vi. 5.

Once more, "The dead know NOT ANY THING." Eccl. ix. 5. If "the dead know not anything," pray where does Mr. Torrey's conscious suffering in hell fire come in?

ETERNAL LIFE A MATTER OF PROMISE.

"He hath promised us even eternal life." John ii. 25.

"The promise of life which is in Jesus." 2 Tim. i. 1.

"In hope of eternal life which God that cannot lie promised." Titus i. 2.

"Shall of the spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. vi. 8.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him, should not perish, but have everlasting life." John iii. 16.

The last text has probably been preached from by Mr. Torrey and other hell fire preachers, oftener than any other, and yet the plain teaching visible on its face is ignored by these "Torrey" men. The word "perish," is the opposite of "everlasting life." The word "perish," signifies to cease to be, and the text clearly shows that "everlasting life" is obtained by complying with conditions, which if neglected they will "perish"—not have everlasting life.

"I give unto them eternal life." John x. 28.

"The gift of God is eternal life." Rom. vi. 23.

How can eternal life be a GIFT, if all (good and bad) have it by nature, through Adam, in place of a "gift" through Christ",

My Bible says:

"GOD IS LOVE."

What avail would it be for me to preach from the pulpit, that "God is love," and with the next breath tell my hearers that he has prepared an horrid abyss of unending fire, in which it is his purpose to submit millions of creatures to torture as exquisite as the Divine attributes of his being can make it, which shall never for one moment cease while endless ages roll? Such teaching is devilish, heathenish, and God-dishonoring. Common sense reason, and the glorious light of God's Holy Book revolts at such barbarous heathenism. Such teaching from Mr. Torrey, ("Torrid") is but an echo of the dark ages of ignorance and superstition. Such teaching plays into the hands of the enemy. It breeds and sustains infidelity. Such teaching should be frowned down upon by all godly Christian people, who love God's precious Book, and rejoice that it is not found therein, but is a relic of darkness.

Literature correcting such a revolting doctrine should be freely circulated among the members this Chicago Avenue Church, and the Moody Institute, which is under the superintendency of this hell fire preacher.

An objector may observe, does not the Bible speak of everlasting life, and everlasting punishment? Most surely it does. With regard to the righteous it says, "These shall go away into life eternal," which would be impossible if they already had it independent of Christ. But the wicked shall go away into everlasting punishment that is true also. See 2 Thess. i. 9, and learn what everlasting punishment is; "Shall be punished with EVERLASTING DESTRUCTION." The Bible says: "everlasting destruction." but Mr. Torrey, everlasting torment." Which do you believe?

W. H. WILSON.

The 1260 Days or Years Now In the Past.

In the investigation of this subject, it is absolutely necessary for us to take into account two all-important things i. e.

1. Who does these days or years apply to?

2. When and where were they fulfilled? Now as Revelation has revealed these facts to us in advance and, that history has recorded them after they were done, and that in view of this, that it is high time for us to look after these things enough to see where they belong, and the fitness of the same; for it is both prudent and wise for us to thoroughly understand these things as we pass along, we now turn to Dan. vii. 25, for our text, where it says: "They shall be given into his hands until a time, times, and the dividing of time." Now from this Scripture we will ask four questions as follows:

1st. Who are "they"?

2nd. It says into his hand. Who does this apply to?

3rd. When does this "until" expire?

4th. How long shall be this division of time?

A full and complete answer to these four questions both Scripturally and historically will show us without doubt that the 1260 days or years are now in the past. So we will now answer question No. 1. first.

Who are they? By going back to the fore part of our text we find very plainly that it is the saints, it says "he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times, laws, and they (the saints) shall be given into his hand until a time times, and the dividing of time," and also the 21 v. it says, "I beheld, and the same horn made was with the saints and prevailed against them," now this evidence is clear and plain, and proves beyond doubt that it is the saints.

Now for question No. 2. It says "into his hand."

WHO DOES THIS APPLY TO?

But first let us inquire what is meant by the word "hand?" the word hand in Scripture means power as we learn in Exod. xv. 6, "thy right hand O Lord has become glorious in power, thy right hand, O Lord hath dashed in pieces the enemy." also, Job xl. 14, "Then will I confess unto thee that thine own right hand can save me." So we learn by these Scriptures especially that hand, or right hand, is power and it is just as true in our text. So when we read that they (the saints) were "turned over are given into his hand," we want to understand that they were turned over, or given into his power, rule or authority. Now who does this power, rule or authority represent? We say at once that it is no more, nor no less than the Pope of Rome. Now what evidence have we that this is true? We have several facts.

1st. Because this power has had dominion over the saints of God, and have persecuted, and put them to death as heretics for 1260 days or years as history plainly shows, and that they were still persecuting and putting them to death in the most horrible ways when Napoleon Bonaparte and his army entered Rome and put a stop to it and that this power only ended about one hundred years ago.

2nd. We look back over the history of Roman Catholicism, and what do we find? We find that the pope has had universal power dominion over church and State ever since there was a pope of Rome, and on down to 1798, when his political power was taken away from him by Napoleon Bonaparte taking him prisoner of war and from that time to this he has no more right to put the saints of God to death as heretics, at least they are not being put to death by his orders that we know anything about.

3rd. According to Dan. vii. 21, where it says, "I beheld and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them." Also Rev. xiii. 7, "and it was given unto him to make war with his saints, and to overcome them, and power (or authority) was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations." It is a fact that the pope has filled this bill to the very letter, that he has not only had church and State authority to put the saints of God to death at will wherever he could find them, but that he has also had power (or authority) over all kindreds and tongues and nations, for lo, these 1260 years, for no other power has held such sway like what he has done. Hence, when Scripture and history are united it is an easy thing to find out who this power was, and glad am I that the saints of God do not now live under this persecuting power. And glad am I that their days are past and gone, and that we can proclaim the glorious good news of the coming kingdom of God without restraint or hinderance and unfurl the glad tidings of Jesus' reign with all his saints over the nations of earth to restore and bless.

Question No. 3.

When does this "until" expire? The word until limits the time that this power has over the saints of God to persecute, to put to death, when the time and times and one-half time is up, to which it has direct reference to then its political power or authority or dominion will cease to be as it has already done, and no longer put the saints of God to death as heretics, and this now leads us to notice.

Question No. 4.

How long shall be this division of time?

1st. This time is known in this our day by its being already in the past.

2nd. That it does not now persecute and put the saints of God to death as heretics as it used to do.

3rd. That this power has long since ceased to be.

4th. That a good many of our chronologist, and commentators, do agree that one time is 360 years, that times is two times at least which make 720 years and that one-half time would be one-half of 360 years, which would be 180 years, and now adding this altogether would foot up in round numbers 1260 years so the time that the pope held this universal church and State power or authority was for this 1260 years and during this 1260 is the time when the saints of God were put to death as heretics, whenever they showed up, or opposed his power. Now our text does expressly say that the saints shall be given into his hand or power until this time is up. Now the question arises will he except of them while there? Most certainly he will. Why should he not? When he has given the orders so long in advance what should he done? Can they help it when it is God's decree? They cannot, and by the way this is the only time and place when it is given and as it is only given once it only has to be once fulfilled, so we conclude that God has given the orders to them put there. He will see to it and care for them while there. His care for them while there was just as great as his people as at any other time and possibly a good deal more so and it is just as true in our text. So from the fact that they were in more critical danger and demanded his help and so it comes to pass, the greater the danger, the greater the care for this whole period of time for the life of his saints. Again this 1260 years was as long as the saints of God were to remain there and their coming out before the time is up is the reason why they were persecuted and put to death in so many ways. If they had stayed there as they should have done then they would not have been persecuted and put to death. So their coming out before the time was up was all wrong. But just as soon as the time was up, then the call comes in full force, and we fancy we hear the Revelator say, "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." Rev. xviii. 4.

It is a fact then that some of God's people were there. It is also a fact that they should have all been there, submitted to their rule, then they would not have been put to death. It is also a fact that it is useless, and besides being unreasonable to say, "Come out of her my people" when they were turned over, or given into the hand of this power for 1260 years, but just as soon as this time expires, then the call comes in full force, "Come out of her my people." Never before the time expires. It was punishment and also death to come out before the time, and so it was all along the line. They were punished in every conceivable way, and besides put to death in as many ways. Besides all this the two statements would conflict with each other if they were both in force at one and the same time, and so to make both statements harmonize and not to conflict with each other, only one is to be in force at a time. So while the 1260 years lasted the saints of God were turned over, or were given into his power for that whole time—that they dare not come out from under this power except under fears of punishment or pains of death; but just so soon as this power was taken away from the pope, then they could and ought to have come out rejoicing in the name of the Lord, that there were no more fears of punishment, nor yet pains of death for any and all the saints of God, and go forth proclaiming the glorious good news of the coming kingdom of God, and spread it broad and wide, o'er land and o'er sea, that Jesus with all his faithful servants shall rule in equity.

Again when Napoleon Bonaparte took the pope prisoner of war in 1798, or at least when he took his away away from him so that the pope could not any more enforce his own laws. Then was the time when the 1260 years came to a close, and glad am I that those days are now past and gone, and will never again return, and now if the following figures and dates are correct, we can find when this power arose by setting down the 1798 years and subtracting the 1260 years therefrom which will leave 538 years, which is the time, or thereabouts when this power arose, and upon its arising three other kings gave away to its place, but we are more particularly interested in the time when his political power was taken away from him, and what is further that judgment was passed upon him and his political power, or dominion was taken away from him, and not only this but that this power or dominion was taken away from him, and not this, but that this power was to remain taken away from him unto the end; and so it has been ever since, up to the present time at least. Now this 1260 days or years also spans the entire time of the dark ages, and why was it called dark ages? Because the common people were not to handle the Word of life, much less read and study it through by subjects. So that one of the greatest boons that could have fallen to mortal man was here excluded from them for the major portion of time at least, and in conclusion we say when we come to see and to realize these things to some extent at least we respond at once by saying, glad are we that those days or years have long since passed away before it was our time to live.

Sundry Thoughts.

1. It sometimes occurs that when a man by reflection thinks he has made a discovery he forthwith hastens to a conclusion that will not stand the test of critical analysis.

2. In Rev. xii.—The woman spoken of is clothed with the sun and the moon under her feet, and on her head a crown of twelve stars. What does the sun, moon and stars as symbols indicate?

3. It is said this woman is the church—that is I infer the one body of Christ. Be it so. How could such a woman described by Paul as a "chaste virgin" espoused or engaged to Christ maintain her chastity and yet be found in a condition of pregnancy, in pain to be delivered of a Man Child?

4. If this child is an illegitimate son, born of fornication, would it seem probable that some have mistaken the "Man of Sin" for a saint?

5. Is it not a fact of history that the one body departed from the simplicity of Christ and did have illicit and forbidden intercourse with the kings of the earth, and as the fruit of spiritual lewdness gave birth to a Man Child of Sin?

6. Did not this "Man of Sin" cast out the dragon and his angels from the Roman heaven, and further did not this woman as the result of the Dragon's overthrow become clothed with the Sun of imperial power, another son an illegitimate seed, inheriting the unclean instincts of a dissolute mother rule all nations with the iron rod of oppression?

7. The Dragon—identify him by his description—7 heads and 10 horns.—and his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven and did cast them to the earth? What does this monster with seven heads and ten horns represent? Please examine the description critically.

8. That all this prophecy concerning the woman transpires under the seventh trumpet requires proof, simply saying so, does not make it so.

9. 3½ times—means 3½ literal years—involves such a burden of absurdity, that I cannot conceive how it can be entertained when we consider that nearly 60 generations of people have walked in the light of these visions.

10. A great wonder in heaven and war in heaven—not on the earth remember but in heaven. Where, when and what is the heaven in which this great wonder is seen, and where war prevails and sanguinary battles are fought? It is necessary to examine minutely all these things as we go along.

11. The Woman fled into the wilderness. In a subsequent vision John was taken into the wilderness and saw a woman seated on a scarlet colored beast riding to perdition: is this the same woman that fled into the wilderness to escape the wrath of the seven-headed, ten horned Dragon?

12. The remnant of the woman's seed, who are they? I rather think they are the overcomers. They are pecular for they "keep the commandments of God, and have the faith of Jesus Christ." Most assuredly any people who keep the commandments of God and have the faith, are those who overcome. The Dragon made war upon them—that is persecuted them. But not a word is said about the "earth helping" them. The earth did "help the woman," and did it willingly and courageously. But this poor remnant gets no assistance from the earth only as it may come indirectly. How did the earth help the woman while war was raging in heaven?

13. When the Dragon was cast out of heaven a great voice was heard saying, "Now is come salvation, and the kingdom of our God," etc. In my judgment the echo of that voice is still heard throughout all Christendom. And what is more neither salvation or the kingdom of our God has come yet. There is no Dragon with seven heads and ten horns now in heaven, but there was once. He was cast out, and when it occurred the people (not the remnant of the Woman's Seed for they know better) thought the kingdom of God had come, and ever since that time the Seed of the apostacy believe and preach that the Church is the kingdom. But the remnant of the Woman's Seed who hold on to the faith of Jesus Christ never have, and do not now believe that doctrine. They know now and doubtless did then that the revolution that brought honor and glory and power to the Church while the Lord was absent from the earth was a delusion that portended only worse evils for the faithful in Christ Jesus. The Dragon power was humane compared with what followed.

Permit me to say in conclusion that I do not write to discourage the study of John's Revelation. Nay verily, I could not cherish such a feeling, nor entertain for a moment such a thought.

Baptism.

Dear Bro, Underwood:

Will you give me space to give a few thoughts on baptism? I have a baptism to be baptized with and how am I straightened till it be accomplished, Luke xii. 50. Such baptized into Christ's death will not make earthly ease and comfort their aim but will seek to do good unto all men as they have opportunity, especially to the household of faith. Their self-denial and God-likeness will seek to benefit and lift up the physical man and how much more will it lead to self-sacrifice in order that others may be helped on to the divine life, thus it was that the apostles spent themselves that they might declare the unsearchable riches of Christ. It was for this cause that Paul says, "I now rejoice for you in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake which is the church." Jesus left a measure of suffering for his church as his body to complete or fill up and Paul was zealous to bear as much of it as possible. Glorious ambition to spend his life in bearing the glad tidings of the high calling to those who would receive it; this is the ambition which Jesus both exemplified and commanded saying, "He that would be greatest among you, let him become servant of all." If we thus live a divine life and crucify and ignore the human life we shall be considered a peculiar people, zealous of good works, and we will be so very different from the ideas of the natural man that we must needs remember Je us' words, "Marvel not if the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. The disciple is not above his Lord, if any man will be my disciple, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." Self-denial means much and will never be experienced except as we crucify the human nature with its afflictions and desire. We see then that to be baptized into Jesus' death is not an instantaneous act but a life work. When we first come to God through Jesus we covenant with him that we will take up our cross and follow him through evil and good report whether it brings the favor or frown of our fellows. Jesus tells us it means the loss of the friendship of the world, the gain of the friendship of God; the loss of worldly honor, the gain of heavenly honor: the loss of earthly life and earthly nature, the gain of the Divine nature and the Divine image, a spiritual body like unto his glorious body. He illustrated his teaching on the night he was betrayed, "He took bread and brake, saying, This is my body broken for you; eat ye all of it." The bread symbolized Jesus as the truth, "I am the truth, the heavenly manna." After supper he took the cup of wine, saying, "This is my blood of the New Covenant, shed for many for the remission of sins, drink ye all of it." The wine symbolizes the blood. "And after we have tasted of the true bread and have seen that the Lord is gracious, he says, Here is the cup of my suffering and death, drink ye all of it. You must share this cup of suffering if you would share my glory. Yes says Paul, "If we suffer with him we shall also be glorified together." Rom. viii. 17.

Yours for the truth,
FRED MISHLER.

The Prodigal Son—Who is He?

Will not the facts justify us in applying this to the gospel church? The younger son—God says in Exod. iv. 22, "Israel is my son, even my first-born," and in the 3rd and 4th chapter of Gal. we are assured that the gospel church are all sons of God by adoption; hence the younger son, and heir of God. And soon after this younger son had received the rich inheritance bestowed on the gospel church he gathered up all, and went into a far country; and in the days of Constantine, or soon after had wasted his riotous living, and when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine (of the Word of God) in that land, and he began to be in want. And he joined himself to a citizen of that country, (the Pope of Rome). "And he sent him into the field to feed swine," ("cast not your pearls before swine") Matt. vii. 6, and he fain would have filled his belly with the husks, (false doctrines) "that the swine did eat, and no man gave unto him," (the true bread of life). "And when he came unto himself," (at the reformation by Luther and others,) he said, "I will arise and go to my father, and I will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven and before thee." "But when he was yet a great way off his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran and fell on his neck and kissed him, and said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, (Christ's righteousness,) and put it on him: and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet," (shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace) and kill the fatted calf, and let us eat and be merry, for this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found." At this time the older son was in the field, (the field is the world), and as he came and drew near the house (the old homestead Palestine) he heard the rejoicing, and when he learned the cause, he was as angry as Esau was, when he returned from the field, and learned that his younger brother had got both his birthright and his blessing: for now Israel learns that they as a nation, have also lost both the birthright and the blessing, which was fraudulently obtained at first by Jacob, even the first dominion, which by the father is now irrevocably given to the younger son, having put upon him the best robe.

"And when Israel shall again look upon him who they have pierced, and shall realize what they have done, and what they have lost, they shall mourn most bitterly, every family a part and their wives a part. See Zech. xii. 10-14 "In that day there shall be a great mourning in Jerusalem by the whole house of Israel," the elder son.

Editor Restitution:

Again the Church of God at Niagara Falls, N. Y. sends greetings to all the household of like precious faith and report another addition to the Abrahamic faith. Sister Mrs. Anna C. Cadwalder was baptized in the waters of Niagara River into the all-saving name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, on Sunday 9 a. m. Nov. 7th, 1897. Like the Eunuch of old she went on her way rejoicing. May she be able to walk in the light as he is in the light, she will then have fellowship with all of like precious faith, and by living the life of Chr. it will cleanse her from allsin, and may we all be found so walking and showing we are indeed the light of the world, is the prayer of your Bro. in Christ.

FRED GEISNER.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Notice.

WILL our friends please remember that we do not have the books and tracts at this office that are advertized by Brother Joblin, or Brother Wiley Jones. Do not send to this office for them, but send to their address as given in the advertisement. This will save both trouble and delay. PLEASE REMEMBER.

Tract Fund.

We the undersigned, realizing that the distributing of tracts is a good way to spread the truth, and that the time is short in which we can work for the Master, do hereby agree to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purpose of raising a fund to be used in supplying tracts to those who will distribute them free.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

We have received a new supply of this valuable work, which treats of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the one hope, one faith, one baptism, by the late Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. This will need no introduction to many of our readers, as they already know of the good that has been accomplished through its circulation. 10 cents each. Send to this office.

FUTURE PROBATION.

Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff. This work was issued and sold at 25 cents. We have a good supply and will send them post paid for ten cents per copy. This is an excellent opportunity for any who are interested in this subject to get this work by a talented author. Send ten cents to the office for a copy.

QUESTIONS FOR THINKERS AND THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL.

Is the title of a pamphlet of 96 pages by H. W. Bowman, containing questions on the Eternity of Evil, Predestination, Hell and kindred points. It is well worth reading and will help many who are bothered to give answers many times. We can supply you for 15 cents a copy.

GLAD TIDINGS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

This is the title of a tract containing 12 large size pages, and is a reprint of a work issued many years ago, and we suppose was written by Brother Benjamin Wilson. It is clear and comprehensive, and can be had for forty cents each or 30 for $1.00.

THE COMING NATION.

A lecture delivered by H. V. Reed. This clearly sets forth the idea that the Coming Nation will be the nation of Israel restored to Palestine, and the Scriptural reasons are given. 24 pages price 10 cts or three for 25 cts.

A PARABOLIC BATTLEFIELD, OR ERROR'S WATERLOO.

Is the title of a tract of 82 pages by H. W. Bowman, and is devoted to an exposition of the Rich Man and Lazarus Question. 10 cents a copy.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

A popular lecture by M. Joblin. Very good to put in the hands of those searching for truth. 16 pages 4 cents each.

Necessity of Baptism. A 4-page tract, written some years ago by Brother J. M. Stephenson, and it appeared as a newspaper article. It is so good we thought best to preserve it in this way, and offer it at 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Bible Plan of Salvation. A 4-page tract telling how to interpret the Scriptures, the development of God's plan, etc. 2 cts each or 15 cts per dozen.

An open Letter to J. A. Conant. A 4-page tract being a letter written by Brother Daniel Howard and printed in RESTITUTION, April 22, 1896. 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Letter to Dr. Talmage. A 4-page tract being a letter written by Sister Abbie A. Howard to Dr. Talmage and printed in the RESTITUTION of April 22, 1896. 2 cents each or 15 cts per dozen.

Modern Events in the Light of Prophecy.—This is the sermon preached by H. V. Reed at Antioch, which has since been printed in tract form, and may be had at this office for five cents each, or 30 copies for $1.00.

Passages Supposed to Teach Consciousness after Death, by W. H. Wilson, which shows that eternal life is conditional and not inherited. 3 cents each, or 25 cents a dozen.

Where do the Dead Sleep. These are Bible texts given in answer to this question. A 4-page tract 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Hades. A Bible account of this place with proof texts. Ten copies for 5 cents.

Death Compared to a Sleep. This represents death as a sleep and proof texts are given. Ten copies for 5 cts.

The Wicked Dead and Plain Truths. The two combined. 2 pages ten copies for 10 cents

"Word of Man, vs. Word of God," by H. V. Reed. A contrast between the two. Can be had at this office for 2cts each, or one dozen for 15 cts.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Yain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ," "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Keep Close.

Keep close to the Lord, "the Chief Corner Stone."
Stand fast in the faith, in Christ ye are one;
Rooted and grounded together in love,
One fold—one Shepherd—"the household of God."

Keep close to the Lord, his children are heirs,
According to hope, the promise is theirs,
Strong consolation, this anchor and prop,
Keep close, heir of God, to Jesus thy hope.

Keep close to the Lord, his favor secure,
There's strength in the cross to help the endure,
In the cross there is life, protection and love,
In the cross there is joy—keep close to the Lord.

Keep close to the Lord, our life and our light,
Ever stay near, 'twill thy armor keep bright;
Keep in the pathway the Savior has trod,
Lean on his bosom, ye blessed of God.

Keep close to the Lord, sit down at his feet,
There's joy and cheer in communion so sweet,
Ever with Jesus, companion divine,
Precious his teachings—they bless and refine.

Ever keep close to the life-giving stream,
Keep close to the Lamb, who maketh thee clean,
Keep close to the Lord, thy shadowing Rock,
Keep close, blessed Bride, "fear not little flock."

DUTIES OF PARENTS TOWARD THE GROWING PEOPLE.

Parents—Oh what parents have duties devolving upon them that they cannot shirk, duties that relate to the young people, inside and outside of their own homes.

For I shall take a more extended view of this subject than was perhaps intended. The church and the Sunday-school cannot do every thing. The children in bringing them to and in keeping them for Christ,—the work must be begun at the fireside. I shall look at the subject in this aspect.

1. The offspring given to each happy pair, are gifts from God. He promised that they should be as olive-plants, or plants of peace, about the table of man that feareth the Lord. But he did not mean that this blessed result would, with no effort on the part of the man, be brought about. To have true fear of the Lord, implies that no duty, nor obligation, that he has laid upon us, will be disregarded. He has insisted that his will shall be taught to the children,—that it shall be diligently taught, so diligently, that it is ever to be the uppermost topic in conversation when sitting in the house or walking by the way. When we are lying down with the little ones by our side, and when we are rising up, we are to talk to them about the commands and statutes of the Lord.

And these commands and statutes are to be so faithfully kept, that it will seem to the children, as if they were really bound as signs upon the hands and as frontlets between the eyes, just as eastern people still bind sentences from their religious books, about the heads and necks of themselves and children, that are sewed up in little heart-shaped sacks, and are supposed to keep off all danger and evil.

He has insisted that the words he has spoken shall be written upon the posts of our houses and on our gates that they may ever be before the eyes of the children and their education in this thing be deep and thorough.

This then is our duty toward the young people in the home. We are to explain to them the meaning of the testimonies, the statutes and the judgments of the Lord. We are to tell them how Israel was Pharaoh's bondmen in Egypt, and how the Lord brought them out with a mighty hand with signs and wonders great and sore upon Egypt and upon Pharaoh, and upon all his household, that he might bring them in and give them the land which he swore unto their fathers.

That it was the Lord who gave them these statutes, and who commanded them to fear him for their good alway, that he might preserve them alive.

That since God created man upon earth no such great thing has been heard of as this.—God taking a nation from the midst of another nation, by temptations, by signs, and wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm, and by great terrors, to endure as a nation before him forever, just as the ordinances of the sun and moon and stars are to endure.

We are to teach them this, and how we are connected with that nation that the Lord has chosen as his own peculiar treasure above all the nations that are upon the face of the earth. How Jesus came of the seed of the Jews, to be the Savior of men, and how they, by accepting him, can become heirs with him to life and a throne.

All this can best be done in the charmed circle of quiet ude and restful love. No fear that the little ones will not be interested nor that the seeds of truth will not sink deep into their hearts.

If we have knowleige of the Lord, if we love him with all our might, mind and strength, if all that we do be done for the glory of God, it will not be hard to give them the knowledge, the love, the acquaintance and the will to do service for him.

But the love of God must be a real thing with us; if it is not, the children will know it. They quickly detect deceit and inconsistency and despise it. We must live what we profess; this is the best [illegible] religion a thing [illegible] about, and not something that is a part and parcel of the very being, they will come to feel, unless the dear Father is [illegible] way to save us that he is a [illegible] religion.

But [illegible] of all this, something that must begin to be taught with the first gleams of intelligence. One writer says, that "to bring up a child successfully requires a generalship as great as to lead an army." It does, and I might say, a greater generalship. God says, "CHILDREN OBEY YOUR PARENTS." Then, the first duty of the parent to the child is to teach it obedience. Dr. Pentecost, of New York City, said that a child, if it was ever to grow into worthy manhood or womanhood, must be given backbone, and that this backbone could only come through obedience. We sin against God, and the child when we allow it to break this primal law of its being, because without law it can never be anything but an unhappy, disturbing element in society, ruining itself, and dragging down those with whom it comes in contact.

People take great pains to bring up dogs to obey. They tell us that "dogs can be taught to do anything whatsoever without punishment or threat, but that it needs endless kindness and forbearance." You must begin by teaching it to stay in special places until you are ready to move, and by coaxing it into a corner, and then rewarding it with a bit of bread, and by and by it will go there of its own accord and remain quiet, waiting your will. When you want the dog to obey, you are told that "you must speak decidedly but in a low voice, putting the falling inflection on your last word," and that "you must earn the dogs' respect and confidence in your treatment of him." And so it is in the training of the horse. One writer says that "we stand in the place of Providence itself to our domestic animals. How much more do we stand in the place of Providence to our children! God has made the child a thousand times more intelligent than the animal. It can more readily learn the all-important lesson of obedience, that lesson that has so much to do with its happiness and usefulness here, and everything to do with its destiny hereafter.

The same "low voice, decided tone and endless kindness and forbearance," must be used in dealing with the children, that are used in dealing with the lower animals. The child needs love, genuine, God like love, that will restrain, guide, and still make it happy. A dear woman of my acquaintance, who loves God, is teaching her boy, that his duty to the Father above, begins in his obedience to her. She keeps him in a wise way. She says "her back yard is a queer looking place, but it serves to keep him at home. He can build trenches, build houses and play the mason there and be under her eye. He has perfect confidence in his mother's love. He knows she will not refuse any reasonable request, so it is always "May I mother?" if he wants to go anywhere, and if she says "no" in her kind, decided way, it ends the matter, he would not for the world grieve her by disobeying.

You can make the contrast yourselves. You all know mothers who are heedless as to whether their commands are obeyed or not, and have seen the result in the lawless anarchists, who cause so many vain and fruitless tears, and who bring to their country such a world of cost and trouble. Lilian Bell, writing of London policemen, and how their uprised finger arrests as if by magic the movement of the thronging thousands pressing along the streets, says "Understanding how to obey is what makes liberty." The Queen of England is behind the policeman. That is the secret that explains the power vested in a finger. Well, God is behind the parent. He is wiser and greater than any earthly monarch. All children ought to be taught this, and that this is "the why" their obedience is required.

The duties of Christian parents toward the young people in the home [illegible] ving been well and faithfully performed, they are ready now to enter the Sunday School, and to continue the study that has been delightful [illegible] the pleasant even[illegible] hour. Among the duties of Christian parents toward the young people will call to mind here. They will be needed as teachers. Their own children have heard them pray as if they meant it, have heard them read the Bible as if they loved it, have seen them treat commands of God as something that must be obeyed at the peril of their lives, and have been seriously influenced;—the impression must be deepened by their attendance at the Sunday School; that some blessed influence must reach out and embrace others.

What has been loved and lived and taught at home can be easily taught in the school, and many of the young be thus brought to Christ. It is a dull Sunday School where the parents do not go. We can do good single-handed, but how much stronger we are, how much more can be done, when all take hold together! And it is the duty of Christian parents to make it a delight to attend the holy school with the children. I say holy school, for such it is, if it accomplishes what we design.

It is the duty of the parents to join in the singing as if the songs were really the songs of the kingdom,—to do all possible to make the little ones feel that it is a place where they may not only learn about God, but may join in actual praise of him.

We come next to the duties of Christian parents toward the young people in the little services held by them for mutual encouragement, counsel and instruction, and for the worship and glory of God. Their presence is needed here. A word now and then will be gratefully received. Light can be thrown on the lesson, or strength be given by earnest opportune prayer. And in the church, oh how solemn, how weighty are the duties of Christian parents! The lips that can here truly tell of a Savior's love that has been sought and found, are lips that are blessed indeed. These are lips that will attract and hold the young; they are lips that will speak the warm word of welcome, that will show the kindly interest, the strong desire of the heart to save.

There must be no reluctance shown by Christian parents about attending the place of prayer, no staying away save from absolute necessity. It is the duty of all to go, and to make the going the crowning pleasure of life. And never must the little ones be left behind if we want to take them with us to Canaan.

We have touched upon the duties of the Christian in the home, in the Sunday School, in the meetings of the young and in the church, but there are duties that they owe to the children outside of this. There are little ones in the highways and hedges, who must be brought in. These too must be diligently taught the commands, statutes and doctrines of the Lord, if they can by any possible means be reached. Poor little lambs! It grieves my heart to see them going so far astray from God, where they may never find the way back! Let them see that we want them to be saved, that we desire for them riches and honor and endless life, by teaching them that God loves them, by giving them the little paper, the touching poem, and the kindly word.

Do we really love God? Then we will show that love by the charity that never faileth!

Do we really look for the Savior's speedy advent? We will prove it by hastening to perform faithfully our duties toward the young. The Master sees and knows us all. Let us all strive to win his approval. Save the children and the nation will be saved, the world will be saved.

S. EUNANA WINCE.

WHAT ENCOURAGEMENT OUGHT WE TO RECEIVE FROM OUR PARENTS?

Young people should receive all the encouragement that can possibly be given them by their parents to attend and work in the church, for sooner or later these older people must step off the stage of action and leave the younger ones to carry on this [illegible] work on the Master's. And [illegible] one, old or young, [illegible] more noble occupation [illegible] and where is the father [illegible] who would not be proud to have a son or daughter enlisted in the cause of Christ? But the young people cannot know what work there is for them to do, unless they are taught something concerning the Master, and his plans for the future. But there are so many of them left almost in ignorance of this important subject, and taught so much that is of no value to them. Why are they not taught to know and love the one who suffered death on the cross, that they might have the chance of a life of joy and peace, instead of eternal death. Why are they not taught this in their babyhood, and, as they grow older made to feel that they have their part of this work to do, and that it must be done by them? And why in so many homes, not in all, oh no! but in so many, why is it that the parents do not set the example, do not even encourage the young people to study God's Word, and try to live in accordance with his teachings. Eph. vi. 4 says, "And ye fathers provoke not your children to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

Perhaps the aged people sometimes feel that they are getting old, so will step aside, and let the younger people carry on the work, but we are all but children, only some are older and with more experience and knowledge, but, not too old to learn more from God's Word, and never too old to be wanted, yes, and needed in the church work.

A great many of the young people are ready and willing to learn, and do their part, but must have the more experienced workers to tell them what their duty is. There is so much work to be done, and so many idle hands. How much good could be accomplished if more of God's children are at work. James says, "We must be lovers of the Word and not hearers only." Our heavenly Father would be much better pleased to see that each one who has had their names registered in his Book were working faithfully instead of following idly along or dropping out altogether. Think of the sacrifice Christ made for us. Suppose an earthly friend would allow himself to be nailed upon a cross, and left there until death released him, in order that you or I might have life, would we forget that sacrifice so soon? Christ did just that for us, so let us not forget that we each owe something in return. We shall be more than repaid for all that we can do. Not one kindness done in his name will be unnoticed by the Father, for does he not say that he will even care for the little birds.

The poet W. S. Plumore wrote,

"Not a sparrow falleth
But its God doth know,
Just as when his mandate
Lays a monarch low.

Not a leaflet waveth,
But its God doth see,
Think not then, O trembler,
God forgetteth thee!

Far more precious surely
Than the birds that fly,
Is a Father's image,
To a Father's eye.

Even thine hairs are numbered,
Trust him full and free;
Cast thy care before him.
And he'll care for thee.

For the God that planted,
In thy breast a soul,
On his sacred subtles,
Doth thy name enroll.

Cheer thine heart, thou trembler,
Never faithless be.
He that marks the sparrow,
Will remember thee."

MATTIE HEMPHILL.

THE OBJECT OF SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I am glad to meet you this morning and thank God that we have existence, and the ability to move and to know; and by these powers are enabled to meet at this Conference meeting for mutual benefit.

"Search the Scriptures for in them ye think ye have eternal life." John v. 39. "Yea doubtless and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord." Phil. iii. 8. When Paul and Silas were driven from Thessalonica to Berea it was said of the Berean Jews that they were more noble than those of Thessalonica in that they received the W[illegible] with all willingness of mind and searched the Scriptures daily whether those things were so.

Thus we see that knowledge is essential to intelligent and acceptable religious work. When Paul reached Athens he found that most enlightened nation of earth, so far as science, literature and earthly knowledge was concerned, engaged in the worship of many idolatrous gods, and as he passed through their streets became to an altar with the inscription thereon "To the unknown God" and Paul said, "Whom ye therefore ignorantly worship him declare I unto you." The Athenians had erected to and were worshiping the unknown God through ignorance and consequently in vain; for worship to be efficacious of any benefit to the worshiper must be intelligent—must be according to knowledge.

The great storehouse of religious knowledge is the Bible. It is that inexhaustible fountain of truth from which we can all draw to our satiety. If the question is asked, "What is the object of Sunday School work?" the answer would be, The study of the Bible—the acquirement of a knowledge of God's Word so far as revealed to man. Religion is taken to be a reasonable science, in fact it is the science of sciences, for science is nothing but truth systematized, and the whole Bible contains and comprehends all truth in one great and grand outline. It is therefore of the profoundest interest to every mortal being born into this world of sin and sorrow, of griefs and graves. It is the deepest, broadest, most comprehensive study that ever engaged the mind of man. Poor man, conceived in sin, and born of iniquity, nursed upon pride and ambition, fed on the lusts of the flesh, and feasted with enmity and wickedness, would sink into the yawning abyss of eternal oblivion were it not for the inspiring, uplifting hope held out by the Bible. The Bible is the text book of the Christian religion—the rule and guide of life. How important then that we study it deeply, intently, assiduously. As the subject of that imperial Book transcends all other subjects so should its study be paramount of studies. Accomplishments in music, in mathematics, in history, in literature are all good and well, and serve to symetrically develop and more perfectly polish our minds, but when we have studied, assimilated and obeyed the fundamental truths of the Bible, we have builded upon the solid rock that endureth forever. It is for this study of the Bible we organize Sunday Schools; that we may meet and devote our time and energies to an exhaustive, systematic study, taking up the topics separately and tracing them out to clear concise and definite conclusions, and encouraging the more important points and mastering them.

Another object of Sunday School work is to make it an auxiliary in church work, in interesting those in the gospel of the kingdom that might never get interested in any other way. This is an age of intellectuality; an age of reason, in which men do not receive knowledge second-handed, but must be led to investigating and thinking for themselves before they are moved to any action. And there is no better way to interest such in the Bible than to get them interested in the Sunday School.

One of the greatest objects of Sunday School work is to mold and fashion the plastic minds of the young before they become case-hardened by too long a contract with the wickedness of the world. The child's mind is a rich field of thought and if not sown with good seed, it will surely bring forth a crop of weeds, thistles and thorns. The child's mind is like an opening bud in the spring time, unfolding its beauties to a gross world, but unlike the bud it often absorbs the baser elements from its environments. Again the child's mind is like a new hectograph, wonderfully absorbative, ready to receive and reproduce whatever is presented to it. The child's mind is a clean page. What will we write upon it? What seed will we sow in the rich field? What surroundings will we place about it? What are the original copies we would write upon the hectograph of the youthful mind? It is the province, the object, yea, the duty of the Sunday School to sow the seeds of righteousness, of truth, and of justice; to surround the child with purity, temperance and sobriety; to write the original copies for the new hectograph full of love, sympathy, kindness and charity.

CHARACTERISTICS OF A GOOD SUNDAY SCHOOL.

To have and maintain a good, interesting and wide-awake Sunday School, brings before us at once the necessity of having a body of earnest and devoted officers. I shall place as a characteristic then, that is, for the foundation of a good Sunday School, a band of well equipped, God-fearing officers.

The superintendent as the head of the Sunday School has a vast amount of responsibility resting upon him, he, therefore, should be a person well-fitted to assume the authority of such a position, as well as one whose daily life is with God. The superintendent as the executive officer of the school has in charge both teachers and pupils, and it naturally falls to him to bring about the harmonious co-operation of all. Not only must the superintendent be a devout Christian worker, but every officer and teacher, and the success of their work demands that they prepare each and every lesson, so that they bring it before the minds of their pupils in a manner both interesting and beneficial.

How necessary is it that all should be harmonious in the Sunday School! Jesus said, "Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand." Hence if we stand, we must work together.

It is only by a systematic arrangement of classes that we can accomplish the best results, classes should be graded with regard to the ability of the pupil, and by such grading more good can be accomplished, and with less labor.

Programs may be varied as a means of making the Sunday School more attractive and interesting. This is also

The Restitution.

EDITORIAL STAFF
Directors of the C. P. Association.

M. JOBLIN, Corresponding Editor.

PLYMOUTH, IND. DECEMBER 1, 1897.

Stockholder's Meeting.

In accordance with the published call the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association met at Plymouth Nov. 20, 1897. Being called to order W. D. Thompson was chosen Chairman, and A. R. Underwood Clerk. Overall of stock it was found that 245 shares were represented, some being a majority. The Board of Directors for 1897 then made the following report which motion was received.

To the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association:

Your Board of Directors elected one year ago wish to make report to you that they have caused THE RESTITUTION to be issued for the past year, that being the only work that has come into our hands. The paper has been issued regularly, as you all doubtless know, and we make report to you that no debts are against the Association.

The year just past has been marked by the hand of death, taking from us our beloved Brother Robert Railsback, and in view of this sad event the following was presented and passed as the expression of this meeting:

"WHEREAS:—In the course of human events, on Jan. 17, 1897, Brother Robert Railsback died, and we recognizing the ability and faithfulness of our brother as a member of this Association, and as one of its officers, we the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association, in council assembled, do hereby Resolve, That we acknowledge our great loss by the death of our beloved Brother, Robert Railsback, and do take this means of expressing to his dear wife, who is left to mourn him, our sympathy in her bereavement, and our own sadness in that we shall have him with us no more. And further

Resolved, That these resolutions to spread upon the records of this Association, and that a copy of them be given to Sister Railsback."

The next business before the meeting was the chosing of a New Board of Directors for 1898, and a ballot being taken the following were elected, J. H. Willey, W. D. Thompson, Wm. Railsback, A. R. Underwood and D. T. Halstead.

No other business coming before the meeting a motion to adjourn was made and carried.

W. D. THOMPSON, Chairman.
A. R. UNDERWOOD, Clerk.

Director's Meeting.

Immediately after the Stockholders Meeting the newly elected Board met and organized by chosing J. H. Willey President, W. D. Thompson Vice President and A. R. Underwood Secretary.

Arrangements was then entered into with A. R. Underwood to publish THE RESTITUTION for the ensuing year upon the same terms as has been done since 1888. The editorial management to be as last year.

The matter connected with the publication of this paper being settled for the present, we ask all who are now subscribers to renew promptly and try and get a new name to send with yours, or send it to a friend. Remember also the poor, those who cannot pay for their paper. Send a few cents to aid in this work. They want the paper, and you must help or they will have to go without. Remember their needs.

No further business the Board adjourned to call of President.

J. H. WILLEY, Pres.
A. R. UNDERWOOD, Sec.

Answers to Questions.

J. A. J. You want to know "why the gospel does not come in power, and in the Holy Spirit, and in much assurance, as it did when Paul preached in Thessalonica?" We reply, The demonstration of power and Spirit in Apostolic Times was designed to inspire much assurance all down through Gentile Times, as well as in Apostolic Times. After this was once done, what need there is for its repetition we do not see. Only have implicit faith in the gospel of the grace of God which has been demonstrated by Holy Spirit and power, and we predict that you will then have much assurance, if you have corresponding faith.

T. R. R. You may see by Acts xxvi. 22, that Paul preached none other things than those which the prophets and Moses said should come; so that you cannot tack on to the Pauline theology anything that conflicts with the Old Testament Scriptures. And you must not forget that in this respect as well as in all others, he followed the example of Christ, and exhorts us to him (Paul) as he followed Christ. And friend, you may depend upon it, that the New Testament would be a sealed book without the Old. In fact it is a sealed book to all who consider the Old Testament out of date. If you cannot accept this last statement, read Rom. viii. 28, and answer this question: What could we understand of the purpose according to which God calls or invites men, if it were not for the Old Testament, where that purpose is declared. True, Paul tells the Thessalonians that they had been called to God's kingdom and glory; but that kingdom and glory even are only means to the end revealed in the Old Testament.

G. A. The prophetic times, so-called are, we understand,

I. The Seventy Weeks, of Daniel ix. 24. This is the Key to the understanding of other periods. It proves the prophetic style of reckoning a day for a year, to be correct. Compare (Neh. ii. 1; Daniel ix. 24; Mark i. 15, and Luke iii. 23, 70 weeks equals 490 prophetic years.

II. The seven times of Israel's desolation, Lev. xxvi. 18–28. A time or year equals 360 days.

Seven times or years equals 360 times 7 or 2520 day years.

G. G. We greatly fear, that while you believe the foundation promises of the gospel made to the Father of the Hebrew nation, there is one important item of the engrafted Word which you do not half believe. We fear you do not not half believe "That he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" nor half believe that he who repents after believing the gospel of the kingdom and is baptized, shall have his sins remitted; do not half believe that "as many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ;" do not half believe that baptism into Christ's death is necessary in order to secure the benefits arising out of that death. Rom. vi. 3; do not half believe that planting together in the likeness of his death is necessary in order to secure a resurrection like his; do not half believe that it is necessary to die with him in order to live with him; if you did you would very soon know the blessedness of him whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered by that sacred name—Jesus. Having indicated what we conceive to be the source of your trouble, we leave you to God, and your own reflections upon the living Word.

Conference Report.

Report of the First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith, in Indiana, held at Plymouth, Nov., 18 to 21, 1897.

The Conference was called Friday, 2 o'clock P. M., with Brother F. L. Austin presiding. Report of the preceding meeting was read and accepted. The treasurer reported amount on hand at beginning of quarter $1.00, received since $141.25 in treasury, with no disbursements.

It was urged that the different organizations, who have not already, send a list of their membership to the president as soon as possible.

A report of the subscription of the different churches with amounts paid by each was read, which was as follows:—Church at Antioch, subscribed $56.50, paid $20.25. Argos, $26.50, paid $15.00. Plymouth, $47.00, paid $17.00. Rensselaer, $78.00, paid $34.00. Scircleville, $9.25, paid $5.50. Eagle Creek, $11.00, paid $2.50. Bracken, $50.50, paid $27.50. Isolated members, $13.00, paid $13.00. Cash 50 cents. Total subscriptions $295.75. Amount paid in $141.25 to date, Nov. 18, 1897.

To the roll-call of churches Argos, Antioch, Bracken, Eagle Creek, Rensselaer and Plymouth responded. The subject of credentials was presented, but owing to other pressing business the matter did not receive the consideration due it, but will be further considered at some future time.

The Committee on resolutions, previously appointed, presented the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted.

RESOLUTIONS.

To the President, and Delegates of the Church of God in Conference assembled. Greeting:

We the Committee on Resolutions appointed, beg to recommend for adoption with such corrections and amendments as seem best the following Resolutions.

Resolved, That for the more efficient work in the building up and establishment in the truth, that it be the duty of each separate body of believers to permanently organize in harmony with the constitution recommended by the State Conference. With legally appointed Trustees who shall be the custodians of all church property. That there be Elder's, or an Elder and Deacons appointed in each congregation.

That each church be recommended to keep up regular stated meetings at least once each week for the study of Gospel Truth and devotional worship.

That each church so organized be requested through its officers to respond to the call of the State Conference for all reports and accounts due the State Conference whether of statistics or finances due the same.

That each organization be requested to aid and co-operate by its means, to the support of the Evangelical fund. The same to be reported at stated times to the State Official Board.

That each church be recommended to adopt a systematic system of giving.

That all isolated believers attach themselves to some organized body or church thereby giving, as well as receiving strength in the truth.

That each church so organized solicit the uniting with them for co-operation all known isolated believers of the truth.

That it be the bounden duty of each and every congregation to keep up a Sunday school for the early education of our children.

That we would discourage the too free use of the Quarterlies, but would recommend the Bible as the Text Book for our Sunday school work.

J. H WILLEY,
ISRAEL ROBERTS,
A. R. UNDERWOOD,
W. TUTTLE,
W. D. THOMPSON,
Committee.

The subject of a Constitution which could be recommended to all the churches, especially to the newly organized ones, that the work of organization might be more uniform was brought before the Conference. A form of Constitution which had been drafted was submitted and considered, but being unable to arrive at any conclusion, the matter was referred to a committee composed of J. F. Wagoner, J. H. Willey, D. E. Vanvactor, Wm. Railsback and L. B. Cochenour, who after making several amendments submitted the following which was adopted. After which Conference adjourned.

CONSTITUTION.

Whereas, It was thought expedient by the Indiana State Conference of the Church of God assembled at Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 18 to 21, 1897, that the adoption of a uniform Constitution by the several churches of the State would be more conducive to effective work in furthering the cause of the gospel of the kingdom of God through Jesus Christ as taught by himself, the prophets and apostles; and to this end, that the work of the several organizations may be conducted harmoniously and the business done decently and in order. Therefore, Be it ordained that the following uniform Constitution be and is hereby adopted for our future government.

ARTICLE I.

SEC. 1. The name of this organization shall be The Church of God of——

SEC. 2. The place of meeting shall be in——— in the town (or township) of——— in county of——— and State of Indiana.

ARTICLE II.

SEC. 1. Upon the adoption of this Constitution members under the old organization shall be members under the new.

SEC. 2. Any person who accepts the Bible as their divine and only guide of faith and rule of practice, and accordingly are or have been baptized into the name of Christ, shall upon profession of faith in the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ shall upon request be admitted to membership.

SEC. 3. Each member shall be entitled to a voice, both by remarks and vote upon all questions properly coming before the body of the church.

SEC. 4. Any member who desires to sever his connection with the church, upon his request shall be given a letter of dimit in the following form to-wit:

(Date)———

Upon the request of Bro. (or Sis. ter).———who has been a member of this church since———and who has lived a consistent Christian, so far as we can judge, is hereby granted this letter of dimit and is recommended to the churches and the secretary of this church will cancel their name upon receiving notice of their being received into some other church, wherever he (or she) may go.

———Elder.
———Sec.

SEC. 5. If any member shall deport himself or herself offendingly to the church they shall be dealt with "According to the rule of the Master as found in Matt. xviii. 15-17 inclusive."

ARTICLE III.

SEC. 1. The officers under this Constitution shall be three (or five) trustees, two elders, two deacons, two deaconesses, a treasurer and a secretary; all of whom shall be elected at the annual meeting by ballot, and take their seats at the close of the meeting at which they are elected. No member shall hold two offices at the same time.

SEC. 2. The trustees shall be elected for a term of years even with the number of trustees, one being elected at each annual meeting, except at the first annual meeting when one shall be elected for one year, one for two years and so on until the whole number is reached. The trustees under the old organization shall continue in office for their respective terms the same as if elected at the first annual meeting after Jan. 1, 1898.

SEC. 3. The trustees shall be the body corporate of the church, having the control and care of all property belonging thereto. They shall meet and organize themselves for doing business by electing one of their number president, one treasurer and one secretary. All business of the trustees shall be acted upon according to parliamentary usage at a regularly called meeting of the trustees. They shall hold at least one meeting each year on the first Saturday after the annual meeting of the church commencing at 7 o'clock P. M., at which time they shall organize as above stated. It shall be the duty of the president of the board of trustees to preside at all meetings of the trustees and perform the functions usually required of a presiding officer. He shall call meetings of the board of trustees giving each member at least three days notice, stating therein the nature of business to be attended to, and the time and place of meeting, whenever the needs of the church demands it, or when requested to by two of the other members of the board. No business other than that stated in the notices shall be transacted at such called meeting.

It shall be the duty of the secretary of the board of trustees to make record of all the proceedings of the board in a suitable book which shall be provided for that purpose and report the same at the close of each meeting, and at the opening of the next succeeding meeting, and such other work as may be required.

It shall be the duty of the treasurer of the board of trustees to receive all appropriations made and to collect all subscriptions raised for building, repairing, improving or acquiring real estate or personal property for the church; to collect insurance policies when due and receive all monies from the sale of property; to keep an accurate account of the same and report at least at each annual meeting of board and at any other time called for by the board; and to pay out funds in his hands as directed by the board upon its written order signed by the secretary and president.

SEC. 4. The elders shall be chosen for two years, except at the first annual meeting when one shall be chosen for one year and one such year thereafter. It shall be the duty of the elders to see that proper services are held for the instruction and edification of the members and for the promotion of the cause of Christ throughout this locality; and to attend to the wants of the sick and needy. It shall be the duty of the senior elder, the one whose term of office has nearest expired to preside over all business meetings of the church; also to call extra sessions for the election of officers to fill vacancies or transact other urgent business; to call trials, and the time and place, and to attend to any other business pertaining thereto. If through the absence or inability the senior elder is unable to attend to his duties then they shall devolve upon the other elder.

SEC. 5. The deacons shall be chosen for one year. It shall be their duty to properly janitor the place of worship; to administer the communion emblems; one or both to sign all orders drawn upon the treasurer for the disbursement of funds; also to perform any other duties that may devolve upon them not provided for herein.

SEC. 6. The treasurer shall be chosen for one year. It shall be the duty of the treasurer to receive all money coming into the church, not otherwise specified herein; to keep an accurate account of the same and make report annually; to pay out money on hand upon the presentation of order of the church signed by the secretary and a deacon.

SEC. 7. The secretary shall be chosen for one year. It shall be the duty of the secretary to preserve all records and papers belonging to the church; to make a record of all business transactions; to make and keep a record of the membership, stating name, date of admission and date of separation, and from what cause whether by death, dimit or expulsion; to grant and issue letters of dimit as provided in Art. II. Sec. 3, and record same; to keep a full record of the proceedings of any trial as provided in Art. II. Sec. 4; to draw and sign all orders on the treasurer as directed by the church and keep a record of the same and compare them with report of treasurer annually that they agree; and report at each annual meeting the following items: 1. The proceedings of the last annual meeting and all special meetings held during the year. 2. The number of members gained during the year by conversion and baptism, and by letter. 3. The number of members lost during the year by death, by letter, by expulsion. 4. Summary of membership. 5. The number of sermons preached during the year, by whom and amount paid out for same.

Also to do the corresponding of the church and perform any other duties pertaining to the office not herein specified.

ARTICLE IV.

SEC. 1. An annual meeting for the transaction of business shall be held on the first Saturday after the first Friday in January, commencing at 7 o'clock P. M.

SEC. 2. A quorum to do business in any regular or special meeting shall consist of not less than one-fourth of the membership.

SEC. 3. All questions coming before any business meeting shall be decided by viva voce vote unless at least one-fourth of the members present shall call for ballot, when it shall be so decided.

SEC. 4. If necessity shall require it, the senior elder shall call a special business meeting, giving each member at least four days notice, either verbally or by letter, which notice shall state the business requiring attention, the time and place of meeting. No other business shall be transacted at such special meeting than that mentioned in notice.

ARTICLE V.

SEC. 1. This constitution shall supersede and take the place of all former constitutions and by laws, and upon its adoption the secretary shall revise the roll of membership and preserve such old records as may be deemed of importance.

SEC. 2. This constitution may be amended at any annual business meeting by a two-thirds vote by ballot. Provided that each and every member shall have been notified at least one week prior to such action, either by the party wishing to offer an amendment, or by the secretary, in writing setting forth what portions are to be amended.

The meetings were well attended and full of interest from start to finish. The plan of the program was adhered to and each did their part well, and taking it all in all we had one of the best meetings, as was attested by many and confessed by all who attended.

The Sunday School session was especially interesting there being many practical suggestions which if heeded would insure a revival in our Sunday School work.

By order, the papers read at the session, will be published in THE RESTITUTION.

The ministers present were B. W. and M. A. Woodward, J. L. Wince, J. F. Wagoner, F. L. Austin, G. W. Smith, D. T. Halstead, Alphonso Drew and T. G. Bartlett of St. Paul Neb., who had been on a preaching tour through N. Y. and stopped off on his way home. There were several in attendance from abroad and a number of encouraging letters were read from those of the household not privileged to attend. Bro. and Sister Woodward will remain at Plymouth indefinately to hold meetings and Bro. D. T. Halstead went to Argos for the same purpose. Bro. Smith will go to Ohio to hold meetings and at a meeting of the Board Bro Halstead was engaged to do some Evangelical work as soon as could be so arranged.

The following was presented and passed by a unanimous vote.

Whereas, The papers of the City of Plymouth have given very full notices and reports of the meeting. Therefore,

Resolved, That this Conference tender to the papers of Plymouth a vote of thanks for their kindness and for favors shown us.

A committee to arrange programme for next meeting was appointed consisting of D. E. Vanvactor, J. H. Willey, and A. C. Roberts.

Dear brethren and sisters throughout the State, another meeting has has come to a close and although some made the good profession we hope the words spoken fell not on barren soil, but found lodgment in earnest hearts, and will finally bring forth fruit for the Master's use. This is the Lord's work. So let us lay aside selfish motives and work together for the advance of the cause.

Report of Sunday School Work.

The first attempt to gather statistics of the Sunday Schools of the Church of God in Indiana was made in the last three months. Some of the schools to which blanks were sent have not been heard from yet, and some schools were not sent any blank because the address of secretary or superintendent was not known. All schools which have not received a blank report are respectfully requested to send the address of superintendent and secretary to D. E. Vanvactor, Argos, Ind., who will mail them a blank report.

The reports so far received show but three schools using quarterlies, namely, Plymouth, Argos and Pleasant View at Hedrick, the aggregate cost being about $8.00 per quarter. Four schools use papers, Plymouth, Rensselaer, Eagle Creek and Argos, at a cost of $8.49 per quarter

ENROLLMENT OF SCHOOLS.

Argos,	80
Eagle Creek,	60
Plymouth,	130
Pleasant View,	30
Restitution Chapel,	25
Rensselaer,	55
Scircleville,	74
Total,	474

The church at Bracken and Colfax have reported no school on account of there being but few members and scattered. Restitution Chapel school has suspended for the present.

The condition of our schools indicate a broad field for work and it is hoped that whatever efforts may be put forth in this direction may receive the hearty support of the church members and Sunday School workers throughout the State.

D. E. VANVACTOR, State Supt.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

I know from experience that out of affliction some time comes joy and happiness. For up to the time of my affliction I had a very poor opinion of myself and I thought most every one else had about the same of me; but after it got noised about that I was afflicted I found that I had friends for they began to come and go, come and go from morning until after dark, and the next day the same. One evening, a relative, a cousin, came in and she had a bouquet of beautiful flowers in her hand; and do you know my first thought was, O how much better now, than to have waited to lay it on my coffin. I will tell you, brothers and sisters, my affliction has been a source of joy instead of sorrow. It has builded me up, it has encouraged me, and I would say to the brothers and sisters, if we have any sick or afflicted among us, and we wish to show our love and respect to them, let us not wait to lay our flowers on their coffins, but give them now.

From one who wishes all well, an aid in keeping up the attendance. I think it a good plan to have aside from the usual exercise, an exercise by some class, say a song, or a series of Bible quotations, or a talk by some member of the adult classes. These variations to take place at stated times.

Music being an important factor in the Sunday School, great care should be taken to provide music that all can participate in. The need of an efficient chorister is apparent. If the superintendent can be chorister it is generally preferable. But if he cannot conduct the music, some one should have especial charge of it—or. who will devote time and earnest attention to it. He should not only lead the singing, but give some time to teaching the school new music. God in his goodness has made the whole earth vocal with sweet sounds. The untaught forest echoes the notes of the wild birds, and the habitations of men are made glad by the sweet warbling of caged singers. But above all, the human voice which combines the highest charms of sweet sounds with the inspiration of thought, is given not alone for the ordinary purposes of human pleasure. Its whisper of affection, how grateful; its expression of religious devotion, how exalted; its solace in trouble, how dear; its participation in joy, how unspeakable. The power and influence of music all human beings are willing to acknowledge. It is one of the fairest and most blessed of all the gifts of God. Its power to fix in the memory, even for a life time the sentiment with which it be connected, and to forge the same in the heart, has been understood in all ages of the world. Nothing contributes more largely to the present interest in Sunday School work than the delightful, soul-inspiring Sunday School songs that have appeared during the past few years. Poets, musicians and publishers have vied with each other to furnish songs for our Sunday School. Special singing will add to the interest of the school though it should always be appropriate to the lesson treated. Paul says: "Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord."

Never has the Sunday School been as efficient in successful Bible instruction as today. The direct study of the text, with its interpretation, the constant reviews, together with articles fresh from the brain and pen are brought under tribute to make the message plain to Bible class and primary class all and between these extremes. Every ear is open, and every eye awake to hear or see some new thing which may add to the interest of Bible study, or more clearly reveal the truth to the mind, and fasten it in the memory. This efficiency in Bible instruction, and interest in Sunday School work for the most part is due to the untiring effort of live officers and teachers. Hence the necessity of selecting these with the greatest care, and afterward making changes as seldom as possible. Teachers as before stated must make careful preparation for each lesson. Not only must they have a knowledge of the Bible lesson, but be prepared to present it to their classes in a manner suitable to hold the attention. As we are commanded to teach the gospel of the kingdom, teachers must be students of the gospel and firm believers in one Lord, one faith and one baptism.

The method of presenting the lesson is a subject which demands our earnest consideration. Many prefer to draw out the facts of the lesson by a series of questions, but a more satisfactory method and one which will hold the attention better is the giving of a talk on a lesson, telling the lesson story, making it very plain by use of parallel stories, geographical situation of places, discussing the central truth, etc. Then after this rehearsal of the story of the lesson, it will be well to ask and answer questions on the lesson.

The time for holding Sunday School so as to bring about the best results may vary; but in my estimation, the morning session is the one which meets the approval of most people. Then officers, teachers and pupils are fresh and bright for the worship of the Lord. Little can be accomplished, unless all are punctual. To have a good school, demands that all be ready for work at the appointed hour. As aids to accomplish the best work, are quarterlies, papers, blackboard for illustrations, etc., and charts and maps summing up all our work in the Sunday School we find a true Christian spirit the motive of it all.

We should strive to overcome all evil as it is written in the Word of God. "And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking be put away from you, with all malice. And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.

MRS. MARTHA BOGGS.

HOW TO INTEREST THE PRIMARY PUPILS.

First, study the lessons; second, study the children, visit their homes, and become acquainted with their home habits and surroundings. Always recognize a pupil of your class whom you chance to meet. In gaining their good will you will find it much easier to interest them in class work. Adapt the method for the child's needs in presenting the lesson, impress the child with your earnestness, bring the mind within the sphere of the child's mind, have each pupil respond to given questions. Question that they may develop thought. The child will get more interested in the lesson to use the pictures (if they are good ones); to illustrate the lesson. The lesson of Paul that we have been studying for some months is more interesting for the primary pupil illustrated. Have each individual child write to you on the lesson of the previous Sunday. Reviewing will help the the pupil to retain the Scriptures given, and the child will make the effort to give you the answer to the question, and their little minds will not forget the Scripture learned. The great Teacher used plain simple language to tell of the Divine Truth, that a child could understand, and so should a primary teacher tell the lesson in such a manner that the child will be interested in your talk. God's Word changing darkness into light; of Noah building the ark and telling the people to feel sorry for their sin; of the first rain; and in the New Testament of Jesus coming into the world, the story of the cross of Jesus, his coming soon from heaven to earth. They will enjoy your talk more of the glories to come than a fable. Have the child commit the Scriptural text on card, learn the lesson text for the day in class, keep the mind employed. Not speaking from experience but observation, perhaps blackboard work will interest the pupil more while in class, but I doubt that the lessons are more lasting in the mind than the illustrated lesson paper, or the pictorial card with the Scriptural text. In giving these first lessons in Scriptural study let us be careful not to give stone for bread.

MISS LIZZIE DICKSON.

DO WE NEED THE ATTENDANCE OF PARENTS AND GRANDPARENTS AT SUNDAY SCHOOL?

I think it is most essential for parents and the older ones to be there. For without the aid of the older ones, how do we expect the younger ones to learn? They also need a good superintendent and older ones for teachers, for they are more capable of teaching. I think it a duty of every parent to take their children to Sunday School. There is no excuse but what either father or mother can go, and they should go and see that their children are in their place and cared for properly. The proper training of a child is what makes the man or woman what they are. We cannot expect our children to take an interest unless the parents have an interest and go. For a child will get so it thinks, well! father or mother don't care about going and why should I? When a child sees its parents staying at home Sunday after Sunday his interest will soon cease unless he has some willingness of his own, more than most children have.

As the saying is—What is home without a mother, so what is Sunday School without the parents? It is very essential that we see that the young have proper training in this direction as the adage is: "As the twig is bent so the tree inclines." I have heard people say from their own experience, that if they did not attend Sunday School in youth, they have no interest to go when they grow older, notwithstanding, they could see the great importance of such training. I believe we would have better Sunday Schools and churches if parents would attend Sunday School more. And the older ones should be there and see after the young whether they have children or not, and see that the progress of religion is carried on.

MISS MYRTIE BOGGS.

SYSTEMATIC GIVING.

That the regular and systematic laying by of some part of which God has given us is the Bible way of giving cannot be called in question. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come," was the exhortation of our beloved brother Paul to the Corinthian Church. This shows systematic giving. The time and the amount is specified.

A portion of every week's earnings must every week be laid by. If the earnings are large, we must give proportionately, if small less is required. And no one is left out, every one is required to give. The mites of the widows are precious in God's sight; the sacrifices of the poor sewing girl are blessed of him, and both will find that God is a friend and a helper to them in their need, because of their obedience to him, and of their trust in the Word of his promise.

Giving a paltry five dollars in a moment of enthusiasm,—and then, neglecting the tender cries of the dear Savior, that something be done for dying men,—for one, two or five years will not do. The needs of the gospel are continuous,—they are pressing,—they are urgent: we cannot put them by, we cannot stop our ears that we may hear nothing about them, though we may steel our hearts to the calls that come from all parts of our land.

Who is it that has given us power to get wealth? Is it not God himself? Is it not he who blesses the labor of our hands? And is it too much when he asks that some rental be paid in return? Is it too much, when he desires that we, out of love for him, should use something of what he gives us to bless and to save our fellow-men? It ought to be accounted a delight, a precious privilege, that we are permitted to bring the fruits of our toil to him. We ought to come bringing them with songs and with rejoicings of heart. We miss the meaning of giving, or we would never withhold God's rightful portion.

The Israelites used to go up to the holy place at certain stated times, taking their gifts with songs, and trumpetings, and joyful words of welcome for each other.

We have avouched the Lord to be our God, just as they did, we have said that we would walk in his ways, keep his statutes, his commandments and his judgments, and to hearken to his voice, and the Lord hath avouched us to be his peculiar people that we should keep his commandments. Do we hearken to his voice? How much he has done for us! It makes me speechless in wonder when I think of it. We can never, never do too much for him.

You all know where Macedonia is? It is a country in Asia Minor just across the Adriatic Sea from Italy. There were several churches in Macedonia in Paul's day. They were very poor, so poor that their poverty was said to be deep poverty. And beside all this they were in great affliction. The fires of persecution had broken out and were wildly raging. But the joy of these poor people over their new-found faith was so great that they gave even beyond their power, praying Paul with much entreaty that he would receive their gift. They gave until the little gifts piled up into riches.

It was always to me a most touching story, and one that incited me to emulation. If they could give so much out of their deep poverty, as a proof of their love for God, I could surely give in the midst of comfort and prosperity. I do not know that there is anything in the narrative to prove systematic giving, and yet I think there could not have been such abundant joy in bringing their gifts, if this had not been the case.

It will not do to say that we are too poor to give, and to give systematically, God provides for that. If the bullock cannot be brought, the turtle dove will do. And no one can refuse to give in God's appointed way without suffering spiritual and pecuniary loss. If we want to keep wide awake, and in warm and close communion with the Father, we must be actively engaged in the work he has given us. This we cannot do without using money. It takes money to print Bibles. It takes money to publish papers and good books. It takes money to put these into the hands that need them, It takes money to send out evangelists, and to pay our pastors, and to build our churches. We need not be afraid of spending too much for the Lord. He has plenty, and will take care that we do not lack any good thing. The devil's children are not afraid of laying out too much in the devil's work. They spend lavishly. Spiritualists have their missionaries out in all our large towns. They are forming what they call camps all over the country. Ingersoll was paid $150.00 per night for a simple foolish lecture.

And the deadly Upas tree is growing and spreading, and poisoning the minds of the young, with the bitter fruits of unbelief while we are asleep. We mourn and cry over the state of the world, we think it is terrible. But do we sorrow after a godly sort?

If things are so dreadful, why not strive to remedy them with all the might we have? This is just what we are called to do. We are to begin blessing the world now that we may be better fitted to bless it by and by.

I believe in system in the giving. I believe in it because he has exhorted—nay commanded us so to give. For years it has been my way of giving.

People laugh because I lay my envelopes in separate envelopes, so much for this purpose, and so much for that, why, they say, do you do it? We just keep ours in a pile, and use it as it is needed. But, I answer, if I did not do as I am doing I might spend too much for myself and have nothing for God. When I set apart money for the Lord's cause I never touch it for any other purpose. Houses may burn, and goods be destroyed, but that money is his. I have been blessed in doing this systematic way of giving. And I know my dear husband can testify to the same loving care of the dear Father. He gives, and the little crops on the farm always measure out far beyond his hopes. He gives bountifully and reapeth bountifully. We have found the words of the Lord are true and righteous altogether, that his promises never fail.

With this glad testimony to the faithfulness and truth of the Lord, and with the hope that those who have not so tested him, may begin at once, and enjoy the same rich blessings I will close and give room to others.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

"STEWING" AND "GIVING."

Brothers and Sisters in Conference assembled at Plymouth, Indiana

Peace and favor be yours, from God our Father through Jesus our Lord. Your chairman has kindly asked me to say a few words on "Systematic Giving."

Beloved, let us remember the words of the Lord Jesus how he said that it is more blessed to give than to receive. Of course the giving relates to the Lord's work. Some people give to receive praise, some because they do not want to appear niggardly, but how few do it as a "thank offering,"—as a gratuity.

There are two departments of this subject. 1st. The tithe we owe God, and this is best expressed by saying, "We would better pay our debts." 2nd, Free will offering. This comes under the title of Giving. There are then, two things to be considered, Paying the Lord, and giving.

One-tenth of all our income belongs to the Lord. He claims it. It is his, and where we withhold it we are unjust and unfaithful stewards. What we give is an offering—a gratuity, a free will gift, a sacrifice. Beloved, have we not almost wholly omitted to pay the Lord his tithe? I am persuaded that if all God's people would give to the Lord's work one-tenth of the income there would be enough money to carry on all the Lord's work without any begging.

If the brethren of the State of Indiana really desire to see the cause of truth prosper let them all agree that they will give into the Conference treasury one-half of one-tenth of their income, and the other one-half of one-tenth into the Sunday School work, and I promise upon the authority of God's Word that the gospel will receive such an impetus as it never has enjoyed in the history of the State.

Remember this is God's claim upon us for his work. If we want to give to the poor,—God considers this as a loan, and brethren, the security is good. You need not fear. You will get it all back. If God has been kind to you and given you health and happiness and friends and riches, do you not feel like making a thank-offering by giving to the unfortunate, the poor, the fatherless or the widow? The payment of the tithe need not prevent acts of charity, for you have the poor always with you. "There is that scattereth and yet increaseth, and there is that withholdeth more than is meet yet it tendeth to poverty." "The liberal soul shall be made fat, and he that watereth shall be watered also himself." There is a blessedness in giving and where opportunity offers it is the privilege of the disciple of Jesus to give money or loving service or helpful service or helpful words or timely advice. But above all let us be honest and not rob God of his claims upon us. Let us faithfully keep account of our income and pay the Lord for purposes of his work one-tenth, and to us as to Israel of old the windows of heaven will be opened and the rarest, richest blessing will attend our work in the pulpit and in the Sunday School.

Dear ones, you will think seriously on this subject, now won't you? Commence today and give the Lord one tenth of all your income. If you are not prepared to say from henceforth it shall be so, say at least before you leave Conference that you will try it for one year. Will you? And well I k ow that experience will strengthen the conviction that you are right, and it would be difficult to induce you ever to go back to the present "Give-me-you-fed" system.

Brothers, sisters, will you all try it? May the love of God lead us all to a faithful discharge of our duty and the nearness of the coming King lend us to a patient waiting for him.

I shall be present with you in spirit and thought and interest, though absent personally. I hope sometime to meet with you in Conference. The Spirit of the Master be in all your deliberations.

Yours in hope,
A. J. EICHANER.

Letters read at Indiana Conference.

Ye Christian Soldiers of Restitution Faith:

Although I have been a reader of THE RESTITUTION but for a short time, yet I want to tell you that I am no stranger to the grand and glorious truths taught in such fullness and purity through its columns. I have read with much interest its subject matter on all lines, and I cannot repress the thankfulness I feel that its writers, like Paul, make known that our Savior Christ Jesus brought life and immortality to light by rendering death powerless over the grave—also that they do not keep the "glad tidings" of the Resurrection laid away, and out of sight, but that they set it before the followers of Christ as daily food. I am glad they teach the scheme of redemption as culminating in the restitution. I also trust the restitution of which Peter and the Prophets have spoken is held dear by every one convening at the Indiana Conference, of which I hope to read a glorious report. On reading among the editorials of Nov. 10th issue that "exhortation by letter would be very much appreciated." I have ventured to send one arranged in verse, which as you have a programme can be read to the meek and lowly followers of our Lord, if you think my humble effort of sufficient merit. May the Lord bless the efforts put forth for Christ and his service during the Conference sessions is my prayer.

Your Sister in the faith, watching and waiting for the King whose right it is to reign.

MRS. D. W. POST.

Mrs. Barnhill—Dear Sister:

Having noticed in the columns of our loved RESTITUTION an invitation to those not able to attend Conference meeting to send a word of encouragement to those more favored, I would say that I was called to Wyoming, Nebraska by a telegram from my sister who sustained a serious injury, having her ankle broken. Though not being permitted to meet with you personally I am with you in spirit and my prayer shall ascend to the Most High that this Conference meeting may redound to the honor and glory of God, that many may be brought to a knowledge of the truth and that we who wait may be sounding forth the praise of him who called us from darkness into this marvelous light. We read in Malachi xvi. "Then they that feared the Lord spoke often one to another and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord and that thought upon his name." 17th verse, "And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts in that day when I make up my jewels, I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serves him." Dear brothers and sisters, let us strive to be faithful. I ask an interest in your prayers in behalf of all like myself who are isolated from all those of like precious faith. I would especially love to meet Brother and Sister Woodward once more and hear them proclaim the words of life.

Hoping to meet you all in the kingdom where there will be no more parting I remain your Sister waiting for the Master.

AGNES PILWORTH.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Conference assembled at Plymouth, Ind.:

Being deprived of the privilege of meeting with you in person, I desire to meet with you by letter. My prayer is that our heavenly Father may bless you all abundantly, and may your spiritual strength be renewed, that you may be the better able to successfully fight the good fight of faith, that you may all finally receive a crown of glory that will never fade away. Oh, let us be faithful a little while longer, for soon the Master is coming to reward all his faithful servants. Let us ever remember that it is to them that overcome that have the promise of sitting with him on his throne. How necessary it is to heed the admonition of the Apostle Paul to the Ephesians. "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking be put away from you with all malice, and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." It is so much easier for us to see and confess the faults of others, than to see and confess our own faults. What a comfort there is in the thought that if we confess our sins to God, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. May we all be ready when the Master comes to enter into that rest that remains for the people of God.

Your Brother,
R. C. RAILSBACK.

Dear loved ones in Christ:

As it is an impossibility for me to be with you, and to give in my testimony, I will write a few thoughts, and have them read, that you may know that I am interested in the work of Christ's army and wish to see it prosper. Oh! there is so much work to be done, and comparatively few to do it. I think it safe to say, that there are people in our own country who have never heard the true "gospel of the kingdom." Let all of God's people awake to their duty, and spread the gospel through out all the land. I attended a meeting the other day at which place there was a statement made something to this effect: "There are many good people ruined through investigation of the Scriptures." Follow the paths of your forefathers, they have studied the Scriptures and have marked out paths for you to walk in, do not be wandering into wayside paths, made by those who have investigated the Scriptures and think they have found new ways." Perhaps you rather doubt my word, but there are many that think just that way. Oh, that we might have a better understanding of the Scriptures that we might have more interest in the study of God's Word, or rather more interested students. I feel the need of the meetings and wish it were in my power to be with you, but as it is not, I can only pray for your success; that you may be built stronger in the most holy faith, and also that there may be many brought into the Church in a right and acceptable manner. The other evening while reading I came across a very expressive piece of poetry, and this it was,

"This world is far better than many have thought,
And yet every day with some troubles is fraught;
Some petty vexation—scarce worth a sigh—
Will cause us a heart-pang, we cannot tell why.
And thus, since such trials by all must be met,
We'll take for our motto—"Forgive and forget."

Has some light-uttered word, ne'er meant to cause pain,
Like deep-buried shaft in our heart rankling lain,
And by bitter thoughts has the feeling been stirred,
'Till real seems the wrong which we fancied at first?
With an effort the victory may be gained yet,
By heeding our watchword—"Forgive and forget."

If love's fragile chain thou would'st unbroken keep,
And ne'er o'er its ruins in solitude weep,
Beware then of strifes, for they may destroy
For one careless moment a life-time of joy.
And over thy heart for a guard thou must set
This talisman faithful—"Forgive and forget!"

May this truly be our motto; let it be so impressed upon our minds that we may be able to carry it with us all through life's unwoven journey, for we are all subject to error and if we trust our heavenly Father to forgive our sins we must be ready to forgive others. Knowing that in such meetings long testimonies become tiresome I shall make mine but a little longer, as it is now almost 12 P. M. Only one more thought. 'Tis not in a gay, and thoughtless throng where we find the most joy and contentment.

"Oh not 'tis not among the gay
And thoughtless crowds of earth,
Where dazzling pleasure fills each breast,
And all is joy and mirth,
My heart would ever flutter,
And long to be away,
Their transient joys I would not share,
Or with them wish to stay."

No indeed, Christ is soon coming and those who believe in his appearing should be investing their time in a more profitable employment than seeking the pleasures of this world. Life is too uncertain, we must not delay the work of our Blessed Master.

Your True Sister in Christ,
LYDIA BARNHILL.

The Work Done Inside.

One of my friends is a very earnest, shrewd man, who seems always to know how to do the best thing at the right time. One day he was passing a gin-shop in Manchester, England, when he saw a drunken man lying on the ground. The poor fellow had evidently been turned out of doors when all his money was gone. In a moment my friend hastened across the street, and, entering a grocer's shop, addressing the master, said:

"Will you oblige me with the largest sheet of paper you have?"

"What for, my friend? What's the matter?"

"Oh, you shall see in a minute or two. Please let it be the very largest sheet you have."

The sheet of paper was soon procured.

"Now will you lend me a piece of chalk?" said my friend.

"Why, whatever are you going to do?"

"You shall see presently."

Then he quickly printed, in large letters,

Specimen of the work done inside.

He then fastened the paper over the drunken man, and retired a short distance. In a few moments several passers-by stopped and read aloud, "Specimen of the work done inside."

In a very short time a crowd assembled, and the publican, hearing the noise and laughter outside, came out to see what it was all about. He eagerly bent down and read the inscription on the paper, and then demanded, in an angry voice, "who did that?"

"Which?" asked my friend, who now joined the crowd. "If you mean what is on that paper, I did that; but if you mean the MAN, you did that! This morning when he arose, he was sober—when he walked down this street, on his way to work, he was sober—when he went into your gin-shop he was sober, and now he is what you made him. Is he not a true specimen of the work done inside?"—Rev. Charles Garrett, in Band of Hope Review.

The Best Reference.

A story is related of a young man, many years ago, who went into a store in New York seeking a position as a clerk. Standing in the counting-room, he was informed that he was not wanted.

"But," he said, "I have the best of references," one of which was from a most highly-respected person. He began turning over his valise to find the letter of recommendation. when a book rolled out on the floor.

"What book is that?" sharply asked the merchant.

"It is the Bible," was the answer returned.

"And what are you going to do with that book in New York?"

The unabashed young man looked calmly into the face of the merchant and said:

"I promised my mother I would read it every day, and I shall always do so."

When the wealthy merchant heard these words, he told him he had a place for him. He held his place, and won his way to a partnership in the business, by fidelity to the promise made to his mother to read the Bible. Be true to the Word of God.

Modified Features of the New Interchangeable Milage Ticket.

Mr. E. A. Ford, General Passenger Agent of the Pennsylvania and Vandalia Lines, sends out the following information regarding the modified features of the Central Passenger Association's interchangeable one thousand mile ticket:

The most important modifications are in the rule as to signing the mileage strip and issuing the exchange ticket. Under the new rule the owner of an interchangeable mileage ticket may, at his convenience and leisure sign his name upon the back of the widest part of the mileage strip close to the last preceding detachment, (but it must be signed with an indelible pencil or with ink—or it will not be honored), and can leave his ticket thus signed with the Agent upon his arrival at a station, or send it to him by a messenger or by the hotel porter or in some other way, and upon his return to the station find his exchange ticket ready and his baggage checked; provided he has made such an advance arrangement. Therefore there need be no more delay at the station or on the train in the use of the new than there was in using the old form of milenge ticket, which latter form was good only over one system of roads, while the "Interchangeable" is good over forty.

The old form of exchange ticket is valid for continuous passage only on a certain train and date, while the new or modern form will be good on any train (except the "Limited") on either the date of issue or the day following. This new form has been simplified to render it easy of issue and to better accommodate travelers, and the hindrances which accompanied the old form will therefore be, in the early future, entirely obliterated.

Interline tickets from points on one Railway to points on another, via through car lines and via junctions where connections are close and there are no transfers, are being prepared as fast as possible. These tickets will be issued in exchange for coupons from the interchangeable mileage ticket, and baggage will be checked through—a convenience which could not be enjoyed by the use of the old form of mileage ticket.

The modifications above alluded to have been approved by the Milenge Ticket Bureau of the Central Passenger Association, and will be in effect on or before December 1st, or just as soon as the new forms of exchange and interline tickets can be printed and distributed among the thousands of agencies of the forty different railway companies over whose lines the tickets are honored—and some Agents of the Pennsylvania Lines have been already supplied with them. It is believed that these amendments to a plan which is already successful and popular, will place the new interchangeable mileage ticket beyond the reach of reasonable criticism.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Notice.

WILL our friends please remember that we do not have the books and tracts at this office that are advertized by Brother Joblin, or Brother Wiley Jones. Do not send to this office for them, but send to their address as given in the advertisement. This will save both trouble and delay. PLEASE REMEMBER.

Tract Fund.

We the undersigned, realizing that the distributing of tracts is a good way to spread the truth, and that the time is short in which we can work for the Master, do hereby agree to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purpose of raising a fund to be used in supplying tracts to those who will distribute them free.

Books and Tract List.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

We have received a new supply of this valuable work, which treats of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the one hope, one faith, one baptism, by the late Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. This will need no introduction to many of our readers, as they already know of the good that has been accomplished through its circulation. 10 cents each. Send to this office.

FUTURE PROBATION.

Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Glean Monteriff. This work was issued and sold at 25 cents. We have a good supply and will send them post paid for ten cents per copy. This is an excellent opportunity for any who are interested in this subject to get this work by a talented author. Send ten cents to this office for a copy.

QUESTIONS FOR THINKERS AND THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL.

Is the title of a pamphlet of 96 pages by H. W. Bowman, containing questions on the Eternity of Evil, Predestination, Hell and kindred points. It is well worth reading and will help many who are bothered to give answers many times. We can supply you for 15 cents a copy.

GLAD TIDINGS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

This is the title of a tract containing 12 large size pages, and is a reprint of a work issued many years ago, and we suppose was written by Brother Benjamin Wilson. It is clear and comprehensive, and can be had for 5cts each or 30 for $1.00.

THE COMING NATION.

A lecture delivered by H. V. Reed. Therein he sets forth the idea that the Coming Nation will be the nation of Israel restored to Palestine, and the Scriptural reasons are given. 20 pages price 10 cts or three for 25 cts.

A PARABOLIC BATTLEFIELD, OR ELIJAH'S WATCHCAR.

Is the title of a tract of 32 pages by H. W. Bowman, and is devoted to an exposition of the Rich Man and Lazarus Question. 10 cents a copy.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

A popular lecture by M. Joblin. Very good to put in the hands of those searching for truth. 16 pages 5 cents each.

Necessity of Baptism. A 4-page tract, written some years ago by Brother J. M. Stephenson, and it appeared as a newspaper article. It is so good we thought best to preserve it in this way, and offer it at 2 cents each or 16 cents per dozen.

Bible Plan of Salvation. A 4-page tract telling how to interpret the Scriptures, the development of God's plan, etc. 2 cts each or 15 cts per dozen.

An open Letter to J. V. Conant. A 4-page tract being a letter written by Brother Daniel Howard and printed in RESTITUTION, April 22, 1896. 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Letter to Dr. Talmage. A 4-page tract being a letter written by Sister Abbie A. Howard to Dr. Talmage and printed in the RESTITUTION of April 22, 1896. 2 cents each or 15 cts per dozen.

Modern Events in the Light of Prophecy.—This is the sermon preached by H. V. Reed at Antioch, which has since been printed in tract form, and may be had at this office for five cents each, or 30 copies for $1.00.

Passages Supposed to Teach Consciousness after Death, by W. H. Wilson, which shows that eternal life is conditional and not inherited. 3 cents each, or 25 cents a dozen.

Where Do the Dead Sleep. Three are Bible texts given in answer to this question. A 3-page tract 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Hades. A Bible account of this place with proof texts. Ten copies for 5 cents.

Death Compared to a Sleep. This represents death as a sleep and proof texts are given. Ten copies for 5 cts.

The Wicked Dead and Plain Truths. The two combined. 2 pages ten copies for 10 cents

"Word of Man, vs. Word of God," by H. V. Reed. A contrast between the two. Can be had at this office for 2cts each, or one dozen for 15 cts.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

One Year $1.50. Six Months 75 Cents. Three Months 40 Cents.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as *joint*heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The Faithful Promiser.

Master, I set me to tell that there are texts
Of thy good promises not one hath failed!
And I would send a ringing challenge forth
To all who know thy name, to tell it out.
Thy faithfulness to every written word.
Thy loving kindness crowning all the days.
[illegible] "The Lord is good
His mercy is for ever, and his truth
Is written on each page of all of life!"
Yes! there is tribulation, but thy power
Can bless it with its raising. For sure thorns,
But they have kept us in the narrow ways.
The King's highway of holiness and peace.
[illegible] thy teaching, but the Father's love
Comes through it; and would any trusting heart
Forego the chastening angel to gain the love
And every step back on to "more and more"
From strength to strength thy pilgrims pass and sing
The praise of him who leads them on and on.
From glory unto glory, ever here.

—Frances R. Havergal.

Parables of Salomoun.
Chapter 24.

1. O sun, be not envious of evil men nor inordinately desire to be with them.

2. For their heart meditateth lies and their lips talk drudgery.

3. With wisdom is a house being built, and with understanding is it being made upright.

4. With perception are inner chambers filled with all precious and good riches.

5. More efficient is a wise man than a strong man and a man who hath thoughtfulness than one who hath a great field.

6. With guidance war is carried on, but responsive help is with a heart that hath taken counsel.

7. Wisdom and good objective thought are in the gateways of wise men: Wise men do not incline away from the mouth of the Lord:

8. But they are accounted in joint-councils. Death meeteth the unchaste soul.

9. And the heedless doth judicially in sins, and uncleanness will have polluted a man of influence who is a pestilent fellow.

10. In an evil day and in a day of tribulation until he shall leave off.

11. Deliver those who are being led away to death and lay off those who are being killed; spare not:

12. And if thou sayest I know him not, be aware that the Lord knoweth the hearts of all men: and he who moulded breath for all can knoweth all things; and he giveth in return to each one according to his deeds.

13. Eat honey, O son: For honey-comb is a good thing, that thy throat may be made sweet.

14. In this will will thou apprehend wisdom for thy soul: For if thou find it thine end will be a good one and hope will not forsake thee.

15. Do not lead an irreverent man unto the pasturage (law) of the justified, nor lie thou deceived with the coarse fodder for the belly.

16. For seven times will a justified man fall and arise, but the irreverent will weaken in calamities.

17. If thine enemy fall, do not rejoice over him; and be not uplifted because he has slipped.

18. Because the Lord will see and it will not please him and he will turn away his anger from him.

19. Do not rejoice over evil-doers nor be envious of obdurate sinners.

20. For a wicked man shall not have posterity and the lamp of the irreverent will have been quenched.

21. Fear the God and King and distrust neither of them.

22. For suddenly will they require the irreverent and who will comprehend the punishments of both (these persons)?

23. (22-27 C. V.) There is one who watcheth to guard speech (logos) and the one who accepteth hath accepted him: A son of loss will be without. Let no lie be spoken from a king's tongue, and no lie shall go forth from a king's tongue. A king's forearm is a sword and not a sword of flesh; and whoever shall have been surrendered to it will have been broken in pieces. For a sharpened it lavishly destroyed men with sinews and it devoureth men's bones, and is endeth like a flame so that there is nothing for the young eagles to eat.

24. (Chapter 30 and verses 1, 2, 3, etc., C. V.) O son, fear my words and when thou hast accepted them repent. Thus saith the man to those who have faith in God, and I praise.

25. For I am a most heedless one of all men and men's clumsy thoughtfulness is not in me.

26. God hath taught me wisdom and I know a way of comprehension for saints (or possibly a way to comprehend sacred things).

27. Who hath ascended to heaven and descended thence from? Who hath gathered winds in his bosom? Who hath consolidated water with an outer-garment? Who hath laid controlling hold of all the ends of the earth? Or what is the name of his children?

28. For all the words of God have been purified with fire, and he holdeth a shield over those who respect him.

29. Add not to his words lest he convict thee and thou become a liar.

30. Two things I ask of thee: Do not take away thy grace from me before I die:

31. Cause vanity and false word to be far from me and give me not riches, nor penury, but provide me with things necessary and the things sufficient:

32. That I may not be filled and become a liar and may not have said, Who seeth me? Or become needy and steal and swear in the name of God.

33. Do not surrender a household-servant into the hands of his master, lest perchance he curse thee and thou vanish away.

34. An evil progeny curseth a father and doth not bless the mother.

35. An evil progeny judgeth itself to be justified, but its exodus it hath not washed.

36. An evil progeny hath uplifted eyes and exalteth itself with its eyelids.

37. An evil progeny hath swords for incisor-teeth and incisor-teeth for molars, so as to lavishly destroy and devour the lowly from off the earth and their needy ones from among men.

38. (21-23 C. V.) And this I say for the sake of fully comprehend, namely that it is not a good thing for one to be shamed-faced in judicial-procedure.

39. The one who hath said the irreverent is justified, will be accursed by tribes and hateful to nations.

40. But those who convict will appear better, and upon them will come a blessing.

41. And they will be like lips that answer good words.

42. Make ready thy works for thy departure and prepare thyself for the field and go thy way after me and thou shalt (or will) build thy house.

43. Be not a false witness against thy fellow-citizens nor give latitude to thy lips.

44. Do not say in the way he used me will I use him and pay him for the things in which he wronged me.

45. Like a field as it were is a man of influence devoid of common sense and like a vineyard an ordinary man wanting in sense.

46. If thou dost neglect it, it will have grown up to weeds and become all grassy and forsaken and the stone fences get dug down.

47. Afterward I myself repented and regarded to prefer chastening.

48. I drowse little and I sleep a little, and I fold my hands upon my breast a little:

49. But if thou do this thy penury (lint) goeth its way on before thee will come and thy want like a good runner.

50. (30-45 C. V.) The leech had three daughters beloved in a loving way and these three did not satisfy her and the fourth did not avail to make her say enough.

51. Hades and a woman's generic love and earth that is not filled with water, and water and fire will not say it enough.

52. And [illegible] that kindleth and a further that dishonoreth an aged mother, may ravens from the ravines have plucked it out and young eagles have devoured it.

53. Now there are three things that I am unable to apprehend and the fourth I do not fully comprehend, namely:

54. The track of a flying eagle and the ways of a serpent on a rock and the paths of a vessel sailing the open sea and the ways of a man in his youth.

55. Such is the way of an adulteress that when she hath acted her part and washed herself, she saith, I have done nothing out of place.

56. The earth is shaken by three things, but the fourth it cannot bear.

57. If a housekeeper shall become a king and a person devoid of good sense be filled with food,

58. And a house-maid cast out her mistress and a hateful wife shall get a good husband.

59. And there are four least things upon the earth, and these are wiser than the wise men.

60. The ants who have no mighty strength and who make ready their sustenance in summer;

61. And the hedge-hogs who are not a strong nation, have made their own houses in rocks;

62. The locust is without a king and he marcheth in well ordered ranks by one command;

63. And a lizzard attacking with its hands and though easy to take, taketh up its abode in the walled places of kings.

64. And there are three things that go their way easily and a fourth that passeth through nobly.

65. A lion's whelp that is stronger than domestic animals and that doth not turn away nor cower at a domestic animal;

66. And a rooster that walketh about with good courage among hens; and a he-goat that leadeth a goat-herd; and a king who is a working-man in a nation.

67. If thou [illegible] note thyself with rejoicing and extend thy hand in battle, thou wilt have been dishonored.

68. Churn milk and it will be butter; but if thou wring noses, blood will come forth.

69. If thou prolongest words legal proceedings and battles will come forth.

70. (Chap. xxxi. 1, 2, 3, etc. to 9th verse C. V.) The following words of mine were spoken by God's king, an oracular saying namely with which his mother chastened him.

71. What, O child, shall thou watch to keep (esoterically)? What? God's oracular sayings: To thee am I saying it, O thou my son, my first-born; What, O child of my womb? What, O child of my vows?

72. Do not give thy wealth to women and thy mind and livelihood to inferior counsel.

73. With counsel do all things: with counsel drink wine. Men of influence are passionately disposed and they should not make wine a beverage.

74. That they may not drink and ignore wisdom, and be unable to judge the weak uprightly.

75. Give drunkenness to those in sorrow and the drink of wine to those in extreme woe.

76. That they may have ignored their penury and not have remembered their painful-toil any more.

77. Open thy mouth with God's Word and judge all men healthfully: open thy mouth and judge justly, and discriminate in behalf of the needy and weak.

COMMENT.

The 24th chapter continues this divine instruction by precept and example; but rises in many places into the higher spiritual realm of the coming age and the coming life. Some of the principles and dicta of the sermon on the Mount are here in embryo. Wonderful tinkering has occurred in this chapter, tinkering in form and substance with the oracular Word. The reader will please compare verse by verse with the accepted translations and see if he does not perceive some evidence of the trail of the serpent.

The 15th verse reads like Christ's own teaching and correlates with such passages as "Cast not your pearl before swine" and "I have many things to say unto you, but ye are not able to bear them now" etc. The 17th and 18th verses remind us of "But I say unto you, Love your enemies and do good unto those who despitefully use you, etc."

Who are "The God and King" of the 21st verse? The 23d verse is especially peculiar and has not only been tampered with, but taken out of its place in this chapter and made the 27th verse of the 29th C. V. What there is left of it, which is hardly recognizable.

From and including the 21th verse, 33 verses remunbered and made a separate chapter called chapter 30 C. V. and R. V. Is it probable that the original Greek text did not follow the original Hebrew text in form as well as substance when done by Hebrew rabbis who were sticklers for the letter and had been so taught? Then the reader will perceive that the thought has been materially changed as well as the form here as well as elsewhere—and in every instance lowered from its high plane and oracular significance. The 25th and 26th verses are Salomoun's confession of weakness and inconsistency of life in view of his great gift of wisdom and teaches us that we all, Salomoun included "have this treasure in earthen vessels."

What are the 27th, 28th and 29th verse if not oracular? Or what higher wisdom for this life has been reached in any philosophy than that contained in the 30th, 31st and 32nd verses?

Re-read Christ's language to the Scribes and Pharisees of his day in the 35th, 36th and 37th verses and his justification of using it in the conduct they exemplified. The 38th verse has been made the 23d of the 24th chap. C. V. and R. V. and the thought very materially changed so that no reader will observe by comparison. This verse is really the assertion of a first premise for a logical discourse on judicial procedure in a commonwealth and the individual duties and obligations in the way of honest testimony, devolving upon each citizen in such a community to do his part in the fear of God alone and not of men. Every good citizenship club will do well to study this sermon beginning with the 38th verse and ending with the 48th.

The 50th and 51st verses which together constitute a parable on the insatiety of inordinate desire have been made the 15th and 16th of the 30th chapter C. V. and R. V. and the 52nd has been made the 17th verse of the same, the 53rd the 18th and so on to the 29th, the balance of the chapter 23d C. V. From the 50th to the 76th both inclusive is in the C. V. 15 to 33 both inclusive. Some changes have been made in the R. V. For instance in the 28th verse "the spider" becomes "the lizzard" as it ought to be; but in the 26th verse "the conies" of the C. V. still stands in the R. V. as a monument of poor scholarship where "the hedge-hogs" ought to be. "Conies" are rabbits and they do not "make their houses in the rocks; but hedge-hogs do.

Also "the rooster" (or cock among the hens) in the 31st verse still remains a "grey-hound" or a "war-horse" in the C. V. "You pays your money and takes your choice."

Civic reformers and socialists might make a point on the kind of a king spoken of in the 31st verse moreover.

These last fifteen verses taken as a whole constitute a disjointed collection of aphorisms or as Salomoun calls them in the first chapter "wise sayings of wise men." There is meat in them, which we have not time now to mastic ate.

Feet Washing.

Editor Restitution:

With your permission I will write a short article relative to a subject which, at this time is almost wholly ignored by professors of Christianity. I refer to the subject of feet washing. The question is, as to whether Christ gave it to his Apostles as a command-ment, to be observed by them after the night in which he washed their feet at supper was ended.

The position has been taken recently in THE RESTITUTION, that, as it was a custom in those days to wear sandals, their feet were dirty. In reply to this I wish to say that before eating the Passover Supper the people were required to purify themselves by washing. Therefore I conclude the Apostles had washed. And by taking the record as given by Matthew, Mark and Luke, they had partaken of the Passover with Christ. At the conclusion of that supper, the Lord introduced a Memorial Supper to be kept up until he comes again. In John xiii. 4, we read: "He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel and girded himself." Can there be any question as to what supper is alluded to? It certainly was the Passover and the Lord's Supper.

Then the 5th verse says: "After that he poureth water into a basin, and began to wash the disciple's feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded." 6th verse, "Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and Peter saith unto him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet? Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter. Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me."

When Jesus said this what a change came over Peter. He was then willing to have his feet, hands and head washed rather than he denied having any part thereafter with Christ. He was told then that they were not all clean having reference to Judas, who would betray him. I conclude therefore that the washing of their feet was not to remove the dirt or filth of the flesh; but for a very different purpose. A lesson of humility is the natural conclu- sion.

This by one writer is admitted. Then if these disciples were in need of that lesson is it not a logical conclusion that disciples of later date would need the same lesson especially in this time, when there is more pride than at any time in past history? Now to the question, was it given to them as a commandment? Verses 13-17, "Ye call me Master and Lord; and ye say well; for so I am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you. Verily, verily I say unto you, the servant is not greater than his Lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

Feet washing is evidently one of the things, and the Lord's Supper the other. For eating the Passover was at an end "Until it is fulfilled in the kingdom of God." In 1st Timothy v. 9, 10, Paul tells the Church what one of the qualifications of a widow to be taken in charge is: "That ye have washed the saints' feet."

Now concerning the ancient custom of feet washing I find that, even angels who visited Abraham and Lot were told to wash their feet. Gen. xviii. 4; xix. 2.

Summary—Christ and the Apostles including Judas, ate the Passover together which closed that type. Then immediately Christ instituted the Supper to be kept by his disciples, covering the time to his second coming, and the washing of the feet of each other to keep them in that humility so as each could esteem others as better than themselves; and in honor preferring each other. This course brings them on an equality—no great I's and little I's.

In hope,
RICHARD CORBALEY.

Eternal Salvation.

"And being made perfect he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." Then it is the obedient that obtain eternal salvation. Is there any promise then to the disobedient? Had we not then all better obey? Christ learned obedience by the things he suffered. Must we not learn obedience as well as suffer for Christ?

The captain of our salvation. To make the captain of our salvation perfect through suffering. Can we become perfect in our captain and not suffer for his name and his cause? If we enlist under our captain, must we not follow our captain? Can we be soldiers and not follow our captain? "Let us think on these things." Heb. ii. 15; v. 8-9.

"Having obtained eternal redemption for us." "Once entered into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us." If our High Priest has done so much for us, must we not work for him? We must work under our leader if we ever receive the promise of eternal inheritance. Christ obeyed his Father. We must obey our leader. "Now unto them that look for him will he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Do we love his appearing? Are we looking for him? or are we absorbed in the other things? Let us look well to our standing; where are we religiously? Heb. ix. 12-15. "In the world to come everlasting life." Jesus told his apostles what they should have in this life, with persecution, and in the world to come everlasting life. Luke xviii. 30; Mark x. 30; Rom. ii. 7.

Paul tells us by seeking for glory, honor, immortality, we will receive eternal life, which is the gift of God through Christ our Lord. In this life while we have our health, and the right use of our reasoning powers. If we ever get eternal life, eternal inheritance, eternal deliverance, eternal redemption, eternal weight of glory—those eternal things are unseen, the temporal things are seen. I say, if ever we obtain all of those eternal things, we must keep ourselves unspotted from the world. Let us work on the [illegible] our Master's work. Then when the Master calls for us he can say, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." Christ will never say this unto us unless it is strictly true. Christ us remember this, all of us, the Master will call for his servants soon. Let us be ready, we have no time to lose.

"A Word of Love and Warning."

The above was the caption to advertisements in newspapers, on handbills, and posters, sent all over Chicago, advertising five different meetings, at the same hour, in different sections of this city, by five different evangelists proclaiming the soon coming of Jesus to rule over the nations. What means this universal proclamation of the near coming of Jesus to reign? Is it the midnight cry, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh?" These evangelists hire expensive halls and theatres, and take up no collections. One meeting was held in Central Music Hall, on State Street, the rent of which, I understand, is about one hundred dollars a night.

THE JEWS ARE WAKING UP ALSO.

Mrs. Kathleen Mrazik, the converted Hungarian Jewess, a descendant of one of the first Hebrew families of Europe, will speak for the Church of God in Chicago, on Sunday morning, December 12, in Hall A, VanBuren Opera House, on the N. W. Cor. of Madison Street and California Avenue. Her subject will be: "Israel, Past, Present, and Future."

Any brother or sister passing through the city, on December 12th, will find it of great interest to come and listen to her.

W. H. WILSON.

According to statistics, the number of yearly telephonic conversations in the United States is 75,000,000; of telegraphic messages, 65,000,000; of are lights, 1,000,000; of incandescent, 15,000,000; and several hundred thousand electric motors. There are 1,000 electric railways. It is estimated that to 2,500,000 persons in this country electricity contributes a means of livelihood.

An English mission in India has won a notable convert, a famous scholar, who has travelled widely, even to Thibet, to preach Hindooism. He attributes his conversion to the Bible alone.

The Restitution.

EDITORIAL STAFF
Directors of the C. P. Association.

M. JOBLIN, Corresponding Editor.

PLYMOUTH, IND. DECEMBER 8, 1897.

The Success of "The Restitution" Depends on You.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

The success, the very existence, of THE RESTITUTION depends on your action or inaction. We cannot keep it alive without the aid of every one of our friends. If you want it to be issued remember you are the party who can make it or break it. The publisher cannot do, only as you say he shall. We believe there is a work yet to be done before the Master comes, and that we each have a duty to perform, and that THE RESTITUTION is still needed in the prosecution of this work. Do you believe this? Do you think because you have believed and obeyed the gospel that your work is done and you have nothing more to do? Can a co-worker with him be satisfied with sitting down with hands folded? Surely no one can think so. All, each one, must be up and doing. We cannot afford after the long service many have given, to miss the reward now.

Then, if this be so, and we think there can be no doubt of it, we must ask every friend of THE RESTITUTION to at once renew for 1898, and also try and influence some friend of yours to be a friend of the paper. The work is in your hands. How will you treat it? Please act today. Right now. Do not leave it for a more convenient time. Act promptly.

Remember the Poor.

There are some who have taken THE RESTITUTION for many years who are by various circumstances forced to say they cannot longer pay. Some are now old, and having lost husband or wife, are dependent on those who have no interest in the Bible for their temporal support. Others have lost their all in some way, their increment off, and they unable longer to labor. A few from each one will send papers to the Lord's poor. For the publisher to bear any large share of this is impossible, simply because he has no means to do it with. Shall such be cut off, or will you contribute so that some one may be calling blessings on your head. We think this is neglected by some who are able to aid this branch of work, through failing to realize the earnest need of each. You who have plenty, and can have whatever your fancy calls for, and think there are none so poor, but if they wanted to, could get the money some time during the year, you surely do not know the dire straits in which many of our brethren and sisters are placed. If you did we feel sure that this helping fund would never lack when a call is made, but would have a balance always to draw on. O brethren, you who have plenty, do wake up to see this need.

We are Sorry

To say that some are apparently negligent. A farmer has 1000 bushels of wheat, and sells it for one dollar a bushel, and get $1000. This can be put in the bank, and as he needs money for any purpose, all he has to do is to go to the banker and get it. It is kept safely awaiting his demand. Another farmer with the same amount of grain but a little different in quality, his friends wishing to try his kind of wheat, kindly sells to each one a single bushel, until he has 1000 men each owing him $1.00. When he wants to use some money, to get it he must go and ask these men separately, and as the amount each owes is so small, they reason that it does not make much difference about hurrying to pay him, as a single dollar will not help him much. It is just so with some subscribers to a paper. The amount each owes being small it cannot make much difference to the publisher about being prompt in remitting, as the little will not be much service to him. Consequently many neglect, get careless, and do not send through sheer thoughtlessness. Brethren, apply the rule "Put yourself in his place," a few moments. We do not wish to incur the expense and labor of sending bills to the many that owe us. It is not right to force this to be done, so we ask you kindly yet earnestly to examine your account, and if you owe us anything, do please send us the amount at once. We cannot tell you in words how badly we need it, and that right now. Do not neglect this call. Please do not.

Our Christmas Love Feast.

For some years past a very profitable and pleasant feature of our paper has been the Annual Love Feast, consisting of short letters from all over the country, expressing the faith and hope that animates our hearts. Let us have another one this year, brethren and sisters. Let it be better than ever before, inasmuch as we are so much nearer the prize than a year ago. We live in a fast age, and a year now seems to count more than ever a single year did before. So much does happen in such short time that we are lost in contemplating the lightning rapidity of passing events. Truly time hastens. Let each one, all, old and young, who have a word for the Master, not hesitate but speak right out. No fear that what you say will not be as good as some other's speech. This is a family affair, with no great attempt at "style." Don't give some one a "edge," nor "ride a hobby," but speak a "word for Jesus." Do not wait for Christmas with its cares to come before you write, but write and send now so as to be in time. We want the whole paper full of these letters. Let us have a good "social meeting."

THE Bible class papers sent by Bro. Joblin were crowded out of last week's issue by the matters pertaining to the Indiana Conference. They are good and appear this week. More such will be acceptable.

IN the address of D. E. VanVactor published in last issue, about the middle of fourth paragraph substitute "carnality" for "casuality," and same paragraph next to last line read "communizing" for "encouraging."

BROTHER D. T. Halstead commenced meetings at the Union Church near Maxenkuckee Lake, this county, on Saturday night last to continue indefinitely. Brother Halstead is an able expounder of the Word, and we trust will sow some seed there that will bear fruit for the harvest time.

THROUGH the courtesy of Mr. R. F. Horner, General Passenger Agent of the Nickel Plate R. R., we have on our wall a six-color, lithograph Map of Alaska. We are just beginning to realize in some measure the extent and resources of this country, and this map shows all so clear and distinct that we shall value it highly. Thanks for the favor.

READER, the year's settling time is fast approaching. Are you posting your accounts? Jesus is coming with his rewards. What will he bring you? He will bring no reward for you if you are not a fruit-bearing branch of the vine. Brother, sister, what have you done for this year? What do you propose to do, if spared another year?

MANY an old-time brother and sister will remember the trenchant articles from the pen of Brother George Mayer in the Herald of the Kingdom, Gospel Banner and THE RESTITUTION, in defense of "the faith once delivered to the saints;" and they will rejoice to see him again dealing out food for God's children, in these days of itching ears and unstable minds—always seeking some new thing, before they have mastered the old.

WE give in this issue an article by Bro. Corlumby on the subject of "Feet Washing." With the publication of this we will ask that the discussion of the subject be discontinued for the present. An able writer a short time since gave an article on "the other side," and as all the "Scripture" has now been given, a further discussion would be only man's opinion. Any one feeling it their "duty" should be allowed to practice it, and others the contrary, always remembering that each must answer before the Judge.

SINCE the close of the Indiana Conference the meetings at Plymouth have been kept going by Bro. and Sister Woodward each evening. The attendance has been very good and the interest more than ordinary. Four have been added to the church by baptism, and others seem much impressed by the preaching, which has been largely doctrinal and very instructive to those disposed to reason and consider. Bro. Woodward was at Argos a few nights last week and continued the meeting opened by Bro. Halstead at that place. He left Saturday for Michigan where he had appointments, having arranged to return to Argos a part of this week, then going to Warren Co., next Sunday. The meetings here will probably close early this week, as Sister Woodward goes to Rensselaer to visit her son, Bro. F. L. Austin. These two Michigan evangelists, have by their faithful work and loving hearts endeared themselves to us in Indiana, so that we have no hesitation in [illegible] calling them to all wherever t[illegible] They are in earnest, yo[illegible] time for calling out a [illegible] name is now very short[illegible] blessing be with them ev[illegible] the ones who have so lately started in the Christian life ever prove faithful and true.

Again We Rejoice.

Another has accepted the invitation to God's kingdom and glory, and how could we help rejoicing? On Sunday the 28th of Nov. we had the unspeakable pleasure of assisting another to take upon her the saving name of Christ. This, our latest born babe, Rosey Smith, has come all the way out of the mother of all the names and denominations in so-called Christendom. She had never owned a copy of the Scriptures, or read them, although brought up as a Catholic and attended Sunday school and the public services till some 13 or 14 years of age. At that time she ceased to be under the immediate oversight of her parents and quit going to Sunday school and church. Not long since she went to live with one of our sisters, from whom she learned the glad tidings from God to mankind; and, learning to love it, was eager to obey it. Many earnest and loving words were spoken to her, by brethren and sisters as we sat around the Lord's table, and we trust their influence will never die out till the Master appears. According to promise, he who died for us and rose again was with us; and we sat together in heavenly places with him, and had a foretaste of the time when we shall be made like him, and be ever with him. May the glad day soon roll around.

Destiny of the Wicked.

Paul was a man who felt intensely and spoke forcibly. He shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God. Yet, although he refers many times to the end of the wicked, he never describes it as endless agony, but invariably in such terms as "death," "destruction," "perish," "corruption," etc. These words cannot be made to mean eternal torment. What has so-called orthodoxy to offer in opposition to these definite expressions? Their writings teem with such phrases as the following: "The wicked will live for ever in eternal suffering." "The wicked will never die."—(James Grant.) "shall never be consumed." (Jonathon Edwards). Could the Scriptures be more flatly contradicted? We seldom find a numerous family of children who are at all near what their parents could wish they were,—indeed children in such families often pass out of life whose lives are known to have been vile, and the idea that their own flesh and blood will have to suffer through eternal ages almost prostrate the parents, at first. But, as it seems so awful a doom, they almost imperceptibly come to think that a good God could not be so cruel as that,—and therefore the Bible (which is supposed to teach the blasphemous doctrine) is not true, or, does not mean what it says; in either case it is thrown out as useless. Let all such turn once more to the Grand Old Book and see that the wages of sin is death, first, last and all the way through. If not fit to live always death is their doom; they are so utterly destroyed that they shall be as though they never had been. How infinitely better this than eternal torment.

"B'lindness in Part."

A short time ago, Bro. W. H. Wilson gave us the evidence that blindness in part, only, is as true of Israel today as it was in Paul's day. The germ of faith and obedience is still found in some of Abraham's seed fleshwise, and it makes us glad; as does the evidence that the knowledge of the truth is gaining ground in all directions, and frequently in places little expected. And if the chains of tradition bind them so tightly now, that they cannot be taken out for world-rulers in the age to come, might we not hope that the people at large will in some measure be prepared to become loyal subjects of the new administrators of this world's affairs, when the proclamation is made that the kingdoms of this world have been transferred to our Lord and his Anointed?

In a private letter dated Austin, Ill., Nov. 9, Bro. Wilson gave us a much fuller account of those children of Abraham who lately were discovered by him, and knowing how deeply the household of faith is interested in our Lord's brethren according to the flesh, we think they should all have the privilege of reading its inspiring lines, which are as follows:—

Bro. Joblin:

There is something very remarkable about these Jewish converts. I cannot account for it unless God's hand is in it directly. The history in brief, is as follows:

I frequently spend the noon hour at Willard Hall prayer meeting. One noon, different speakers had been playing on the word Gibraltar, among them a little Jewish lady arose, and held up her Bible, and said, "This is my Gibraltar, a stronger and more impregnable one than that in the Mediterranean Sea. I have been all over that, but that my Bible is a more impregnable fortress than that. For a few moments she poured forth her faith in the coming of Jesus, and the resurrection of the dead, at his coming. I felt a strong desire to have an interview with her, but I didn't then. After awhile it was given out that a converted Hungarian Jewess would speak on the Second Coming of Christ. I went to hear her, and Oh what burning words she poured forth as she heralded the coming of Jesus to reign on David's throne. I had no opportunity to see her then. After awhile she spoke again, on the topic, enlarging upon her theme. It was grand, she perfectly electrified her audience. She also spoke of her baptism, how she was not sprinkled, but immersed, buried with Christ in baptism. After this, I told one of the ladies in charge that I wanted to see her. She was brought to me, and I extended an invitation to her to come and speak to our church on the Second Coming of Christ. She accepted the invitation. She came at the appointed time. She says to me do you baptize? I said yes. She says, give me your hand! Now, I say, I want to ask you a question. Do you believe you have immortality by nature independent of Christ? "Indeed, and I do not," she says, I do not believe in the immortality of the soul. She said the doctrine of eternal life through Christ knocked on the head the eternal torment theory. She says no man taught me this, I learned it myself from the Bible.

I have heard a great deal, but I never heard such an effective discourse on the second coming of Christ in all my life. It was sent home to the heart with power. We often send it home direct to the HEART, but she drove it home to the HEART. Sitting on the platform with her, I could see many eyes wet with tears. Oh, what a lesson this has taught me. It took that little Jewess to show me how to preach the gospel with power. It makes me ashamed, and need to hide my faces in the dust to realize that we have been of so little service to our dear Master. She would work herself up into spells of impassioned eloquence, not a studied eloquence, but that which is born of a warm heart. Oh, she says, "when I think of these things I become intoxicated." One sister after singing, was so wrapt in thought that she forgot to sit down when the rest did. She had some of her converts there, and said she desired to have them baptized next Sunday. She said they were well instructed. I talked to them some on the things necessary to be believed before baptism. Bro. James W. did also. Next Sunday I baptized five, three of them Jews. One was a Jewess, a daughter of Rabbi Moses, now she is cast off, and disowned, but I trust owned by our Heavenly Father.

With regard to Mrs. Mrazik our lecturer, her maiden connection is with one of the wealthiest Jewish families of Europe, next to the Rothschilds. Now this little woman, not much larger than our daughter Jessie, has abandoned her kindred, wealth, and earthly pleasure. What for? to preach Jesus as the Christ, the heir to David's throne. She says, "All I live for is the second coming of Christ." To do this she has abandoned wealth and lives in poverty. She has nothing but what is given her. Yet she says to me, "I am rich." Yes, thank God, the riches Jesus will bring with him, far exceed all earthly riches.

She will speak for us again on Sunday, Nov. 14. Subject the Restoration of Israel.

Say, my brother don't you see God's hand in this? God is moving as never before. Next spring the "42 months," or 1260 years in which the Gentiles were to tread down the Holy City ends. What then? What next? God help us! We need it.

Yours in Christ?

Conference Report.

Report of the Annual Conference of the Church of God held at Bitter Creek, Kansas.

Our meetings were held in the Kansas and Missouri gospel tent, beginning Oct. 29th and closing Nov. 7th. Meeting with the brethren seemed like a great feast, a foretaste of the life we so earnestly seek for, when "there will be no more parting, sickness and heartaches will not be there." "Love will flow as the waters cover the sea." We trust all who were present were impressed with the thought that, "This life is a dressing room in which we are preparing for eternity," and that they were brought to realize the full meaning, extent, beauty and grandeur of eternal life. Now will they not meditate and realize how little is asked of them to make them heirs to all of those "great and precious promises."

The meetings were interspersed with social edifications, which we consider a great aid and promoter to success of all religious efforts. At one of these meetings Sister H. L. Vickery on her eighty-first birthday and as she expressed that owing to her age and declining health it might be her last opportunity to talk to the church, stood up, and in a clear voice and earnest manner spoke to them concerning "love." Many of us have been admonished by her for years and it seems she touches us as none other can touch. May we try not only to remember her words but to live by them.

Bro. Wilcox conducted a Bible class every afternoon which was very interesting. He has dug deep for the hidden treasures of the Bible. He created in his class a desire for more of the Bible's riches and precious knowledge.

The young people read papers on Sunday afternoon which showed by their preparation they were earnest and alert to their duties.

During the afternoon two were immersed.

At the business meeting the following officers were elected: Bro. Wm. Hadicke, Pres.; Bro. H. M. Williams, Vice Pres.; Sister Ella Vickery, Sec'y.; Sister Carrie Chambers, Ass't Sec'y.; Sister Lydia Chaplin, Cor. Sec'y.; Bro. I. M. Vickery, Treas. The Conference made some changes in its organization, adopting the Articles which will be found appended hereto.

The next yearly Conference is to be held next fall at Blackwell, Oklahoma.

WM. HADICKE, Pres.
ELLA W. VICKERY, Sec.

KANSAS AND OKLAHOMA.

Articles of Organization of the Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith for Southern Kansas and Oklahoma.

Sec. 1. The name of the organization shall be, The Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith for Southern Kansas and Oklahoma.

Sec. 2. The territory to be embraced within its boundaries is, all that part of the State of Kansas south of the southern line of Miami County, and the Territory of Oklahoma.

Sec. 3. This Conference is organized for the purpose of promoting a closer union and co-operation among those of like precious faith in the work of the gospel.

Sec. 4. The Bible of the Old and New Testaments shall constitute our only rule of faith and practice, and Christian life and character our only bond of fellowship.

Sec. 5. By Christian character we understand the character of an immersed believer in the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, the Life Giver, as explained and defined in the Holy Scriptures.

Sec. 6. The membership of this Conference shall consist of churches and isolated individuals in sympathy with the foregoing declaration of faith and practice who desire to co-operate with us.

Sec. 7. The officers of this organization shall consist of a President, Vice President, Secretary, Assistant Secretary, Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer, whose duties shall be those usually discharged by such officers respectively.

Sec. 8. It shall be the duty of the treasurer to report to the Conference annually all monies received and expended.

Sec. 9. No monies shall be paid out by the Treasurer of this association except upon an order signed by the President and Secretary.

Sec. 10. This Conference [illegible] act at a regular meeting and employ one or more evangelists every year within its bounds at such salary as may be agreed upon from year to year, who shall hold tent meetings during the tent season, and during the remainder of the year in such places as may be secured.

Sec. 11. All evangelists shall make an annual report to the Conference of all monies received by them and how expended, which report shall be published in THE RESTITUTION. They will also make a report to the treasurer of all receipts since their last report, when drawing on him for money, or as often as the Treasurer may require.

Sec. 12. All members of churches or isolated persons affiliating with this Conference are expected to contribute such a sum as their means allow for the support of one or more evangelists in the field, and all monies shall be paid directly to the evangelist from time to time, who shall account therefor to the Treasurer.

Sec. 13. All churches belonging to this Conference shall be present at its annual meeting by at least one delegate besides its pastor, but the right to vote at any meeting of this Conference is extended to the isolated members who are present as well as the delegates.

Sec. 14. All ministers who are members of this Conference are expected to be present at every annual meeting and report their work in the gospel for the previous year, or give sufficient reason for their absence.

Sec. 15. All churches who belong to this Conference shall hold a meeting quarterly, fixing the time as they see fit, but the last meeting of the Conference year shall be held at least one week before the date set for the meeting of the Annual Conference, and at such meeting a full report of the previous year shall be made and forwarded to the Annual Conference.

Sec. 16. The time and place for the meeting of the Annual Conference shall be determined by the Evangelical Committee from year to year when the same is not fixed by the Conference itself at a regular meeting.

Sec. 17. All ministers who are members of the Conference shall carry a certificate of their membership signed by its President and Secretary and good for one year from date but such certificate shall only be issued by the authority of this Conference at a regular meeting and shall constitute the only evidence of the good standing and membership of such minister.

Sec. 18. The President, Vice President, Secretary, Assistant Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, Treasurer and Evangelist shall constitute ex-officio a standing Evangelical Committee to direct the Evangelical work of the year, and to devise ways and means as a financial committee for carrying on the work and to contract with the Evangelist. And they may select a fit person to act in that capacity until the next regular meeting of the Conference, in case the Conference failed to elect one at its last meeting, or fill any vacancy which may occur in any office.

Sec. 19. All churches who desire membership in this association shall signify the same by a majority vote at a regular meeting and shall convey the same to the Secretary by a resolution signed by the Elder, Deacon, and countersigned by the clerk; and all isolated persons that signify their desire to unite by letter to be put on file by the Secretary of the Association.

Question.

Dear Bro. Underwood:

Permit me to enquire through THE RESTITUTION. Does the blood of Christ as mentioned in the Scriptures ever mean his moral life?

Yours for the truth as it is in Jesus.
P. H. BOYK.

During the last few years nearly 150,000 Hebrews have entered Jerusalem, and the arrival of another host is said to be imminent. Already the railways are opening the country between the coast and Jerusalem and Damascus, and a Hebrew migration on a large scale may cause Syria to become once more of vast importance in the East.

Important deposits of lithographic stone have been discovered in New Caledonia. It is of fine texture, light color, and contains more than 80 per cent of carbonate of lime.

The Bible has been translated, as a whole or in parts, into seventy of the 338 languages and 152 dialects spoken in Africa.

The largest number of tracks in any German railway passenger station is at Frankfurt—twenty-one—Munich coming next with sixteen.

Poetry.

The Unknown Glory.

"Eye hath not seen nor ear heard," etc.
O brave one standing a picket guard,
For the army of the Lord,
Through the chill of night in the face of the foe.
Have ye ever heard the word,

How that eye hath never seen the like
Of the country over there,
Nor beheld on earthly king such crown
As the conquering saint shall wear?

O sorrowing ones who have trusted so,
Through the dark of your earthly way,
The hand unseen that is leading you
Leads surely unto day.

Ye can never think what waiteth you,—
What sweetness of surprise—
When the veil that shadows your mortal life
Shall be lifted from your eyes.

O worn ones walking the pilgrim way,
Ye never can know how fair
Is the land your feet are leading toward,
Over the river there.

O loving ones who lay down your lives
By the little, day by day,
For the sake of him who gave his own
With the cross of Calvary—

Who gathered the skirts of his glory up,
And went to the Father's throne—
Your hearts have never conceived the things
He will bring when he comes for his own.

O loyal ones who have waited so
For the Holy King's return—
Who have felt your eyes fill up with tears
And your heart within you burn,

For the promise of the white-robed ones,
And the angel's Bethlehem hymn,
The love that hath filled your hearts so full,
And made your eyes so dim,

Is only an earnest of heavenly joy:—
Who hath given so much hath still
A store of his own love's sweetness left,
Your chalice of life to fill.

O dying one, smile on the future life—
It will all be what is best;
For a God who hath made a world like this,
Can be trusted for all the rest.

Bible Class Papers.

"Thanksgiving" was considered an appropriate theme for the evening before the National Day for Thanksgiving; and as one of the speakers spoke with tenderness of many lonely ones in the far West and other sections, and wished they could be with us and enjoy our Thanksgiving supper, we thought it would not be amiss to present to the scattered ones a part of our bill of fare; and this we propose to do with the kind consent of Bro. Underwood. We would have been glad to have given the addresses of the extempore speakers, but that is not possible. After stirring songs suitable for the occasion, and prayer by one of the brethren, the feast began as follows:

We read, "To everything there is a season, and a time for every purpose under heaven." Thanksgiving day has been observed with religious exercises since the time of the Puritans, and has been a national holiday since 1862. I cannot say when the solemn "turk," the powerful mince pie, and the terrible foot-ball usurped the chief place in the minds of the people.

This is Thanksgiving eve 1897, so no subject can be more appropriate than that of "giving thanks." David in the Psalm we have read exhorted the children of Israel to give thanks to the God of gods and Lord of lords, for many specific and particular blessings received at his hands. Paul the apostle to the Gentiles, is more sweeping, saying to the Ephesians "Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord, Jesus Christ.

In common with most of mankind we have many, indeed, immmerable temporal blessings for which we should be thankful. We know how pleasing is the gratitude of those on whom we have bestowed favors, and how deeply ingratitude wounds. Shakespeare wrote: "Sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thoughtless child." We can, therefore realize in some degree that sincere acknowledgments of blessings past and prospective are most pleasing to our Heavenly Father. I always thank God for his mercies, and pray that I may be truly thankful. If we are sincerely grateful we will do our utmost to please the donor. Of all people in the world what a debt of gratitude we owe! As Bro. Joblin says: "Blessed with a measure of health and strength, and our lives cast in pleasant places," but above and beyond all freed from errors' chain and brought to a knowledge of God's wonderful purpose: children of God: called to be saints, and if overcomers partakers of immortal life in the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior.

Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his spirit. Yes; bless his holy name, we know something about it, and the prospect cheers us.

"O magnify the Lord with me and let us exalt his name together." Offer unto God thanksgiving and pay thy vows unto the Most High.

Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms, for the Lord is good, his mercy is everlasting and his truth endureth to all generations.

Bert Long.

One day in the whole year is set apart by the authorities for thanksgiving but ought not we to be thankful always? We of the household of faith have much more to be thankful for than the so called Christian. We are told in Phil. iv. 6, "In every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." And in Col. iv. 2, "Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving." So we are not to give thanks once a year merely, but to continue in prayer and thanksgiving. No doubt but each of us have many personal matters to be thankful for, but as a church we ought to be thankful that we still have these places of assembly where we may come twice each week to be built up in our most holy faith and be exhorted to have more earnestness for the cause of truth; also for the officers of the church whose earnest desire is for the welfare of each member, and whatever course they may take we must accept it knowing that they do it to the glory of God. We also rejoice that through the efforts of our Bro. Joblin and others the light of the glorious gospel has reached so many during the past year.

We are told to give thanks in all things and at all times. A Christian ought always to be in this frame of mind. We have Jesus as our example, for we find that he gave thanks in all things. If we have not the spirit of Christ we are none of his. There are many other things for which we should be thankful; but I will only mention one more and that is, how especially thankful we should be that the light of the glorious gospel ever reached our ears and that we accepted it. Let us all rejoice in the knowledge of the truth and be more thankful for the privileges we enjoy and may we ever have our lamps trimmed and burning, that we may receive an abundant entrance into God's glorious kingdom. Amen.

Mattie Tomlinson.

We read in the Scriptures of two classes, one who murmured, and the one who gave thanks. These same classes are in the world today. The rulers of the land may command their subjects to meet together and render unto God, praise and thanksgiving for bounteous harvests, for continuance of peace," etc. But following the example of these rulers, the people will remember only to praise their own wisdom and ability, to secure wealth and honor, and congratulate themselves that "they have much goods laid up for many years; that they may eat drink and be merry, while others into whose hands these bounteous gifts have not fallen, toil on, and say that God is unjust who has allowed such unfair divisions of his gifts, and they want not such a God to rule over them. These know not the true God nor care to know him; they equally worship mammon.

But we who have received the love of God in our hearts are commanded not to murmur, 1 Cor. x. 10., but to continue in prayer, and to watch in the same with thanksgiving, Col. iv. 2. Such need not a day set apart, once a year to remember God. He is ever the guest of their thoughts and their hearts are ever saying, "O, give thanks unto the Lord for he is good: for his mercy endureth forever."

The church of the Blessed Hope in Cleveland has much for which to be thankful. Though not rich in gold and silver, it has that which these could not buy. We may not be strong in numbers, but we are strong in faith, in hope, and I trust also, in love. We are particularly blessed in our Elders as teachers, and in the continuance with us of him, who has been to many of us, not only the Ambassador of Jesus Christ, but a most thoughtful, loving, sympathetic brother, who would let no weariness or suffering stand in the way, if by any effort of his we might be led forward one step in the "straight and narrow way." Surely the Nobleman has at least one servant among us whom he will not find idle when he returns. Let us imitate his Paul like example.

Must we not trust that he may tarry until the King shall come to gather us unto that great thanksgiving feast, the Wedding Supper of the Lord.

[We very highly appreciate the spirit which dictated the kind reference to the labors of the Evangelist. But, while it be true that the church of the Blessed Hope in Cleveland is seldom at a stand-still, and that one or more are nearly always tangled in the meshes of the gospel net, this is largely due to the hearty co-operation of every member of the Body. We are all of one faith and hope; and each new member is given to understand that he or she is personally responsible for the furtherance of the gospel in some way, for which each is best adapted. The Elders labor with the Evangelist; the Evangelist labors with the Elders, and finally all the workers work together. But for the personal efforts of brethren and sisters and bringing them to hear the Word preached, and the distribution of free literature, we would gather but little fruit comparatively. Another thing that contributes to our success is this. It is well understood by all that the work laid out for the Body of Christ in this age is, First, to purify their own souls by obedience to the truth: and Secondly, to win others to a saving knowledge of the truth, so that they may live and reign with Christ in the age about to begin. They fritter away no time or talent or labor on fine spun theories or speculation of the fleshly mind. But although we have cause for heart-felt gratitude to God for frequently giving the increase, it is our solemn conviction that the Word will witness against three-fourths of those who fall in love with it. Our greatest adversaries are gospel nullifying preachers.)

Tomorrow, is a day set apart in this country as a time for being thankful for all the temporal blessings of life, and the ordinary dispensation of God's bounties; which are bestowed upon all, both good and bad.

The harvest is ended at this time, the crops have been gathered, the fruits picked, stored and packed, ready for use during the long dreary winter that will follow. Thanksgiving day then is intended to be the time for public celebration of divine goodness—for even the ungodly cannot fail to recognize the hand of a Creator in everything.

But have we chosen thanksgiving as a subject for to-night's lesson, merely because it is a law, and has been designated by a Presidential proclamation? Not a thousand times no. We come to him tonight as children to a loving Father, with our hearts overflowing with gratitude, that we have been redeemed from a race of dying men,—what we have heard and believed the glorious message of love, and that our environments are such, that we are permitted to meet often and talk to one another of the things we love so much.

Surely our hearts should be filled with thankfulness for the ripened fellowship, garnered from the fields of life,—that we enjoy, when two or three of us are gathered together. It is then we can talk of God's goodness to his creatures without reserve, for we know each heart responds to our own, to each sentiment uttered we hear Amen and Amen.

This unity we are indeed thankful for. It is the tie of love to God and mutual love of one another that binds us together thus, and we pray that this unity may exist until the Prince of life shall come.

The poet, Will Carleton has expressed my thoughts in the following verses and I hope will receive a hearty response in the mind of each.

THANKSGIVINGS.

We thank thee, O Father, for all that is bright—
The gleam of the day, and the stars of the night;
The flowers of our youth and the fruits of our prime,
And blessings that march down the pathway of time.

We thank thee, O Father, for all that is dear—
The sob of the tempest, the flow of the tear:
For never in blindness, and never in vain,
Thy mercy permitted a sorrow or pain.

We thank thee, O Father, for song and for feast—
The harvest that glowed and the wealth that increased:
For never a blessing encompassed earth's child,
But that in thy mercy looked downward and smiled.

We thank thee, O Father of all, for the power
Of aiding each other in life's darkest hour:
The generous heart and the bountiful hand,
And all the soul helps that sad soul understand.

We thank thee, O Father, for days yet to be—
For hopes that our nature will call us to Thee—
That all our Eternity through thy favor
One Thanksgiving Day with Jesus, our Savior.

We are living on the eve of God's great harvest day, when the reapers will gather the tares and bind them in bundles to burn, but the wheat, God says, I will gather into my barn.

Are we treading under the tares that try to choke us on every side, so that we can have more room to grow into a perfect kernel? Let us waste no time trying to keep them under control, but pull them root and all, that we may never be troubled with them again. The cry will soon go forth, "Thrust in thy sickle and reap, the time is come for thee to reap, for the harvest of the earth is ripe."

We are children of light and can see the harvest approaching. Then let us be on the watch tower with our lamps trimmed and burning, that we may not come into judgment, and be compelled to say with those who are left, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved."

Emma Long.

Thanksgiving begins away down in the well-springs of the heart,—down in the inner recesses of our being, and comes ever pure and fresh as spring waters breaking out of the rocks and crevices of the hills. And who or does it end? I think we may well continue the comparison and say that like Tennyson's Brook, thanksgiving "goes on forever," and loses itself in the great ocean of God's love. One whose heart is truly thankful (and that means continually thankful) can no more keep from expressing it in some way than the brook can stop running or the spring retain all its waters. Yes, brethren and sisters, we have the greatest reason to keep in mind the admonition, "in everything give thanks." And how it revives and cheers us on our way to meditate upon God's mercies and manifold blessings to us.

But how can we adequately express our thankfulness? Some will say: "I feel the greatest thankfulness; but am very poor in my language, in fact, I don't know how to word my thoughts." What then? Does God require us to do impossibilities? Would it please our loving Father any better to become masters of rhetoric, or to see the imposing ceremonies of the established churches? No, for he has no pleasure in lip service. The record stands that the people who "drew nigh with their lips" while their hearts were afar off found no favor in his eyes.

But he does require honest expression from those who would properly acknowledge his loving kindness, and tender mercy. So I say, if our thanksgivings do not spring spontaneously from the heart, (the seat or center of the feelings and affections) we had far better remain as dumb as the Egyptian Sphinx than to utter empty words,—counterfeiting that heart-felt gratitude due to the great Creator, and Preserver, who is a preserver of all men, but especially of them that believe.

One of the first lessons which a fond parent trys to impress upon the child is thankfulness. How many times have we all said, and heard others say, to the loved little ones: "Now, say thank you," and the little one, but faintly realizes what it does, obediently lisps the thanks. And so it is with us, brothers and sisters. We, who are the recipients of God's greatest blessing through the gospel, should ever feel it not only the higher privilege but the greatest pleasure as well, to render some acknowledgment for these favors so vastly beyond our deserts.

But does thanksgiving mean words? In the common affairs of life we often say, and that quite truly too, that "Actions speak louder than words." Let us then, if we have not already done so, make a firm resolve right now and here to show by our actions our deep thankfulness, even as the people did in King David's time. When the King desired to build a house where the Ark of the Covenant should rest and a Temple worthy in some degree of the God of their fathers, Daniel tells them of his purpose and of the wealth he had stored up with which to adorn and beautify it. "And now," says he, who then is willing to covenant his service this day unto the Lord? Again I hear this intensely personal question tonight and echo it on to all who will hear. Could there be more acceptable thank offering? When King David put the question to Israel of old there was a noble response, and now when in the name of great David's greater Son, the question comes to us "Upon whom the ends of the ages are come shall be otherwise." "There is work to do, there is work to do, there is work for us to do."

The anti-typical King David is preparing the spiritual Temple now to be builded of living stones, the apostles being the foundation and Christ himself the Chief corner stone. The Record says the chief of the fathers and princes of Israel and captains, with the rulers of the King's work offered willingly and gave for the service of the house of God. And they with whom precious stones were found gave them to the treasure of the house of the Lord. "Then the people rejoiced," says the record, for that they offered willingly because with perfect heart they offered willingly to the Lord: and David the King also rejoiced with great joy." Two things are to be noticed here: The perfect heart with which they willingly gave their valuables and services. Second, The King also rejoiced with great joy.

Will not our King rejoice too with great joy if we with the same spirit take hold of his work and assist in his ideas. Bless the Lord for the thought. I think he will

Chas. Goss.

Thanksgiving signifies an acknowledging and confessing, with gladness, the benefits and mercies, which God bestows either upon ourselves or others—Cruden. Sacrifice and thanksgiving have been customs from the very earliest ages.

A sacrificial offering differs from a thanksgiving in that the thing offered is consumed. Under the law we find Moses instructing the children of Israel to bring peace offerings, saying, "And this is the law of the sacrifice of peace offerings, which he shall offer unto the Lord. If he offer it for a thanksgiving, then he shall offer with the sacrifice of thanksgiving unleavened cakes mingled with oil, and unleavened wafers anointed with oil, and cakes mingled with oil, of fine flour, fried." Lev. vii. 11, 12. About nine hundred years later after the children of Israel had passed through the fiery trial of captivity in Babylon, had returned and rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem under Ezra and Nehemiah. We find them gathering and offering at the dedication of the walls of Jerusalem and thanksgiving—having called the Scribes out of all their places, and brought them to Jerusalem, and they come with thanksgivings with singing, with cymbals, psalteries and with harps. Coming down to the days of the beloved Paul we hear him saying, "Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." We learn from this that thanksgiving is in order at all times, and not to wait for any particular day or occasion. Coming down still later to our own beloved American institutions of this service, we find the martyred President Abraham Lincoln calling for a national celebration of thanksgiving in recognition of the year's blessings. Since which time it has been annually observed as being a time particularly appropriate for family reunions. But how its observance has become corrupted by changing it from fasting to feasting. And so all the good things which God has instituted being placed in the hands of his creatures now are so soon wrested from their proper use and service. But those who are truly begotten by the Word of truth can look on through the veil that hangs between this time, and the dawn of his appearing (the Bridegroom for his Bride) and see it rising upon a nobler and grander heritage, and a loftier scale of being promised by the prophet Jeremiah as he looked down the vista of time and saw the children of Israel going back to their beloved land, saying, "Behold I will bring again the captivity of Jacob's tents, and have mercy on his dwelling places; and the city shall be builded upon her own heap, and the palace shall remain after the manner thereof. And out of them shall proceed thanksgiving and the voice of them that make merry, and I will multiply them and they shall not be few. I will also glorify them and they shall not be small." Jer. xxx. 18, 19. Then coming down to the last message we have on this grand theme we hear the risen Lord sending by his angel messenger to John in Patmos saying, "And they sang a new song," saying, "Thou art worthy to take the Book and to open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation. And hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth."

And again, saying, Amen. Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honor, and power, and might, be unto our God, for ever and ever." Amen." Rev. v. 9, 10, and vii. 12. What a time that will be for thanksgiving, loved ones. Will it not? Shall we all be there to mingle our voices with that blood washed throng? May there be no vacant seats among the number of those we hope to meet, is my prayer tonight. Amen.

J. N. Shoemaker.

Dearly Beloved in the Lord:

I am very glad that this subject has been given to us for consideration. Thanksgiving means giving thanks, giving voice, uttering the thanks which fills our hearts. After having understood, and believed, excepted and obeyed the gospel call, what kind of thanksgiving ought we to render unto God? Ought we to be satisfied to be silent, or to praise God in secret? Ought we? Man is the creature of God's hand, created by him for his own praise and glory, and he will not be satisfied until that time when every creature that has breath shall praise him. When we realize how greatly God has favored us by opening the eyes of our understanding, that we might see, and our hearing that we might believe, we ought to give utterance to the thanksgiving and gratitude which we feel toward God, for his mercy, and loving kindness manifested to us. If a friend do us a great favor, do we pass it by in silence? Why, no: we lose no time in telling him how grateful we were, and thank him more than once for his kindness: and we should feel the same toward God, we should never tire in offering gratitude and thanksgiving and praise to his holy name. How often David bursts forth into song and praise, and thanksgiving; the Psalms are overflowing with expressions of gratitude and love to God, for his goodness and mercy to him. He says, "I will bless the Lord at all times; his praise shall be continually in my mouth; I will bless thee while I live, my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips, when I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the night watches. Oh God, thou art my God, my soul thirsteth for thee, and my flesh longeth for thee as in a dry and thirsty land. Although David repeats his thanksgiving over and over again, out of the fulness of his heart, he does not feel satisfied, and he breaks out with, Oh! that men would praise the Lord for his goodness. Oh, ye righteous, give thanks unto the Lord, for praise is comely for the upright. Oh; give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name, Oh, give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, and let the redeemed of the Lord say so.

Oh, brethren and sisters, let us remember that God expects us to render unto him the praise and thanksgiving due unto him, and when we meet, and when we part, let us give voice to the goodness, and patience, and loving-kindness, and tender mercy of God, for us the creatures of his hand, his dear children, if we continue in his love. And let us rejoice that the time will soon be here, when all that have breath shall worship him from the least to the greatest.

Joy cometh for the Lord shall come.
And rules the saints, and bring them home,
When hearts and tongues shall find employ,
With songs and everlasting joy.

May it be our happy lot to be gathered together unto him at that time is my prayer.

Mechanics and Apprentices.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth." 2 Tim. ii. 15.

Paul, a preacher; Timothy, an apprentice in same profession learning of Paul. Advice:—Study to be a workman RIGHTLY DIVIDING the Word of truth. A homely illustration. Nearly all professional workmen have some dividing of material. And the completed work is to be perfect, the cutting and shaping of each portion must be worked accurately—rightly divided.

A carpenter measures and marks accurately a board to be used in a piece of work. His apprentice watches, measures and marks a similar board accordingly. Each take a saw. Carpenter:—Now you be sure and cut—divide—exactly on the mark. Both begin sawing. The apprentice, not being accustomed to the use of the tool, fails to cut exactly on the line but cuts first one side, then the other. However it shows that great effort was made to approach perfection. The carpenter—the instructor—failed to touch his mark. He started his saw off the line and bore further from it as he progressed. And still worse, he cut on that side of the line which made his board, after divided, too short. Naturally the apprentice would become disgusted.

Ministers are mechanics. So are all who are Christians. But in an emphatic sense may preachers be thus styled. Their profession is to work on the character of man with the hope of making a Christian of him. The principal character upon which he should work is his own. But he induces others to take up the same profession and offers to instruct them somewhat. Unlike some professions, this one has some fixed patterns for general use. Thus dispensing somewhat with the measuring. The pattern is to be applied to the material worked upon, the proper tracings made, and the cutting, or dividing, may be commenced at once.

Pattern No. 1. "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us CLEANSE ourselves from all FILTHINESS of the FLESH and SPIRIT, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." 2 Cor. vii. 1. A preacher having secured several apprentices—converts,—and having caused others to think seriously of taking up the work now begins to apply this pattern. Remember each one is going to endeavor to take his own character and work it over into a Christian character. The pattern is properly studied by each. The tracing is carefully done, and it becomes evident that each will have to do some cutting and trimming. All begin the work. Noble efforts are made by those just taking up the work. But lo! the preacher! styling himself an instructor! From between his once pure lips is forced forth issue after issue of that foul, FILTHY, odorous saliva, colored by, and originating in a deposit that is concealed between the teeth and cheek. The apprentices look on with astonishment. The "serious thinkers" look with disgust. The Church is stunted. The endeavor to spread the truth is almost thwarted. The funds furnished by honest, earnest workers have been spent in vain. All because the head workman was indifferent to his own warnings.

Lack of space prohibits giving the details of many other patterns which ought to be used. Just two or three, however, in a general way.

How often have the efforts to spread the truth which is sacred and dear to many, been suddenly checked or caused to entirely cease on account of some leading one, a minister. One who has extended influence. But one who has never failed to drive a sharp bargain when opportunity presented itself. Some one who would legally rob a widowed sister of house and home. One who has entered into all manners of speculation for filthy lucre. One who has not made a reputation for honesty. One who avoids paying honest debts. One who adds legal advising to Scriptural advising.

Oh, ministers of the gospel, builders of characters, messengers to the aliens from the truth, when will the happy day dawn in which those who labor in your position will realize the importance of purer lives? When filthiness, dishonesty, speculation, jealousy, evil reporting, and campaign anger will not be necessary qualifications for those active in so high and grand a work. When purity, love, friendship, truth, and forgiveness shall be practiced by the teachers. A fountain will rise no higher than its source.

"Be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in faith, in purity." 1 Tim. iv. 12; Titus ii. 7, 8.

Submitted in love by a friend of the truth, anxious to have the glad tidings of salvation published throughout our land, by a band of earnest workers whose talk and walk agree.

"How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things."

F. L. AUSTIN.

Obituary.

Died at the home of his daughter, at Oleander, Cal., on Friday, Oct. 29, 1897, Horace Beach, at the age of 87 years, 9 months and 27 days. He was born in Genesee Co., New York, Jan. 2, 1810; was married Feb. 6, 1832 to Mary Manning. To this union 6 children were born, three of whom are still living. For 25 years he was a member of the Christian Church, until the year 1865, under the preaching of G. W. Lousie, of Emporia, Kansas, he became a believer in the sleep of the dead, the restoration of Israel, and the second coming of Christ. He continued in that faith until the enemy death claimed him. Yes, father has gone to rest, but we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for we look forward to the coming of our blessed Lord, when the graves will be opened and the dead in Christ shall arise. Then they will come forth clothed with immortality and eternal life. Oh blessed day, soon may it come, when the last enemy death shall be destroyed. Our home is a very lonesome place for me, as father has been constantly with us for the last 12 years. There is another vacant chair, and no more can we hear those tottering footsteps. His desire was to live until the coming of the Lord, and not have to pass through death; but thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, that we have a hope that reaches beyond this life, for Jesus says, "Fear not little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Luke xii. 32. Then if we are of that little flock, we will hear him say, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joys of thy Lord." Then we will not hear our loved ones say, I am sick and death will never come. Oh, dear brethren and sisters, is not this worth striving for? We will work and strive to get a home here, and it is not lasting, the floods, or flames, or cyclones may sweep it away, or death may claim us for his victim; but if we gain a home in that kingdom it will be eternal. Then let us not be weary in well doing, for in due time we shall reap if we faint not. Eph. vi. 9.

Your Sister in hope of eternal life,
MRS. M. A. CALDER.

It is stated that a man named Crawford Elliott is in England, where he expects to arrange for the manufacture of his book-typewriter, which writes directly in books. The American factory is in New York City. Mr. Elliott formerly resided in Chicago, where he practised law.

Paving blocks made of meadow grass are now manufactured. Their inventor was a clergyman, and the meadow grass, impregnated with oil, tar, and resin, is pressed into blocks and finally bound with iron straps. The advantage claimed for these blocks is that they are noiseless and elastic, resist wear well, and are impervious to heat and cold.

It is not widely known that Queen Victoria rules over more Mahometans than the Sultan of Turkey, over more Jews than there are in Palestine, and over more negroes than any other sovereign who is not a native of their country.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth Marshall, Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is only to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of THE RESTITUTION.

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for their selves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Books and Tract List.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

We have received a new supply of this valuable work, which treats of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the one hope, one faith, one baptism, by the late Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. This will need no introduction to many of our readers, as they already know of the good that has been accomplished through its circulation. 10 cents each. Send to this office.

IS THE PROBATION.

Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Graham Moncrieff. This work was issued and sold at 25 cents. We have a good number and will send them post paid for ten cents per copy. This is an excellent opportunity for any who are interested in the subject to get this work by a talented author. Send ten cents to the office for a copy.

QUESTIONS FOR THINKERS AND THOSE THAT THE BIBLE CALLS.

Is the title of a pamphlet of 36 pages by H. W. Bowman, containing questions on the Eternity of Evil, Predestination, Hell and Kindred points. It is well worth reading and will help many who are bothered to give answers many times. We can supply you for 15 cents a copy.

GLAD TIDINGS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

This is the title of a tract containing 32 large size pages, and is a reprint of a work issued many years ago, and we suppose was written by Brother Benjamin Wilson. It is clear and comprehensive, and can be had for 50cts each or 30 for $1.00.

THE COMING NATION.

A lecture delivered by H. V. Reed. This clearly sets forth the idea that the Coming Nation will be the nation of Israel restored to Palestine, and the Scriptural reasons are given. 26 pages price 10 cts or three or 25 cts.

A PICTORIAL BATTLEFIELD OF THE CONFLICT WATERLOO.

Is the title of a tract of 32 pages by O. W. Bowman, and is devoted to an exposition of the Gog Magog and Eternity Question. 10 cents a copy.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

A popular lecture by M. Joblin. Very good to put in the hands of those searching for truth. 16 pages 5 cents each.

Necessity of Baptism. A 4-page tract, written some years ago by Brother J. M. Stephenson, and it appeared as a newspaper article. It is so good we thought best to preserve it in this way, and offer it at 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Bible Plan of Salvation, A 4-page tract telling how to interpret the Scriptures, the development of God's plan, etc. 2 cts each or 15 cts per dozen.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Success of "The Restitution" Depends on You.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

The success, the very existence, of THE RESTITUTION depends on your action or inaction. We cannot keep it alive without the aid of every one of our friends. If you want it to be issued remember you are the party who can make it or break it. The publisher cannot do, only as you say he shall. We believe there is a work yet to be done before the Master comes, and that we each have a duty to perform, and that THE RESTITUTION is still needed in the prosecution of this work. Do you believe this? Do you think because you have believed and obeyed the gospel that your work is done and you have nothing more to do? Can a co-worker with him be satisfied with sitting down with hands folded? Surely no one can think so. All, each one, must be up and doing. We cannot afford after the long service many have given, to miss the reward now.

Then, if this be so, and we think there can be no doubt of it, we must ask every friend of THE RESTITUTION to at once renew for 1898, and also try and influence some friend of yours to be a friend of the paper. The work is in your hands. How will you treat it? Please act today. Right now. Do not leave it for a more convenient time. Act promptly.

Remember the Poor.

There are some who have taken THE RESTITUTION for many years who are by various circumstances forced to say they cannot longer pay. Some are now old, and having lost husband or wife, are dependent on those who have no interest in the Bible for their temporal support. Others have lost their all in some way, their income cut off, and they unable longer to labor. A few cents from each one will send papers to all the Lord's poor. For the publisher to bear any large share of this is impossible, simply because he has no means to do it with. Shall such be cut off, or will you contribute so that some one may be calling blessings on your head. We think this is neglected by some who are able to aid this branch of work, through failing to realize the earnest need of each. You who have plenty, and can have whatever your fancy calls for, and think there are none so poor, but if they wanted to, could get the money some time during the year, you surely do not know the dire straits in which many of our brethren and sisters are placed. If you did we feel sure that this helping fund would never lack when a call is made, but would have a balance always to draw on. O brethren, you who have plenty, do wake up to see this need.

We are Sorry

To say that some are apparently negligent. A farmer has 1000 bushels of wheat, and sells it for one dollar a bushel, and get $1000. This can be put in the bank, and as he needs money for any purpose, all he has to do is to go to the banker and get it. It is kept safely awaiting his demand. Another farmer with the same amount of grain but a little different in quality, his friends wishing to try his kind of wheat, kindly sells to each one a single bushel, until he has 1000 men each owing him $1.00. When he wants to use some money, to get it he must go and ask these men separately, and as the amount each owes is so small, they reason that it does not make much difference about hurrying to pay him, as a single dollar will not help him much. It is just so with some subscribers to a paper. The amount each owes being small it cannot make much difference to the publisher about being prompt in remitting, as the little will not be much service to him. Consequently many neglect, get careless, and do not send through sheer thoughtlessness. Brethren, apply the rule "Put yourself in his place," a few moments. We do not wish to incur the expense and labor of sending bills to the many that owe us. It is not right to force this to be done, so we ask you kindly yet earnestly to examine your account, and if you owe us anything, do please send us the amount at once. We cannot tell you in words how badly we need it, and that right now. Do not neglect this call. Please do not.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy Prophets."

Poetry.

He Leadeth Me.

In pastures green? Not always; sometimes he
Who knoweth best, in kindness leadeth me
In weary ways, where heavy shadows be.

Out of the sunshine warm and soft and bright,
Out of the sunshine, into darkest night,
I oft would faint with sorrow and affright.

Only for this, I know he holds my hand;
So whether led in green or desert land,
I trust—although I may not understand.

And by still waters? No, not always so;
Ofttimes the heavy tempests round me blow,
And o'er my soul the waves and billows go!

But when the storms beat loudest and I cry
Aloud for help, the dear Lord standeth by,
And whispers to my soul, "Lo, it is I!"

So, where he leads me, I can safely go,
And in the blest hereafter I shall know
Why in his wisdom he hath led me so.

"Hath Everlasting Life."

"He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not on the Son shall not see life." John iii. 36.

"He that hath the Son, hath life; he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life." 1 John v. 12.

I am requested by a sister living in Racine, Wis., to write out an exposition of the above passages.

Our Savior often added force to his lessons by the use of parable or allegory. I think also that we may use them to advantage in many cases.

For the purpose of making plain an exposition of the above passage, I shall invite the participation of my old

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

Albert. A few weeks ago I attended service in one of the churches at Hammond. The minister preached from the following text: "He that believeth on the Son, hath everlasting life." He placed great emphasis on the Word "hath." He repeated it over and over again for the sake of emphasis but that was not emphatic enough for him, so he spelled the word "h-a-t-h," and that means, he said the present tense, that we literally have eternal life now and have had, since we first drew the breath of life. Everybody has an immortal soul. We can never die. The investigation will be of interest to me, and will be pleased to hear what others have to say.

Teacher. The question of the present possession of everlasting life, may be aptly illustrated by an incident which occurs to my mind. You doubtless all recollect our respected neighbor, widow Smith, how since her husband's death, her health has been poor, and has at times suffered for the lack of life's necessaries. Her brother, a man of sterling character, went to California, to engage in business, which prospered, and recently wrote to his sister as follows:

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.

Dear Sister:

I have been successful in my business ventures. I want to help you, and have deposited for you, in the First National Bank, of this city, $5,000. It is yours. Business engagements prevents me coming to see you at present. In three months hence, I shall be more at liberty, and will come then, and bring your money with me.

Your loving Brother.

CHARLES.

This widow at the receipt of the above letter, had never seen, or handled the $5,000, nor was it so she could then appropriate it to her individual use, yet she really had $5,000. She could with truth, say, I have $5,000. But when her brother should come, and bring her the money, which was already hers, she could then appropriate it to her personal use.

Carrie. Yes, that reminds me of a passage of Scripture showing how we might really possess treasure, which, for the time being, cannot be person ally controlled. See Matt. vi. 19, 20: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal: but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither rust nor moth doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal." We may have treasure in a bank, but we know how often bank officials have misappropriated money placed in their trust, and then the bank fails, and officials abscond, and your treasure is gone. Not so in the Bank of Heaven. Your treasure laid up there is absolutely safe, it never can be alienated except by your own personal acts. The treasure you have laid up there is your treasure, it belongs to you, and in due time you will be permitted to apply it to your own personal use.

Arlon. Yes, praise the Lord, those who are in Christ, have everlasting life safely stored in the archives of heaven. Hence it is literally true, that "he who believeth on the Son hath everlasting life."

Teacher. If your eternal life is in heaven, it cannot at the same time be in you can it?

Arlon. Certainly not, the immortal life cannot exist in a mortal or animal environment. The apostle Paul says: "Neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." "That was not first which was spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual." The spiritual, and the animal cannot dwell together.

Teacher. Are you sure you have the life eternal reserved in heaven for you?

Arlon. I am. See Col. iii. 2, 3, 4: "Set your affections on things above, (lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven) not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." Now, Christ and God are in heaven and if my "life is hid with Christ, in God," then my life is there also, that is, the life everlasting. The animal or mortal life is not there, that is within my animal environment. The environment and life must be of the same nature.

Teacher. When do you think the life everlasting you now possess [illegible] treasure reserved in heaven for you, will be yours to personally appropriate?

Arlon. This same chapter, verse four, says, "When Christ who is our LIFE shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." The precious gift of everlasting life is reserved in heaven, "hid with Christ in God," until the time of the "redemption of the purchased possession," which will be "When Christ who is our life shall appear."

Teacher. We miss the aid of our dear Bro. Elias, who has fallen asleep in Christ, who at the present time has no conscious existence either in heaven or on earth, or any where else. The Scriptures are explicit on this. "The dead know not ANY THING." Eccl. ix. 5, 10. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that VERY DAY his THOUGHTS PERISH." Although our brother is at present unconscious, yet while he was with us, he laid up treasure in heaven, even everlasting life, "hid with Christ in God," and he only waits the glorious appearing of Christ, and then he also will come forth in the bloom of immortal youth.

Lud. That seems to me to be sensible. It would be useless for a man to present a check at one of our banks, expecting to draw money on it, unless he had deposits in that bank. So it appears to me, to be just as useless for a man to expect to draw on the Bank of Heaven, unless he has previously made deposits there. If a person has not the treasure of life everlasting "hid with Christ in God," how can he expect to receive that treasure, when he has no such deposit there. He may expect all he wants to, but if the treasure is not there, he will never receive it. "He that hath the Son hath life; he that hath not the Son of God, HATH NOT LIFE.

Lucy. Of course, that must be so, if we have no deposit there is nothing to draw. A passage comes to my mind speaking of this life treasure "hid with Christ in God," under the figure of a house. See 2 Cor. v. 1-4: "For we know, that if our earthly house (the present mortal organism) of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, (the life everlasting) an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For in this (mortal condition) we groan, earnestly desiring (this mortal) to be clothed upon (or invested) with our house which is from heaven: (when all groaning will cease). For we that are in this (mortal) tabernacle do groan, being burdened: (with the afflictions incident to mortality) not for that we would be unclothed, (return to dust) but clothed upon (before being dissolved) that MORTALITY might be SWALLOWED UP OF LIFE."

Teacher. When will mortality be swallowed up of life.

Lucy. See 1 Cor. xv. 52-55: "The trumpet shall sound, and the dead ("dissolved") shall be raised incorruptible, and we (the living) shall be changed. For this corruptible (the unclothed) must put on incorruption, and this mortal (living ones) must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, DEATH IS SWALLOWED UP IN VICTORY." This is the time that mortality shall "be swallowed up of life."

George. My mind recalls a passage of Scripture speaking of the life treasure laid up in heaven. It is the case of the rich young ruler, (Matt. xix. 16–21,) who came to Jesus, saying: "Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have ETERNAL LIFE?" Jesus said unto him: "If thou wilt enter INTO LIFE, keep the commandments." The young man replied, "All these things have I kept from my youth up, what lack I yet?" Jesus said, "Go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have TREASURE IN HEAVEN, and come and follow me."

What treasure? Why the treasure he was seeking: "What good thing shall I do, that I may have ETERNAL [illegible] feel like doing the treasure reserved in heaven for you, will be yours to personally appropriate? consequently there was no "treasure in heaven," for him. He preferred the treasure kept in banks, where thieves break through and steal.

Teacher. I have been thinking about that sermon Albert heard preached, in which the preacher tried to prove that all people have immortal souls from the text: "He that hath the Son hath life." If he had paid attention to the last half of that same sentence, "He that hath not the Son of God, HATH NOT LIFE," a very different conclusion might have been arrived at. There is no life for those out of Christ. The Son of God must be possessed in the manner the Scriptures require, before life treasure can be laid up in the Bank of Heaven.

Jesus said (John x. 27-29): "My sheep hear my voice, (the rich young ruler did not) and I know them, and they follow me: and I GIVE unto them ETERNAL LIFE, and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." They are absolutely safe.

His "sheep" are the only ones that have the promise of life everlasting, and only those who comply with certain required conditions can be his sheep. He as the Good Shepherd, laid down his life for the sheep.

Praise God, that our minds have been enlightened by the Word of Life.

W. H. WILSON.

Reviewer Reviewed.

Bro. Underwood:

Please allow me a little space to notice my reviewer, who in a late number of THE RESTITUTION undertakes to set the writer right on the "innumerable company" that John saw, Rev. vii. 9. It is not because of the importance of the question, as to who they are, nor of the review that I write on this, but because the gospel plan of salvation as I understand it, is antagonized by such a lax and liberal exposition as given by our brother. Opinions in a sense are cheap commodities, and yet they may be treacherous and misleading even unto death. "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man (that is his opinion) but the end thereof are the ways of death." Therefore beware of opinions that meddle and interfere with God's revealed plan of salvation. We note a few points that in our judgment need adjusting.

Our Brother writes—"He says the class of Rev. vii. 9. 13, is the same class as the overcomers of ii. 26, and is selected and chosen as the bride, the Lamb's wife to rule and reign as kings and priests on the earth." Here is what I said:—"And we will kindly suggest that from what is said of them, that they more nearly represent God's royal people selected and chosen as the Bride, the Lamb's wife, to rule and reign as kings and priests on earth." Your mistake my brother, "More nearly represent" than what? Ans. Them rantized Christians who have never obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine and been made free from sin." Who have never been washed in the blood of the Lamb." Then our writer says—"So far as the description is concerned, they may be, (and I think are) a remnant after a selection has been made." I would kindly suggest to the writer that the Revelator says nothing about there being a "remnant after a selection has been made." He does however in another chapter speak of a "remnant of the Woman's Seed who keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." I wonder if this is the same innumerable company? And I am made to wonder if rantized immortal soul Christians "Keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ?" Then as a point of distinction this is offered. "One (company) is called kings and priests; the others are called servants." I understand that the overcomers, the kings and the priests will still be servants of the Most High God, and servants of King Jesus, but not a class of menial servants however. Who said the great company was such a class of servants? Who said it? Then our Brother makes another point of distinction. "One class is numbered 144,000; the other is innumerable." At this point is off the same piece as [illegible] We will answer both at once. The Revelator says in the 7th chapter they were 144,000 "SERVANTS" [illegible] sealed in their foreheads." Then in the 14th chapter he mentions the same number (of servants) who had the Father's name written in their foreheads. Then in the 22nd chapter he says, "And there shall be no more curse; but the throne of God and the Lamb shall be in it; and his SERVANTS shall serve him; And they (his servants) shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads.....And they (his servants) shall reign for-ever and ever." Alas! Alas! for such a class of clashing distinctions as our Brother has been able to formulate. We say no, the Revelator did not use a "dark lantern," but it seems our Brother has been using one that marks a distinction without a difference. If our Brother could only remember that no class of persons mentioned in the Bible under different circumstances, bear all the same marks of identity, it would save him a world of trouble.

Then our Brother says, "Furthermore, I do not find any proof that simply belief and baptism will entitle any one to royalty." No one claims it my Brother, but to claim royalty, or even salvation short of belief of the gospel and baptism, is to say the least, building on the sand. The Master for it. Then after trying to throw a shadow of doubt over Mark xvi. 16, he says—"But, be that as it may; belief and baptism only entitles a man to salvation, and I think I have proved beyond controversy that the multitude of Rev. vii. 9, 13, will be saved, but only as servants." Then my Brother, how can you work in rantized folks and have them saved? Have you another way of saving people? Another gospel to offer them? and thus pervert the gospel of Christ, and trouble the brethren, and incur the curse of God. Paul for it. Beware, beware my Brother. We have no right to take liberties and tamper with the gospel, God's plan of salvation. If there are any exceptions to be made he who made the plan of salvation must make them, I have no right to make them, and I cannot accord this liberty to others. "Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth." And to preach a definite gospel, a definite plan of salvation that is repentance, with switches and side tracks all along is only to deceive ourselves and make ourselves a hideous spectacle to men and angels. No, my Brother, I have no hatred to those people, but to promise them life eternal who believe and obey not the gospel is simply to array myself against Jesus who has said, "He that believeth (the gospel) and is baptized shall be saved, he that believeth not shall be condemned." And for you, my Brother, to apologize for those who shall be condemned, and offer a few detached Bible expressions which include and comprehend far more than you are willing to admit, is to say the least, to array yourself against God and his Christ. Beware. You had as well claim justification by "faith alone," and by simply "calling on the name of the Lord," and by baptism alone, "baptism doth now save us." Yea, far better than to thus claim salvation without the faith of the gospel and its obedience, baptism. But if you still insist on your claims, then we will have to say, you and the Lord for it. his Word is the truth that makes free while false doctrine leads astray.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Yes, but we are told that these people are doing a good work. Yes, and Jesus has foretold that many will come in that day saying, "We have done many wonderful works. Jesus says "Depart ye workers of iniquity, I never knew you." In their blind zeal they go forth before he sent them, sowing the devil's doctrine broadcast, which is far worse and more fatal than rum. Our Brother says, No, no, they will come in and get eternal life. Away with this deceptive combination of Satanic and sincerity doctrine that has slain more than Samson yes, tens of [illegible] more.

[illegible] Psalm 91. "This order indicates [illegible] success [illegible] by Centre the latter part of Oct. five were baptized there, and many subscribed for monthly preaching.

Then I stopped four nights in Webster City and preached in the American Volunteer's Hall. I saw that there was no hope to get time to lay a foundation for faith there, so I went to Eagle Grove. I preached eleven sermons there. Although we have a church building there, we have only a few members. Most of them are alive to the Master's work, but we did not have many outsiders to hear us. There were no additions.

I went home for a week then to prepare for winter. Then I came to the home of sister and brother Allen, near Dunkerton. I have preached for ten nights in the school house. Baptized Mrs. Mary Noss, a daughter of Sister Melissa French. How pleasant it would be if the children of all believers would all obey the gospel. May the Lord guide, strengthen and maintain all laborers in the vineyard.

W. L. CROWE.

Dear Restitution:

All of us have not gone to sleep yet, but now that Bro. Kinsey is preparing to leave for Arizona, he is doing some good work here in Prescott, Kansas, before leaving. As a result of recent labors, six were immersed on the 1st inst, although the day was cold and ice on the water. Others are nearly ready. We shall need some one to build us up in the faith now when our Brother leaves us. We pray that we may all labor zealously in the Master's vineyard, and that our new brothers and sisters may be found worthy. They are: John and Kittie, son and daughter of Bro. and Sister John Harris, Miss Annie Wilson and her Sister Mrs. Bower, and Iva and Opal Lapsley, daughters of Bro. and Sister N. C. Lapsley.

Yours in hope,

JOSEPH WILLIAMS.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft postoffice money order or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent in loose letters is at the risk of the sender. It is only to mark that you can feel till it is a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles such mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

A Word with Our Correspondents.

We want your contributions. We want them to be Scriptural. We want them to be written with the conviction upon your hearts that Jesus is coming—coming soon. We would have you realize that in view of His soon coming you have no time—not a moment—to waste, throw away, lose, in fruitless dissension that is of very little benefit, but only stirs up strife, causing discussion and division. Not always actual and open rupture of societies, but a worse state by far, viz: Division of effort. It is not necessary to mention all the points which occupy time and space to no purpose, but one or two to illustrate may not be out of place.

In studying the Word of God we learn that there is to be a resurrection of the dead; that Christ died and was raised, and likewise all who are to have any part in the events that will [illegible] coming of [illegible] that he proves [illegible] that "Unspeakable Gift." Being of a dying nature man can only get this "after-life" through the resurrection from the grave. This theme of the Resurrection of the dead may be amplified or made much of according to the ability of the writer, and this Bible truth thus taught is of benefit to our fellowmen and to the Household also.

But one comes in and says "From my reading and reasoning, with my ideas of God and his characteristics, I do not believe the wicked or any but the really and truly altogether 'righteous' will be resurrected." Another holds up hands in horror and says "You don't! Why I believe from my reading and reasoning that every one will be raised at some time." Lo, and behold, the strife is commenced, and will not stop till death comes, for each is determined to fight it out to the bitter end. In no time at all sides are taken all over and the strife is general. Quickly the one fundamental essential principle is lost in the struggle, and a learner not being "rooted and grounded" becomes disgusted, not knowing what to do, unable to settle his own mind. What we should teach is that man being mortal, wanting future life, is promised that life on conditions, by One able to perform, that this life can only be obtained through God's Son by a resurrection out from the death state. Brother, in all kindness let me say to you that you will never be saved nor lost BECAUSE you think no wicked man will ever be raised. Likewise my brother, you will never be saved or lost simply because you think all men will have a resurrection. But, brothers, in all solemnity we speak and say that you will have to answer before God for all the strife and contention you cause in such matters that do not affect the pure and living Gospel of Christ.

A brother reading his Bible learns that Jesus instituted the "Memorial Supper"—the bread typical of the body, the wine of the blood—and that he requested his followers to partake of it, and remember in doing so his suffering and death, subsequent resurrection and glorification, coupled with the promise that he would no stay away forever, but come again, and then though his disciples might like the Master suffer dire and varied persecutions during his absence, yet when he did return they should have glory as he had. O brother, the thoughts that touch the lo-se-strings as we thus "do this in remembrance of Him." As our lamented Brother Conplin used always to say:

> We would see Jesus, for the shadows lengthen
> Across the little landscape of our years,
> And [illegible] the [illegible]
> And [illegible] [illegible]

The feelings of reverence and solemnity that thrill us as we partake of the emblems of his broken body and spilled blood. How solemn an event!

In his enthusiasm one brother feels that he cannot too often participate in this ordinance, and will travel miles through heat or cold, to be at the place where it occurs, and says that every week is not too often for him. Another says that he is convinced that at the yearly Passover is the time for this Supper, and that it was only meant to be taken once each year. That every week observance makes it a common and familiar event that familiarity breeds contempt," and the weekly communion cannot be made the solemn season that it should be. Consequence, a ventilating of the question with "full and free discussion" is demanded and at it they go with all the vigor and energy of a good cause. Result, contention, strife, division—all to no purpose—for no one is changed in opinion, and the end, like the other ones is never reached. Weak ones in the Household are disheartened and go away from the fold, not caring to remain with such a family.

My brother, a question. Do you think that because one partakes of the Lord's Supper every week that on that account he will be lost? Contrariwise, my brother, Do you think that because one chooses to partake but once each year, and that at Passover time, that therefore he will lose eternal life? We know you are tenacious, and do not yield a point, but you will hardly take so strong a stand as this, will you? Surely not. But, the discussion once under way, soon the vital point, the real intent of the "Memorial" is dwarfed and out of sight. All absorbed in the "how often," instead of "as often as ye do, do in REMEMBRANCE of me."

We beg and entreat you, brethren all, to stop a moment. The Lord is coming! He was here once and went away, promising to come back. He left for you and me this charge. "Go ye into all the world, preaching the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned." He told us also to watch for signs, events, that should occur, and when we should see these in their course we should rejoice, for his return was near. We must do the work he left for us, and watch for his return. And with all deference for the opinion of others, we wish to say, that in the writings regarding His coming and preparation for it, please do not lose sight of the event in your endeavor to locate the exact day and hour of the event. The COMING is the prominent and all-important point. Preparation for it, and haste in preparation because it is near at hand.

Brethren, we should teach that there is a God, All-powerful, able to perform, faithful, just and loving—the Creator. That he made man mortal, dying, but with a desire for life, and so after placing him here with such nature and desires, He left certain writings, which we call "the Bible," and he said they should be an all-sufficient guide and instructor in leading man to eternal life. He left man free to chose life or death. We should teach in accordance with this written Word that God's kingdom will be established on this earth, that God's only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, our Redeemer will set up and take charge of this kingdom, his lowly followers having died through the years of preparation, being raised to life and immortalized, to be exalted to joint-heirship with him in the kingdom, all wickedness done away, and finally the fullness of eternal bliss with God and love supreme be the lot of each son and daughter of the Lord Almighty.

With this comes in the restoration of God's ancient people—Israel, with all the attendant glory that will be theirs after their long and painful punishment. The legal method of adoption of the children of men into the royal family of God, heart-repentance and cleansing, immersion and the works that are given so plainly for us to do, ever remembering that love to God and each other should rule our hearts, and minds in every thought word and deed.

Brethren and sisters, let us try for 1898, just one year, and write and preach, every article and every sermon, only what is absolutely and unqualifiedly necessary for men and women to know and do in order to be "saved." Let us devote the same conscious effort, the same desperate and determined energy of body and brain that has been used so long in perhaps a fruitless endeavor to "see eye to eye," to the one all-absorbing labor of bringing dying men and women to a saving knowledge and hearty acceptance of the overtures God has made to the human family.

What [illegible] is [illegible] [illegible] there will be but little of [illegible] it is not gathered in once. No delay for anything. The farmer calls all hands, young and old to the work for need must help. But one big boy says "Father, that onion patch must be weeded, and another "those potatoes over in the garden ought to be hoed or they will not be worth digging if left so." Sternly the father says "Let them go. Nobody for anything. The grain must be gathered into the garner. When the wheat is all gathered in, there will be ample time to care for the potatoes and onions.

Brother, Sister, the Lord is coming. Do you truly believe this? and that he is coming soon? That he may come this year, or that you may be called to the silent chamber of the grave any moment? That one breath you draw—the next you know not of? Solemn indeed, yet how true. In view of this how much time and energy have we use in anything that causes trouble to our brother? How careful we should be, how unselfish, our hearts filled to overflowing with gentleness and love to our brother—the household of God—to our fellowmen.

This is not written with intent to "gag" or "put bits in the mouth" of any one, nor even to discourage "free investigation." On the contrary we wish you to write exactly as you are minded to do and to think as you see best, but in the position we occupy we see many things that do not come to others outside, and we write purely in a spirit of love and good will, and without anxious to please so far as we can. We desire only to impress upon you the shortness of the time that yet remains for us to labor, and the importance of preaching the one necessary "Gospel of the kingdom of God" FIRST. Al[illegible] signs of the times in which we live, for "the Son of Man COMETH at an hour when ye think not."

Do we BELIEVE this? Brethren if we do, then let us pledge ourselves, God helping us, this year just starting, to think, and speak, and act as if we really meant it when we say we believe that Jesus is coming soon.

We thank you for the favors shown us in the past most heartily, and solicit a continuation of the same, hoping many who write but seldom will send offener of the ripe fruit of their pens. We have made mistakes many times, we are mortal, and do acknowledge our weakness, and ask your forgiveness for wrongs we have done. God helping us, we will try this year of 1898, and with your assistance, dear brethren, to make THE RESTITUTION worthy of being used in God's hands as a humble instrument for good. Pray for us.

Our Christmas Love Feast.

For some years past a very profitable and pleasant feature of our paper has been the Annual Love Feast, consisting of short letters from all over the country, expressing the faith and hope that animates our hearts. Let us have another one this year, brethren and sisters. Let it be better than ever before, inasmuch as we are so much nearer the prize than a year ago. We live in a fast age, and a year now seems to count more than ever a single year did before. So much does happen in such short time that we are lost in contemplating the lightning rapidity of passing events. Truly time lastens. Let each one, all, old and young, who has a word for the Master, not hesitate but speak right out. No fear that what you say will not be as good as some other's speech. This is a family affair, with no great attempt at "style." Don't give some one a "dig," nor "ride a hobby," but speak a "word for Jesus." Do not wait for Christmas with its cares to come before you write, but write and send now so as to be in time. We want the whole paper full of these letters. Let us have a good "social meeting."

Do all the members of the Church in your locality take our paper? If not, won't you try and induce them to do so? The cost is only a trifle three cents a week.

How careful one ought to be to try to be kind and thoughtful of one's old friends. It is so soon too late to be good to them, and then one is always so grieved.

We are out of the tracts—"Questions for Thinkers and Thoughts for the Thoughtful," and "A Parabolic Battlefield or Error's Waterloo" by H. W. Rowman. Please send no more orders.

READER, give a moment's attention to this little paragraph. "If you would be of the number of that glorious company that will spring into being at the manifestation of the Sons of God, you must like them be men of faith and service, and men of benevolent hearts. Those who are not of loving hearts are not of God."

Zionism.

A Manchester (England) newspaper recently said: "The Zionist Congress at Basle last August, has had a curious outcome. A natural and immediate result of the return of the Jews to the Holy Land would be the rebuilding of the Temple, and so confident are some of the Jews that the time of their return is at hand, that orders have actually been given, and the work commenced, for the preparation of buttresses to be used in the restoration of the sacred buildings. In England, wrought iron is being produced for outer gates, and at the marble quarries in Italy, the capitals of pillars are being carved. Not a few of the leading European Jews have great expectations of what the early months of next year will bring forth; and they make no secret of their hopes that circumstances not unconnected with finance will arise, which will enable them to extract from the Sultan a treaty which will virtually restore the Holy Land to their possession." "This is one of the most remarkable things that has yet occurred in respect to the restoration of Israel, and is a proof of the interest taken in the "glorious land" by the rightful inhabitants, the posterity of Abraham. We are persuaded that this is but the commencement of many strange things to be accomplished in the near future."

WE need your hearty support in getting a few new names for our list of subscribers. Will you not send us at least one new one for 1898? We will appreciate the favor.

"Does Death End All?"

The Rev. Dr. Paul F. Sutphen, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, of Cleveland, delivered a "Talk" on the above subject last Sunday evening, (Nov. 28th) in which he said, "Death is not the end. The life we now live is only the scaffolding to the building,—only the vestibule to the Grand Cathedral of Immortality. Part of the body may be destroyed, yet personality remains. One may be deprived of an arm by accident, yet he continues to live. A man who has lost both limbs, both arms, both eyes, still thinks as intelligently as before. These cannot therefore be in any sense necessary to his individuality. In other words, a considerable part of a man may be dead and buried, and yet the man be alive still. Now we come to the brain. It is here materialists tell us we find the thinking power; and mind or soul, they affirm, is merely a brain function. If this be so, death is certainly the end."

The end of what? Does he mean that death is the end of the life we now live? If so, we agree with him, and inasmuch as everybody seems to believe that already, what need was there of a talk to prove it? We suspect he means, that if the mind is a brain function then certainly there is no future life for any of Adam's race. We think nothing but the exigencies of a human creed would induce him to think thus. He several times refers to science and scientists in his address, but we see no reference to the Scriptures,—how is this? Does he find nothing in them that suits him? Can it be that the God who made man has failed to tell how he formed man, and of what material? Does he not say he formed man of dust? Did he not threaten this dust-formed man with death if he be disobedient? Did not the sentence pronounced upon the disobedient dust-man explain what death is? The Doctor certainly must hold God to be just; and so, when he said to the dust-formed man Adam, "Dust THOU art, and unto dust shalt THOU return," could he ask stronger evidence that and was held accountable for his conduct? In a word, if the dust-formed man was held to account for his actions does not that prove that personality inheres in the creature of dust formation? Let us enquire if what he calls mind be something that exists independently of the dust-formed man, and directs his movements, is not that the real responsible man? Would it not be unjust to

THE DUST-MAN HAD BEEN DISOBEDIENT,

PUNISH THE DUST PART

under such circumstances? And as we find no punishment meted out to what he claims to be the personality, should he not call a halt? He knows right well, that what he calls the man proper, could not suffer the penalty pronounced upon the dust-man, if it were true; and the dust-man only did what it was obliged to, and therefore

WAS NOT GUILTY.

God knew who the guilty parties were. It could only be those capable of eating fruit. And the lounging one employed by God shows that he who had been formed of dust, and addressed as "THOU," was the real culprit. He may talk about the brain being the organ of the mind, but if he consults Gen. iii. 5, 6, he will see that the woman was not moved to take and eat by something he calls mind, which the brain is the organ of, but by what she saw with her natural and what entered her dust-formed ears, when the serpent spoke to her. He says the whole question of immortality hinges upon whether mind is a function of the brain, or, is brain merely an organ of the mind? He has expressed himself in favor of the latter; the mind, the reasoning, calculating, remembering power in man is considered immortal. Did God make that immortal mind? If so, did he endue it with unending existence—his own everliving indestructible existence while it was liable to sin? If so, how can the wickedness of the wicked come to an end? And as Paul in 1 Tim. vi. 16 tells us that if every human being has immortality, every human being must have part of the divine nature within him or her; and as this part of the divine nature is the real personality, and sins,—then God will, according to his doctrine, punish parts of himself to all eternity. All this comes of rejecting the counsel of God and turning to the fables of heathen philosophy for the foundation of his faith. At funerals he teaches that "There is no death,

DUST-FORMED EYES,

GOD ONLY HATH IMMORTALITY,

WHAT SEEMS SO, IS TRANSITION"

merely. It now transpires that he has to appeal to the statements of scientists in support of his belief. Surely a "Doctor of Divinity" should have proven his case by the divine Revelation. He says there is no future life if mind be a function of the Brain. In opposition to this we offer the following propositions:

1. In some cases

DEATH DOES NOT END ALL.

Proof:—Psa. lxxxviii. 5, "I am as a man that hath no strength, free among the dead, like the slain that lie in the grave who thou remembrest no more." Again in Isa. xliii. 17 "The army and the power, they shall lie down together; they shall not rise: they are extinct;" and Psa. xlix. 14 "Like sheep they are laid in the grave; death shall feed upon them; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning [of the resurrection] and their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling."

2. Death does not end all in other cases. Proof:—"God shall redeem my soul from the power of the grave; he shall receive me." Psa. xlix. 15. "Though worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God," Job xix. 26; "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake," Dan. xii. 2; "He shall swallow up death in victory," Is. xxv. 8; "The righteous hath hope in his death." Prov. xiv. 32.

3. But death, is death in all cases while it lasts. Because the first man was of the earth,—not earth and sky,—natural not spiritual," 1 Cor. xv. 47. "He knoweth our frames, he remembereth that we are dust." Psa. ciii. 14. "I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord, who am but dust and ashes." Gen. xviii. 27. "By one man sin entered into the world and death by sin, [not transition by sin] and death has passed upon all men;" Rom. v. 12; "The wages of sin is death." Rom. vi. 23. "In Adam all die." 1 Cor. xv. 21, 22. "The sentence of death in ourselves," 1 Cor. i. 9; "This mortal;" "this corruptible." 1 Cor. xv. 53, 54.

4. In death there is a total suspension of all consciousness and existence itself.—Proof:—"In death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave, who shall give thee thanks?" Psa. vi. 5. "The grave cannot praise thee; death cannot celebrate thee: they that go down to the pit cannot hope for thy truth." Isa. xxxviii. 18; "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth: in that very day

HIS THOUGHTS PERISH."

Psa. cxlvi. 4. [Is it not supremely ridiculous to say the thoughts of an immortal entity perish when the breath leaves the body? What is the use of an immortal part if it becomes senseless when its house dies?] "The dead know not anything—their love, their hatred, and their envy is now perished," Eccl. ix. 5, 6; "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest." Eccl. ix. 10. Observe, it is that which when alive did know, and work, and devise, that does not know and work and devise after death, and what will he do about it? It is painfully evident that he is [illegible] in faith in God, in relation to man's nature, or his destiny. Christ came that we mortals may obtain immortality by a patient continuing in well-doing, and promises to raise us up at the last day,—says that we shall hear his voice and come forth of the grave to life (John v. 28, 29) if we have done good: and when Paul in 1 Cor. xv. 51 says, "If Christ be not raised then they that are fallen asleep in Christ are perished," and that all his suffering for Christ's sake will be of no advantage to him if the dead rise not, we have infallible evidence that he is deceiving others, and being deceived himself. We beg him to let philosophy and science alone. The Word alone is able to make him wise unto salvation.

Obituary.

Eckla Ann (Clerk) Warner was born in Delaware County, State of New York, Oct. 18th, 1825. Very early in life she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church and was married to Jesse Warner, Nov. 3rd, 1845. She first heard the glorious gospel of the kingdom preached by Elder Ephraim Miller in the State of Michigan, in 1849 and embraced the faith as taught by the Scriptures and joined the church in 1849 at which time she became a subscriber and reader of THE RESTITUTION, and continued on until her death. Several years ago Sister Warner with her husband came to Arkansas and settled near Ozark, and finally moved to the town of Ozark. She lived a consistent Christian life and died at a good old age, loved and respected by all who knew her. Sister Warner died at Ozark Ark. on the 18th day of Nov. 1897, after an illness of several months which she bore with Christian patience and fortitude being at the time of her death 72 years and 1 month old. She leaves a husband to mourn her loss but his sorrow is not like that of those that have no hope. For he knows that in the resurrection morn when the trump of God shall sound, that the dead in Christ will rise first and then will he meet his sweet and loved companion. May God bless and comfort him in his bereavement is the prayer of one that loved them.

Queation.

Will Bro. Joblin or Bro. W. H. Wilson or some other able writer please answer through THE RESTITUTION the following questions:

How and when will the promises of God to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob as recorded in Gen. xii. 3; xxvi. 4; and xxviii. 14, be fulfilled?

Can all the families of the earth be blessed," or be "happy and prosperous" in Abraham, Isaac and Jacob while Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are dead and in their graves?

Will all the families of the earth receive the promised blessings before Abraham, Isaac and Jacob receives theirs?

Submitted in love to God and his truth.

Poetry.

Some Day.

"Some day all doubt and misery
Will be made clear:
The threatening clouds that now we see
Will disappear.

"Some day what seems a punishment,
Or loss or pain,
Will prove to be God's blessing, sent
For very gain.

"Some day our weary feet will rest
In sweet content;
And we will know that we were blest
By what was sent.

"And, looking back with clearer eyes
On life's short span,
We'll see with wondering, glad surprise,
God's perfect plan;

"And, knowing that the way we went
Was God's own way,
We'll recognize his wise intent,
Some day, some day."

"If a Man Die shall He Live Again?"

There are certain things in the course of human events which much as we would like otherwise are ever kept prominently before us, events which we must meet and for which we should be prepared.

Foremost among these is that dark enemy which is always near us, and from which we are never secure; that worst enemy of mankind—death.

Wherever we find that man has taken up his abode for any length of time we find that the enemy has been there. Near the city of the living we find the city of the dead. Not crowded by the busy throng—not the rush of business, nor laughter and mirth, but all is silence. No difference in rank there—no kings, no princes, no servants, no rich, no poor—all share alike that unbroken slumber.

Do we wonder that Job exclaims, "Man that is born of woman is of few days, and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower and is cut down: he fleeth like a shadow, and continueth not." "Seeing his days are determined, the number of his months are with thee, thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass: Turn from him, that he may cease, till he accomplish as an hireling his day."

He had learned by experience the weakness of humanity and the truthfulness of what he was speaking. Man may be surrounded by all that earth can give; he may be crowned with honor; he may have all that wealth can buy—nations may bow at his feet, but death awaits him—"his days are determined."

We may enjoy our homes, but it is only for a little while. We see today an unbroken family gathered about the fireside and it seems as though it must continue so, but no, sad changes will come. The picture is dark, but better by far that we see it as it is. If we do not look at the dark we are not apt to see the bright ray of hope that shines so brightly beyond.

Is it possible—is it true that in death man is in that state of complete rest, that perfect unconsciousness in which he appears to slumber when we call and no voice makes reply? Yes it is true. "There is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease * * * But man dieth, and wasteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he? As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up: so man lieth down, and riseth not: till the heavens be no more, they shall not wake, nor be raised out of their sleep. Psa. vi. 5; cxv. 17; Eccles. ix. 5, 10; iii. 18, 20.

Death is just what it seems—a silent sleep—a returning to earth. But how came such a dread enemy among us? It is the same old story of transgression. Sin has been the curse of man through all ages, and sin is the foundation of the sorrow and misery of today. The first Adam must die for his disobedience. Not a spiritual death or separation from God as we are sometimes told, but death as we see it. Driven from the garden "lest he eat of the tree of life and live forever." To till the ground until he returned to the dust from whence he was taken.

Once deprive a man of life and he is as powerless to help himself as is the dust from which he was created. Here at last mankind seek a common level and without the aid of Divine power they are destined to sleep an eternal sleep. Is this man's destiny—is there no hope for him? Revelation replies there is hope.

The one who has power to call into existence has equal power to call those silent remains to life again. Nearly 1800 years ago one of God's holy prophets took up his abode with a widow and her son; they were in want for food, but when Elijah came the meal and the oil failed not. The dark winged angel of death entered that home and the son died, but with power from on high that Prophet called him to life again. The first resurrection scene, and the widow exclaimed, "By this I know that thou art a man of God, and that the Word of the Lord is in thy mouth."

With the mountains of evidence that we have—Oh, that we might be as ready to believe as this widow.

Another prophet died and was buried in a cave; the Moabites invaded the land and as they went out to bury a comrade they saw a band of the enemy and hurriedly cast him in this lonely cave, but no sooner did he touch Elisha's bones than he lived.

Oh, wondrous Power—in praise and thankfulness we bow to thee. Yes, it is possible for death to be overcome—this fact has been demonstrated—but this is not sufficient for us. Where is that precious promise that causes our mourning heart to rejoice? That gave hope so long ago and prompted Job to say "All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call and I will answer thee: Thou will have a desire to the work of thine hands."

Or caused Isaiah to exclaim, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead?"

We hear that voice ringing through the centuries, "I am he that liveth, and was dead, and, behold, I am alive for ever more, Amen, and have the keys of hell and of death." We hear him speaking words of comfort to a sorrowing friend: words of hope that are extended to you and I. "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die," and then weeping before that silent tomb, his compassionate nature and the glory of God is manifest. A few words of prayer, a call "Lazarus come forth" and the dead came forth.

We love to think of that resurrection morning when all the saints of God shall come forth from that long sleep; when with trumpet sound "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven," and the resurrected dead and the living saints crowned with immortality are caught away to meet him; of that glad triumphant shout "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"

How oft has been portrayed by tongue and pen the scenes that will be enacted on that eventful day. A company of sorrowing friends singing a parting hymn over the grave of some loved one—suddenly the grave opens and its occupant comes forth crowned with immortality. A sad procession slowly wending its way to the place of burial—they never reach it—the sleeping one is caught away. Perchance 'tis a sick room: its occupant slowly wasting away—there is no hope. He has long watched for his Lord's returning, but now he must die. Happy man—his sufferings are over; his hopes are realized, he never meets the dark enemy—he hears his Savior's call and goes to meet him.

Lastly—"two shall be in the field, the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken and the other left." O blissful moment to those who are taken. What do the trials, suffering, persecutions of this life amount to with such a hope before us? Alas! for those who are left. How is it with us, my brother?

"Then will the sleeping saints come forth,
Who lie entombed in sea and earth,
And robed in immortality,
Their Jesus face to face shall see.

Break, sacred morning, through the skies,
Bring that delightful, dreadful day;
Cut short the hours, dear Lord, and come,
Thy lingering wheels, how long they stay.

Haste, then, upon the wings of love,
Rouse all the pious, sleeping clay
That we may join in heavenly joys,
And sing the triumph of the day."

EDWIN E. GROAT.

"I am He that Liveth and was Dead."

To the Household of Faith:

Was Christ a divine spirit before he was born of the Virgin Mary, or did he become a spiritual being by the resurrection from the dead? If he was a divine being, how could he become a fleshly being and suffer death? Some believe he was with the Father and helped form man of the dust of the ground. If so, he was before the first Adam, that would make Le second or the one formed out of the dust spiritual. We find the first Adam was made a living soul. The last Adam was made a quickening spirit.

Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual. See 1 Cor. xv. 45, 46. We can see by this that Christ was not with the Father in the formation of man, but was the Lord God and not Christ. See Gen. ii. 7. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground.

Jesus Christ became a spiritual being. By the resurrection from the dead. 1 Cor. xv. 45. It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. Now in reading the Word of God shall we take it in the present tense or future? God who quickeneth the dead and calleth those things which be not as though they were. Rom. iv. 17.

Isa. ix. 6. "For unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulders: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." And again see Isa. xxii. 17, 18, "For dogs have compassed me: the assembly of the wicked have enclosed me: they pierced my hands and my feet. I may tell all my bones: they look and stare upon me. They part my garments among them and cast lots upon my vesture." Now, dear reader, this is spoken as though it had already transpired, yet it was many centuries before. And again concerning his sufferings see Isa. liii. 3 to 10.

Now some say Christ never rose from the dead. This question should concern every true child of God, and the destiny of all true believers of that Holy Lamb of God depends on the resurrection from the dead. Now, if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, what follows? First he is the Son of God, see Matt. i. 18, 23. I come down from heaven. John vi. 5. I proceed forth and came from God. John vii. 42. I am the Son of God. This is my Son in whom I am well pleased. And for his confession that he was the Son of God, he was charged with blasphemy and was put to death, and if he remained dead we would say he was worthy of death and it was a righteous one. But if he arose from the dead the fair form of the young virgin is forever vindicated, for beyond question that the power of God was not the lust of the flesh, and by his sinless life God had recompensed him according to his righteousness and the cleanness of his hands. Psa. xviii. 19, 24. The glory that Jesus spoke of in his prayer has not yet come, and is yet future, for when the Son of Man shall come in his glory and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. Matt. xxv. 31. We will now leave this and turn to his birth.

Paul says in Rom. xiii. 4, concerning his Son Jesus Christ, our Lord, which was of the Seed of David according to the flesh and declared to be the Son of God with power according to the spirit of holiness by the resurrection from the dead. 2 Tim. ii. 8. Remember that Jesus Christ of the Seed of David was raised from the dead according to my gospel. Sal. iv. 4. But when the fullness of the time was come God sent forth his Son, made of woman, made under the law, and again when he brought in the first begotten into the world he saith, and let all the angels of God worship him. Heb. i. 6. Can any of us for one thought wander back and minds picture the stable wherein our Master was born, the most lowly, most humble and most sacred birth that has ever overshone mankind existed.

Go with me if you will and let us picture the shepherds as they were keeping watch over their flocks by night. Not a sound to be heard save the shepherd's horn or the bleating of one of the flock as it had wandered out in the darkness. Suddenly there shone round them the most glorious light they had ever beheld. They were sore afraid, and as they spoke one of the other, Shall we leave our flocks and flee? they heard the voice of the angel saying, "Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." Luke ii. 8, 11. How those old hills must have re-echoed the sound of "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Again we see those same angels as they leave their flocks and start for Bethlehem to see if those things be true. They go to the stable where they find cows and camels. Must we look here in this hovel for our King. Yes, here we see him in the manger with Joseph and his mother. He is here just as the angel has said. "Oh, thou precious Lamb of God, I must have come from all the lips of those faithful shepherds.

Brothers and sisters, let us work diligently while it is yet day, for the time is not far off when he will come with power and great glory, all the holy angels with him. He can then say, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forever more." It will be then and not before, dear brothers and sisters, that the glory of the Father in his Son shall be completed in the age of ages.

Watching and patiently waiting for the soon coming of our Lord and Savior, I remain,

Your Sister in Christ,
MRS. GEORGE OSBORN.

That Weight or Clog.

"Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." Heb. xii. 1.

Dear brethren and readers of THE RESTITUTION I pen a few thoughts that occur to my mind upon the line of thought suggested in the above quotation. We are all running in the race for the high prize, glory, honor, immortality, eternal life. And if there is any thing that hinders us in running well in this race, we should lay it aside. Now dear readers let each one of us examine ourselves with the light of God's Word shining fully upon us.

Let us see, are any of us carrying some weight that hinders us in our full obedience to the will of God.

God says: "For all that is in the world the lust of the flesh, and the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world," 1 John ii 16. Let us first inquire what is lust. Webster defines it as "depraved affections," "eagerness to enjoy."

Now one of the natural faculties of our mind is love of approbation, and an eagerness to gratify the cravings of this faculty becomes a lust. With many the gratification of this faculty is thought to be harmless. But let us see by the light of God's Word

"He that exalteth himself shall be abased: and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Luke xiv. 11.

Again, "Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." James iv. 4.

With this light of God's Word fairly shining upon us let us see are any of us trying to exalt ourselves in the opinion of the world? Are any of us trying to win the friendship of the world, are we in any way eagerly grasping after [illegible] approbation?

Why do we put on such expensive clothing? Why have we gone to so much expense in building our houses? Why have we built and expensively furnished our parlors? Why do we drive so expensive a carriage all glittering in the sunlight? Let God's Word answer. "Men will praise thee when thou dost well to thyself." Psalm xlix. 18. It is not wise in us to try to evade the force of this. It is the primary object in all this outward worldly show to seek to and gain the admiration and friendship of the world, to exalt ourselves in the opinions of the world.

"Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth." James v. 5.

If we are in this way trying to win the approbation and friendship of the world, and so exalt ourselves in their estimation, then God says that we are his enemies, and that we shall be abased, and not elevated to that high honor of glory, immortality, and eternal life. Dear ones is it wise and prudent in us to risk so much just to gratify our earthly pride and vanities? Just that we may be looked upon as respectable citizens in society will we run the risk of loosing the high prize in Christ Jesus. If not then let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us. What if the world does not own us as one of their company but say of us, oh! he is not considered among our respectable citizens, he don't amount to much.

Let us turn more lights upon our pathway, such as "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people." 1st Peter ii. 9.

"Be not conformed to this world." Rom. xii. 2.

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his (God's) righteousness," Matt. vi. 33.

"Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." Col. iii. 3.

"How shall we that are dead to sin live any longer therein?" Rom. vi. 2.

I will close by requesting each reader to examine themselves and answer to their own satisfaction before God the following questions.

Are you one of the chosen generation?

Does your every day surround [illegible] your dress, your general style of living, your business methods, and social relations all show to the world that you are not conforming to this world, but are a peculiar person?

Do you seek first (even to the neglect of business demands and all pleasures) the kingdom of God and his righteousness? And trust in God that all these necessary things shall be added unto you? Or do you take thought first of how you can make a living now? Have you fully set your affections on things above and become fully dead to this world?

Obituary.

Again we are called upon to note the death of one of the faithful followers of the meek and lowly Jesus. Catharine Woods, daughter of George and Missouri Barttroff, was born in Jasper Co., Illinois, May 18, 1854; was married to Bro. R. J. Woods Dec. 24, 1874; fell asleep Nov. 20, 1897, age 43 years, 6 months and 2 days. She had been afflicted for many years with tumor, and for the past three years has suffered almost constant pain. Every thing that could be done by loving hearts and kind hands was done for her recovery. Her physicians told her that she would have to be operated on as that was the only hope of life, she gave her consent but was not able to stand the operation, and while under the influence of drugs she fell asleep. Yes,

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wakes to weep."

She leaves a husband, three sons, and three daughters, and many relatives and friends to mourn her departure. She had heard the gospel preached and believed the things concerning the kingdom of God, and obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine. Was baptized by Bro. J. S. Hatch, April 24, 1893, and has ever since lived a consistent Christian life. We extend our heart-felt sympathy to those lonely ones, and pray our kind Father to throw around them his loving arms of mercy and comfort them in this time of trouble. We feel sad, but sorrow not as others that have no hope, for we believe our sister will live again. Then all tears will be wiped from all eyes, and there shall be no more death. Oh, how we long for our dear Savior's return, for we hear him say, "I am the resurrection and the life. I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forever more, and have the keys of hades and of death." Paul also says: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first." Then we believe our Sister will come forth clad in the garments of immortality. Yes, when the trump of God shall call to life the righteous dead, then she can sing the song of triumph, "O death, where is thy sting, O grave, where is thy victory." Then will they bear palms of victory and wear the crowns of glory. Then will they see the Prince of Peace, the Captain of our salvation. Then will we behold with undimmed vision the beauties and glories of the everlasting kingdom of God, where we hope to meet our Sister and with her share in the promised blessing from our kind and loving Father to whom be all glory forever. Amen.

Dear Sister, thou art sleeping,
Sweetly resting from all care;
Soon art in the Savior's keeping,
For his kingdom thou shalt share.
Oft we miss thy voice of greeting,
But Christ cheers the aching heart;
With a promise of a meeting,
Where we never more shall part.

Sweetly sleep, dear Sister,
Till the resurrection day;
Till Jesus comes in all his glory,
He will raise thy lifeless clay.
Earth's troubles cannot harm thee,
Sleep on in thy narrow bed;
May God help us all to meet thee,
When he comes to wake the dead.

The first news paper is said to have been the Boston News Letter, first issued in 1704. It was a half-sheet, 12x18 inches.

The first cotton mill in this country was established in Beverly, Mass., in 1787. It was designed to manufacture cord and bed ticking.

The latest printing-press turns out 96,000 eight-page papers an hour. Men not yet old can remember when the fastest press could not print that many four-page papers in forty-eight hours.

In Germany, when the vote of the jury stands six to six, the prisoner is acquitted. A vote of seven against five leaves the decision to the court and in a vote of eight against four the prisoner is convicted.

A French savant named Leveille, writing in the Cosmos, assures his readers that the fakirs in India have independently discovered the art of making gold, the reported discovery of which by an American chemist recently attracted some attention.

Recent statistics of the German Government in regard to religious matters show that within the four years from 1890 to 1894 there were 2,088 converts from Judaism to Christianity, and 17,002 converts from Roman Catholicism to the Protestant faith. In Prussia during the same time 14,045 Roman Catholics became Protestants.

Old Cairo is changing visibly. By Christmas the electric tramway to the pyramids will be an accomplished fact, and the eight-mile trip—at present so expensive—will be possible for a few cents. Ismail's great causeway will in no way be spoiled, as the rails have been laid right along the side of the avenue, and, indeed, are scarcely noticeable.

Engineers who have been engaged in the construction of the Trans-Siberian Railway arrived at Victoria, B. C., on Nov. 18, on the steamer "Empress of China." They say the trip can now be made from Vladivostock to St. Petersburg in ten or twelve days. The road is completed, with the exception of a short section along Amoor River and around Lake Baikal.

A dispatch to the London Daily Telegraph of Nov. 19, from St. Petersburg, says: "Vice-Admiral Tyrtoff, Russian Minister of Marine, has ordered seven [illegible] three trains [illegible] port vessel. "This order indicates that the Russian government regards affairs in the East as affording little reason for tranquility."

It is announced by the projectors that the surveys for the cable between California and Hawaii are highly satisfactory, and that arrangements are being made for the establishment of that section within eighteen months. Deep sea surveys in the southwestern Pacific show a remarkably even bottom, much more favorable than the older charts indicated, many supposed shoals having been expunged from the admiralty charts. The cable will be 9000 miles long.

The Year-Day Theory.

The year-day theory is believed by many, I think a majority of Bible students. It stands at the parting of the ways in the explanation and application of many prophecies. Now this theory that when days are predicted in the Scriptures, they sometimes should be read years, is either true or false. It is true we should find in the Scriptures very clear authority for making so great and bold a change in the meaning of language, a change that would not be tolerated for a moment in law or science. We should also find a very plain rule showing when such a change should be made.

There should be recorded some examples of times fulfilled in years, that were predicted in days. Ezek. iv. 4-5, is believed to furnish authority for the theory, but in this case the only times predicted were the 390 years to Israel and 40 years to Judah. They were symbolically laid upon the prophet as days, neither of these periods were "prophetic" times, both the years predicted and the days commanded were "literal," and doubtless so fulfilled. The typifying times were literal and so were the times typified.

This was the case also in Num. xiv. 33-34. Predicted times are always literal, as is proved by records of their fulfilment whenever we have the records.

But if, as many believe, Ezekiel has here given a scale or rule for measuring prophetic periods this scale should certainly apply to the times given to this prophet after it had been said to him, "I have appointed these each day for a year." Now the first time given to Ezekiel after this is 40 years for the desolation of Egypt xxix 11-16, the second is 7 years for burning the weapons. xxxix. 9, the third is 7 months for burying the slain. xxxix. 14. Does any one believe that all or either of these periods are "prophetic" time? If not, why not?

But if the scale cannot be applied to the periods of Ezekiel, far less can it be applied to the periods of Daniel and John, to neither of whom it was said, "I have appointed unto thee a day for a year."

Does Moses use this scale in Gen. vii. [illegible] 25-54; or Jonah iv. [illegible] Cor. [illegible]. 4. [illegible] have proved [illegible] be weeks of seven of years, and as prediction and fulfilment agree, therefore the prophecy was weeks or sevens of years, we have no right or reason to assume that they are weeks of days. Moreover Daniel gives us two examples of how he reckoned prophetic periods.

First, iv. 25-34, "7 times shall pass over thee." "All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar. At the end of the days, I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes."

Second, ix. 2, "I Daniel understood by the books the number of years—even 70 years."

Notice.

To the Brethren in Oregon and Washington:

The question of evangelistic work having been left in the hands of the executive committee of the Southwest Conference at the annual meeting at Lake Shore, Washington, we wish to announce that all money paid into the Conference fund the ensuing year will be used to employ W. L. Skeels as evangelist unless the giver stipulates otherwise.

Local church work is of first importance to you who are organized into congregations. A Conference is organized and carried on for the special purpose of carrying the gospel message to others.

We invite and urge the many brethren of the Abrahamic faith living in Oregon and Washington to co-operate with the Northwest Conference in the work of evangelizing.

Have you money you wish to see used for spreading the good news of the kingdom? Send it to the treasurer of the Conference, C. K. Schmeltzer, Scholls, Oregon. Have you words of advice, encouragement, or condemnation, send them to any member of the Conference Committee. We wish to hear from all who are interested in this work of spreading Truth, and will then do our part as best we can.

W. W. Jaquith,
P. G. Wolf,
John E. McInnis,
Executive Committee of Northwest Conference of Church of God.

MARRIED.

Allard—Comstock, at the residence of the bride's parents on the eve of Nov. 24, 1897, at 6 o'clock, Mr. Ernest F. Allard and Miss Nellie I. Comstock were united in marriage by Elder Southwell of this place. Nellie is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Comstock and is highly esteemed by all who know her, having lived in this place nearly all her life. The Groom is the oldest son of Bro. and Sister Allard, and having lived in this place 15 years has grown up to manhood with the esteem of all who know him. There were about 50 guests to do honor to the occasion, and showed their esteem for the young people by the numerous presents brought to them. These young people start out with bright prospects for their future. May God's blessings ever attend them, and when life's duties are ended may they have lived so as to be worthy of eternal life in Christ's kingdom is my prayer.

A Query.

Inasmuch as the tables of stone containing the ten words are gone, and no man or woman knows of their whereabouts to this day 'most likely they were destroyed with the temple). And inasmuch as the "Book of the Law of Moses" which tells us all we know about the tables of stone and their contents has had its day—gone by the board and nailed up to the cross, I would like to know what kind of a foundation Sabbatarians stand on today? Let them tell if they can, and oblige,

T. E. Adams.

"Babyland," established in 1877, The Babies' Own Magazine, a wonderful help to mothers in amusing and instructing the children. 50 cents a year, 5 cents a copy. The little ones look eagerly each month for Babyland because it is full of bright, pretty things designed especially for them. The 1898 Volume contains: "Ladybird and the Bold Knight," by Alice Dana Knox: a dainty serial about a dear little girl and her playmates. "More about Buz-buz," by Charles Stuart Pratt, continuing the interesting adventures of a housefly. A Characteristic Serial by Margaret Johnson, prettily illustrated by the author. Original Nursery Rhymes and Jingles, by Miss E. C. Sylvester. Special Stories, by Albert Bigelow Paine. Quaint Fairy Tales, Poems, Bright illustrations, and a host of other good features, by favorite contributors to child literature.—Chas. E. Graff, Publisher 150 Nassau St. New York.

What would you do if war should be declared to-morrow with an European power? How would it change your home life, the lives of your brother and other relatives? How would it affect your business? What changes would it make in financial, city, state and national affairs? It is these interesting problems which a writer in the December Cosmopolitan has undertaken to sketch under the headings of "A Brief History of Our Late War With Spain," at the same time vividly describing the exciting scenes which would attend the opening of hostilities. This same number of The Cosmopolitan has an article on "The Well-dressed Woman" by Elsie de Wolfe, a contrast of the characters of Henry George and Charles Dana by John Brisben Walker, in another place "The Loves of Goethe," while Wells' story, "The War of the Worlds," which has been so widely read, reaches its conclusion in an unexpected way.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

We have received a new supply of this valuable work, which treats of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the one hope, one faith, one baptism, by the late Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. This will need no introduction to many of our readers, as they already know of the good that has been accomplished through its circulation. 10 cents each. Send to this office.

FUTURE PROBATION.

Is that awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Thos. Monnerieff. This work was issued and sold at 25 cents. We have a good supply and will send them post paid for ten cents per copy. This is an excellent opportunity for any whom are interested in this subject to get this work by a talented author. Send ten cents to this office for a copy.

GLAD TIDINGS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

This is the title of a tract containing 12 large size pages, and is a reprint of a work issued many years ago, and we suppose was written by Brother Benjamin Wilson. It is clear and comprehensive, and can be had for 5cts each or 30 for $1.00.

THE COMING NATION.

A lecture delivered by H. V. Reed. This clearly sets forth the idea that the Coming Nation will be the nation of Israel restored to Palestine, and the Scriptural reasons are given. 26 pages price 10 cts or three or 25 cts.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

A popular lecture by M. Joblin. Very good to put in the hands of those searching for truth. 16 pages 5 cents each.

Necessity of Baptism. A 4-page tract, written some years ago by Brother J. M. Stephenson, and it appeared as a newspaper article. It is so good we thought best to preserve it in this way, and offer it at 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Bible Plan of Salvation. A 4-page tract telling how to interpret the Scriptures, the development of God's plan, etc. 2 cts each or 15 cts per dozen.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DECEMBER 22, 1897. NUMBER 48.

The Success of "The Restitution" Depends on You.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

The success, the very existence, of THE RESTITUTION depends on your action or inaction. We cannot keep it alive without the aid of every one of our friends. If you want it to be issued remember you are the party who can make it or break it. The publisher cannot do, only as you say he shall. We believe there is a work yet to be done before the Master comes, and that we each have a duty to perform, and that THE RESTITUTION is still needed in the prosecution of this work. Do you believe this? Do you think because you have believed and obeyed the gospel that your work is done and you have nothing more to do? Can a co-worker with him be satisfied with sitting down with hands folded? Surely no one can think so. All, each one, must be up and doing. We cannot afford after the long service many have given, to miss the reward now.

Then, if this be so, and we think there can be no doubt of it, we must ask every friend of THE RESTITUTION to at once renew for 1898, and also try and influence some friend of yours to be a friend of the paper. The work is in your hands. How will you treat it? Please act today. Right now. Do not leave it for a more convenient time. Act promptly.

Remember the Poor.

There are some who have taken THE RESTITUTION for many years who are by various circumstances forced to say they cannot longer pay. Some are now old, and having lost husband or wife, are dependent on those who have no interest in the Bible for their temporal support. Others have lost their all in some way, their income cut off, and they unable longer to labor. A few cents from each one will send papers to all the Lord's poor. For the publisher to bear any large share of this is impossible, simply because he has no means to do it with. Shall such be cut off, or will you contribute so that some one may be calling blessings on your head. We think this is neglected by some who are able to aid this branch of work, through failing to realize the earnest need of each. You who have plenty, and can have whatever your fancy calls for, and think there are none so poor, but if they wanted to, could get the money some time during the year, you surely do not know the dire straits in which many of our brethren and sisters are placed. If you did we feel sure that this helping fund would never lack when a call is made, but would have a balance always to draw on. O brethren, you who have plenty, do wake up to see this need.

We are Sorry

To say that some are apparently negligent. A farmer has 1000 bushels of wheat, and sells it for one dollar a bushel, and gets $1000. This can be put in the bank, and as he needs money for any purpose, all he has to do is to go to the banker and get it. It is kept safely awaiting his demand. Another farmer with the same amount of grain but a little different in quality, his friends wishing to try his kind of wheat, kindly sells to each one a single bushel, until he has 1000 men each owing him $1.00. When he wants to use some money, to get it he must go and ask these men separately, and as the amount each owes is so small, they reason that it does not make much difference about hurrying to pay him, as a single dollar will not help him much. It is just so with some subscribers to a paper. The amount each owes being small it cannot make much difference to the publisher about being prompt in remitting, as the little will not be much service to him. Consequently many neglect, get careless, and do not send through sheer thoughtlessness. Brethren, apply the rule "Put yourself in his place," a few moments. We do not wish to incur the expense and labor of sending bills to the many that owe us. It is not right to force this to be done, so we ask you kindly yet earnestly to examine your account, and if you owe us anything, do please send us the amount at once. We cannot tell you in words how badly we need it, and that right now. Do not neglect this call. Please do not.

Poetry.

A Christmas Carmen.

Sound over all waters, reach out from all lands,
The chorus of voices, the clasping of hands:
Sing hymns that were sung by the stars of the morn,
Sing songs of the angels when Jesus was born!
With glad jubilations
Bring hope to the nations!
The dark night is ending and dawn has begun:
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun.
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one!

Ring the bridal of nations! with chorals of love
Sing out the war vulture and sing in the dove,
Till the hearts of the peoples keep time in accord,
And the voice of the world is the voice of the Lord!
Clasp hands of the nations
In strong gratulations:
The dark night is ending and dawn has begun;
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one!

Blow bugles of battle, the marches of peace
East, west, north, and south let the long quarrel cease:
Sing the song of great joy that the angels began,
Sing of glory to God and of good-will to man!
Buckl joining in chorus
The heavens bend o'er us!
The dark night is ending and dawn has begun;
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one!

"Hath Everlasting Life."

"He that hath the Son, hath life; he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life." 1 John v. 12.

A continuation of

examination of the above topic.

Carrie. Not long since, a friend, whom I was conversing with on the subject of immortality, said that a universal desire for immortality existed; and therefore she said, that is proof that we are immortal. I told her that was the main argument Plato used, to prove the soul's immortality.

Teacher. Don't you think that is strange logic?

Carrie. Very strange, indeed. The existence of a desire proves that the object desired is not as yet within the power of the one desiring to gratify themselves by appropriating the thing desired. If they were in personal possession of the thing desired, the desire would cease. A hungry man's desire for food will not cease, until he has eaten the food. To use the argument of the friend, that a desire for immortality was a proof of the possession of immortality, would also prove that a hungry man's desire for food was proof that he had had his dinner. Paul says: "What a man seeth, why doth yet he hope for?"

Albert. Last evening I was reading a book written by Robert Roberts, he says: "The existence of such a desire, however, proves a great deal in its place. It proves immortality as a possibility in the economy of the universe. No instinct or desire exists in nature, without a corresponding object on which it acts. Are we hungry? There is food to be eaten. Are we curious? There are things to be seen and known. Have we benevolence? There is benefit to be conferred, need to be supplied, and suffering to be alleviated. Have we conscience? There is God to be adored. On this principle, the spontaneous craving for immortality and perfection proves the existence of the conditions desired, and the possibility of their attainment; there remains the strong natural presumption that the condition thus desired, cannot be altogether a dream, though at present beyond our reach. The existence of a desire is no guarantee of its gratification."

Teacher. Is there any way in which we can have a guarantee of its gratification?

Arlos. Yes, that is the question. Let me read to you a few passages of Scriptures, on this point.

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him (according to the Scriptures) should not perish, but have EVERLASTING LIFE." Here is a positive guarantee provided the Lord Jesus Christ is intelligently believed on from the heart.

"God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might LIVE through him." 1 John iv. 9.

"This is the promise that he hath promised us, EVEN ETERNAL LIFE." 1 John ii. 25.

Having thus properly believed from the heart, and lovingly rendered obedience, the next thing to do, is: "Keep yourself in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto ETERNAL LIFE." Jude 21.

Then we can believe and trust "the record, that God hath given unto us ETERNAL LIFE, and this life is IN his Son." 1 John v. 11.

And then comes the complete and positive assurance, "That your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. iii. 3, 4.

Lad. I have been thinking a great deal about the difference that exists between he that hath not the Son, and he that hath the Son.

He that "hath the Son," "hath life." ("hid with Christ in God.") while he that "hath not the Son of God, hath not life." Now, how can they suffer endless torment, seeing that he "hath not life?" A friend reminded me the other day, that the New Testament speaks of "unquenchable fire," and the "worm that dieth not," in connection with the wicked. Well, suppose it does, I said, what has that got to do with the endless torment of the wicked? The fire being unquenchable, it will not relinquish its hold upon its victim, until it is entirely consumed. Unquenchable fire never preserves its victim. I once saw Chicago burned with an unquenchable fire, and the reason why it was consumed, was, because the fire was unquenchable. It was a fact, that the fire engines had no more effect in extinguishing the fire, than a boy with a toy squirt gun would have. The argument is the same with regard to the undying worms. In Gehenna, what the unquenchable fire left, the worms consumed. If the worms had all died, the utter consumption would not have been completed. The reason why Herod died, was because his worms "died not." If his worms had died, Herod would in all probability have lived.

George. When I lived near Dunkerton, Iowa, I once heard a hot scorching sermon from a preacher who tried to prove immortal soulism and hell fire torment from Matt. xxv. 46: "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, and the righteous into life eternal." Why cannot these men stand by the Scriptures? The above text says "everlasting punishment," and not a word about everlasting torment. If he would let the Scriptures define what "everlasting punishment" is, such a sermon would never have been preached.

Teacher. Will you please give the Bible definition of "everlasting punishment?"

George. I will. See 2 Thess. i. 9: "Who shall be punished with EVERLASTING DESTRUCTION." That punishment is a "destruction" which will be "everlasting" in its effect. Torment does not enter into the idea of this punishment, but is simply an everlasting ceasing to exist.

Death is the civil penalty of murder, and our Legislatures are trying to effect death, with as little conscious suffering as possible.

The righteous are said to go away into "life eternal." That clearly shows that previous to this they had in their persons, "no life eternal," but it was "hid with Christ in God." Now, if the righteous did not have it, surely the wicked did not, and not having it, everlasting conscious torment would be an impossibility.

Lucy. We have all doubtless heard a great many sermons preached from John iii. 16: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him, should not PERISH, but have everlasting life." The word "perish," and the words "everlasting life," are the o[illegible] positive declaration [illegible] are [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk; money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

We wish in giving a change of address, to have both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Suppose We Try It.

Suppose each one of the friends of THE RESTITUTION should get one new subscriber and send in with their own, we would have our list doubled. What is your opinion? Don't you think, in view of the times in which we are living, that every member of our faith in the land should have the paper for 1898? Don't you think there are many who are almost with us in faith who would be benefitted and perhaps fully persuaded soon if they should have THE RESTITUTION for 1898? Are you interested enough in them to try and arrange for them to get the paper regularly each week? The cost is so small—don't you think that sending the paper to them would be the best and cheapest missionary work you could do? Suppose all, each one, you who read this, would try sometime during the week between Christmas and New Year's day, and get One single one if no more, and send in. Don't dismiss this from mind, saying you do not know any one to approach on the subject, but try it once, and perhaps you may be able to get quite a number instead of but one.

SUPPOSE WE TRY IT.

WE wish you all a pleasant and profitable Christmas and New Year.

BY an oversight the name of Willard Hickox was not attached to the third Bible-class paper in THE RESTITUTION for Dec. 8th.

"LOPPING off the branches of sin is labor in vain, and always to be renewed: there is no way but laying the ax to the root."

WE beg our readers not to pass lightly over the the article on this page under the caption of, "We are not your own." We seriously think many neglected truths will be discovered there, and solemn admonitions.

THERE will be five Wednesdays in December, hence this is the last paper for the year 1897. Our Love Feast issue will be the next issue. Quite a number have already come to hand, and we urge all who care to have part in it to send in their letters at once and we will get the issue out as soon as possible.

THERE are about three hundred million people in India, and nearly two hundred million of these are Hindus, while over fifty million are Mohammedans. The Hindus are said to have thirty million gods. Throughout all India innumerable local gods are worshipped, and there is scarcely a house without its own divinity.

Women are held in the lowest esteem. Here are a few questions and answers taken from the Hindu catechism which give a fair idea of their position:

"What is cruel?"

"A viper."

"What is crueller than a viper?"

"A woman."

"What is the cruellest of all things in the world?"

"A sinful, soulless widow."

In view of this condition of things, how appropriate the prayer of the Psalmist,—"Have respect unto the covenant, for the dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty; O let not the oppressed return ashamed; let the poor and needy praise thy name. Arise, O God, plead thine own cause," etc. Ps lxx. 21, 24.

THIS number will complete this volume of THE RESTITUTION, and at this season many subscriptions run out, and we hope all such will be prompt in renewing. We cannot afford to lose one subscriber, and we trust all will be sufficiently interested to send on their subscriptions immediately. We are determined to furnish a paper worthy the support of every lover of the Truth. We intend it to be an uncompromising advocate of the gospel and its conditions—especially do we mean to emphasize the necessity of Godly living by those who have named the name of Christ.

THE St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Telegraph writes:—"The East cannot be concealed that the Marine Ministry is exceptionally active at present. The Government has decided to rearm the Marines of the Pacific and Mediterranean Squadrons. The decision will be carried out without loss of time, as a part of a comprehensive scheme for rendering the navy ready for unforeseen, or possible emergencies."

THERE have been stormy scenes in the Austrian Parliament, consequent upon the consideration of the financial relations of the two sections of the empire. They evidence the insecurity of the tie that binds Austria and Hungary together. If a rupture should result it may be fought with danger to the peace of Europe. If the union of Austria and Hungary were dissolved what would become of the Triple Alliance?"

THE Seotsman in a leading article says:—"The Turkish Empire and its borders are like a great witches cauldron, bubbling and seething with all manner of discordant and conflicting elements. It is true that this is its normal condition. But since the noise of the fighting in Thessaly ceased six months ago, the more subdued but no less disturbing sound of intriguing and plotting and quarrelling among the rival interests, races and faiths, has seemed to grow more audible and threatening than ever."

BROTHER J. O. Woodruff writes:—"What a glorious fact it is, that there is one that can be held up before the eye of humanity as a pattern. There were lips that never uttered a falsehood. There were eyes that never looked aught but love, and purity, and bliss. There were arms that never closed against watchfulness and penitence. There was a bosom that never throbbed with sin, nor ever was excited by an unholy impulse. There was a man free from all selfishness, and whose life was spent in going about doing good. There was one who loved all mankind, and who loved them more than himself, and gave himself to die that they might live,—that went to the gates of death that we might not be held in its eternal embrace. There was one who lay in the grave to take away its coldness and chill, and its power, and taught humanity how it may ascend above the grave. There was one who, though he walked on earth, had his conversation in heaven, and took away the curtain that hid immortality from view; and presented to us the Father's love. Such an one is the standard held up in the Church of Christ, as the embodiment of all that is attractive, lovely glorious."

Our Work.

It sometimes is well in order to bring out a truth to use an illustration for the purpose of impressing the mind. The idea of this one is not original with us, it having been used many times before. There is to be an entertainment at the hall to which you and I wish to go. The price of admission is 50 cents. I have no money at all, and you have but 25 cents—just half the price. How much more of the entertainment do you see than I do? Not one little bit more. We are both all right on the outside, and can see none of it.

But suppose a good man with tickets to spare comes along, and seeing us kindly gives each a ticket. We accept them and going in, enjoy the performance. You have your 25 cents all the time remember. Now how much more of the show do you see than I do? Not one little bit, for both are alike. You with your 25 cents have no advantage over me with nothing. When we were outside, we both admitted to the good man that we were unable to get in of ourselves—neither one having the price of admission—and gladly accepted his offer to provide us with tickets.

But suppose, while waiting on the outside, we had said to the good man that we would not take his tickets, that we had heard that the manager of the entertainment was a kind and loving man, and wanted every body to enjoy the performance. We would go and say to him that one had nothing, the other but 25 cents, however we both desired to enter in, and relied on his goodness and goodness to give us ready entrance. He would say to us, did not you see the good man, and did he not offer to give you tickets freely? Yes we saw him and heard his voice, but we thought he was but officious, and wanted us to do some things just to please him, and that to had some object in view when he gave the offer, that was selfish, and without any very good reason we just did not accept his gift.

The manager says They are out. You would not accept the conditions that was made to you, neither will I accept the flimsy excuses, and so will be me. Step aside and do not block up the doorway, for those who do have tickets wish to enter. We stand nearby, and see many who have made preparation and procured tickets, entering, and know that they are enjoying themselves to its full, while we are shut out. Our waiting does no good—we neglected and refused the offered kindness, and have no one to blame but ourselves. We are shut out.

The hours of the entertainment draw on, and we hear the applause of those inside, and gradually draw near the door again. The manager observes us and notes our interest and the sorrow of our hearts at our unkind refusal to accept the offer. He speaks to the good man who is interested in us, and they decide that we will be no hindrance to the ones who are seated comfortably in the room, and say, If you will come quietly in and stand back here you may see the crowning act of the performance. Eagerly we accept the and entering enjoy the part left for us to the fullest extent.

Question. Will the audience who have witnessed and enjoyed the whole entertainment have any good reason to object and find fault with the kindness of heart of the manager in letting us in to see a little of what has caused them so much pleasure? Will they say, It was not fair. We had to get tickets to see this, and now they went and let in some who did not have any tickets. Should they do so their fault finding with the management would spoil all the good they had received from the entertainment. But if they should look around and see the eagerness and intense pleasure shewn on our faces, and say, We are so glad the manager let those poor people in to see some of the splendid sight, and enjoy with us a part of the glorious exhibition that so entranced us; such would only add to their own pleasure. They have no business to question the right of the manager to do as he pleases in the matter, nor to interfere with what he chooses to do.

God is going to set up his kingdom in his own good time. He sent his Son Jesus Christ to this earth to make some plans and invite men and women to join his company and enter the kingdom when it is ready. Some few united with Christ, and did as he told them to—complied with the few simple requirements that he laid down for them—and then he was called away to the Father's side to make further preparation for the establishment of the kingdom. Before going he invited all and offered free entrance to all who wish it and will follow him. He told those who had been with him when he was here to go every where, and extend this invitation, and offer heirship in the kingdom to all who will accept and comply with the conditions required to make them adopted sons of God. These few men went forth, and as they secured disciples they imparted to them the commission they had received to go and publish the gracious invitation given.

Before going away Christ impressed upon the minds of his disciples that he would come again in like manner as he went away, and then all being prepared he would set up the kingdom of God in the earth. He said certain events would occur and conditions arise that would indicate the near approach of his coming, and for them to particularly emphasize the requirement for all his followers to Watch, for the exact time of his arrival was known only to the Father; though the conditions of the earth and the people would lead them to know that the time was very close at hand when he should arrive. That it was imperative that they watch and be ready at all times for that event.

We read the record given of the things that would transpire, and the conditions that would exist when the followers of Jesus were looking and expecting to see the Lord appear in sending from the skies. And as we read the records of the world's doings and circumstances that are going on at the present moment, and see that they exactly agree. What next? The Word says, "Lift up your heads and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh."

Yes, dear brethren, the Lord is coming, even now we almost can hear his footsteps. Are we ready? Do we rejoice? If you are not quite ready, you better lose not a single moment in perfecting your arrangements. You who are only also leave something to do. You must not sit down with folded hands and wait. You must tell the good news to those about you, and invite them to get ready and go in with you so soon as the door is opened. You must be in haste about this, for very soon the door will be opened and the ready ones will enter in, and those who are not ready will see the other start and they go out. Weeping will be there and gladness—welcome will be smiles and love.

Do you want any one to be shut out? God does not. Jesus Christ does not. They wish all to come to a knowledge of the truth" and position themselves with the terms and take the steps of obey and be saved. The good news offered freely includes the repentance that he did not give to Simeon. He has principles of forgiveness gifts rejected, but could do no more. Neither will Christ or any of his disciples force men to make preparations. They will die and urge acceptance, which is all they can do. This is the disciples' work, to EXTEND THE INVITATION AND ARGUMENTS TO RECEIVE IT. They must be earnest and use all haste, not wasting a moment, because the time is near at hand—the Lord is almost here. Emphatically we repeat, the work of the disciple of Jesus Christ is first, last and all the time, to "Go preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, he that believeth not shall be condemned."

It would no doubt be very pleasant, and not unprofitable, to try and arrange all the details of the coming kingdom, just exactly how it is all to be, so that we might see eye to eye, but bless you brethren, we have'nt the time. There are yet, even at this late day, so many who have not received the invitation and made preparation.

Possibly, we do not know, God may sometime during the incoming ages again open the door and "pass" in some to enjoy a part of the glories of his kingdom. If we are accounted worthy and are there we shall offer no objection whatever. But we have no assurance that such will be done, and have no right to even expect that he will do so. We have, however, the assurance that he will give an abundant entrance into his kingdom to each one who will accept of the "admission ticket."

As disciples of Jesus Christ, then, our duty is plain and unmistakable. We say, at the risk of being termed "old fogie" and "non-progressive," "old-fashioned" and "narrow" and accused of "dealing with dead issues" and not "daring to grapple with living issues," that our sole and distinctive work is to "Preach the Gospel." Teach men and women what they "must do to be saved."

Brethren, the larger part of the harvest is gathered in—but a few scattering stalks of the grain yet remain. Will you, brother, sister, glean a little in 1898?

"Ye are not Your Own."

The Gospel invites men and women to God's kingdom and glory,—to possess it,—to rule it; and gives them instructions for fitting themselves for this exalted position. Just consider the common "come to Jesus" doctrine a moment; men are invited to come to Jesus without knowing how to come, or what to come for Scripturally,—are earnestly exhorted to come to him for pardon, it is true, but are not told what God's published law of pardon requires of them,—are not told what motives are held out to them by God to induce them to seek pardon and peace with him. They are offered a home in heaven for their imaginary immortal, immaterial souls, and are promised that they shall throughout the roll of everlasting ages sing hallelujahs before the throne of God. As every child of God knows these are towering delusions, ought it not to fire them with zeal to scatter the seed of the kingdom of God under the whole heaven,—and of life everlasting to fit them to enjoy it? We are wondering what plans our brethren are perfecting for the furtherance of the gospel for the year 1898, if permitted to live. If in the past all of them have done what they could, how is it that the burden weighs so much heavier on some than on others? We do not for a moment suppose that any who have God and his truth are inscisible of the debt of gratitude they owe to God and Christ, or would deny that it is their positive duty to be workers together with God, in they would reflect upon it. But seriously doubt if they do reflect upon it. If they did they would realize what the Lord meant when he told his disciples they were the light of the world; and what the Apostle meant when he said to the Corinthians, "Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body," and would see that it is as much a privilege and a duty to minister to Jesus of their substance now as it was in the days of his flesh. (Luke viii. 2) and that it is a command of universal application to God's children to honor their Father with their substance, and if they fail to do this he regards them as robbers, Mal. iii. 8. This perfectly harmonizes with the fact that they are not their own, and that they are but stewards for God of all entrusted to them. We think those claiming to be of the household of faith very remiss in this direction. It may not be intentional. They do not take pains to examine God their Father's claims upon them, perhaps,—do not take steps to ensure him his portion,—supply all their own wants first, and if there be any left why the Lord may have it, but the idea of denying themselves in order to honor him with their substance does not seem to be often entertained. In behalf of the cause of Truth, and from a deep interest in the everlasting welfare of those who enlisted to suffer with Christ in order to reign with him; and, in view of the shortness of working time we plead with our brethren everywhere to thoroughly look into this matter, and answer to God whether they are doing their whole duty or a small part of it only. In these perilous times there seems to be an absolute necessity for a medium of communication between the members of the household of faith, so that they may exhort and cheer each other more and more as they see the day approaching. From many published letters it may be inferred that the visits of THE RESTITUTION are highly appreciated, and would be greatly missed. But few of its readers know what a struggle it requires to keep up its weekly visits. At least it should yield enough to pay for mechanical work involved, and furnish a decent living for the publisher so that he could devote his whole time and attention to it. We are fully persuaded that one thousand of its subscribers could, if they would, pay for two copies instead of one without any serious inconvenience, and that would entirely remove the constant wearing pressure upon the publisher, and, at the same time may win crowns of rejoicing for the investors.

We happen to know of one brother who paid for eight copies for the year 1897 and four for three months, whose earnings were only those of an unskilled laborer; but 5 cents a week paid the whole bill, and was little missed, and nothing was suffered. Who will follow this example?

A Day Long to be Remembered.

A day long to be remembered by the Church of God, in Cleveland, was Sunday, Dec. 12th, 1897.

It was our happy privilege to baptize into Christ one who up to that time had been known as the "Rev. A. H. Zilmer," of Chrno, Wis. This gentleman wrote to us some time ago, to say that he had been for months a deeply interested searcher for truth, and made various inquiries in regard to the Church of God and other matters.

At this time he had embraced as true many of the truths we hold, but the fact that he had not complied with the adopting ordinance showed that he did not realize that they were essential Gospel truth. We wrote him and sent him our lectures, and after a time he sent us the glad word that we had helped him to see light in God's light and had decided to sacrifice all he had hopes of honorable promotion and encouragement in the "Evangelical Association," and associate himself with the "Little Flock," to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom.

As faithfully as we knew how, we showed him the narrowness of the way and the fewness of those who find it, and the difficulty of rowing against the wind and tide of popular opinion, but nothing daunted, he replied that he had counted the cost and resolved to count all his ambitions and prospects as dung in order to win Christ, and attain to the resurrection out from among the dead ones,—and was anxious to put on the Christ by the very ordinance that had always been particularly distasteful to him,—and thus obtain that blessed hope of the coming of the Lord which he had been taught to oppose.

We first sent him by request the addresses of brethren in Illinois where he could be assisted in putting on the Christ, but later invited him to Cleveland for that purpose, which he accepted, and reached this city about midnight of Friday, Dec. 10th,—the 11th was spent in conversation on the gospel and its conditions. On Sunday the 12th we gave an address on baptism and its prerequisites, after which the candidate publicly renounced allegiance to all man-made systems of religion and witness "a good confession before many witnesses," and expressed his determination to die and be buried with Christ in order to share the benefits of his death, and by and by live and reign with him.

Around the Lord's Table, at which he had never before sat, a number of impressive addresses were made, and tears of love and gratitude flowed freely.

Lunch was served in the school room to between thirty and forty of those who reside too far away to return in time for the prayer and conference meeting at 2:30.

At 3:15, our new brother gave an interesting address, tracing the hand of God in all the steps leading him out of darkness into his marvellous light.

In the evening we addressed a large audience on "The eternal purpose of God in Creation and Redemption" and this closed one of the most joyful days of our religious life, because it seemed that God and Truth would now have another faithful witness; and one who will constantly urge upon all who listen to him the necessity of practicing the precepts of Jesus as well as embracing the promises and facts of his gospel.

We pray and believingly hope that a way will soon open for him to proclaim the gospel of Christ he loves so well. His address at present is A. H. Zilmer Chrno, Wisconsin.

RENEW your subscription to THE RESTITUTION today. It only costs three cents a week, and you can not afford to be without for so small a cost.

The authorities of the British Museum are going to publish the new text containing the recently discovered sayings of Christ, which may or may not be apocryphal, in a large, cheap edition; but meanwhile they are very chary of information. Some say there is only one leaf of the manuscript: some, that there are a dozen. Our readers shall have it in full as soon as it can be secured. A further wonderful discovery of papyri is announced, ranging from the first to the sixth century, four thousand in all, which it will take years to decipher.—Independent.

SEND THE RESTITUTION to some poor person as New Year present for 1898. The cost is only three cents a week.

A correspondent writing from Korea states that there is no doubt but what Russia and Japan are preparing for war. Russia is securing coaling stations along the coast, has 100,000 soldiers concentrated near Vladivostock, and has secured a controlling influence in Korean affairs, while Japan is surveying the Korean coast, strengthening her garrisons and her fighting force.

One of the Chicago papers is authority for the statement that there are twenty-seven ministers of a leading denomination in and around that city whose salaries during the last year were $400 or less. The conclusion reached from this and other instances is that clerical poverty is on the increase.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and the amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trust worthy

A Christmas Carol.

"What means that glory round our feet,"
The Magi mused, "more bright than noon?"
And voices chanted clear and sweet,
"To-day the Prince on Peace is born!"

"What means that star," the Shepherds said,
"That lights the midnight heavenly way?"
And angels answering overhead,
Sang "Peace on earth, good will to men!"

'Tis eighteen hundred years and more
Since those sweet oracles were dumb,
We wait as still the Magi did before,
Alas, how slow the time hath come!

But yearly wakes, in words of gold
Or songs of love and prayer scarce less divine,
The Christ-child's night to be told
To pitying ears across the line.

And the poor Shepherds of the city's slums
Where sin and misery most abound,
Still bear the message, as of old,
"To-day the Prince of Peace is born!"

The Gospel Recovered. No. 5.

THE "RELORMATION" OF WALTER SCOTT AND ALEXANDER CAMPBELL EXAMINED.

In papers three and four, I offered a brief sketch of the labors of Scott and Campbell. I endeavored to do so from their own writings, as fully and fairly as is compatible with the object of these papers and with brevity. I find that it is still necessary to treat the subject to some length, even at the risk of taxing the patience of the reader. To myself the subject is full of interest as a chapter in modern gospel and church history, in relation to the restoration of the true "Ancient gospel."

There has been originated and carried on for many years a movement of great importance which extended far and wide throughout the United States, Canada and even Great Britain and her colonies. In 1835, William Jones, a Scotch Baptist minister in London (England) started a magazine, to spread the views and even the writings of Scott and Campbell, for which he borrowed the title—"Millennial Harbinger." Other parties afterwards started in the same interest the "British Millennial Harbinger," and the "Gospel Banner." After a time Mr. Jones ceased to correspond with Mr. Campbell for "openly avowing himself the champion of baptismal regeneration" and "the impugner of divine influence.....pouring out his heterodoxal sentiments by wholesale, flatly contradicting in one page what he had advanced in a former." Thus Mr. Jones' "Millennial Harbinger," nearly filled with "Reformation" writings was, after sixteen months, brought to a close.

The foundation of Scott and Campbell's "Reformation" movement may be said briefly to be, the Bible without human creeds as the only basis for the faith, practice, and union of Christians, and that the faith of the gospel is the simple truth that Jesus of Nazareth is the Messiah, including his death for sin, and his resurrection from the dead, and that the immersion of the believer in water is necessary for the remission of sins.

The work was originated and carried on for a considerable time among the Baptists in Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio, and was instrumental in the conversion of many thousands of persons to the faith and practice referred to. Mr. Campbell, writing to a brother in England, in 1834, says, "From the best information I can gather, there are about one hundred and fifty thousand brethren in the 'Reformation' in the United States."

The crowning merit of the movement may be safely affirmed to be a plea for the true nature of faith or belief as resting on plain Scripture testimony, in place of impressions imagined to be produced on the mind of the sinner by the direct action of the Holy Spirit of God, as maintained by the theology of the so-called orthodox. The zeal and ability with which Scott and Campbell's work was prosecuted, especially by the public preaching of Walter Scott, is beyond all praise.

It is worthy of note here that the view of faith held by Scott and Campbell, as also the use made by them of Peter's confession, were both maintained by a writer named Robert Sandeman in Scotland, in 1757. He wrote a work in two volumes entitled "Letters on Theron and Aspasio," which reached a third edition in 1762. This work was a reply to a work entitled "Dialogues by Theron and Aspasio, by Rev. James Hervey, an Episcopal clergyman in England. Hervey's work was an interminable argument in favor of the imputed righteousness of Christ to the sinner by appropriation. I quote only so much from Sandeman as relates to the subject in hand. Heavys, Vol. I p. 35, "The gospel proposes nothing to be believed by us but what is infallibly true whether we believed it or not." Again, II 29, "There is no difference between our believing any common testimony, and our believing that of the gospel, but what arises from the very nature of the testimony." He then refers to the question, "How a man is affected by the testimony which he believes...the passions and affections are set in motion according as the nature of the thing testified brings him matter of joy or grief, hope or fear." "Let it be remembered that the saving truth which the Apostles believed was that Jesus is the Christ. The Apostles had one uniform fixed sense of these words, and the whole New Testament is written to ascertain to us in what sense they understood them. Every one who believes that Jesus is the Christ in a different sense from the Apostles, or who maintains anything in connection with these words subservive of their real meaning believes a falsehood; so his faith cannot save him. In the days of the Apostles many affirmed along with them that Jesus is the Christ, who yet meant very different from them. The far greater part of Christendom will affirm in like manner; yet we shall not easily find many who, when they come to explain themselves, have the same meaning as the Apostles." Both Hervey and Sandeman held Calvinistic views, which the closing extract from Sandeman will show. In Vol. I, p. 35, he says, speaking of a certain class of persons, "when they are condemned as hypocrites and unbelievers, they are not condemned for want of Aspasio's (Hervey's) faith, and that for these two reasons: first, it was never true that Christ died for them; second, they were not faulty in this respect, for the Scripture text describes them as rather too confident about their interest in Christ."

It is proper to mention here that Sandeman's works are named by Scott's biographer among others which formed part of Mr. Forrester's library, from which Scott, "in his Biblical studies received great aid." p. 61.

The self confidence with which, both by mouth and pen, the whole movement was carried on, with its alleged high claims to be the most thorough religious reform the world had seen since the dark ages, gives it to the ordinary reader all the appearance of impregnability. It must therefore appear to be the extreme of hardihood for any one to take exception to it, or to venture a insinuation to the effect—"One thing thou lackest." Let us see.

I have made quotations chiefly from the biography of Scott, and from the "Christian Baptist." Campbell also wrote the "Christian System," 2nd Edition in 1839, and Scott "The Messiahship," 384 pages, in 1859. I have consulted both of these. In looking through all these writings, I have been especially struck with certain remarkable and glaring omissions. In relation to the main position, "Jesus is the Christ," both Scott and Campbell in their advocacy of this, continually quote Peter's confession as recorded in Matt. xvi. 18. Yet strange to say although Scott boasts of having made the four Evangelists his almost exclusive life-long study, he never once mentions the confession of Nathaniel, "Thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel." Neither does Mr. Campbell. I need hardly say that this form of the confession met our Lord's approval equally with that of Peter. It was also earlier in time and expresses in plain terms what was admittedly in the minds of all the twelve Apostles, Peter included. In a matter of this kind everything depends on the meaning of terms. Mr. Campbell well understood this. In his discourse on Law, he says, "Words are signs of ideas or thoughts. Unless words are understood ideas or sentiments can neither be communicated nor received." It is plain, therefore, that if the terms Messiah, Christ, or Anointed be misunderstood or misapplied, where can there be any value in volumes written on it, or a great movement raised upon it?

Again, in making allusions to our Lord's confession before the Roman Governor Pontius Pilate, he terms it Pilate's question, "Art thou the King of the Jews?" which was replied to by both Scott and Campbell. The former simply calls it a charge of "sedition," the latter one of "treason." In John's account of the interview, our Lord not only said, in reply to Pilate's question, "Thou sayest," but he added, "to this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." What truth but that of his Kingship and Kingdom. He also said, "My kingdom is not of this world," and certainly the kingdom of Israel was, in an important sense, "not of this world;" having been in its origin, constitution, and legislation absolutely divine.

The question here is a very serious one. If the kingship and kingdom of the Jews in the true Hebrew sense, was really not claimed and confessed by our Lord before Pilate, but merely an institution comprising the body of his disciples afterward known as the church—was it not a needless exposure of himself and his supposed true claims to a gross misapprehension on the part of Pilate? It is also to be noted here that the Apostle Paul calls this "witnessing (literally martyrizing) a good confession" and also that Pilate placed this very confession on the cross as the "accusation" upon which our Lord was condemned—"Jesus of Nazareth the King of the Jews." While Scott and Campbell also ignore this fact recorded as it is in all the four gospels, it is remarkable that history in the sphere of the fine arts has also preserved it. The crucifixion as painted by the old masters shows the initial capital letters (the Latin part of the "accusation"), I.N.R.I. prominently exhibited on the cross.

It may also be mentioned that another remarkable event has been ignored by the reformers named—that is, the visit of the "wise men" at the birth of Jesus, and the consequent alarm of King Herod caused by their inquiry "Where is he that is born King of the Jews?" He gathered all the chief priests and Scribes together, and demanded of them where they Christ should be born. They said unto him, in Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet And thou Bethlehem in the land of Juda... for out of thee shall come a Governor that shall rule my people Israel." It need hardly be said that this deliverance exactly agrees with all the other testimonies to the Kingly character of the Messiahship as exclusively belonging to the nation of Israel.

Again, both authors lay great stress on what they term the "Ancient Gospel." This, however, they invariably apply to the truth that "Jesus is the Christ." They never seem to recognize the important fact that the "Ancient Gospel" was, while agreeing in substance, couched in terms altogether different from those of the confessions of both Peter and Nathanael. The most "ancient" preacher of the gospel was John the Baptist, and although in conversations with individuals he intimated that the Christ was coming, he publicly preached the gospel in these terms—"The kingdom of God is at hand." This was before the immersion of Jesus. The same terms were used by our Lord himself in preaching the gospel from the very beginning of his ministry. Matt. iv. 17. He appointed for the same mission, first, twelve Apostles, and later on, seventy disciples; and it is recorded by Matthew, Mark, and Luke, that the terms used in their preaching were substantially the same as those used by their Master.

On the other hand there is no evidence that the important truth that "Jesus is the Christ," was preached either by our Lord or his Apostles during his personal ministry. On the contrary we read that after the confession of Peter, he expressly forbade them to make this truth known. "Then charged he his disciples that they should tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ." Matt. xvi. 20.

I close this article by mentioning another class of passages in the New Testament which compel notice by Scott and Campbell. In these the kingdom of Israel is distinctly spoken of as that which our Lord was to possess, or which he was to share with his Apostles. I simply name the passages, requesting the readers to examine them for themselves and judge of their entire accordance with what has been advanced. Luke i. 32, 33; Luke xxii. 28–30; Matt. xix. 27–28.

P. S. An important slip of pen or press occurs in No. 2 of "The Gospel Recovered" Oct. 13, 1897—It occurs in the following sentence:

"Since the Reformation of the 16th century until within the last fifty years, 'the gospel of the Kingdom of God' as the primary element of 'the one faith' was known."

The last word "known" should be "unknown." J. C.

1897

We give below an article from the pen of our lamented Brother S. A. Chaplin, being published in this paper Dec. 27, 1877, when he was its Editor. We change the figures only from 1877 to 1897, not a word else needing to be touched. Indeed, were Bro. Chaplin living we doubt if he would attempt an improvement.

Before we shall have issued another RESTITUTION, 1897 will be numbered with the periods, whether reckoned as moments, years, or measureless ages, that are alike lost in the abysms of a past everlasting, whose infinite unison, stretching back to the dateless antagonizing is filled with the existence of the Infinite and Eternal. As it sinks and disappears in those fathomless depths forever, to give place to its successor, 1898, we may well pause a moment to cast a glance backward on the past, contemplate briefly the present, and, through the telescope of prophecy, forecast the near future so far as the sight of dim mortality can penetrate the obscurity of the mysteries hereafter. In the past, if we only retrospect the history of humanity, we contemplate scenes and changes that fill up a dark and sorrowful record. Only one vision of transcendent beauty and loveliness is pictured on the canvas of time. As our world came flashed from the hands of a all wise and benevolent Creator, morning stars sang over a blooming Paradise, and all the Sons of God shouted for joy as they surveyed the grandeur of the new creation. But the serpent spoiler entered the glad garden of God, and seduced its happy inmates into rebellion; the blighting curse fell upon creation's gorgeousness; beauties that were the admiration of heaven faded away, and man, expelled from Eden's healthful bowers and the tree of life, commenced his course of decay, destined to end in his return to the primal earth from which he was taken.

Since that expulsion the flight of time has been over continued desolations. Empires have arisen only to fall, and proud cities have been builded only to become homeless wastes. Around the base of the still standing columns of Thebes, the oldest of cities, the hot sands of the desert are drifting, while its pyramids of mummies' dead repose in the countless sepulchres excavated for miles along the sweep of the neighboring Lybian hills. It can no longer send forth an army of 20,000 men and 200 chariots, from each of its hundred gates.

If we turn to proud Nineveh, the once exalted capital of the great Assyrian Empire, the Lord has made an utter end of its place "with an overrunning flood," and its history is now disclosing through the interpretation of a dialect o'der than the classic tongues in which Homer sang the downfall of Ilium. An arrow-headed language, impressed on the scattered and buried bricks, and the broken slabs that once paneled the entrances to its gorgeous courts, has been deciphered to unfold its former grandeur. Babylon in its turn became the wonder of the world; but the proud walls of the golden city have been broken down, and its high gates have been burned with fire. The wild beast of the desert now meets the wild beast of the island on its desolate heaps, and the satyr dances on the ruined sites of palaces where manly strength and womanly beauty once reveled.

Jerusalem had once a name and a praise in the whole earth, but the abominations of desolation have displaced its sacred fanes, and the infidel foot has trodden down its holy places through the centuries of its captive's long and weary exile. Theocharch, too, of the past has marched a bloody pathway through a frightful howling desert, lined, along its dreadful length, with the graves of its millions of martyred slain.

Turning to the present, and the picture only deepens in sadness. Famine and fire, flood, pestilence and war, are reveling in perfect death-sport in sweeping the world with besoms of destruction and "men's hearts are failing them for fear and for looking for those things that are coming on the earth."

Looking to the future, darkest clouds curtain its heavens, betokening the coming of a tempest of wrath to result in such time of trouble as has never been since there was a nation.

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time,
In an age on ages telling;
To be living is sublime."

But, O Church of God, beyond the sweep of the near and world-wide desolations of the gathering wrath-storm, dawns the bright day of God, bringing earth's regenesis, and a new-born Paradise. Israel's Hope, and earth's Deliverer, will soon flood the heavens with the light, and the earth with the glory of his coming. He comes for his Church. Soon from the rock-hewn sepulcher, from the graves in the sea, from the arctic snow, from the wind-scattered ashes of burned martyrs, and from the depths of the sea where the tiny coral insect has built the drowned saint a tomb, will resurrection power emancipate a bride for the King of kings. The kingdom of God is now nigh at hand. O thou left over remnant of the royalty of faith, lift up the head and rejoice, for the king is now at the door. We hail thy advent, O Messiah of God, and as thou hast said "surely I come quickly and truly"—our glad hearts responsal—even so, come, Lord Jesus. Come, and bring thy church its long-deferred redemption; come, and bring a sin-cursed world restitution; come, and bring a dying world health and cure; come, and bring the feathery palm and the rose to earth's arid deserts; come, wipe the tears from earth's weeping millions; come, O come, and bring life to the sleeping dead. Grant that with girded loins, and well-trimmed, blazing lamps we may go forth to meet thee, should'st thou come in 1898. Stand by us through the watches this last dark night. At last give us the crown to place at thy feet, O loved Redeemer, for thou hast "loved us, and washed us from our sins in thine own blood."

The World's Motion.

Those people who complain of the monotony of their mental scenery have, generally speaking, a good deal of reason for their grumbling. It is the usual that prevails. The world moves quietly, and there is little in its routine to attract attention. The mind tires of contemplating the weary mechanism of its institutions, of seeing mankind move in regular grooves, like an endless train, toward its destination. The human scenery in its garb of rusty black, is as monotonous as the physical outlook. The majority of the race work hard and quietly, content to get food and shelter for their toil. The whole effect on the onlooker is rather soporific. Nevertheless, there are times full of unusual incident, when mankind seems moved by a feverish unrest, when events of first importance so crowd each other as to produce intellectual bewilderment. And we are just now passing through such a period.

Indeed, the stir everywhere is so great that thinking men who appreciate its significance, or stand near enough to the great forces in motion to feel something of their swirl, cannot avoid a certain measure of mental excitement. Look, for instance, at the wars on the earth. There is England waging two wars, one on the Indian border, the other on the Nile. Each perhaps is justified to a certain extent as the discharge of a duty to civilization, but each, nevertheless has a very selfish interest behind it—the strengthening of power and enlargement of dominion. France is fighting a guerilla war in Madagascar, of the real status of which the world would like to know more and at the same time maintaining her warfare with the slave-raiding chief Samory in the western bulge of Africa. Turkey is still holding Thessaly by force of arms, and beside, is engaged in suppressing a rising in Albania which, reports state, is growing daily more formidable. Spain has still two wars on hand, the revolt in the Philippines being yet unsuppressed, while that in Cuba promises to end only with the Spanish evacuation of the island.

Consider, too, the claims now being advanced by the various powers, not yet enforced by shells, but so advanced as to leave no doubt that they will be thus enforced if they are interfered with. There is the demand for indemnity made by Germany upon Hayti, which, if refused, would inevitably result in the German annexation of the island, did not the United States stand as the protector of all the petty republics to the south. There is the German seizure of Kiao-Chau bay, in China, nominally to enforce payment of an indemnity, but doubtless really intended to secure a strong position for Germany as the basis of a claim to a share in the final partition of the Mongol estate. France and England are endeavoring to settle by joint commission rival claims in West Africa, claims which, though more academic than real, each stands ready to defend by the sword. Russia has just notified Turkey of her dependence upon the northern power, and that nothing must be done to prevent Constantinople, when the time arrives, from passing into its hands. The United States is moving toward the annexation of Hawaii: the nations are increasing their armaments in the belief that the next war will be one to the sword-hilt; while the adventurous of the two continents are preparing for a movement on the Alaskan gold-fields which threatens to rival in volume that of the Aryans from the Asian steppes.

The world is, in fact, so full of action that it is difficult to see how all the conflicting interests, real and imaginary, can be reconciled without disastrous collision somewhere. There is so much that is unusual and of first importance that the mind is unable to appreciate its full force and significance, and looks with a kind of bewildered expectancy for the next great event. That it is a pleasant or profitable attitude may be doubted. A certain monotony of life is best for achievement. True, it is held that contemplation of important events, the expansion of the mental scenery, stands for experience, and so increases our stock of knowledge. But book learning must by study and meditation, and in a time like the present, with attention distracted by so many great spectacles, there is no place for either. No doubt a certain energy is developed by so much motion, but it is neither intellectual nor moral. The activity we are looking at only illustrates the irresistibleness of selfishness, and we all know that periods of great excitement are followed by a diminution of mental acuteness.—*N. Y. A new fabric is steel wire cloth covered with a semi-transparent, impervious material. It is adapted to use in skylight roofs, windows, train sheds, green houses, bathhouses, transient partitions, office doors, and many other things. The material in which the reinforcing web of steel wire cloth is embedded is claimed to be quite elastic. Neither heat nor cold, rain, sun, hail, nor sleet affect it. Hot coal and cinders will not ignite it. It is said to be weather-proof, flexible, and as translucent as skylight glass. Its weight is about one-seventh that of glass.—Popular Science News.

Last month, at St. Paul's Cathedral, London, there was a commemoration service for the baptism by Augustine, of Ethelbert, King of Kent, founder of the cathedral. He was baptized by immersion, and during the service frequent mention was made of the fact. It is more than probable that many who participated in that service wondered why their baptism should be so unlike Ethelbert's.

A Terrific Sermon.

Rev. F. F. Passmore, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and member of the Colorado Conference, recently preached a sermon which is attracting widespread attention, owing to the pronounced views, fearlessly expressed, regarding evils of the present time, and the apathy of the church in dealing with wrong. We can only present a few quotations from the sermon, which was preached from the text: "I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel." Ezek. xxxiii. 7. "Feed my sheep." John xxi. 15, 17. Mr. Passmore said: "Watchmen are men who are appointed to look out for danger, and when they see it to give the alarm and warn the people. Shepherds are men who are to look after the sheep—all the sheep and all the interests of the sheep. Studying the ministry of our church from the standpoint of the above Scripture, I am impressed with the fact that the greatest failure of our age is the ministry. I find the ministry in our Church, as a class, the most worldly, unfaithful and cowardly that it has ever been. The Church is worldly, formal and unspiritual, and has lost her power for good; yet, the Church is on as high a plane as her leaders. When I look over the age I see crime of every description and violence on the increase, murder, lynching, suicide, adultery, drunkenness, gambling, defalcation, the oppression of the poor, political corruption, the outraging of womanhood and girlhood; in a word, the passions of men—the worst, the most infernal and devilish—are running riot. I am constrained to stop and ask what our ministers, who are supposed to be the opposers of all sin, are doing? I am sorry to say that I find them even to our bishop, throwing their influence in favor of all these sins and crimes. It is a sad state for the Church, and a gloomy condition for the country, when the ministry and the corrupt and criminal classes are working hand in hand, and walking side by side, as the preachers, saloon men and other corrupt and vile classes are doing. Just as the preachers stood for the divine right of kings in the days of Cromwell, and for the king and the nobility in the days preceding the French Revolution, and upheld the slave-holder in the anti-slavery struggle; so our bishops, editors, elders, college professors and the pastors of our great churches, are standing by the rich and supporting them in outraging the poor.

For men to pretend to preach Christ and then go to the ballot box and support the worst men, and the most devilish and infernal sins and crimes of the age, is about the boldest and loudest hypocrisy that has been made open to the world for ages. How much more staunch supporters of sin can our bishops become than to favor licensing saloons, support a party that now favors the licensing the prostitution of womanhood.

This is worshiping at the shrine of the rich and the vile with a vengeance. I am no longer surprised at the inefficiency of the ministry; the corruption in politics; the deadness of the Church; the development of the trusts; the growth of monopolies; the wealth of the few; the poverty of the many; the brutality of crime; the desecrating of the Sabbath; the increase of infidelity; the rapid growth of immorality. I am no longer surprised at the condition of the Church, the country and the age, when I think that our bishops and our preachers, with a few exceptions, have joined with corrupt politicians, gamblers, saloon men, Sabbath-breakers, prostitutes, money-changers and the opponents of the poor and weak. Instead of driving the money-changers from the temple, they are invited in and made welcome. Dare any one think for a moment that such preachers are preaching Christ, living his spirit, and representing his doctrine to the world? Christ's doctrines, principles and spirit would change all these things and would bring about an era of well being to mankind. The trouble with our age is that Christ is not being preached in our great churches by our great preachers. Great churches in whose pulpits stand men sending forth peals of impassioned oratory for the pleasure of a few rich and favored, and never a word for the thousands of poor hungry and cold of humanity, who have been brought to this distress by the very men who are sitting enraptured by such eloquence, is about as far from being the true spirit of Christ as heaven is from hell. Some women and children picked up coal in the great city of Denver to keep from freezing, while other women and children in the same city are worshiping(?) God in a two hundred and fifty thousand dollar Methodist church, only a few blocks away, with the added luxury of soul entrancing music from a thirty thousand dollar organ. Does any sane man, saint or sinner, believe for a moment that either of these pictures—the one on the river, or the other on Capitol Hill are the products of Christianity? If the people in the bottoms were not so poor, the people on the hill would not be so rich. If the people on the hill were not so rich, the people on the bottom would not be so poor. Yet we have D. D.'s and schools of theology that are teaching that both these conditions are the results of Christianity. A large portion of men who sit in the pews of the great churches, and hang on the words of our bishops and popular preachers, are the men who are corrupting our politics, oppressing the poor, debauching womanhood—are the men who listen to great preachers, pay them high salaries and build the fine churches. Our bishops and great preachers are living in such style of opulence and affluence, and moving in circles of such magnificent splendor, that the poor cannot pay the bills, and cannot, therefore hope for their sympathy. The ministry should live such a plain simple life as to be able to breathe the air of full freedom and perfect independence, which would enable them as ambassadors of God to be faithful and true to all classes of men.

Our great ministers of this State, with Chancellor McDowell, last fall, and also last April, joined hands with the corrupt politicians, gamblers, saloon men and fallen women of Market Street to redeem Store and City. They succeeded, and as one of the results of redeeming, Denver was never so nearly turned over to the criminal elements, and gambling and prostitution was never so flourishing as now. A fine lot of redeemers! Preachers, chancellors, university professors, saloon men, and gamblers and scarlet women. A fine lot of redeemers—such a lot as redeemed Babylon, Tyre and Rome just before those great powers fell. A fine set of reforming preachers, preaching a little about Christ in the pulpit and flirting with gamblers and scarlet women at the ballot box. The fact is that true bishops and leading ministers have gone away from the true work of watchmen and shepherds. It is today as Dr. Hamilton said before the Colorado Conference at Boulder last summer, that a "thieving ministry perpetuated slavery." See what the bishops, elders, editors and old preachers now on deck have bequeathed to us. They have left to us a desecrated sabbath, about three millions of drunkards, two hundred and fifty thousand saloons; patriotism almost dead, expiring; four million tramps, the rich are growing richer, and the poor growing poorer, the rich in power, controlling the navy, army and government; the general government the most corrupt the world ever saw; two saloons running full blast in the capitol of the world's republic. These are only a few of the conditions that a compliant, obsequious time-serving and man-pleasing ministry have left to this age of reformation. And amid all this degeneracy and moral disintegration, these old brothers of ours are not turning over a hand to save or reform the age. They are so busy with the saloon men, gamblers and scarlet women, redeeming the State, that of course they have no time, and less disposition to spend time on trifles. It would never do to neglect such weighty matters as redeeming the State and City, if the Church and Sabbath, and manhood and justice and right go to perdition. Such a ministry as this never blazed out new highways for a progressing and marching humanity. A ministry that will protect rich rogues in the church, and support corruption in office, can always be depended on with the scarlet women as redeemers. We have not a bishop or great preacher today that is thundering against sinners and corruption that is overturning our homes, the church and nation itself. Our great preachers today are preaching for big salaries, fine mansions and sumptuous living; and they are getting them."—The Raisin River Sentry.

Books and Tract List.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

We have received a new supply of this valuable work, which treats of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the one hope, one faith, one baptism, by the late Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. This will need no introduction to many of our readers, as they already know of the good that is accomplished through its circulation. 10 cents each. Send to this office.

FUTURE PROBATION.

Is God awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff. This work was issued and sold at 25 cents. We have a good supply and will send them post paid for ten cents per copy. This is an excellent opportunity for any who are interested in this subject to get this work by a talented author. Send ten cents to this office for a copy.

GLAD TIDINGS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

This is the title of a tract containing 12 large size pages, and is a reprint of a work issued many years ago, and we suppose was written by Brother Benjamin Wilson. It is clear and comprehensive, and can be had for 5cts each or 20 for $1.00.

THE COMING NATION.

A lecture delivered by H. Y. Reed. Thoroughly sets forth the idea that the Coming Nation will be the nation of Israel restored to Palestine, and the scriptural reasons are given. 26 pages price 10 cts or three or 25 cts.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

A popular lecture by M. Joblin. Very good to put in the hands of those searching for truth. 24 pages 5c. each.

Necessity of Baptism. A 4-page tract, written some years ago by Brother J. M. Stephenson, and it appeared as a newspaper article. It is so good we thought best to preserve it in this way, and offer it at 2 cents each or 15 cts per dozen.

Letter to Dr. Talmage. A 4-page tract being a letter written by Brother Daniel Howard and printed in RESTITUTION, April 22, 1896. 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Letter to Dr. Talmage. A 4-page tract being a letter written by Sister Abbie A. Howard to Dr. Talmage and printed in the RESTITUTION of April 22, 1896. 2 cents each or 15 cts per dozen.

Modern Events in the Light of Prophecy.—This is three sermons preached by H. Y. Reed at Antioch, which has since been printed in tract form, and may be had at this office for five cents each, or 30 copies for $1.00.

Passages Supposed to Teach Consciousness after Death, by W. H. Wilson, which shows that eternal life is conditional and not inherited. 3 cents each, or 25 cents a dozen.

Where Do the Dead Sleep. These are Bible texts given in answer to this question. A 3-page tract. 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Hades. A Bible account of this place with proof texts. Ten copies for 5 cents.

Death Compared to a Sleep. This represents death as a sleep and proof texts are given. Ten copies for 5 cts.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

Poetry.

Slipping Away.

They are slipping away—these swift, swift years
Like a leaf on the current cast;
With never a break in their rapid flow,
We watch them as one by one they go
Into the beautiful past.

As silent and soft as the river's thread,
Or an arrow's flying gleam,
As soft as the fragrance he'ore it shed,
That lift the willow's golden head
And ripple the glassy stream.

As light as the breath of the thistle-ball was,
As fond as love's dream,
As pure as the flush o' the rose-bell's throat,
As sweet as the woodbird's matin note,
So tender and sweet the years.

One after another we see them pass
Down the dim light-vista,
We heard the sound of their steps tread
In the steps of our lives long since dead,
As beautiful as the fair

There are only a few years left to live;
Shall we waste them in idle strife?
Shall we trample under our ruthless feet,
Those beautiful blossoms—fair and sweet,
By the daily ways of life

There are only a few swift years—ah, let
No serious error be heard;
Make life's fair pattern of rare design,
Until up the heavens with love's sweet wine,
But never an angry word

The Gospel Recovered. No. 6.

IS THE CHURCH THE KINGDOM PREACHED BY OUR LORD?

In the previous No (dated 15) of this series of papers I gave a brief recapitulation of the "Reformation" sketched in preceding articles. I also commenced an examination of the views of Walter Scott and Alexander Campbell on the so-called "Ancient Gospel" noticing their reticence regarding such matters as the confession of Nathaniel; the "good confession" of our Lord before Pilate; the inquiry of the "wise men," with Herod's interview with the chief priests; and the true form of gospel preaching "the kingdom of God is at hand." I have also acknowledged as their chief merit their contention that faith is the simple belief of testimony, and not an inward feeling wrought directly by the Spirit of God.

I find that I have still occasion to apologize for the length of these remarks; but the nature of the subject seems to require some more space than I anticipated.

However the reticence on the part of Scott and Campbell with regard to such plain New Testament statements as I have pointed out, is to be accounted for, it were of little use for us now to speculate. The fact remains; and it might be an interesting problem for the "Disciples" of modern times to study and explain. In the meantime another important fact has to be mentioned. Both Scott and Campbell strongly held and maintained that theory of the kingdom of God which had been handed down unreformed through three centuries of Protestantism from the Roman Catholic Church. That theory is, that the Church of Christ is the kingdom of God or of heaven, which was predicted by the prophets, and preached by John the Baptist, our Lord himself, the twelve Apostles, and the seventy disciples. On the passage in Dan. ii. 44, "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed," the Douay, or Roman Catholic Bible has this note—"the kingdom of Christ in the Catholic Church." A Protestant Commentator, Thomas Scott says, "The kingdom of Christ was evidently intended; from small beginnings it has already made great progress," etc. This doctrine of the "Reformation" movement is so well-known to most of the readers of THE RESTITUTION, that for such no proof is needed. It runs through all the writings referred to, and is occasionally stated formally and contended for. For others, however, as well as to make the matter sure for all, a few examples may be given.

For example, at page 587 of the "Christian Baptist," we find the Editor referring to a baptism and saying, "I cordially congratulate brother Cole on his entrance into the kingdom of the Messiah." At the close of a letter from a correspondent giving a report of 600 baptisms in Kentucky, we find the expression "May the Lord's kingdom continue to increase." In Campbell's discourse on "Law"—(1816) p. 223 he says, "This conclusion (that there is no necessity for preaching the law) corresponds ... with the nature of the kingdom of heaven or Christian Church." In the Messiahship p. 53, Scott says, "The kingdoms of this world will not, by the knowledge of their subjects and true subjects, become [illegible] but [illegible]" on Mount Zion was in reality Jehovah's throne ("his earthly throne") Jehovah's throne in heaven was therefore David's throne! It is matter of plain fact, here ignored, that for nine hundred years, so far as heaven and earth were concerned, there existed two distinct thrones. When Zedekiah was dethroned, David's throne with his crown were "cast down to the ground." Psa. lxxxix. 39-44. This "casting down of David's throne," was decreed, and with a view to information that it was to be of a temporary duration—"until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." There was here implied in the threatened "casting down" the promise of restoration of the throne of David, but no mention of Jehovah's throne in heaven.

It is just here that the crucial question arises as to whether, as our "Reformers" maintain, the kingdom of God was to set up on the day of Pentecost.

How to Study the Bible.

John says, "Search the Scriptures,—they are they that testify of me." In the Acts we read of the noble Bereans, that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so, or rather what things were so, i. e. what was the truth.

It is not necessary to study the Bible very extensively to know that we should not tell falsehood, should not be deceitful, should not take what belongs to another, should be kind, merciful, helpful to those in need. These works of humanity may indeed be performed without care for the written revelation of God.

It is true that the mass of unbelievers can not be trusted and it is likewise true that an honest, firm, loving belief brings with it good works. But the main object of the study of Holy Writ is not to find what are good works nor how we should pray and praise, but to know what is truth, what is God's plan of salvation. A true, heartfelt faith is impossible without a true, heart-felt humanity, and the prayer and praise of such will be acceptable.

The proper mode of studying the Bible then is that which gives us an impressive knowledge of the truth in regard of God. This is not largely secured by a consecutive reading of chapter after chapter. Mere description and anecdote and history take up much of the space of portions of the Bible and that which gives definite instruction of truth is generally but partially stated at any one place. Upon each subject we find here a little, there a little. To be informed we must compare scripture with scripture.

This we might do through the preacher if he would give us without hesitancy and with entire fullness each line of God's doctrine. We have also the written teacher in the form of pamphlets and books upon "What to Believe," Faith, Repentance, Baptism, Prophecy, The General Resurrection, The First Resurrection, The Gospel of the Kingdom, The Nature and Duration of Death, Hades, Gehenna, The Second Death, and other topics. Upon each of these we should know nothing except through the Bible. Whatever we hear or see should be diligently compared with the Word of God and if our teacher, living or printed, has been full and sincere we have secured a broad and valuable knowledge. To study independently we require the liberal use of concordance and of references. The main object should be to have before us all upon a particular topic and so secure full knowledge of it. If we love the truth so much as this we are sure to try to do right.

In such a mode of study we will sometimes find passages that will seem to be out of harmony with the general teaching of the Bible upon the subject. The beauty of this study is, however, that we need not go far to find abundant explanation for any such passage. Thus for example we find in Luke the King James version, "Behold, the kingdom of heaven is within you." The kingdom is elsewhere described very differently and is a matter of promise and of prophecy. Besides he speaks here to the Pharisees, the most unChristian of all the Jews. The real meaning "the kingdom of heaven i. e. the prince of or the very core and heart of the kingdom, heavenly in its character, planned and arranged for in heaven whence it shall eventually be brought for those who shall inherit it, is in the midst of you." Jesus merely told them in the way of a parable "I, who am among you am he that shall establish what has been prophesied."

Several such examples might be given where searching the scriptures will give us the delights of the sure word of promise.

Whatever is read consecutively should recieve special attention upon important passages and references and the concordance should there be consulted.

It is unnecessary to say that the Bible should be studied with delight, and freely as a custom and with child-like submission to its dictates. "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." "Hold fast that which is good and true in all things that the holy testaments teach. The sure word of prophecy is especially important. This is the connection of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone."

J. G. HAGER.

Obituary.

In Coleman Co., Alabama, Nov. 26, 1897, James Possey, age 39. Our brother in Christ fell asleep after a long spell of typhoid fever, leaving a wife and baby to mourn his loss. While we have lost a good member and officer in the church and the community a good and worthy citizen, we do sympathize with the bereaved wife who has lost a good companion, and with his old mother who stayed by all the time while he lay scorching with a fever, and his brother who got to him just in time to see him breathe his last. The funeral was held at Pleasant Grove Church. Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. J. W. Carroll. May the gospel hope sustain and comfort the large circle of mourning friends till the shadows flee away.

H. H. MAYHALL.

IN MEMORIAM.

Another warrior fallen; but thank God he fell with his armor on, always on. Bro. Geo. W. Conts fell asleep Dec. 20, 1897, after a faithful battle with error against truth for 40 years. Embracing the faith under the teaching of Bro. E. Hoyt, he has never retreated once, his home has always been a welcome resting place for weary soldiers, a home of love and peace.

Bro. Conts was born in Springwater, Livingston Co., N. Y., May 7, 1838; was married to Abbie J. Richardson May 2, 1858. From this union five children have blessed their lives, all united in the one blessed hope of life through Christ. Bro. Conts was as well as usual the day of his death, he ate his dinner with the family and went out to his work, in a short time a friend drove in to put his horse in the barn and found him dead. He had fallen with a stroke of apoplexy. The faithful, devoted wife, four daughters and one son survive the sleeping father. The vacant chair at the fireside, the silent voice, the awful absence every where about the home, the tear-stained eyes, the weary days all tell the sad, sad story over again, the enemy still holds the power of death. Will we never, never see the kind blue eyes light up in welcome, or feel the warm hand-shake of our brother? The sad answer, never here, is only brightened when through the clouding gloom comes the sweet hope, "I am the resurrection and the life." The shadow passes, the hope so soon to be realized brings joy and we believe the blessed reward is waiting just a little ahead for our brother. The text chosen by Eld. Woodward was Psa. cxvi. 15, and Psa. lviii. 11. A large concourse of people paid their last respects to our faithful friend, brother, father and husband. May God sustain our dear sister in her widowhood and faithfully preserve us all to the glad meeting by and by.

M. A. WOODWARD.

DR. HARDIN OATMAN.

Dr. Hardin Oatman was born in Greencastle, Ind., Feb. 10, 1813, where he resided with his parents until he attained manhood, when he went to Southern Illinois, where he married, (at a date now lost) Miss Wilmath Bird. She died in 1843 after giving birth to two sons and three daughters, two of whom died in infancy. One son J. F. Oatman became an attorney at law, moved to Llano, Texas, and died Nov. 3, 1882. The surviving son, M. C. Oatman, is a business man in Llano, and the remaining daughter, Mrs. Susan Wilkinson, is now residing in Hayes Co., Texas. In 1842-3 Dr Oatman began the study of medicine under Dr. Goodwin at Dundee, Ill. He attended medical lectures at Rush Medical College, in Chicago, in 1844 and began the practice of his profession in Harrison Co., Mo., in 1845. He was the first regular practitioner in the County, and became its first post master at Bethany, the county seat. Aug. 14, 1846, he married Elizabeth A. Hulse at Bethany, Mo., who still survives. He lived in Harrison Co. until 1851, when he moved to Hayes Co., Texas, with his family to which had now been added three girls and one boy. In 1871, he again returned to Harrison Co., Missouri, and settled in Eagleville. Five years later he came to Buchanan Co., where he continued in the practice of medicine until 1884, when he moved to Nodaway Co., where he remained for eleven years, or until 1895, when he moved to St. Joseph, where he died Dec. 3, 1897.

Of his children by his second wife S. H. Oatman resides in Kerr Co., Texas, and is a Christadelphian preacher; P. H. Oatman is a city salesman for Nave & McCord, wholesale grocers in St. Joseph, Mo., where he resides; W. S. Oatman is employed by the same house and resides with his mother—is unmarried. The youngest son, E. S. Oatman, is a Christian minister in Mo., but unmarried. A daughter, Mrs. May M. Pierson, resides in Buchanan Co., Mo., and her sister, Mrs. Julia E. Warner in Mt. Ayr, Ia. One daughter, born in Texas, died in infancy.

He was the father of twelve children, eight of whom survive him. When about 17 years old Dr. Oatman embraced the gospel and was baptized and was an earnest advocate of the truth until his death. I had an interview with him a few weeks prior to his death, and he declared there was not a cloud in his horizon. His hope was never brighter and he was confident his sleep would be short. He canvassed the signs of the times as far as his strength would permit, and he manifested much joy at the prospect although he knew death was at the door. I am glad to be able to bear witness to his strong and unwavering faith till the end. "Let me die the death of the righteous and may my last end be like his."

The funeral services were held at the house of his son Bro. P. H. Oatman, Sunday, Dec. 5th, 2 P. M., and he was buried in Ashland Cemetery.

Bro. Wm. J. Orem of Baileyville preached the funeral sermon by agreement with the Doctor more than twenty years ago. Much attention was given to the great truths concerning the resurrection and the joyful hope portrayed by Bro. Orem and could not fail of doing much good.

J. F. WILCOX.

An Appeal.

Brethren and Sisters of the Abrahamic Faith in Iowa:

I beg leave to stir up your pure minds in way of remembrance in the way of donations for the spreading of the gospel. So far we have had money to keep one man in the field and have some yet. But not enough to keep Bro. Crowe and Bro. Eychaner at work all the time. Brethren is it possible that we as a people, with the power of God unto salvation, living in one of the most prosperous States in the Union cannot support two men to spread the good news of the kingdom, so that after spending nearly 35 years of the best part of their lives in the study of God's Word so that they might be in a position to meet all the fiery darts of Satan, to be compelled to turn to some other vocation to earn the necessaries of life? Are we going to let a man like Bro. Eychaner hide his great light under a bushel while men and women are daily dying, for want of God's Word to be heralded to their ears? It does not seem possible to me that we can do it. If we can, let us never acknowledge to any one that we are a church body, or ever expect to be. If we can let such men drop out of the Lord's work we do no not deserve to ever have any preachers. Brethren, I sincerely hope from the bottom of my heart that you will think of this seriously, and either send or pledge yourself. God willing, for a small amount at least to keep them at work every day. Send your calls to Bro. A. J. Eychaner at Gladbrook, and Bro. W. L. Crowe of Irving, for meetings, and your donations to J. W. Allard, treasurer, Odebolt, Ia., at once. Now, lets to the work with a will. The Master is near, if we do not keep those men at work, will we hear the welcome plaudit of "Well done, good and faithful servant." Much good should be done this winter, will you aid a good cause? We feel you will. May God bless you and strengthen your desire to see the cause advance.

Submitted in love.

O. J. ALLARD, Sec'y.

Notice.

Three grand children of an aged and esteemed brother are in need of permanent homes. We should like to find homes for them among the believers.

The Success of "The Restitution" Depends on You.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

The success, the very existence, of THE RESTITUTION depends on your action or inaction. We cannot keep it alive without the aid of every one of our friends. If you want it to be issued remember you are the party who can make it or break it. The publisher cannot do, only as you say he shall. We believe there is a work yet to be done before the Master comes, and that we each have a duty to perform, and that THE RESTITUTION is still needed in the prosecution of this work. Do you believe this? Do you think because you have believed and obeyed the gospel that your work is done and you have nothing more to do? Can a co-worker with him be satisfied with sitting down with hands folded? Surely no one can think so. All, each one, must be up and doing. We can not afford after the long service many have given, to miss the reward now.

Then, if this be so, and we think there can be no doubt of it, we must ask every friend of THE RESTITUTION to at once renew for 1898, and also try and influence some friend of yours to be a friend of the paper. The work is in your hands. How will you treat it? Please act today. Right now. Do not leave it for a more convenient time. Act promptly.

Remember the Poor.

There are some who have taken THE RESTITUTION for many years who are by various circumstances forced to say they cannot longer pay. Some are now old, and having lost husband or wife, are dependent on those who have no interest in the Bible for their temporal support. Others have lost their all in some way, their income cut off, and they unable longer to labor. A few cents from each one will send papers to all the Lord's poor. For the publisher to bear any large share of this is impossible, simply because he has no means to do it with. Shall such be cut off, or will you contribute so that some one may be calling blessings on your head. We think this is neglected by some who are able to aid this branch of work, through failing to realize the earnest need of each. You who have plenty, and can have whatever your fancy calls for, and think there are none so poor, but if they were told to, could get the money some time during the year, you surely do not know the dire straits in which many of our brethren and sisters are placed. If you did we feel sure that this helping fund would never lack when a call is made, but would have a balance always to draw on. O brethren, you who have plenty, do wake up to see this need.

We are Sorry

To say that some are apparently negligent. A farmer has 1000 bushels of wheat, and sells it for one dollar a bushel, and get $1000. This can be put in the bank, and as he needs money for any purpose, all he has to do is to go to the banker and get it. It is kept safely awaiting his demand. Another farmer with the same amount of grain but a little different in quality, his friends wishing to try his kind of wheat, kindly sells to each one a single bushel, until he has 1000 men each owing him $1.00. When he wants to use some money, to get it he must go and ask these men separately, and as the amount each owes is so small, they reason that it does not make much difference about hurrying to pay him, as a single dollar will not help him much. It is just so with some subscribers to a paper. The amount each owes being small it cannot make much difference to the publisher about being prompt in remitting, as the little will not be much service to him. Consequently many neglect, get careless, and do not send through sheer thoughtlessness. Brethren, apply the rule "Put yourself in his place," a few moments. We do not wish to incur the expense and labor of sending bills to the many that owe us. It is not right to force this to be done, so we ask you kindly yet earnestly to examine your account, and if you owe us anything, do please send us the amount at once. We cannot tell you in words how badly we need it, and that right now. Do not neglect this call. Please do not.

Mr. and Mrs. Sankey propose spending the winter and spring in Egypt and Palestine, leaving New York on January 4 by steamship "Normania" for Alexandria. They hope to spend the month of May in England and Scotland.

OUR LOVE FEAST.

Dear Restitution:

I wish all the brothers and sisters in Christ a happy New Year. May we ever put our trust in him who careth for us, and be worthy to meet together in the kingdom of his dear Son, is the wish of a Sister in Christ,

O. E. PARKHURST.

Editor Restitution:

I could hardly do without THE RESTITUTION. The comforting words of the dear ones of like precious faith are a great help in these days of peril and unbelief. If all the brethren do not see everything just as I do, it does not make me feel like saying hard things against them. A little more of that faith that works by love and thinks no evil of a kind brother or sister, is my desire. May the blessings of a kind Father sustain us all, is my prayer.

Yours in faith,

J. F. PIERSON.

Dear Restitution:

An Eastern sister sends love and greeting to all the brethren and sisters in the West, and wishes to say that the many good things in THE RESTITUTION are indeed food and drink to her. When I read them and read of your meetings, oh, how I wish I could go to some of them, and become acquainted with you, and my prayer is, for the whole "Household of Faith," that more and more we may to the cause of Christ and his kingdom, be like those faithful men who joined themselves to King Saul because they were of those "whose hearts God had touched."

Your loving Sister in the Truth,

M. A. LILLYBRIDGE.

Greeting to those scattered abroad:

Though many of them I have never seen, yet I love them with a sister's love. Oh, how my heart goes out in love to the aged when I read their letters of encouragement trying to give us younger ones courage as we journey on. Oh, what a help it is when they say, I have waited for years and we are so much nearer today—nearer when the graves will open, and the living and those now dead will meet our Elder Brother, never to part again.

Your Sister,

OLLIE BRADLEY.

Dear Restitution:

Merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Ere this letter will reach you, both Christmas and New Years will have passed especially the old year 1897, and with it many of our dear brethren and sisters and some of our own dear relatives have passed away, and with the old year are laying silent in the tomb, but not without hope as the Apostle Paul said in Rom. viii. 19-23, "For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God. For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope. Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." Dear brothers and sisters, the one great hope for the whole groaning creation, towards which blindly and unconsciously, if not with intelligent desire, all are reaching forward, is the marriage of the Lamb. It is the hope of the Bride who shall then be one with the Lord in all his glory, and power and fullness of blessing. It is the hope of the nations, who shall then know the blessedness of righteous rule. It is the hope of the sore-burdened earth, which longs to be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God. And it is the hope of the Lord himself, whose heart yearns over his church, purchased with his own blood, but still lying in the desolateness of death, or amidst the defilements of this evil world, and whose word of promise is, "Surely I come quickly." Let our response ever be, "Even so, come Lord Jesus." Let our hearts be broken through our sympathy with the burdens and sorrows of all, and let us utter in his ear continually the cry for the common deliverance. Oh, Lord hasten thy coming. Times are hard, the poor, poverty-stricken people are suffering and we all join in "Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come, thy will be done." Well, dear brethren, it may be that my little exhortation may be too lengthy, so I will say we are one year nearer our home today than ever before, and am stronger in the faith of the soon coming King. Well, as Bro. Underwood asks all to send one new subscriber I will send to you the name and money that a dear sister gave me to send to you; she is working under the tithing system, and it is a good plan. If all the brothers and sisters would do so, I assure you there would be no begging for money; Bro. Underwood never would have to write for our renewal, or send on your money that is due us, we need it. And no one would drop us and say I am too poor to take the paper. Well brethren, let us all try to live as though 1898 would be the last year for us, and then ask ourselves, will I live to see another New Year 1899?

May God bless you all is my prayer.

JOHN & MARALA POORE.

Dear Household of Faith:

Another year has past: turn the hour glass, bury the old year. We are living in a grand an awful time. Old mother earth groaneth under the burden of the curse, "Men's hearts failing them for fear." Do we blame them for being fearful? "This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come." 2 Tim. iii. 1. Read the whole chapter and you will get a description of the world at the present time. Yes, dear ones, we are in the last days, prophets have desired to see this day. But the Deliverer is coming, he is even at the door. Are you watching?

VIOLA SKEELS.

Christmas Greeting:

Another year has been ushered into the eternal past since our last greeting of the faithful ones. As we stand on the summit of time and cast our eyes backward over the shadowy vale of the past, and then turn face about and gaze on the broad shining plains of the everlasting future, if the great wheel of time was left in our care, would we turn back one year? No! Not one moment. Looking backward, we see our loved ones careworn and weary, struggling through trials and disappointments, and battling with temptation. Looking forward we see them rejoicing in victory, wearing crowns of immortal glory. No, dear ones, don't keep looking back over the shadowy past; look ahead. Fancy I can almost see the spires and domes of the eternal city and the pure river of life winding its way through fields of everlasting green and an immortal race rejoicing in the light of God's love. Would you live your life over again? No, where you stumbled and staggered this time, perhaps next time you would fall. If I have made failures in the past, I would ask God to forgive and blot out rather than try improvement by living it over again. The present is ours to improve; don't keep looking back. If the great Creator had intended you to make the journey of life with your head turned back he would have put your face on the other side. Look ahead! look ahead to broad fields of everlasting bloom, don't pine for the withered leaves of the past.

SADIE SKEELS.

Dear Restitution:

Seeing that another year's subscription ran out and $1.50 is now due, please find a money order for $2.00 for which send THE RESTITUTION one year to my address as indicated above and please use the remaining 50 cents to pay for some one's paper who is not able to pay for it themselves, and if the brothers and sisters generally think it would be a good plan for us all to unite together and plan that we could send THE RESTITUTION, say 3 or 4 months to every believer in the United States who is not now taking the paper, and that the paper should be filled up with the very best of reading matter that our very best and ablest writer could produce. I would be willing to give $2.00 for that purpose if it could commence right away, while people have time to read it, I believe much good could be done in that way, but will wait to see what others have to say about it.

ENOS COX.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

How gladly I comply with the request to take part in the "Christmas Love Feast," as the spirit of thankfulness wells up in my soul for the song, sung 1800 years ago, "Peace on earth good will to men." Thankfulness that the good will of God prompted his loving heart to send his Son to die for us, for whom there was no hope; and how that "Good will" has followed poor humanity all down the centuries, leading them to accept the proffered salvation to accept the "Peace" so lovingly offered; not only the peace on earth which Christ will bring, (sin and crime and sorrow and suffering blotted from the face of this reeling earth,) but peace now to each trusting, yielding heart. "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you," John xiv. 27. "These things have I spoken unto you that in me ye might have peace." John xvi. 33.

Be careful (anxious) for nothing but in everything (in the little troubles, the petty cares and trials, the small grinding vexations and the large ones too) in everything, by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving let your requests be made known to God, and the peace that passeth understanding shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus." Phil. iv. 9–7. And our Father is not only willing we should have it now if we want it, but he wishes, intends that we should, "And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which ye are also called." Col. iii. 15–17 the wondrous love of the Father how much he has prepared for us, even in this life and what a blessed truth that we need not wait till the end comes to receive all the reward of the righteous, but we may have the earnest—a foretaste—of it now. And he not only permits us to come to him, for our good, but he wants us to come, really wants us to be blessed and happy. Listen to this, "O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments!" Why, what then—"Then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea." Is. lviii. 18. "O that there were such a heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments always" that it might be well with them and with their children forever." Deut. v. 29.

Ye have not chosen me but I have chosen you, Jo, xv. 19.

"Of him (God) are ye in Christ Jesus." 1 Cor. i. 30.

"O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness and his wonderful works unto the children of men."

Yours for the coming King,

EMILY E. BARNUM.

If you have not yet renewed your subscription to this paper, today would be a good time to attend to the matter.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who Bible sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of Heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or even think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Powers, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av. Cleveland, O.

Notice.

WILL our friends please remember that we do not have the books and tracts at this office that are advertized by Brother Joblin, or Brother Wiley Jones. Do not send to this office for them, but send to their address as given in the advertisement. This will save both trouble and delay. PLEASE REMEMBER.

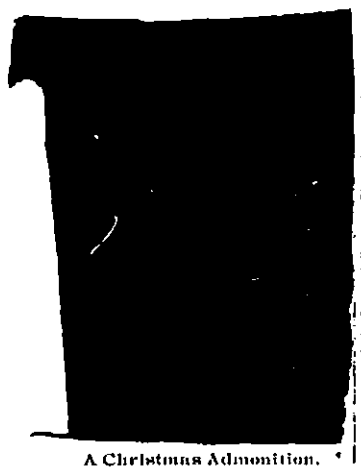
THE LOVE FEAST.



A Christmas Admonition.

All days are alike in many respects. They are a short, a very short measure of a portion of the infinite duration stretching backward into the past and forward into the future. The days of human history so far as they have run have been marked out by events and occurrences, many of them too trifling in themselves to be recorded by the pen of the historian while others have been so grandly important as to find a place in the annals of our race, be sculptured in enduring marble or like Job wished his words to be preserved for future generations—"that they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever." So important that they are embalmed in the sweet harmony of numbers or chanted in song, and are memorialized by annually occurring celebrations down the centuries of time. The exodus from Egypt; the deliverance from captivity; the birth of Christ and his resurrection from the dead stand before our Israelitish race and the Christian world as mountain peaks on the horizon of the ages. Singling out the day on which Jesus was born, the day the Christian world celebrates by special services. I ask what makes it different from other days of the year? Every day is a birthday and also an anniversary of a birth. But the day in question can never be repeated. The Son of God in preeminence his Son—was born on that day. The king of the ages the Great King, the tender and compassionate Savior through whom God is to carry out his beneficent purposes toward a sinful race was born. It is this event that distinguishes it from all other days. Then it is the event we celebrate and the one born to whom we wish to pay grateful and joyous homage. At each recurring anniversary as we call to mind the fact of the Savior's birth our hearts bound with new joy. It is fitting that our emotions should find expression in song when we think how his birth was hailed with gladness by angel choristers, the sinless messengers from other worlds.

The angel of the Lord, surrounded with the glory that some times attended these heavenly visitants to the abodes of men calms the fears of the Judean shepherds by saying "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." To this the multitude of the heavenly host, respond in glad refrain:—"glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will toward men." If these unfallen beings, to whom the Son of God could not, in the nature of things, stand in their loving and merciful Savior, felt constrained to pay homage at his lowly birth; to ascribe glory to God in view of the fact, and announce with gladness in prophetic strains what Mary's infant son will be to all people, then surely ought human hearts to throb with rapture and human tongues become vocal with praise, as we, as children and age and reason echo him. What, in its full [illegible] the theme of the angels and [illegible]

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Suppose We Try It.

Suppose each one of the friends of THE RESTITUTION should get one new subscriber and send in with their own, we would have our list doubled. What is your opinion? Don't you think, in view of the times in which we are living, that every member of our faith in the land should have the paper for 1898? Don't you think there are many who are almost with us in faith who would be benefitted and perhaps fully persuaded soon if they should have THE RESTITUTION for 1898? Are you interested enough in them to try and arrange for them to get the paper regularly each week? The cost is so small—don't you think that sending the paper to them would be the best and cheapest missionary work you could do? Suppose all, each one, you who read this, would try and get a single one if no more, and send in. Don't dismiss this from mind, saying you do not know any one to approach on the subject, but try it once, and perhaps you may be able to get quite a number interested and of [illegible]

SUPPOSE WE TRY IT.

A Happy New Year.

"With words that fall sweet as the notes of a harp,
With nothing about them discordant or sharp,
We meet and we greet those in life we hold dear,
And tenderly wish them a Happy New Year."

Another volume in our library is finished, closed and sealed. Is placed upon the shelf with the other old records of past years. Were it in our power we certainly would open it, and change the writing on many a page—but we are not privileged so to do, and must be content to let it be as it is. A new book is commenced. What will you write as you daily turn "over a new leaf?" Should you live to see the close of 1898 will there be any pages that you would wish to change? Remember, brother, sister, you will not be able so to do. You must make the record right as you go along. You cannot turn back and undo the error of yesterday. You may make apology today, and be forgiven too, but you cannot change the record. Solemn indeed the thought that the past volume is sealed, and we can make no changes. We must make the new volume for 1898 so clean and free from blemish that the old imperfect and unsightly pages will not be remembered against us.

Brethren, the year 1898 is here. We have entered its open door. All its cares and responsibilities are to be met, bravely taken up as they come to us, and handled for the right and God's glory. We have a duty to perform, and cannot shirk it. We must give account of the talent entrusted to us. God demands action, and we cannot sit in idleness, doing nothing, and then claim the reward, saying we are guilty of no wrong; for the reward is to the well-doer.

Some one will say "I am willing to do if I only knew what to do." "What is my duty? Tell me what I must do." Indeed, when we contemplate the many isms and factions that are in the world, it is not surprising that many get confused and do not know which way to turn, what to do or what to believe. A direct outgrowth of which is the prevalent idea that it makes no difference what you do or believe just so you are sincere. Brethren, do not be deceived. There is nothing so false or contrary to the teaching of God's Word as this plea of "sincerity." God gave to Adam a command, and the conditions were, do good and get the reward—do evil and be punished. There has never been a change in the policy of God in dealing with any of Adam's race down to this day.

If sometime in the future the all-wise God shall see fit to change his plans we shall find no fault with any of his arrangements. This, however, is an after consideration as we are living and making our record under the present dispensation.

Then how important that we become enlightened, informed, and understand what our duty is, then do it. But who will enlighten me, where can I get the information desired, or who can open to my understanding, that I may know assuredly what to believe and do? There is so much said about getting out from among "the tombs of the past," and taking up the "living issues" of the day, that we are at a loss to know what to do. We are told that twenty, forty, fifty years ago the ideas that were then entertained regarding the kingdom, coming of Christ, restoration of Israel, destruction of the wicked, etc., were all well enough, but that these are now only brought forward by "old foggies," and "old fossils," and that now we must get "up with the times," leave these old subjects and grapple with the new and "up to date."

Several years ago, at a temperance meeting held in Kane County, Ill., the speaker of the evening a "Rev."—— said "The subject of temperance is threadbare—as threadbare as the Gospel." We are led to wonder if some of the "reformers" of our time do really consider the good old "gospel" as threadbare. Is it possible that we have lived to the time when the gospel of the kingdom has lost its power? No, emphatically no. The gospel threadbare! No. "Its woof is as firm and compact, and its warp has the same glorious lustre, radiant with the love of the Father and the unparalleled generosity of the Son, as when the angels sang Glory to God in the highest! Peace on earth, good will to men."

Indeed, brethren it is high time that we leave the great broad highway we are traveling and return to the "old paths"—yes, get into the strait and narrow path once more.

What, then, is "my duty?" The [illegible] and each brother for himself, and declares he will not be "bridled and led about" by any one. He declares that he has the Bible and needs no one to "interpret" it for him. He admits no man's right to "Judge" him. Well, my dear brother, that independence and strength of yours is just what is most needed, and you are quite right. But let us read what James says, "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain." This is different. A man need not wait to be "bridled" but must do that to himself. Quite right.

How then can I know what my duty is? Supposing of course that you know and believe the "Gospel of the kingdom of God, and the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ," and have accordingly been immersed and adopted into the family of God, there can be but little need to remain idle, for your duty can be stated in three propositions that will defy all contradiction, and give plenty of work for each day of 1898.

1. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel."

2. "Visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction."

3. "Keep yourself unspotted from the world."

Brother, sister, many paths branch out from the straight one and lead to pleasant places, and apparently there is no wrong in making little excursions into them. Many "side issues" attach to the Old Gospel, and apparently there is nothing very wrong about following them out and just "settling" them as we go along. Of course we can come at the correct conclusion, and so arrive at the way God intends to have all come out. There can be nothing bad come of it if we just follow out the matter to a finish. Strange as it may seem, it is a fact, nevertheless, that not one of these by-paths ever lead back to the "narrow way," but go farther and farther away. You can never get back without retracing your steps, and on returning the sights that were so pleasant going are so distasteful now.

For 1898 shall we go back to the old paths? Shall we at once get into the narrow way and keep in it all the year? Shall we let love and charity rule on hearts ever? O brethren and sisters, let us each turn over a new [illegible] leaf, and resolve to have this year the best of our life so far, for

"There are only a few years left to live;
Shall we waste them in idle strife?
Shall we trample under our ruthless feet,
Those beautiful blossoms, fair and sweet,
By the dusty ways of life?

There are only a few swift years—ah, let
No envious taunts be heard;
Make life's fair pattern of rare design,
And fill up the measure with love's sweet wine,
But never an angry word."

We wish you a Happy New Year.

A Happy New Year to You.

New mercies, new blessings, new light on thy way;
New courage, new hope, and new strength for each day;
New notes of thanksgiving new chords of delight,
New praise in the morning, new songs in the night;
New wine in thy chalice, new altars to raise;
New fruits for thy Master, new garments of praise;
New gifts from his treasures, new smiles from his face;
New streams from the fountain of infinite grace;
New stars for thy crown, and new tokens of love;
New gleams of the glory that waits for above;
New light of his countenance full and unpriced;
All this be the joy of thy new life in Christ!

Our Love Feast Continued.

Dear Restitution:

Brothers and sisters of the household of faith. We are glad that we can speak to one another of the grand hope of the gospel in our love feast through the paper. How our hearts glow with love to our heavenly Father for such family relations as we bear for each other in Christ Jesus, and how it cheers us to hear from you all of the soon coming of Christ to set up his everlasting kingdom. Let us grow more like Jesus day by day, and remember the three abiding things, faith, hope and love, but the greatest of these is love.

"My longing heart cries Savior come,
Creation groans for thee;
The weary pilgrim sighs O come!
Bring immortality!

Your Brother and Sister in hope.
JOHN & MARY ALLARD.

Dear Restitution:

May I come into your love feast? I have been much interested in the many earnest testimonies given in your past love feasts. They have the spirit of fifty years ago when I was four years in The Voice of Truth, and The Advent Harbinger, the ancestor of THE RESTITUTION. Some of you readers may remember the "C." editorials in The Harbinger. THE RESTITUTION has held the lineage quite well. The distinctive feature never was any particular set of opinions, but just one commanding principle: The Word of God, just as it reads, bearing in mind, as president Hitchcock says, that "The very Word of God" from which alone there is no appeal, is in Hebrew and Greek,.....and the most faithful renderings will finally be pronounced the best." Inspired truth, being committed to those languages when at their highest perfections and just as they became dead languages, was "canned" in those languages and has thus been preserved without corruption. Hence the Bible is a safe universal rule and guide in the straight (and "strait") path. Fifty years of rich experience, the century and the age ripening into the glorious kingdom. Toils and trials—but hope and joy. Abundant proof that the Old Chart is right; the haven is ahead, near, sure and safe. "Our Father is at the helm." Jesus is "the Captain of our salvation."

O. R. L. CROZIER.

Dear Brother Underwood:

May God bless you in your labors. Our hope is in the soon-coming of the Son of Man to reward his servants, and not to us alone but to all them that love his appearing. The signs of the times denote that the time is near, we will not have to wait long. May we be ready when he comes is my prayer. GEO. W. HAYNES.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I truly am glad to have the privilege of once more joining with you in the love feast, for in this way we can exhort each other and this is what we are commanded to do. We cannot all assemble in one place. I feel the need of help from the dear ones in the way of exhortation and prayer. It does me good to meet and talk with those of like precious faith. We are all strengthened by being together, and when I read the sayings of the different ones I am strengthened. We have such precious promises if we separate ourselves from the world. "Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean and I will receive you and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." It seems that we have so little to do to gain so much. God's requirements are not hard and if we continue obedient we will, at the coming of our dear Lord, be of the overcomers, and he will change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, and when the Chief Shepherd shall appear we shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. When we think of these things we long for the time when Jesus will come and bless us, and that we may begin to enjoy what he has in store for those that wait for him. We often sing of the realms of the blest, and what must it be to be there. Shall we be there? We can be there if we will, and by the grace of God I mean to be there. Oh may we all be there and mingle our voices with that innumerable company who will make the arches of heaven ring with praise to him sitting upon the throne, and to the Lamb forever.

SARAH BUTTNER.

Dear Restitution:

I would say that about eighteen years past I first heard the truth. Before obeying it I wandered about trying to find worldly proof in regard to its correctness, but could not. I was married in '89 and came near losing my wife that same year with the terrible LaGrippe, the next year lost a darling little babe and later on another one, and a year and a half ago a three year old girl severely scalded around the body, causing wife to have a nervous shock which caused her to be sick about eight weeks, and last summer I had a hard sick spell, but thanks be to God, with the Bible and THE RESTITUTION I began to see my weakness and to assist my wife in seeing the Bible in its true way. The one that first sowed the seed, Brother John Foore helped me cultivate it by baptism, and my dear wife goes with me and we find pleasure in trying to walk in newness of life, and when I see little children so pleased with Christmas presents I think how pleased we will be when Christ appears if we have fought a good fight and made our calling and election sure. May we all be ready for the soon-coming Bridegroom and King, is my prayer.

L. J. SWEET.

Dear Brethren:

The love feast time is here and we are invited to take a part in this feast. I want to tell you, dear ones, that I have a hope that reaches beyond this vail of tears, when Jesus comes and establishes his kingdom on earth. And when I read in his blessed Word that he that overcometh shall sit with Christ in his throne, and with such promises, let us run the race that is set before us, ever looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith. Let us have on the wedding garment and oil in our lamps. I am one that is earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. I am a believer in the one faith. Let us all labor to enter into that rest that remains for the people of God, when there will be no more sorrow, pain nor death. No more following our loved ones to the tomb, and with such grand promises that we all can meet in the sweet by and by. Finally brethren, fare well. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind. Live in peace. And the God of love and peace shall be with you, is the prayer of your Brother and Sister in Christ,

Z. E. & EMMA BRANT.

Dear Restitution:

Brothers and Sisters in the Lord I am thankful for another opportunity to write a few lines for our love feast. It seems like a good time when we can hear from all of like precious faith. It is forty-four years since I started out to serve the Lord and learned he is coming again to raise his dead and change his living and I have watched for him ever since, but as the poet says he tarrys yet, but I believe it stronger than ever that we shall soon hear his chariot wheels, and brothers and sisters do pray for me that I may so live as to meet you all in Christ's kingdom. When you bow to our heavenly Father remember me as one alone with not one of the faith to speak to and none to invite to my home. My blessed paper and Bible are my all to help me. I am with my oldest girl now, don't know but I shall stay with her till I die, or till the Lord comes. I would like to see him come in his glory. I will close, I am afraid I am too lengthy now.

Your sister waiting for our Lord.
MRS. H. R. CARTER.

SEND THE RESTITUTION to some poor person as New Year present for 1898. The cost is only three cents a week.

Dear Household of Faith:

It is with heart-felt pleasure that I extend Christian greeting to all the beloved, wherever this messenger of God's truth may find its way. I always do feel a sincere pleasure in giving Christmas congratulations. Not because, as some say, that it is the anniversary of the birth of our Savior, but because it has become a custom we inherit from our forefathers. It seems quite proper at this time of the year to extend Christmas greeting to all, and congratulate each other that God in his wise purpose and mercy has permitted us to live until the close of this year. If it has been a year of service to the Master, and useful to our fellow-travellers journeying down the stream of time it is well, if not, then we have lived in vain. We read from the pen of the grand and venerable Malachi iii 16. "Then they that feared the Lord spoke often to one another, and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name." Then if we fear the Lord it is proper for us to speak often one to another, of our glorious hope, of our faith in the life of our Lord, as our example, of his death to open up the way to life and immortality, of his resurrection, and because he lives we may live, and that he is with the Father on his throne, waiting the Father's time to return to claim his kingdom. Mal. iii. 17 says, "And they shall be mine saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my Jewels." Then if we would be partakers of this promised blessing which comes to us if we are Abraham's seed through the blessing of Christ, or by getting into him as our ark of safety, and looking to him as the Rock of our salvation, let us speak often one to another by way of encouragement, and the Lord will hearken and hear, and our names will be written in his Book of Remembrance. Then we shall be his in that day when he comes to make up his Jewels. What greater blessing could we ask? Submitted in love.

ANGELINE LENT.

To the Household of Faith:

Again it is time for our annual love feast. Another year has gone with all its trials and imperfections. We are one year nearer home. We as a people firmly believe that the second coming of our Lord is very near. Are we ready? Are our lamps trimmed and burning; ever watching and waiting for our Lord? If not, remember it is only those that are ready go in with the bridegroom to the marriage. Matt. xxv. 10. Let us endeavor to so live that we may be ready any day or any hour, never do anything we would not wish to be doing if he should come. Let us strive to overcome all temptations. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things." I would be glad to meet you and clasp you by the hand, but that is impossible. But hope to meet with you where parting is no more.

Old I want to cross over, don't you, when he reigns?
I want to cross over to Eden's fair plains;
I want to be gathered in Canaan's bright land,
Yes, over the river where the ransomed shall stand."

NANNIE OSBORN.

Dear Restitution:

I have been a reader of THE RESTITUTION for many years and was acquainted with it under the name of Millennial Harbinger as my mother used to take it when I was young and I lived with her in the State of New York. In the words of the Psalmist its teachings are "sweet to my taste as honey and the honey comb" and in keeping its precious words I hope to have great reward, through faith in our Savior and the precious sacrifice he has offered. I think the Lord's coming is very near. Oh, that we may be ready to meet him in peace. May the Lord bless in sowing the seed.

MRS. J. B. STEVENS.

Dear Restitution:

We feel that the paper is not only worth twice what is asked for it, but a great deal more. The abundance of good things that are prepared through the year repays us an hundredfold. May the good work continue.

Yours in hope,
L. G. JAEGER.

In the closing part of the article in last issue entitled "Ye are not your own" where it says 5 cents per week read 25 cents per week.

THE Editor is under obligation to Mr. B. F. Horner, Gen. Passenger Agent of the Nickel Plate R'y for a Christmas gift consisting of a handsome white silk handkerchief, with the compliments of the above named popular Railroad. Thanks.

The Eastern Question.

The most warlike demonstrations that the past year has developed are now apparent in the far East. Russia seems to have established herself at Port Arthur, and England, France, Germany and Japan are protesting and seizing other vantage ground in China with the view of checking Russia or else taking part of the Celestial's empire as it is sliced up. From the Chicago Tribune we quote:

"The year 1898 opens with a larger amount of international friction and a more formidable flood of warlike rumors than any previous year since the close of the Franco-Prussian war.

[illegible]

[illegible] report that England and Russia have come to an agreement in reference to their complications in Corea and will assume joint supervision over the financial affairs of the "Hermit Kingdom" through their agents already there. While this will be a disappointment to Japan, which sees the advance of Russian power on the shores of the Pacific with evident alarm, it will have to be accepted.

Meanwhile great activity is reported in the British naval yards about Hongkong as well as in the concentration of British and Japanese vessels in the vicinity of the ports recently seized by Germany and Russia. The inference drawn from these movements is that there is some sort of an understanding between England and Japan, though that is not likely to go further than the self-interest of the former dictates. That these two powers acting in concert with their powerful navies may do much to check the greed of Russia and Germany for the time being does not admit of doubt; but Russia will be independent of both so far as her schemes on the continent are concerned as soon as her great transsiberian railway is completed, and may postpone her designs until that time. In the meanwhile Japan looks with indignation upon the policy of Russia as that power tightens its hold on territory which Japan herself had fairly won in accordance with the principles of war, but was compelled to surrender through Russian dictation."

BROTHER Joblin's article on "The New Year" will appear in next issue, it being received after this paper was almost ready for the press, too late to be put in.

A BOOKLET entitled "A Yuletide Bird of Passage" came to us, the gift of Mr. W. B. Kniskern, the General Passenger Agent of the great Chicago and North-Western R'y Co. It is a very artistic work, and the story relating how a passenger on a belated Ocean Steamer, reached her home in time to be present at the Christmas time through the agency of the fast "California in Three Days" train service of this Railroad, is very entertaining, and withal faithfully told. Accept our thanks.

MARRIED.

At the bride's home, near Noblesville, Ind., on Saturday evening, Dec. 25, 1897, at 6 o'clock, Mr. George F. Phuney and Miss Lillie Effie Brammell, Eld. J. S. Hatch officiating. About thirty relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony which united two loving hearts together, and many were the well wishes and congratulations extended to them. Both are members of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith.

EDGAR HATCH.

On the night of December 24, 1897, I united in marriage, Julius Greenbaum, and Kathlene Mrazik, both Jews. The ceremony was witnessed by a goodly company of people, who wish them well, and hope they may have a harmonious and prosperous life, and a share in the festivities, which will grace the marriage of Christ to his betrothed Virgin Church, pure and spotless.

W. H. WILSON.

Poetry.

Christmas Carol.

On a winter night in the olden time,
When the weary world was sunk in sin,
And darkness reigned and the earth was full
Of war and tumult and hopeless din,
A Messenger came from the world above,
To bring the glad tiding of boundless love.

He was welcomed not by the rich and great;
No martial trumpet proclaimed his birth:
Unknown in a lowly manger lay,
The child of heaven and Lord of earth,
The Messenger sent from the world above,
To bring the glad tidings of boundless love.

A star shone out in the Eastern sky,
To mark the spot to a chosen few,
Where the holy infant lay, who came
To light the benighted world anew—
The Messenger sent from the world above,
To bring the glad tidings of boundless love.

The light still shines with ceaseless ray,
Over every land and every sea,
Through storm and tempest and trouble and strife,
For "I am the light of the world," said he.
The Messenger sent from the world above,
To bring the glad tidings of boundless love.

The light still shines through the clouds of sin,
And always points to a better way,
Where rest and peace and joy are found,
For these are the gifts of this sinful day,
The messenger sent from the world above,
To bring the glad tidings of boundless love.

Household of Faith:

A few more days and this year will be numbered with those that are past, time passes so swiftly. But to us who are looking and longing for the coming of Jesus, that should only be a cause of rejoicing, knowing that each passing year brings his coming nearer. Then let us not grow weary in well-doing, but let us strive to grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. Watching and praying, counting all things else but dross, if we may but hear the Master, "Well done, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." My faith rests on the promises of God May we all meet in his kingdom, is my prayer.

A merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all.

C. E. HILLABECK.

Editor Restitution:

I like the paper, it and the Bible is all the preacher that we have here. There are many here that are starving for the want of a preacher. Some that are in the true faith are being over persuaded and are going into other churches. I am 71 years old and just have a living, I have a home and it is always open to any of like faith that may chance to come here, and I think that if a preacher would come here and stay and preach a while there could be good done. We have no preacher nearer than 75 miles of here, and I am not able to pay one to come and preach. So hoping that others may have plenty good preaching I am your brother in the one faith.

WM. GOSS.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

We wish you all a happy New Year. We are truly thankful to our heavenly Father for his loving-kindness and tender mercies towards us, and for having spared our lives another year. We are isolated here in the north-west corner of the United States. All the truth we have is our Bibles and THE RESTITUTION. We do wish that we could have some of our preaching brethren who are well skilled with the Sword of Truth, visit us here in Port Angeles, Wash. Is there no evangelist fund in the state of Washington? Are those who have been baptised into Christ compelled to let their children drift into Babylon because they are not able to pay a preacher's fare, to come and show them the way of the Lord, so that they and others might be obedient? Brethren, this ought not to be. However, we rejoice that our redemption draweth near, and that our dear Savior will soon come and destroy sin off the earth and usher in an era of peace and good will.

Yours, looking for our King, Jesus the Christ.

RICHARD & BESSIE FOWLER.

Dear Household of Faith:

Another year has passed into eternity and I am thankful to the Lord that I yet enjoy health and strength, and am permitted once more to wish you all a merry Christmas. I am strong in the faith of the soon coming of the Lord. I have been looking for him over 45 years. Now I wish to say let us all strive more than ever the coming year to live better lives, to watch and pray so that we be not overcome with the cares of this life and the deceitfulness of riches. I must close with love to all.

G. T. WILSIE.

RENEW your subscription to THE RESTITUTION today. It only costs three cents a week, and you can not afford to be without for so small a cost.

Dear Restitution:

I would feel lost without our grand paper as it is all the preaching we have in this neighborhood any more. May the dear old paper continue its mission in the Master's cause until the filling up of the Gentile times which seems to be near at hand. May the Lord hasten his coming. Amen.

N. H. MCSADAY.

Dear Restitution:

I believe the time is not far distant when the kingdom of this world will become the kingdom of our Lord. May we all be found praying and watching and doing his commandments that we may have a right to the tree of life and enter through the gates into the city. I want to be one of the faithful ones who will be found watching. Yours in the faith of the coming kingdom.

DANIEL DAVIS.

Dear Restitution:

I see Christmas, the time of our love feast is close by, and I must be there. I do so much love to read of our love and fellowship of the household of faith, though I very seldom meet with a dear brother or sister. I am one of the isolated, and know how to sympathize with all such. But dear sisters if we are truly adopted into the family of Christ, and by faith standing on the promises of God having his spirit and the hope of glory formed within us, we can cheerfully sing

Sweet prospects, sweet hands, and sweet flowers,
Have all gained their sweetness to me.

I do believe in the soon coming of our dear Lord and Master. As I read and observe through the signs of the times I cannot but understand he is very near. Dear brothers and sisters do let us all be in earnest in all things pertaining to our eternal welfare, that we may all be ready to exclaim. lo, this is our Lord, we have waited for him, he will help us and give us that recompense which is only for overcomers. I hope all will come to the love feast. We may never see each others faces, but by the Word of God we are not strangers. I hope to meet you all in the kingdom of God's dear Son. Let us all be found ready waiting when he comes.

With love to all, I remain your Sister in the Lord.

O. B. CADY.

Dear Restitution:

It is our happy privilege to give a report of our meetings conducted by Elder D. M. Hudler, which began the 27th of Nov. and lasted until the 12th of Dec.

He had the pleasure of burying a very intelligent young man in the liquid grave to arise to walk in newness of life. Our prayer is that he may ever adorn the doctrine of Christ our Savior and be found of him in peace. Also that all of like precious faith will see that Brother Hudler will not want for ample means of support for himself and family. He is sound in the Abrahamic faith and capable of good work in the gospel field.

A merry Christmas to all of like faith. In hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

JENNIE COX.

Dear Restitution:

In Bro. D. M. Hudler's last circuit through our neighborhood we had very interesting meetings. It was my pleasure to meet with the brethren at Antioch where I heard the truth preached. It was a great pleasure to be with the brethren of this meeting. Bro. Hudler went from there to Leaf River, and then to Adeline where he baptized Miss Mina Knodle. The next Sunday at Lanark. After the morning services he baptized Miss Ida Reason into the all-saving name of Jesus. Leaving the brethren at Lanark in good cheer he made his way for the South by the way of Ripley, Ill., and St. Louis, where he intends to remain perhaps a week to teach the Word. Hoping that he may return to us next spring to preach to us again.

May the Lord be with him. Respectfully yours.

J. M. GLOTFELTY.

Editor Restitution:

I can not get along without THE RESTITUTION. How little we hear about the coming of Christ to rule the world in righteousness. We should all strive earnestly for the truth and pray thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. What a blessed time it will be no more sorrow, sickness, pain, or death. I am trying to live so as to obtain eternal life when he comes. I enjoy reading the letters from the brothers and sisters in our love feast.

Editor Restitution:

We are out here in the northwest corner of the U. S. and we would have one of our brethren who is able to wield the sword of the Lord skillfully I think there could be a church of God started here, but I am unable to pay the expenses to get one here myself, there are some here who are interested in the truth, but we are languishing here for want of an able preacher.

Yours looking for the Master.

RICHARD FOWLER.

Beloved in Christ:

It has greatly rejoiced my heart to learn of the "Annual Love Feast" enjoyed through the columns of THE RESTITUTION by the meek and lowly in heart who have been begotten to a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. And dear readers I avail myself of the opportunity to step into your love feast, that I may enjoy the glorious privilege give the Lord's dear children. I believe not anything combines to so strengthen and bind together those who have the love of God shed abroad in their hearts—those who are called in hope, and who have a joy, peace and confidence in the Lord to tell about, as the heavenly place in Christ Jesus where they can speak of the things so graciously given to them by God, making music in their hearts to the Lord.

I praise the dear name of our blessed Lord that today, when trials and dangers are most subtle, and ever on the increase, that God is in the midst of his consecrated ones, his Church. That she is not moved. That every moment she realizes his presence, help, and strong support. "God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved: God shall help her when the morning appeareth." Psa. xlvi. 5. Blessed thought! with such an assurance we can speak forth our joyous words and fervent prayers of hope for the glorious and everlasting kingdom of our Lord which is so soon to be established in the earth. How blessed the thought that God has chosen the poor of the world, rich in faith, to be heirs of this kingdom.

Let us rejoice with thanksgiving in our hearts that God has made us meet for the portion of the saints' inheritance in light, changing us for the kingdom of the Son of his love. "The Lord knoweth them that are his," he knows their loyalty to him. They know his voice and do follow him, and are blessedly conscious of the fact, that with Christ standing in their midst, the inner man is renewed day by day; thus we realize the security of our refuge in Christ. Blessed covert of defence from storm, where no evil shall befall those who make their Savior their refuge. I will pour out my heart before God that he spared not his own Son: but delivered him up on behalf of us all, that he might stand in the midst of his Church, in her palaces for a refuge. With this thought in mind, Paul asks, "Will he not with him (Christ) also graciously give us all things? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? Shall God that justifies? Who is he that condemneth? Shall Christ that died? Yea, rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us?"

No, blessed be his glorious name, we know that Christ is too true to our interests to accuse us in the presence of the Father. Oh, no, he constantly says to the Father, They have been judged in me. I have borne their sins. By my stripes are they healed. I am in their midst, to lead, teach and bless. Oh, no, not anything shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in the Anointed Jesus our Lord. It was written of him, "For thy (the Church's) sake are we killed all the day long, counted as sheep for the slaughter. O thou tower of the flock, thou strong hold of Zion, unto thee shall come even the first dominion. Oh, yes, our hearts just bubble over when we contemplate the victory of the Church and her King, with his kingdom established on the top of the mountains. The Holy God and his Christ have always been in the midst of his Church. No wonder that John fell at his Lord's feet as dead, when he laid his hand upon him assuring him that he was the Living One, alive for the ages of the ages. John saw the risen Lord walking in the midst of the seven churches, he is still in her midst leading to the fountains of waters of life.

Glorious the thought that all our past, and present is under the cleansing blood of Jesus. That all his desires have become ours. His will, his work our delight. His joy also, he has completed in his followers, giving them the glory which the Father gave him, that we may be one, as he and the Father are one. We are not to be troubled in heart, neither afraid, for the Lord's last bequest was his wonderful peace given, not such as the world gives, but that our souls should be satisfied as with marrow. God satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness.

O praise his dear name, that we begin to comprehend the depths of God's love as manifested in the gift of his dear Son, which through its reflex action upon our hearts, will deepen, and broaden until we are rooted and grounded together in love, and filled with all the fullness of God: able to comprehend the love of Christ who walketh in the midst of the Church to shield, direct, support, and cheer the elect and chosen of God. Oh, yes, the Lord thy God is in the midst of thee, he will save; he will rejoice over thee with joy. We shall rest in his love, and he will joy over thee with singing. I am glad for this "love feast." Surely it will draw the Lord's little ones nearer together, and to him. It will help us to realize that we are one in Christ, who, walking in our midst is our shield, also our exceeding great reward. May the dear Lord continue the flowing of the stream of truth and spiritual plenty in the New Year just at hand is the prayer of your Sister in Christ.

MRS. D. W. POST.

Brother Underwood:

I am well pleased with THE RESTITUTION, also sanction every word you say to "Correspondents" in last paper. We are all willing to learn and for the most part are able to judge any article if it corresponds with the teachings of the Bible or not, without the controversy of one writer with the other.

May the Lord grant you strength to continue in your labor is my prayer,

E. F. UPSON.

Dear Brothers and Sisters of the Household of Faith:

I thought I would write a few words in favor of the all-important truths of God's Word; it contains such a host of soul-cheering promises to the children of God, and the great plan of salvation, that I take new courage every time I read it. Who can disbelieve that the time is near at hand when our Master will come and take to himself his great power and reign on the earth King of kings, and Lord of lords. We need not go out of our own country to see the signs of his near coming; for all we have to do, is to read God's description of the world in the last days, in 2nd Tim. iii. 1st verse and on. He says: "This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come, for men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, despisers of those that are good;" and so on, read the whole of Paul's description of the last days, then look around and see if any man unaided by the inspiration of God could give such a perfect description of the situation of mankind around us. O my brothers and sisters in Christ, the Lord's coming is near. And there are many other signs indicating his near coming; and now are we ready to meet him? I can say for one, I can pray from my whole soul, thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven. This prayer will soon be answered. I pray to God daily to give me faith and strength to overcome self and all the besetting temptations that daily surround me and keep myself unspotted from the world. God help me so to do.

C. P. ALGIRE.

Editor Restitution:

I will try once more to send my love and greeting to the dear ones of like faith, who like myself and husband have not the help and comfort arising from communion with those of like faith. Yet we will not complain, God's Word is every day more precious and all self-denial is no doubt good for us. I am praying that God will convert some of our own family as well as our neighbors so we can have a prayer-meeting or some few to talk to of our hopes. Our son is very sick. I would ask the prayers of some of the faithful for him that he may be restored to health and become one with us in faith. He is a Methodist. He is quite helpless from "sciatic rheumatism." I have been praying to be able to do something for the Lord. May be this is the answer. Pray for me that I may not fail to do my whole duty and not be impatient or wilful in any way.

Lovingly yours in affection.

SARA L. SCHENCK.

If you have not yet renewed your subscription to this paper, today would be a good time to attend to the matter.

Editor Restitution:

We would be lost if we were deprived of THE RESTITUTION, as we have no one in this part of California, to give us the good news of the kingdom to come. I often think of the good times we once had, when living in Indiana, and of listening to the good teachings of so many that are now sleeping. Oh what a joyful time it will be when we see them brought again to life, then there will be no more parting forever. I will praise our God, that I will be one of this number. How I do love to read all the love feast pieces from all the dear brothers and sisters. I hope that those who see this will remember that I greet you all with brotherly love. I ask an interest in your prayers. Remember we are seeking for the kingdom of our Lord.

Your Brother and Sister in hope.

J. J. AND L. CORBALEY.

Dear Restitution:

Nearly another year has passed since last Christmas. Truly is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day of glory is near at hand, seeing this is so what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hastening unto that time when all sorrow, sickness and pain will forever be done away with. The redeemed will come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; and sorrow and mourning shall flee away. O joyful day, may it soon come. But let us be careful to live in such a way that we may hear Jesus say, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom." It will be sorrowful to hear him say, "Depart." May we watch and pray.

Yours in hope.

P. H. BARR.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

What a glorious thought to know that we have a Savior who has suffered and died and rose from the dead, to life, that we may if faithful be with him when he comes to raise the dead and change the living. I trust too that it may be my good lot to awake to greet you all in the kingdom of our God. Please remember me in your prayers, that I may be more faithful in the future than in the past. I now extend my hand and heart to one and all of God's faithful followers.

Yours waiting for our Savior from on high. Your brother,

[illegible] CORBALEY.

Dear Restitution:

I am so glad that I can speak of the loving-kindness of our heavenly Father, in the love feast, in giving his Son to die for us poor, failing creatures of humanity, and that he was reasurrected from the dead to bring life and immortality to light through the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ. I cannot praise him enough. "O praise the Lord, O my soul, praise his Holy Name forevermore," is my prayer. I want you all to remember me in your prayers.

LOUISA CORBALEY.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I am thankful for this opportunity of saying a word for our dear Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who hath said, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Praise his holy name, that we have ever heard and learned of him as we have, and oh, that others could see and hear the beauty in his words when he says, "I am the resurrection and the life. I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold, I am alive forevermore and have the keys of hell and of death." Let us be faithful and obedient unto him who has the keys of the grave and death; to him who is able to unlock and give life; to him who shall come in the glory of his Father and all the holy angels with him; to him who shall say: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you; to him, even to him who shall be King over all the earth; for the government shall be upon his shoulders and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever." Let us, I say, be obedient. Striving to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. I have learned that it is necessary that we who think we stand should take heed lest we fall. Pray for me.

Love to all,

EMMA FUGATE.

It Came Upon the Midnight Clear.

"We shall never tire of reading this magnificent hymn. It will go down through the ages until the coming of the millennium."

It came upon the midnight clear,
That glorious song of old,
From angels bending near the earth,
To touch their harps of gold;
Peace on earth, good will to men,
From heaven's all gracious King,
The world in solemn stillness lay,
To hear the angels sing.

Still through the cloven skies they come
With peaceful wings unfurled,
And still their heavenly music floats
O'er all the weary world;
Above its sad and lowly plains,
They bend on hovering wing,
And ever o'er its Babel sounds
The blessed angels sing.

With all the woes of sin and strife,
The world has suffered long;
Beneath the angel-strains have rolled
Two thousand years of wrong;
And men at war with man, hears not
The love-song which they bring,
Oh, hush the noise, ye men of strife,
And hear the angels sing.

And ye beneath life's crushing load
Whose forms are bending low
Who toil along the climbing way
With painful steps and slow,—
Look now! for glad and golden hours
Come swiftly on the wing,
Oh, rest beside the weary road,
And hear the angels sing.

For lo! the days are hastening on,
By prophet-bards foretold,
When with the ever circling years
Comes round the age of gold;
When peace shall over all the earth,
Its ancient splendors fling,
And the whole world give back the song,
That now the angels sing.

—Edmund Hamilton Sears, in 1850.

Dear Brethren:

As the call has been sent out by the publisher for short letters from the scattered members of Christ's little flock, I for one can testify to God's goodness both temporally and spiritually. Though poor in this world's goods we can all be rich in hope in the gospel. And as Bro. R. S. Dwiggins suggested this method some two years ago, I think it has proved a blessing to many of us by way of encouragement, as so many of us are isolated from each other, and do not have the privileges to listen to ministers preaching the true gospel. But thank God, we have the dear RESTITUTION, which comes to us every week laden with its good news of the soon coming kingdom. Let me say to all of like precious faith: Rally to its support and financial aid. We know that its publishers receive but little pay for their time and talent. I feel sure that so [illegible] its readers would pay double the subscription price sooner than have its publication stop. They have also able tracts and books by talented writers who have spent years of study in their preparation, which should not be left on the shelves uncalled for, but should be scattered broadcast. We know not the good they may accomplish by falling in the hands of some honest soul seeking after truth. We rejoice to hear that Brother J. F. Wilcox is again waving the gospel banner. May God bless him in his good work, is the prayer of your Brother and Sister in the gospel hope,

GEORGE & LOUISA BRADLEY.

I say to you, my brother,
And sister too, beside,
Just trust the Master Jesus,
Whatever may betide.

Jesus says, "He that overcometh shall sit with me on my throne."

OSCAR CLOVER.

Editor Restitution:

I will try to pen you a few lines to let you know we are in the land of the living and have not put away the Sword, but I am still fighting or contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, as we think, although we may have hobbies we are not aware of. We are a unit as a people on the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth the gospel, not A or any gospel, but The Gospel, and obeys the Ordinances. What we need is more of the love of the Master. I would be glad to have any of the household of faith to join us in our effort to sow the seed of the kingdom. Brethren and sisters, remember me in your prayers that I may hold out faithful in the race set before me. I desire to win in this race and my opponent is said to be swift. I desire the crown, which is the reward at the end of the race. Brethren and sisters, we have had Elder S. C. Oliver accompanied by Bro. O. B. Cleveland in our midst for nearly a week; preaching Saturday night, then nearly every night for a week, good congregations every night, and better attention I never saw. They all seemed to like his manner. He will preach regular for us on every third Saturday in each month. Would like to have all persons interested in the truth to come and hear.

Yours in the faith,

J. R. FISK.

The Success of "The Restitution" Depends on You.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

The success, the very existence, of THE RESTITUTION depends on your action or inaction. We cannot keep it alive without the aid of every one of our friends. If you want it to be issued remember you are the party who can make it or break it. The publisher cannot do, only as you say he shall. We believe there is a work yet to be done before the Master comes, and that we each have a duty to perform, and that THE RESTITUTION is still needed in the prosecution of this work. Do you believe this? Do you think because you have believed and obeyed the gospel that your work is done and you have nothing more to do? Can a reworker with him be satisfied with sitting down with hands folded? Surely no one can think so. All, each one, must be up and doing. We cannot afford after the long service many have given, to miss the reward now.

Then, if this be so, and we think there can be no doubt of it, we must ask every friend of THE RESTITUTION to at once renew for 1898, and also try and influence some friend of yours to be a friend of the paper. The work is in your hands. How will you treat it? Please act today. Right now. Do not leave it for a more convenient time. Act promptly.

Remember the Poor.

There are some who have taken THE RESTITUTION for many years who are by various circumstances forced to say they cannot longer pay. Some are now old, and having lost husband or wife, are dependent on those who have no interest in the Bible for their temporal support. Others have lost their all in some way, their income cut off, and they unable longer to labor. A few cents from each one will send papers to all the Lord's poor. For the publisher to bear any large share of this is impossible, simply because he has no means to do it with. Shall such be cut off, or will you contribute so that some one may be calling blessings on your head. We think this is neglected by some who are able to aid this branch of work, through failing to realize the earnest need of each. You who have plenty, and can have whatever your fancy calls for, and think there are none so poor, but if they wanted to, could get the money some time during the year, you surely do not know the dire straits in which many of our brethren and sisters are placed. If you did we feel sure that this helping fund would never lack when a call is made, but would have a balance always to draw on. O brethren, you who have plenty, do wake up to see this need.

We are Sorry

To say that some are apparently negligent. A farmer has 1000 bushels of wheat, and sells it for one dollar a bushel, and get $1000. This can be put in the bank, and he needs no money for any purpose, all he has to do is to go to the banker and get it. It is kept safely awaiting his demand. Another farmer with the same amount of grain but a little different in quality, his friends wishing to try his kind of wheat, kindly sells to each one a single bushel, until he has 1000 men each owing him $1.00. When he wants to use some money, to get it he must go and ask these men separately, and as the amount each owes is so small, they reason that it does not make much difference about hurrying to pay him, as a single dollar will not help him much. It is just so with some subscribers to a paper. The amount each owes being small it cannot make much difference to the publisher about being prompt in remitting, as the little will not be much service to him. Consequently many neglect, get careless, and do not send through sheer thoughtlessness. Brethren, apply the rule "Put yourself in his place," a few moments. We do not wish to incur the expense and labor of sending bills to the many that owe us. It is not right to force this to be done, so we ask you kindly yet earnestly to examine your account, and if you owe us anything, do please send us the amount at once. We cannot tell you in words how badly we need it, and that right now. Do not neglect this call. Please do not.

I would like to ask some brother if he will to give an explanation of Dan. 12. Have those days expired or are they yet in the future? It seems that he is blessed that cometh to those days. Then all through those days would be a blessed time.

A SUBSCRIBER.

Meeting at Maxenkuckee.

Was there from 5th to 14th of Dec. inclusive. Found conditions in an unorganized and somewhat demoralized condition. But ran much discouraged. Have really no place for meeting. The so-called Union Meeting house is owned by the Disciples. And being built by the people with the express understanding and stipulation that it might be used by all, yet the opposition, obstructions, and annoyance in regard to our people using it, is such that they abandoned the use of it, having no meetings for some time past.

Sister Mosher, an earnest worker, receiving notice on Thursday that I could be there on Saturday, hastened to see the Trustees securing the use of the house until January is wanted, also endeavoring to publish the meeting.

Her husband a noble man working with her, furnishing oil and janitor service.

Commenced meeting on Saturday night. On Sunday four congregations, who respond a Disciple preacher's house first and on hand Monday night requesting me to announce that he would preach there on the following Sunday morning and night, which I did without protest. The weather was continuously raining and the roads bad. Two nights so rainy that we did not assemble, and losing Sunday added much to the disadvantage of the meeting.

Seeing but little prospect of accomplishing much good under present conditions, thought best to not continue longer than the 14th.

Had no additions. No very great interest created. Some earnest steadfast souls in the truth who loved to hear the blessed and only gospel of salvation, and quite a number outside of the best citizens, more or less in sympathy with the Truth, and some seemingly almost persuaded to render obedience. God grant that they may become fully persuaded. I gave out many copies of THE RESTITUTION. Got no subscriptions. Found but few that were subscribers. Too poor to subscribe! Yet as one Bro. told me when I asked how many political papers he was taking, only two said he. These things should not be. I received only kind treatment from all, while some thought my preaching too straight. May they yet see there is but one faith, one spirit, even as we are called in one Hope of our calling. I staid one night with Bro. and Sr. [illegible] steadfast in the Truth. The rest of the time made my home with S. J. Mosher's, where I was much at home indeed. May they be rewarded for their untiring kindness, conveying me back and forth 25 miles night after night, through mud and rain. And may the eternal inheritance be theirs by virtue of obedience to the Truth, according to the commandment of our Blessed Lord.

D. T. HALSTEAD.

If you have not yet renewed your subscription to this paper, today would be a good time to attend to the matter.

Dear Restitution:

What is complete spiritualism? A minister preaches the soul and spirit as the same thing. He preaches the spirit into heaven with the pearly gates ajar with their heads one above each other looking down to the earth waiting for their friends to join them, and how many dear spirits there are waiting on the walls of the city it is impossible to tell, also waiting for their friends from earth.

That is spiritualism first degree. Then we have the Catholic and Greek churches, etc., praying to the spirits to intercede with Jesus for him to intercede with the Father to forgive them their sins, for if the prayers of the righteous on earth availeth much, how much more so the prayers of the spirits in heaven.

That is spiritualism second degree. Then we have mediums who get answers from the spirits in heaven and the spirits hold communion with the mediums on earth.

That is spiritualism third degree. If the first degree was not preached or believe in there would not be the second or third degree. Therefore the first degree is the worst of the three degrees of spiritualism.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Notice.

WILL our friends please remember that we do not have the books and tracts at this office that are advertized by Brother Joblin, or Brother Wiley Jones. Do not send to this office for them, but send to their address as given in the advertisement. This will save both trouble and delay. PLEASE REMEMBER.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the glorification of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. A hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The Future.

"The age of crime and suffering yet shall end;
The reign of righteousness from heaven descend.
Vengeance forever sheath the affliction sword;
Death be destroyed, and Paradise restored;
Man, rising from the ruins of his fall,
Be one with God, and God be all in all."

"He that hath the Son, hath life; he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life." 1 John v. 12.

Teacher. A brother in Iowa, sent me a copy of the Christian Standard, published at Cincinnati, Ohio, which contains an important question, and its answer. I ask the members of the PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS to read it, and join me in its investigation. The following is the question submitted to the Editor:—"Can you settle an inquirer's mind upon a very important question touching the teachings of the Christian Church in regard to the destiny of the human soul?

Is a minister if he believes that the Bible teaches limited future punishment or the annihilation of the wicked, permitted to openly advocate his convictions in the pulpit of the Christian Church?"

Teacher. What kind of a spirit, or motive, prompted this minister in the Christian Church, to make this inquiry?

Lad. I should judge from what the Editor says, that the minister is conscientious, and sincere, and feels that [illegible] to let the light shine. [illegible] remarks of the Editor. "This question, which is put forth by our correspondent, whose name is withheld, is evidently not hypothetical. Its tone and the accompanying statements (not published) give evidence that they came from a soul troubled as to its duty. The inquirer feels that these views about future punishment, the state of the soul between death and the judgment, and annihilation are true, and should be urged."

Lad. Yes, thank God, they "should be urged," they are glorious beyond conception. They exalt the character of God, and relieve his glorious name from the blasphemous and horrid stigma placed upon it, by those who advocate that our God will inflict upon those who are unrepentant an unending conscious, cruel torment, lasting without one moment's release, throughout the unending ages of eternity.

Carrie. You are right, Lad, but only just listen to what this editor says about the doctrine of unending life through Christ.

Editor. "They are morbid, moral microbes fastening upon and destroying the simple, practical faith, which is not based on inferential doctrines, but upon the unmistakable and direct revelation of Christ."

Carrie. Just think of it. What can you expect of a people who receive their religious instruction filtered through such a blind guide as this editor appears to be? Let me place before you a few quotations from God's Precious Book, which teaching, this editor stigmatizes as, "morbid, moral microbes fastening upon and destroying the simple, practical faith)." I admit they do destroy "the simple, practical faith," in pagan and heathen philosophy, as taught by Plato, and the Devil. Look at these morbid, moral microbes," and see what you think of them. "The wages of sin is death, (not life in torment) but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. vi. 2, 3.

"Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." James i. 14.

"Who shall be punished with EVERLASTING DESTRUCTION." 2 Thess. i. 9.

"They shall sleep a PERPETUAL SLEEP, and not awake (from the second death) saith the King, whose name is the Lord of Hosts." Jer. li. 57. "The Lord of Hosts," says "shall sleep a perpetual sleep," the editor says such doctrines "are morbid, moral microbes."

"Therefore hast thou visited and DESTROYED THEM, and caused their memory to perish." Isa. xxvi. 14. Being destroyed it is not possible to have any memory left.

"Man that is in honor and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish." Psa. xlix. 20.

Arlon. This editor seems to think that the way to move a sinner, is to make the terrors of the Lord impressive. My experience has been that the most powerful way to move a sinner, is to make the love of God impressive. Conversions made when the heart is deeply moved by love, are sweet, pure and lasting. A rebel subdued by the power of a lash, is a rebel at heart still, remove the lash and you will still find an unrepentant heart. Listen to what the editor says.

Editor. "It does not help a sinner to forsake his sin to tell him that he will be granted indulgence on the other side, and it cannot make more impressive to the impenitent the "terrors of the Lord" to teach him that he will be annihilated. Such teaching rather encourages the sinner to continue his evil way by holding out to him a deceptive hope or a selfish forgetfulness. Why should anybody be concerned to preach any such an abortive system? But important as all this is, it may not seem so to our friend, who waits a direct answer to his question."

Arlon. He says in the above extract: "Such teaching rather encourages the sinner to continue in his evil way, by holding out to him a deceptive hope, or a selfish forgetfulness."

The whip never converts the heart, it may subdue a slave, but it never regenerates, purifies, attracts one to become a true servant of the living God. They are merely crushed slaves, and are not saved at all. A true convert always loves the Lord his God, with all his heart. A whipped slave never does. The gospel only, is held out as the way of salvation, and not what men are pleased to call "the terrors of the Lord." The Bible never pictures death as being a state of conscious suffering, but always as a condition of "forgetfulness."

"The dead know not anything." Eccl. ix. 5, 10.

"His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish."

"He shall fly away as a dream, and shall not be found, yea, he shall be chased away as a vision of the night." Job xx. 4-8.

Albert. I notice this editor trents the Bible teaching that the wicked "shall be as though they HAD NOT BEEN," (Obadiah xvi.) as untaught questions, although the Scriptures teach nothing else. I think such people ought to post themselves as to what the Bible does really teach, before they set themselves up as instructors of the people. I call attention to another extract from his pen:

Editor. "If he will try them by their fruits their utter failure will destroy their charm. It is not enough to say that they are true; they must be spiritually fertile as well (These "untaught questions" never pioneer reform: they do not enlarge and advance the kingdom of heaven in the earth. They are not missionary; they help no heathen out of his superstition, nor put into the heart of the hardened sinner a desire for the new and better life.)"

Albert. He tells us that these "untaught questions" concerning the unconscious state of the dead, ("the dead know not anything"—Bible) "do not enlarge and advance the kingdom of heaven in the earth." God has as yet, no kingdom on the earth to advance or extend. Of course we understand that he teaches a church-kingdom as advocated by his denomination, which the Bible knows no more about, than it does immortal life by natural generation through Adam. Jesus said that it was easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter the kingdom. The facts are, that it is an exceedingly easy thing for a rich man to enter the kingdom on earth, as taught by this editor.

Again. "Fear not, little flock, (the church) it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." That would be giving the kingdom to the kingdom according to our editor's inconsistent teaching.

George. I notice in the extract the editor says, it does not "put into the heart of the hardened sinner a desire for the new and better life." This editor and his church believe that life eternal is a natural inheritance of all both righteous and wicked, and that the righteous will spend a happy eternity, while the wicked, equally possessing eternal life must spend it in torment. He therefore stigmatizes the doctrine that life eternal (as yet merely a promise) as "morbid, moral microbes," right in the face of God's Word, which says: "This is the promise that he hath promised us, EVEN ETERNAL LIFE. 1 John ii. 25.

And again. "I give unto them ETERNAL life." John x. 28. How dare he profess to venerate Christ, and stigmatize eternal life as a gift as "morbid, moral microbes?" "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. vi. 23.

How does he know that the glorious gift of God does not "put into the heart of the hardest sinner a desire for the new and better life?" I apprehend that he knows little about it, his associations have been with those who teach the lie of the serpent, "Thou shalt not surely die."

John (1 John iii.) treats specially of life eternal as a gift, in connection with the glorious appearing of Jesus Christ, and says: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God: and it doth not appear what we shall be; but we know, that when he shall appear, we shall be like him: for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath THIS HOPE in him PURIFIETH himself, even as he is pure." Mr. Editor, if "hardened sinners" don't get "a desire for a new and better life," through "this hope," pray where does he get it? Surely not through the devil's infamous lie.

Teacher. What encouragement did this editor give the minister with regard to an opportunity of teaching the Bible doctrine of eternal life as a gift through Jesus Christ?

Lucy. None at all, see what he says.

Editor. "So the advice tendered our troubled correspondent is to either give up his unedifying notions or seek elsewhere for a peaceful and satisfactory ministry. For while among the churches of Christ he might find the permission he is anxious about, nowhere else would he find less opportunity to successfully exploit his particular views."

Lucy. So, then, the advice of this editor is, to "give up his unedifying notions (that "the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. vi. 23,) or seek elsewhere for a peaceful and satisfactory ministry," or in plain language give up teaching that "this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life," (1 Jno. ii. 25) or get out of our denomination, for "nowhere else would he find less opportunity to successfully exploit his particular views," that "the dead know not anything." Eccl. ix. 5, 10.

Teacher. I notice the editor further says:

Editor. "He might even find some, as in the primitive church, ready to be led away by his fruitless teaching. An untrained congregation might lose the little zeal and knowledge it had and be lulled to spiritual sleep and death. But there would be no abiding place among the disciples of Christ."

Teacher. "By his fruitless teaching," to "keep yourself in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto ETERNAL LIFE," (Jude xxi.) some "untrained congregation might loose the little zeal and knowledge it had and be lulled to spiritual sleep and death." If these "untrained congregations," were trained in the sublime truths of God's Word, their spiritual life would be increased. I would train them specially in the grand truths contained in John xx. 30, 31: "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book. But these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that, believing ye might have LIFE through his name." If the congregations of the so-called Christian Church, both trained and untrained," knew what it meant to "believe that Jesus is THE Christ, they would have but little trouble in believing that they "might have LIFE through his name," and this editor would no more stigmatize that grand truth as "morbid, moral microbes."

W. B. WILSON.

Charity.

Can any of us comprehend the full meaning of the word Charity? For one I admit that I cannot. I only wish that I could. As I can only given faint idea. I will do the best that I can and by the aid of the Scriptures will endeavor to present a few items for your consideration. We often hear it said that charity is love for man and supreme love for God; so let us strive to get the best understanding of the subject that we can, and not have too much love for the wrong party which is called self. Christ says for us to love our enemies, and to love our neighbor as ourselves. Now if we have charity we can do this, if not we cannot. Christ also said "If you love me keep my commandments." I will refer to a few of his commandments and let us see if we are living in harmony with them or not. If not then there is something wrong. How many of us have obeyed this? Another is, "if thy enemy smite thee on the one cheek turn the other also." Have we enough charity to enable us to do this? And another, "feed the hungry, clothe the poor." And another, "do good to all men." Can we say that we are keeping these commandments? Let us examine ourselves and see how our lives correspond with his commandments. There are many more that I have not mentioned; but it is our duty to live in keeping with all of his commandments. We all wish for his approval, and we will receive it if we abide in perfect charity.

Now let us see if we can find any one who had love for man in general and a supreme love for God. If we can, then we can find a pattern by which to go. I think of one who was born to a very high position, yet humbled himself more than any other man. Although born to a kingship, we hear him say that he had not where to lay his head. Though born to be heir of all things, yet possessing no worldly estate.

When doing the Father's will in superhuman acts there was no seeking for earthly fame. When mocked at, and smitten there were no signs of anger, no threats; but he bore it all with patience and humility and love. And he did it all for us, and through the love for his Heavenly Father. The apostle Paul tells us that "charity is the bond of perfectness." If we can understand this we will not be lacking in the knowledge of a great sentence. We could then tell whether or not we had the best bond in the world. It is a bond to be felt instead of seen. One to be written in the living characters of every-day life, at home and abroad. Charity is a condition that should exist in the heart of every servant of God. If we have that condition; it, like leaven, will work out all envy, all selfishness and all evils. It will elevate us so that we will be accepted of God. If one leads another to, and opens the gates and shows him the way of life, the glory and the beauties of the Kingdom of God he will not be turned away empty.

Charity does not consist in giving, for if it did the poor could not be credited with much charity. The free one gives the more charity there is in the sight of God. Paul says, "If one sees his brother in need and opens not his bowels of compassion, how dwells the love of God in him?" If charity requires supreme love for God, let us see to it that the love of God dwells in us richly. Oh! how great is charity? Who is able to fathom the depths of charity? Large books might be written and then only touch on the borders of charity. Paul says that if we have not charity we are nothing, therefore let us have all the charity possible at whatever the cost, that we may be something in the sight of God, in the day that he will send Jesus to claim and crown his own with immortality, eternal life. May we be worthy of the crown of life that fadeth not away.

Submitted in the love of Him who will not tarry.

JOHN PORTER.

A Day for a Year.

In Eureka, Vol. I, page 257-258, the Doctor writes:—"This letter to the Smyrneans is the first place in the Apocalypse where days stand for years. The Apocalypse is a book of symbols, in which the greater is represented by the less.....great things illustrated by small. This is the rule of prophecy, whether the truth be stated literally or by symbols—the verbal always falls short of the real, which is, joy, unspeakable and full of glory: things which cannot be expressed. Because of the Spirit's working by this rule it is that so much has been revealed in so small a book. It is a condensed view of the deep things of the Deity, which, if they had been magnitudinously revealed, (I suppose) as John says, that even the Kosmos itself could not contain the books that should be written. Condensation, then, is the general principle of divine revelation: but of the symbols, it is the special.....Day is frequently used in Scripture to represent a year. The first intimation of this is in Gen. xlvii. 9, where Jacob says, "the days of my pilgrimage are 130 years;" and in verse 28. "the days of the years of his life were 147 years".....This principle of the ideal condensation of a great while into a little, is practically exhibited in Numbers xiv. While the twelve tribes of Israel were in the wilderness, they sent twelve spies to search out the land of promise; they returned from searching of the land after forty days. Now these were literal days, and so would have remained purely and simply, but for an incident which was made the occasion of converting them into typical or symbolical days. The spies caused the tribes to despise the land, so that they refused to go up and take possession of it. Therefore the Spirit said, they should wander in the wilderness forty years. His words are, "After the number of the days in which ye search the land, even forty days, each day for a year, shall ye bear your iniquities, even forty years, and ye shall know my breach of promise." Here is the day for a year plainly indicated."

The foregoing from Dr. Thomas indicates the principle adopted by the Spirit in the Holy Scriptures' condensation in the symbol, as in the four beasts of Daniel which represented four kingdoms.

The life time of the symbol being but a few years, but that of the thing symbolized extending in the case of Rome to some three thousand years. Therefore in order to maintain the symetrical proportions of the vision, a day to represent a year, was adopted by the Spirit, as seen in the fulfillment of the seventy weeks of Dan. ix. 24. In connection with symbols we find symbolic time, but in those cases where symbols are not used we find literal time, as in the case of the king in Dan. iv. Literal time when applied to an individual man. If we reckon the seven times a day for a year we get 2555 years, which would be out of all proportion to the life of a man.

GEORGE FRANCIS.

"Blessed are the Poor."

"The poor have the gospel preached to them." Matt. xi. 5.

Some who have written to me in regard to visiting their locality on my tour South this winter say that they are not able to pay much to a preacher to visit their locality. To all such who have written me, or have not written because they feel poor, I wish to say, none need hesitate to write to me in regard to holding meetings because they feel poor. I am working for the Lord, and trust in him, and if he don't prosper you so as to aid me on my way, he will provide for my wants in some other way. Like David I can say, "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread." Psa. xxxvii. 25. I do not expect much aid. I make my expenses as light as possible. Railroad fare is the principle expense. As for food and clothing, like brother Paul I labor with my own hands to supply these wants to myself and family. I am favored with a half-fare permit over the most of the Western roads and this lightens my expenses some. The Lord is coming soon and as I go on my way, I want to see all I can of the saints, and encourage them to watch and pray.

J. B. CRATON.

Their Worm and the Fire.

"Where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched." Mark ix. 43-48. "Their" and "the"—the former is specific; the latter general; it is "their worm" but "the fire." The worm lives and preys on the carcass while the carcass lasts; the fire consumes both carcass and worm—cleans out and cleans up the premises. No worm after the fire.

Trade Interests in China.

Great Britain has vast interests in China. Her commerce with that Empire, says the New York Tribune, amounts to $172,000,000 a year in a total of $258,000,000, or just two-thirds of the whole foreign trade of China. Of the 37,132 ships entered and cleared at treaty ports in 1895 19,579 were British, and only 2 [illegible] were German. The tonnage of the former was 20,525,798, and of the latter only 2,442,185. Naturally Great Britain desires to retain this profitable trade, and does not relish the idea of China's being partitioned among other powers, which are not only her rivals but are actually hostile to her spirit, and will be sure to injure her trade by adverse tariff regulations. No wonder that there is a general expectation that Great Britain will insist upon taking a wholesale grab which has now been started in the East, either to check the rapacity of the others or to secure a lion's share of the spoils herself.

Japan, too, has great interests in China, and has had ever since she beat back the invading legions of Kublai Khan and established her right to independence of her giant neighbor. She stands second to Great Britain in magnitude of trade with China, having $25,000,000 a year—far more than Russia or all the rest of Europe put together. Naturally she wants to retain that trade and increase it. But in her case, too, there is room for grave question ing whether it would be wise to increase her territorial possessions by seizing a province or two on the mainland. At present Japan is secure in her island home, just as Great Britain is. She has merely to keep control of the sea about her to be safe from invasion. There are only two powers in the world today that could beat her in a naval war, and if she keeps up her present rate of naval progress there will probably never be any more. But if she had an empire on the continent to defend she would be subject to land attacks from the overwhelming forces of Russia, and she would have to divide her fleet in such a way as actually to put her island home itself in danger of invasion. It would be a fine thing in many respects to annex some Chinese provinces, but such possessions would be a source of weakness that might in time prove fatal.

The United States, too, has great interests in China, and hopes to have greater when the annexation of Hawaii and the laying of a telegraphic cable shall have helped this country into the dominant rank in Pacific commerce to which it is naturally entitled. Its trade with China is now over $10,000,000 a year—exceeded only by that of Great Britain and Japan. It is eminently desirable that that trade should be preserved and increased. But that end is not to be attained by going to war with the partitioning powers, nor by seizing for this country a share of the crumbling empire."

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, post-office, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

WHEN we speak of the "Word," we do not mean the abstract letters or sounds, but the spirit-ideas as connected with Father, Son and Spirit, angels, apostles and prophets, in the whole Bible, with prophecies, types, facts and promises.

WORD comes to us that Mr. James Wickizer died Jan. 16, at his home in Argos, Ind. Most of our readers will remember that Mr. Wickizer and Sister S. C. Claplin were married last September in this city. He was one of the oldest and best known men in the county, an estimable, highly respected citizen. Sister Wickizer has the sympathy of all her large circle of friends in this hour of sorrow.

THE Executive Board of the Indiana Conference met at this city Jan. 16, and listened with interest to two very fine discourses given by Brother A. H. Zilmer of Wisconsin. The Board has engaged Bro. Zilmer to do some evangelistic work in this State, and brethren who know of places where there is an opening for such labor are requested to correspond at once with F. L. Austin at Rensselaer, Ind. The friends at Plymouth are very much pleased with Bro. Zilmer, and believe he will be a valuable addition to our ranks, and hope the Committee who have this work in hand will be able to keep him fully engaged. He is a young man with natural ability and easy address, and with a large heart fully consecrated to the Lord and his work. Let the State of Indiana support him, for such labor as he can perform is needed, and the laborers are indeed few.

AT the time of our Conference here last November, report of which was given, there occurred an incident that perhaps deserves more notice than was given it, inasmuch as it was somewhat out of the ordinary. A young woman quite low with consumption, whose early teaching had been on the lines of infidelity, had become concerned about her future destiny, and while racked with bodily pain had also suffered anguish of heart as she looked into the dark future. Kind friends of various denominations had talked with her for some time, and yet, she being a close reasoner and thinker, the ideas they gave her only served to further confuse her mind. Different persons had visited her, and a friend suggested a visit by Sister M. A. Woodward who was then conducting meetings here. Sister Woodward visited her several times, presenting the Word of God in a clear and logical manner, reading passages that were calculated to enlighten her mind and appealed to her reason and common sense. Of course in the weak condition of the poor sufferer, it could not all be done at once, and Sister Woodward would read and talk and pray with her, and then leave her to rest and think over what had been brought out in the interview. Be it remembered that this lady was anxiously inquiring and looking for light, she wanted to believe in God and Jesus, but had never been able to see it in a reasonable manner. Was not satisfied with skepticism, and wanted something better. Believed there was something better, if only the eyes of her understanding could be opened to behold it. One evening after a visit from Sister Woodward, while lying on her bed thinking over the words that had been read and spoken, all the full light of God's divine plan in relation to and love for fallen humanity came to her, and she realized that there was a hope for her, and that she must has. n to let it be known, and that there must be no delay in putting on the saving name. She sent her friend at once to tell Sister Woodward and others that now she could see light ahead in place of all darkness. Of course all were rejoiced, how could any help it. It was time for angels to sing praises to God, and no doubt there was rejoicing in heaven even as there was here with the little band at Plymouth. The dear Sister was anxious to perform her whole duty, and so a few of our good sisters gathered at the home of the sick one, a tank with water was prepared, and with the assistance of the husband of the sick one, all rejoicing at the goodness of God, Sister Woodward immersed the dear one, and she came up from the watery grave indeed a child of the King. Later a company gathered with her again and partook of the bread and wine, emblematic of the body and blood of her adorable Redeemer, broken and shed for her, that the poor, weak and helpless child of earth might be changed into a member of his family, and be co-heir with him to the glories promised. Our dear Sister talks to every one who calls, telling them of what she has learned and what she has done, wants every body to know of it, and is with all her suffering and pain, happy and glad that the love of God could reach to even such as she was. A letter written by her was published in last week's RESTITUTION. She still lives, but with the calm resignation of one who knows that soon she will be at rest, sleeping in Jesus, there to wait until the angels go forth sounding the call for the dead in Christ to awake and come forth from the grave. May the time soon come when this summons shall be heard, announcing the return of our King and Savior, and may we each be worthy and ready to sing the glad song in a world made new, and where no sickness shall come to cause suffering, and where death cannot enter.

The Crisis.

To M. L., Dear Sir:

We were grieved to learn by your last that you are wavering, and far less determined to obey the truth than when we heard before. Yes; a change for the worst has taken place. An enemy hath done this. You certainly saw that obedience to faith in the gospel of the kingdom was the only way to get into Christ. You know you were baptized into a church that rejects the gospel of the kingdom which Jesus preached. It is but recently that you heard the gospel, and we seriously ask how you could be baptized in obedience to it while utterly ignorant of it? You saw, that you were not eligible to, or a fit subject for baptism when you were immersed: because belief of what was not promised could not secure to you what is promised. And we plead with you in Christ's stead to secure an interest in God's glorious kingdom by joyously rendering obedience to what you know to be God's eternal Truth. Just as surely as that you did not believe the things concerning the kingdom of God when you were baptized, so sure is it that you have no hope of them. By turning to Eph. ii. 12, you will see that all who are strangers to the covenants of promise you now believe, are without Christ, without God, without hope. We entreat you to save yourself from this untoward generation, by forsaking all and following Christ before it is too late.

Prof. Dimbleby and The New Era.

AS THE RESTITUTION has published several references to Prof. Dimbleby's works, in the last of which he claims that Gentile times end in 1898¾, that is in about two months from this date; and, inasmuch as none of us are capable of verifying his calculations we are certainly not qualified to form an estimate of the value of his deductions, except where they are in conflict with the revealed Word of God. Under these circumstances we would be remiss in our duty if we did not say that Grattan Guinness, D. D., one of the ablest prophetic writers in England, and author of a large work entitled "The Approaching End of the Age," (from which our lamented Bro. Chaplin used to make extensive extracts,) is out in a review of Mr. Dimbleby. We now let Mr. Guinness speak for himself. We copy from a contemporary magazine. He says:—

I have carefully examined Mr. Dimbleby's productions, and find that [illegible] astronomy and chronology are as baseless as the vision of a dream. English astronomers take no notice of his writings; they know that 'The British Chronological and Astronomical Association,' of which he vauntingly styles himself 'Premier Chronologist,' is a mere hole-in-the corner association, and that nine-tenths of the eclipses and transits he writes about, and which he claims to have been the first to calculate.

NEVER HAPPENED AT ALL.

They know this for a fact, and think the best thing to do is to just let him alone, and take no notice of his publications, as no one at all versed in astronomy could possibly be deceived by him, and the attempt to reply to him would in their opinion call more attention to his views than it would be wise to bestow.

The silence of astronomers has given Mr. Dimbleby the opportunity to obtain a large circulation for his publications among persons unversed in the science, and, according to his account, thousands of copies of his works have been "distributed throughout the English speaking world. This would not matter so much were it not that so many persons have been led, through his writings, to entertain baseless expectations as to the events which he says will take place in 1898, including the close of the "Times of the Gentiles," the great Assize by the Ancient of Days, the resurrection of the just, and the 'Coming of the Lord Jesus.' Some students in China have, to my knowledge, through reading his works, been led to abandon the effort to pass in their college examinations, as not worth while, since would take place next year; and the evil is spreading. All this is serious, and the results which will follow, later on, will be more serious still. There will be profound disappointment when the time comes, and Mr. Dimbleby's prophecies are falsified, and then there will be a reaction, and doubt will be thrown on the truth of Scripture and the value of the study of prophecy. The great doctrine of the second coming of our Lord will, once more be brought into contempt, and men will scoff at the warning and promises of

THE END OF THE AGE

THE WORD OF GOD

with reference to the second advent. Under these circumstances, it seems the duty of those who have bestowed special study on those subjects to warn the people against Mr. Dimbleby's false statements and baseless conclusions.

I. The titles he gives himself on his publications of 'Premier Chronologist to the British Chronological Association, and Astronomical Association,' and 'First Calculator of all Eclipses and Transits,' are not only boastful, but are misleading and worthless. Some good people in China re-published one of Mr. Dimbleby's tracts and stated on the title-page that he was 'Premier Chronologist to the Queen!' Of course the description was utterly false.

As to the statement that he is the 'First Calculator of all the Eclipses and Transits,' it is absurd. It would be difficult for me to express to you the feelings with which any one who is acquainted with astronomy must regard Mr. Dimbleby's method of calculating eclipses and transits. He has no more idea of the elements which have to be taken into account, in making such calculations, than a child of six years of age. He tries to work out the dates of a few of them by a rule of thumb method he has invented, which only leads him into of false conclusions. To crown all he calls himself 'Prize Essayist on Universal Time.' Would you believe it, that the prize in question was bestowed, not by any board even pretending to astronomical knowledge, but by the 'Baloon Society of the Royal Aquarium!'

Mr. Dimbleby plainly confesses his incompetence to employ the only method by which trustworthy and accurate calculations of eclipses can be made, in the following terms—in which he contradicts himself flatly in an amusing manner:—

(a). 'Of course mathematical calculations will more precisely fix the date of the eclipse,' see 'All Past Time,' p. 139.

(b) 'I never could succeed in calculating ancient eclipses by mathematical science, and I never knew anybody else who was successful in using any such a method.'

After this piece of self-contradiction, and this plain and honest confession of his inability to calculate eclipses by mathematical methods, what are we to say to the title which Mr. Dimbleby gives himself on the opening page of the same book, 'First Calculator of all Eclipses?'

II. His attempt to settle the exact year in which the end of the Times of the Gentiles and the coming of Christ are to take place is one in which no Christian ought to make, for it is written, 'Of that day and hour knoweth no man.' Matt. xxiv. 36. No one with proper reverence for the teachings of Scripture would attempt to fix the date of that great day. It is pure presumption to claim to have discovered what Scripture asserts to be intentionally hidden by the hand of God from human knowledge.

In his recent work, 'The Appointed Time' Mr. Dimbleby states that 'the coming of the Lord from heaven with all his saints,' will take place, 'in 1901¾, and that this involves his coming into the mid-heavens for his saints three years and a half previously, namely in 1898,' p. 230. 'The Lord Jesus Christ will come in 1898, about,' p. 267. 'What I mean by Easter, 1898¾, is about the vernal equinox, say Mar. 21, 1898,' p. 46.

III. In justification of his attempt to predict the time of the Second Advent, Mr. Dimbleby says, 'If it be said that men have made calculations before, and the time has passed. I must deny such a statement.' What shall we say to this denial of indisputable facts? It is notorious that attempts have been repeatedly made to fix the date of the second advent, and have been falsified by the course of events. The attempt was made by Miller, when thousands were led to expect the second advent to take place in a given date, and were disappointed. The same attempt has been made again and again, in our own times by the Rev. M. Baxter. From study of the interpretation of prophecy I know that a volume might easily be filled with accounts of instances in which good people have erroneously anticipated the date of our Lord's return.

IV. His attempt to fix the exact date of the creation of Adam, and then to build on this date a complete scheme of Bible Chronology, including the period of the second advent, is about as wise as the ambitious effort of the men of Babel to build a tower whose top would reach unto heaven. There are at least three chronologies of patriarchal times which claim to be Scriptural, the Hebrew, the Septuagint and the Samaritan, and they are in the Septuagint differing from the Hebrew by 1,300 years. And further, if the Hebrew chronology be selected, as the most trustworthy for these early dates, there are gaps in it which no ingenuity can fill. This fact has been clearly shown by many competent chronologers. Mr. Dimbleby puts the creation of Adam in the year B. C. 3999, assigning this not as a probable date, but as absolutely certain. In this assumption he is manifestly wrong. 'The extreme uncertainty attending all attempts to determine the chronology of the Bible is sufficiently evinced by the fact that one hundred and eighty different calculations have been made by Jewish and Christian authors, of the length of the period between Adam and Christ. The longest of these makes it 6,984, and the shortest 3,483 years.' (Hodge).

V. Mr. Dimbleby's attempt to confirm the date which infers from Scripture for the creation of Adam (B. C. 3999), by a set of eclipses and transits which he asserts took place at that remote period, is one of the most absurd attempts made by any writer on chronology. No astronomer, however skilled, can calculate the exact dates of the transits of Venus and Mercury for six thousand years ago, and if they were calculated no one could verify them, for no one saw them or recorded their occurrence. Mr. Dimbleby confesses, as we have seen, that he has no knowledge of mathematical astronomy, and yet he pretends to have calculated them all. His method is to construct a table based on the notion that fifteen transits of Mercury occur regularly at the same time every 92 years, and then to reckon the dates of the transits of the planet by means of this fallacious cycle all the way back to Adam. You may imagine the result! No astronomer could glance at the table which begives of the transits of Mercury calculated in this way without laughing at it.

IT IS UTTERLY UNTRUE

that the transits of Mercury are exactly repeated every ninety-two years. Even in the list which he gives of the dates of modern transits of Mercury, there are numerous errors, transits being left out which did occur, and others put in which never occurred at all. He has not the faintest conception of the true method of calculating these astronomical occurrences, nor of the mathematical ability necessary for the computation, and merely works by a fallacious method of his own invention, similar to that which he employs in the case of Mercury.

In Mr. Dimbleby's tract entitled 'Vox Dei, or Eclipse Line of Time,' he makes the ambitious attempt to follow a solar eclipse all the way from the date of creation, stating that this particular eclipse, 'which occurred on Friday, the first day of the fourth month of the creation year, has re-occurred in every subsequent eighteenth year.' He brings this most persevering eclipse all the way down to Wednesday, February 4, 1897.' As it happened, there was no eclipse at that date, for the true date of the solar eclipse which then took place was Monday, February 1st. It is curious fact the solar eclipse Mr. Dimbleby professes to follow all the way back to creation came in on the earth for the first time in the year A. D. 1103. Beyond that date it had no existence as an eclipse whatever. But Mr. Dimbleby followed it all through the centuries he pursued it. He saw it, or thought he saw it, or calculated it, at least, back through the years of the Consuls, and Nebuchnezzars, and Pharaohs, and Ninrod and Noah, to the beginning of the world! He puts down the actual dates of its occurrence all the way along in his best and most useful astronomical table in existence,' and there they are today. These are the dates, but where is the eclipse? Unfortunately, nowhere before the year 1103.

And what about the eclipses which happened at 'creation?' For, though we cannot accept Mr. Dimbleby's dates for them, at that distant period, yet some, of course, did occur. The fact is that ages ago, they went off the earth at the poles, and when once an eclipse goes off thus, it does not return for twelve thousand years. Ferguson, the Astronomer tells us that eclipses which happened about the creation are little more than half way yet of their etherial circuit, and it will be four thousand years before they enter the earth any more.' 'Astronomy,' Vol. I, p. 208.

In relation to the above we may say that the standing of its author in the literary world, and his ability as a prophetic student, entitle it to a very careful consideration. In our little life-time we have repeatedly seen the truth of some of his remarks demonstrated. And the great lessons it seems to teach us, is this: We can afford to pin our faith to no theory which contains human elements; and that the Divine injunction to and hold fast to that which is good' is still in force. We are aware that hope deferred some times makes the heart sick, and disposes us to catch at straws, that in the end makes matters worse. The history of God's people shows that they were kept in an expectant attitude in every age, and although signs many are hung out which show that our redemption draws nigh, we are persuaded that the exact time will not be known—and hence must ever be on the watch.

'PROVE ALL THINGS

The Psalms.

He only who knows the number of the waves of the ocean, and the abundance of tears in the human eye, he who sees the sighs of the heart before they are uttered, and hears them still when they are hushed into silence—he alone can tell how many holy emotions, how many heavenly vibrations, have been produced and will ever be produced in the souls of men by the reverberation of these marvelous strains, of these predestinated hymns, read, meditated, sung, in every hour of the day and night, in every winding of the vale of tears. The Psalter of David is like a mystic harp hung on the walls of true Zion. Under the breath of the Spirit of God, it sends forth its infinite varieties of devotion, which, rolling on from echo to echo, from soul to soul, awakes in each a separate note mingling in that one prolonged voice of thankfulness and penitence, praise and prayer.

The New York Bible Society during the year ending September 30, distributed in this city 60,424 Bibles and Testaments, in twenty-four different languages, including the European languages, also Chinese, Arabic, Greek, Bulgarian, and others. The society has missionaries meeting the immigrants with Bibles and Testaments in their languages; and it is doing a large work among the blind and is engaged in a house-to-house visitation, reaching many families and individuals. It also aims to supply the children of the Sunday-schools.

The Success of "The Restitution" Depends on You.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

The success, the very existence, of THE RESTITUTION depends on your action or inaction. We cannot keep it alive without the aid of every one of our friends. If you want it to be issued remember you are the party who can make it or break it. The publisher cannot do, only as you say he shall. We believe there is a work yet to be done before the Master comes, and that we each have a duty to perform, and that THE RESTITUTION is still needed in the prosecution of this work. Do you believe this? Do you think because you have believed and obeyed the gospel that your work is done and you have nothing more to do? Can a co-worker with him be satisfied with sitting down with hands folded? Surely no one can think so. All, each one, must be up and doing. We cannot afford after the long service many have given, to miss the reward now.

Then, if this be so, and we think there can be no doubt of it, we must ask every friend of THE RESTITUTION to at once renew for 1898, and also try and influence some friend of yours to be a friend of the paper. The work is in your hands. How will you treat it? Please act today. Right now. Do not leave it for a more convenient time. Act promptly.

Remember the Poor.

There are some who have taken THE RESTITUTION for many years who are by various circumstances forced to say they cannot longer pay. Some are now old, and having lost husband or wife, are dependent on those who have no interest in the Bible for their temporal support. Others have lost their all in some way, their income cut off, and they unable longer to labor. A few cents from each one will send papers to all the Lord's poor. For the publisher to bear any large share of this is impossible, simply because he has no means to do it with. Shall such be cut off, or will you contribute so that some one may be calling blessings on your head. We think this is neglected by some who are able to aid this branch of work, through failing to realize the earnest ne[illegible] You who have plenty, [illegible] whatever your fancy calls [illegible] think there are none so poor, but if they wanted to, could get the money some time during the year, you surely do not know the dire straits in which many of our brethren and sisters are placed. If you did we feel sure that this helping fund would never lack when a call is made, but would have a balance always to draw on. O brethren, you who have plenty, do wake up to see this need.

We are Sorry

To say that some are apparently negligent. A farmer has 1000 bushels of wheat, and sells it for one dollar a bushel, and get $1000. This can be put in the bank, and as he needs money for any purpose, all he has to do is to go to the banker and get it. It is kept safely awaiting his demand. Another farmer with the same amount of grain but a little different in quality, his friends wishing to try his kind of wheat, kindly sells to each one a single bushel, until he has 1000 men each owing him $1.00. When he wants to use some money, to get it he must go and ask these men separately, and as the amount each owes is so small, they reason that it does not make much difference about hurrying to pay him, as a single dollar will not help him much. It is just so with some subscribers to a paper. The amount each owes being small it cannot make much difference to the publisher about being prompt in remitting, as the little will not be much service to him. Consequently many neglect, get careless, and do not send through sheer thoughtlessness. Brethren, apply the rule "Put yourself in his place," a few moments. We do not wish to incur the expense and labor of sending bills to the many that owe us. It is not right to force this to be done, so we ask you kindly yet earnestly to examine your account, and if you owe us anything, do please send us the amount at once. We cannot tell you in words how badly we need it, and that right now. Do not neglect this call. Please do not.

The religion that is going to sanctify the world pays its debts. It does not consider that forty cents returned for a hundred cents given is according to the Gospel, though it may be according to law. It looks on a man who has failed in trade, and continues to live in luxury, as a thief.

Poetry.

God's Peace.

"The peace of God which passeth all understanding."—Phil. iv: 7.

How oft amid the griefs of life—
Perplexed, misjudged, distressed—
O God, I wove in the strife,
And long and cry for rest.
How oft I fled—so great my need,
My courage so outworn—
As though my griefs were now indeed
Greater than could be borne.

Yet oft will come in times like these—
Come like a gracious balm—
A sense of peace, of joy, of ease,
A sense of Heav'n's own calm,
Ah! then my heart would fain express
What I have felt before—
'Tis not I feel my griefs are less—
I feel Thy love is more.

Parables of Saloomoon. Chapter 25.

1. These are the indiscriminate chastening instructions of Saloomoon, which the friends of Ezekin's the king of Joudain wrote out.

2. God's glory hideth speech (lit. a word) but a king's glory honoreth affairs.

3. The heavens are high and earth is deep, and a king's heart is not to be questioned.

4. Put silver of unapproved value and it will have become purified wholly.

5. Slay irreverent men off from before a king's face and his throne will be restored to uprightness with righteousness.

6. Do not boast in the prerence of a king, nor exalt thyself in the places of men of influence.

7. For it is better for thee to be told, Come up unto me than for thee to be humiliated in the presence of a man of influence. Things that thine eyes have seen tell.

8. Do not fall into contention quickly, that thou mayest repent finally; Whenever thy friend reprocheth thee,

9. Draw back; Do not treat him with contempt,

10. Lest thy friend reproach thee, and thy battle and enmity be not away from thee, but be to thee like [illegible] grace and friendship make [illegible] do thou watch to keep for [illegible] that thou mayest not become amenable to reproach: and moreover watch to guard thy ways so that they may be easy to deal with.

11. An apple of gold in a little necklace of sardius is to speak a word in this wise.

12. And a wise word in a hearing ear is a sardius of much value set in an earring of gold.

13. Even as a coming forth of snow in early harvest against scorching heat is of advantage, so is a faithful messenger for those who have sent him. For he profiteth the souls of those who are using him,

14. Even as winds and clouds and showers of rain are most manifest things, so is he who boasteth of giving in a lying way.

15. In forbearance is there prosperity for kings, and a gentle tongue breaketh bones.

16. When thou hast found honey eat a sufficiency, lest perchance if filled to satiety thou vomit.

17. Introduce thy foot rarely to thine own friend lest perchance he be sated with thee and hate thee.

18. A cudgel and a sword and a pointed arrow, even in this wise is the man who testifieth falsely against his friend.

19. An evil man's way and the foot of an evader of law will perish in an evil day.

20. As acid induceth corosion even so suffering in body incurred causeth sorrow of heart.. As a moth in an outer-garment and a worm in wood, even so sorrow injureth a man's heart.

21. If thine enemy hunger give him a morsel, if he thirst give him to drink;

22. For in so doing thou wilt heap coals of fire on his head, and the Lord will repay thee with good things.

23. A north wind stirreth up clouds and a bold face arouseth a tongue.

24. Better is it to dwell in a corner of an upper-room than in a whole house in common with a railing wife.

25. As cold water is refreshing to a thirsty soul, even so is good news from a land far off.

26. As if one should fence in a fountain and pollute an outflow of water, even so is it an indecent thing to smite a justified man in the sight of an irreverent one.

27. To eat much honey is not a good thing; but to honor words of renown is befitting.

28. As a city with its walls cast down and unwalled, even so is a man who doth aught without counsel.

CHAPTER 26.

1. As dew in early harvest and as rain in summer-harvest, even so is there no honor for a man without good sense.

2. As birds fly large and small, even so an idle curse will not come upon any one.

3. As a whip for a horse and a goad for an ass, even so is a sceptre of rule for a nation that evades law,

4. Answer not a person wanting in good sense according to his folly that thou mayest not have become like him.

5. But answer a person wanting in good sense contrary to his folly, that he may not appear wise in his own estimation.

6. He who hath sent word through a messenger devoid of good sense causeth reproach on account of his own ways.

7. Take away going from legs and evasion of law out of the mouth of people devoid of good sense.

8. He who tieth up a stone in a sling is like him who giveth glory to a person wanting in good sense.

9. Akanthai (or thistles) are planted with the hand of a drunkard, and bond-service with the hand of persons devoid of good sense.

10. Many times doth all the flesh of people devoid of sense become exposed to wintery cold; For their removal of place is their ruin.

11. As a dog that hath returned to his vomit and becometh an object of disgust, even so is a thoughtless person who hath returned to his own sin in his own evil way. There is a shame that leadeth unto sin and there is a shame that is glory and grace.

12. I have seen a man glorifying himself as wise in his own estimation, although a person wanting in good sense had more hope than he.

13. A sluggard who is being sent forth into a highway saith, There is a lion in the ways and he is giving voice in the public squares.

14. As a door turneth on its hinge even so turneth the sluggard on his couch.

15. When a sluggard hath hid his hand in his bosom, he cannot bring it to his mouth.

16. A sluggard appeareth to himself to be wiser than the one who gets away with full intelligence.

17. Like one seizing a dog by the tail even so is he who puts himself forward in another's law-suit.

18. As the healer's propound words to men, and the one who hath encountered the word first gets tripped up, even so are all those who lie in wait for their own friends and when they see them, say, I did it in sport.

20. With much dry wood fire flourisheth, but where there is no variance fighting is quited.

21. A hearth for coals and kindling for fire, and an abusively talking man for a fighting disturbance.

22. Words of mischievous fellows may be smooth, but they smite into recesses of tender-feelings.

23. Money that is being given with deceit should be accounted even as a potsherd. Smooth words cover a sorrowful heart.

24. A bewailing enemy consenteth to everything with his lips; but in his heart he deviseth deceit.

25. If thine enemy beseech thee with a great voice, trust him not; For there are seven wicked intents in his soul.

26. The one who hideth enmity is plotting deception; but one easily recognized in joint councils (upper-courts), revealeth his own sins.

27. The one who diggeth a pit for his neighbor will fall into it; and the one who rolleth a stone will roll it upon himself.

28. A lying tongue hateth truth; and an uncovered (uncharitable) mouth causeth disorder.

CHAPTER 27.

1. Boast not of the things of the morrow, For thou dost know what the morrow will bring forth.

2. Let thy fellow pronounce thy encomiums and not thine own mouth, another's and not thine own lips.

3. A stone is heavy and sand hard to carry; but a heedless person's wroth is heavier than either.

4. Anger is unmerciful and wrath is sharp; but nothing withstandeth jealousy.

5. Better are unconcealed reproofs than hidden friendship.

6. More reliable are the wounds of a friend than the voluntary kisses of an enemy.

7. A soul in satiety mocketh at honey-comb; but to a soul in want even the bitter things seem sweet.

8. As when a bird hath flown out of its own nest even so a man becometh a bond-servant when he hath become estranged from his own places.

9. Oil[illegible] heart delighteth in odors of myrrha and in wine and frankincense; but one's soul is broken down by misfortunes.

10. Thy friend and thy father's friend forsake not, and enter not into the house of thy brother in misfortune; Better is a friend nigh at hand than a brother who dwelleth far away.

11. Become wise, O son, that thy heart may rejoice, and turn away words of reproach from thee.

12. A subtile man hath hid himself from approaching calamities; but heedless ones will pay the penalty when they have come upon them.

13. Take off his outer-garment; For he hath become a haughty scorner, he who doth outrage to another's things.

14. He who blesseth (invoketh a blessing upon) a friend in the morning with a great voice will seem to differ in no respect from the one who curseth him.

15. Drops of water drive a man out of his house on a stormy day; even so also a railing wife out of his own house.

16. A north wind is a harsh wind, but is called auspicious by name.

17. Iron sharpeneth iron; and a man of influence meeteth the face of his comrade.

18. He who planteth a fig-tree will eat the fruit thereof; and he who watcheth to guard his own lord will have been honored.

19. As faces are not like faces, even so neither are the thoughts of men.

20. Hades and loss are not being filled; even so also are the eyes of men insatiate. He who fixeth his eye immovably is an abomination to the Lord, and the unchastened do not control their tongue.

21. A test of value for silver and gold is by fire; but a man's value is approved through the mouth of those who speak his encomiums. The heart of a transgressor seeketh out evil things; but an upright heart seeketh comprehension.

22. If thou shouldst scourge a thoughtless man in the midst of a synedrion and so dishonor him, thou wouldst not take away his folly.

23. Become well acquainted with souls of thy flock, and set thy heart on thy herds: Because not forever is a man's control and strength, nor do they hand it down from generation to generation.

24. Care for the green things on the plain and them will shear a fleece, and gather the grass of the mountain range, that thou mayest have sheep for fine apparel: Honor the plain, that lambs may be thine.

25. O Son, from me thou hast strong oracular sayings for thy life and for the life of thy courtiers.

COMMENT.

The first verse of this 25th chapter gives us some information that is so different from that given in the C. V. and R. V. that the reader will do well to compare and note difference. This collection of disjointed or rather separate aphorisms of Saloomoon, the wise man, as here stated made by "the friends of Ezekias, the king of Joudain," and "written out by them" for posterity, seems to constitute what we know as the 25th, 26th and the first ten verses of the 27th chapters. The instruction thus far though always specific in form appears to be general in its address and application to the human race; but with the 11th verse of the 27th chapter, the address becomes specific again and the exhortation so frequent before is resumed "Become wise, O son, that thy heart may rejoice," etc.

In these aphorisms we find the seed-thought of many of the Christ's parable teachings and very many of the ideas and phrases as well as the "key-words" of Paul's illustrative teaching. For instance Christ's parable of the well-born man who goes away to receive a kingdom and return and what he will do when he returns is merely the amplification of the thought of the 5th verse of this 25th chapter.

Christ's teaching in regard to taking honored places and places in front when invited to a place of entertainment is all given as an aphorism in the 7th verse of this chapter.

So the parable that begins with "Agree with thy adversary quickly, etc." is merely the exposition of the thought in the 8th verse.

Again the importance of friendship and grace (or good-will) that Christ places such constant emphasis upon, all in the 9th and 10th verses. Notice how different the 14th verse reads from the same in the C. V. and R. V. also the 12th.

The "forbearance" of the 15th verse becomes one of the watch-words of later Christianity. The teaching of the later gospel moods, echoes the apothegmatic 14th of the 21st [illegible] and of the 25th [illegible] as a whole is "the good news" par excellence therein hinted at.

So we might go through this 26th chapter and the first ten verses of the 27th pointing out the seed-truth contained in these disjointed apothemis. But time and space forbid and I would only say in passing that the remaining portion of the 27th chapter beginning and ending with the familiar address of "O son" seems to be a separate lesson and is not so distinctly apothemistic in form and arrangement—as the 25th and 26th. Notice that we are informed in the last clause of the 25th verse that this lesson is addressed to a king's son.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Hath Everlasting Life.

"He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not on the Son shall not see life."

"He that hath the Son, hath life: he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life."

Let us look at these words that have been spoken for our edification and by earnest prayer and loving consideration strive to be of one mind concerning them, as well as all other scripture. For if when he shall appear we shall be like him, it will be in character, word, and deed. And further, it is now that we must be made like him in order that we may be like him when he shall appear.

When a man believes on the Lord Jesus Christ and is buried by baptism into his death and raised up in the likeness of his resurrection, he begins at once to walk in newness of life. He has put off concerning the former conversation, the old man which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts, and has put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness; has changed from the old life and is being fashioned after the pattern of Christ Jesus who suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow his steps. He abides in Him: has put on Christ, and is showing the truth of that statement in 1 Jno. ii: 6. "He that saith he abideth in Him ought himself also so to walk even as he walked."

Every act, as he walks in this newness of life, shows forth the fruits of that spirit which has been shed upon him—the spirit of Christ, and he has become a living epistle of Him who loved him, in thus manifesting him. And truly he is able to say with Paul: "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me."

What is this new life? It is Christ in him, filling up that which is behind of the affliction of the body of Christ. Look at Paul and Stephen, both manifesting the same life, because they have the same spirit of life which was in Christ Jesus: meek and lowly, long suffering, gentle, good, full of faith, peace, joy and love—a perfect Christ-likeness. And it is so with all those who have the spirit of Christ.

What kind of a life was that which was manifested by Christ Jesus? John says: (1 Jno. i: 2) For the life was manifested, and we have seen and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us." Now, if we have the spirit of Christ it must follow that we are manifesting the same kind of life that he manifested, for we are to follow in his footsteps, walk as he walked.

This new life is the treasure in earthen vessels, and though we be troubled on every side, yet we are not distressed; perplexed, yet not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed; always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh. So we see that "he that believeth on the Son, hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not on the Son shall not see life."

And now let us look a little further. All scripture given by inspiration of God must be in perfect harmony. The spirit of truth does not guide a man into one truth and then by another passage show that the first is not truth, for then it would be divided against itself and could not stand. Paul says in Titus i: 2. "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, hath promised before the world began."

What is this hope of eternal life? Paul says there is "one hope of our calling." And in Romans viii: 23–24 shows what the one hope is: "that we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to-wit: the redemption of our body." The 24th verse shows that that is our hope. The groaning "within ourselves" is the groaning of the inward man—the new man for the redemption of the body, and that redemption is the hope of the new man; and our earnest desire is to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven. But that which is to be clothed upon is the life that has been manifested in our mortal flesh—the Christ life. It is because the life manifested is not in a suitable house, that there are groanings and earnest desires for the change. We want to put on immortality. We long for mortality to be swallowed up in life.

And God hath wrought us for this self-same thing, and has given us the earnest (payment) of the Spirit until the time for the redemption of the purchased possession. Oh! what a blessed hope.

Praise the Lord God who hath given us richly all things through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The Lord strengthen us, and make us to rejoice in the glorious light of the truth.

In love,

B. W. WAGGONER.

What is Man?

Dear Restitution:

I will try and write a few lines that I might be some help in the vineyard. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." Gen. ii. 7. What is it that we call man? Is it not the body? If so, then it was the body God formed of the dust. Then he says, "For dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." Then man returns to dust. "And man shall return to the dust again." Job xxxiv. 14, 15. Here we find that man returns to the dust. "For he knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are dust." Psa. ciii. 14. "For all flesh is as the grass." 1 Pet. i. 24. "As a flower of the field so he flourisheth." Psa. ciii. 15. "He shall pass away." James i. 10. These references show that man is like the grass. He returns to dust. Man subsists on that which comes from the ground which makes flesh, which is vanity. But we are told that "the spirit returns to God who gave it." That is so, but is the spirit any part of man? Man is of the dust, the spirit returns to God who gave it. What, did he give man the breath of life? Gen. ii. 7. Then the breath is no part of man. We have man after the breath is gone. Then the breath or life is a gift. This word spirit is translated from the word ruach, meaning wind or breath. I quote from Young's Concordance. We are told by some that the spirit is the immortal part of man. Let us see. "King of kings and Lord of lords who only hath immortality." 1 Tim. vi. 15, 16. If he only hath immortality, then we haven't got it. Then if we believe the record of God the spirit then is no immortal part of man. Turn to Psa. cxlvi. 3, 4, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth." Turn to Ezekiel xxxvii. 7-10, "So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army." Now, you see they did not live till they breathed again. "God gave the first man life by breathing into his nostrils the breath of life." Turn to Col. iii. 3, 4, "When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye appear with him in glory." Eze. xxxvii. 12-14. "And shall put my spirit in you (or breathe in you) and ye shall live." So we see that we must receive again the breath of life before we can live. This is what God gave man. This is what leaves man at death, so man goes to dust, his life is hid with Christ in God.

Yours in hope,

WM. WOODS.

Letter to H. F. Cordill.

I was going to try to give you my belief in regard to the future, but when I got my last paper and I found it told in that plainer than I can tell it. It is in the selected article by J. O. Woodruff, entitled "New Man" in the paper of Nov. 24th. I hope you will read it carefully and tell me what you think of it. To my mind it explains the "New Man" and his mission just as the Bible does. It does me so much good to read such articles, and I expect to have some part in the work of bringing the world at large to a knowledge of the truth and in restoring mankind to a state of blessedness, which will take all of our years to complete. When I get to reading and thinking about it I feel like shouting, "Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly," and crown us with glory and immortality, and let us be at our work. We have a work to do now, which I am trying to do the best I can, by talking to people and trying to lead them into the truth, and by setting them a good example in the life I live. Yes, Henry, I have no doubt you and I will be co-workers in Christ's kingdom in the glorious work of restitution. It is the only subject that I get interested in now. Oh, how I would like to see and talk with you about it instead of writing. Your Brother,

HIRAM CORDILL.

A Short Dialogue.

TURNING AND TWISTING.

Q. Peter says, "David is not ascended into heaven." Is that true? Do you believe it is the truth?

O. Yes, of course I do. But he means that his body has not ascended upon high, and not his soul.

Q. Then the body was David, and if his soul had ascended the it was not David, unless there be two David's. How is this?

O. I can't tell, as I don't read much and can't think much.

Q. If your soul can't think and can't tell how and where it is, is it not an idiotic soul, and not of God?

O. You have me in a close corner, I wish to be excused.

Q. If Peter had said David has ascended to heaven, then what, would you believe it?

O. Yes, of course I would, he means his soul has ascended to heaven.

Q. Then you believe and say David and other good people have and do go to heaven at death, then you believe what he did not say, and reject what he did say, then do you believe the text?

O. You have me, and I really wish to be excused.

Q. Peter says, David is both dead and buried, do you believe he tells the truth?

O. Yes, of course I do, but he only speaks of his body.

Q. If you both tell the truth, then the body was David, and if you say David is in heaven then you contradict Peter, and tell more than is true. And if David is dead and buried, then death killed David, or he was buried alive. How is this? Now, if you have an independent thinker tell us how this is not, believe Peter and be on the Lord's side.

T. E. ADAMS.

Obeyed the Gospel.

On Sunday Jan. 9th, it was my great pleasure to bury with Christ in baptism Mrs. Kathleen Greenbaum (nee Mrazik). She was immersed once before, but on examining the Scriptures she found she was baptized before she believed the gospel. Having learned the gospel of the kingdom and the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ, like an obedient child of God, she rendered a cheerful obedience from the heart.

I regard this daughter of Abraham as a valuable acquisition to the cause, as she has the natural ability to publicly tell the story to others. May God bless her, and those to whom she may minister the glad tidings.

W. H. WILSON.

From the cathedral tower at Antwerp eighty bells have, for over two hundred years, rung out the grandest music for the benefit of the people living on the green fields which border the Scheldt. Once a year, in the month of February, the authorities select the music, and the organ plays every hour from the old masters of Christian song.

There is a great deal of pith and point in the comment of the African preacher on the text, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." He said—"I have known many a church to die 'cause it didn't give enough, but I never know'd a church to die 'cause it gave too much. They don't die that way, brederin, [illegible] has any ob you know'd a church to 'cause it gib too much? If you do, just luff me know, an' I will make a pilgrimage to dat church, an I'll clam by de soft light ob de moon to its moss-covered roof, an' I'll stan' and lif my han's to heben an' say, "Blessed am de ded dat die in de Lo'd."

OUR LOVE FEAST.

Dear Brethren in Christ:

Tomorrow will commence a new year and may each one start in with a more firm determination to live nearer the pattern laid down in the Old Book of the Bible than ever before as the time of the return of our Master is near at hand. Indeed I believe from the present prospect of the world's preparations for wars and the clamor to arms that we may look for him at any time. But should he come to morrow may we one and all be ready to say, come Lord Jesus, and come quickly. Yes and change our vile body and fashion it like unto his glorious body is my wishes.

DR. J. A. TUTHAM.

Dear Restitution:

Another year has fled and gone to join the cycles of the eternal past. Another year has dawned whose history is hidden from our view only to be revealed as day by day the months fly. Each year is a blank record book to be written day by day and page after page until the whole volume is completed. Each revolution our planet makes around the sun brings us nearer to the millennial epoch foretold by prophets and apostles, when the "desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose: "When the knowledge of the glory of God shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea." "Behold I make all things new," is the divine fiat that shall go forth at earth's regenisis. "The things that are seen are temporal," but the things that are unseen are eternal." And these are the new things that shall abide, and which we shall inherit: and which are revealed to us in the Word of God by his spirit, "for thee I first searcheth all things yea the deep things of God." "And now is our salvation nearer than when we first believed?" "The night is far spent, the day is at hand," be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer." Earth's future Ruler, born in Bethlehem nineteen centuries ago is about to show in this times who is the blessed and only Potentate, the rightful heir to David's throne and kingdom now in ruins but about to be raised up, and to break in pieces the worldwide kingdom and dominion symbolized by the fourth beast of David's prophecy. Then "the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ." Then will he reign until he puts all enemies under his feet; then shall the Son be subject to him which did put all things under him, that God may be all in all." Then will the Son deliver up the kingdom to God even the Father; for it is the Father's purpose, in the dispensation of the fulness of times to gather in one all things in Christ both which are in heaven and which are on earth." Harmony will be restored between heaven and earth, and God's will will be done on earth as in heaven. Then will the Father reign in the person of his Son as vicar of God, "For he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever and of his kingdom there shall be no end." But God will be all in all. The climax of harmony and perfection will be attained, and this now sin-cursed earth will take her place among the harmonious worlds that revolve around the sun. May every reader of THE RESTITUTION be an overcomer of the world, that at last we may inherit all things is the prayer of your brother.

IRA FORBES.

Dear Restitution:

THE RESTITUTION is a paper we prize very highly; it makes its weekly visits in our home. We read it and study it and it is a great help in reading and studying the Scriptures; often times throws light upon certain places in the Bible that seemed dark and hard to understand. We are trying to live in the ways of the Lord, and our daily prayer is that he look upon us poor, weak and erring mortals with mercy and that his blessings will be on us throughout this life. We know that eternal life is the gift of God through Jesus Christ who was crucified was buried and rose from the dead and is now at the right hand of the Father, that he will return and take unto himself all those that have been faithful and have done the will of God. He has told us that if we have put on Christ, then are we Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. This promise is life eternal with Christ in the kingdom. How thankful we are that God in his mercy has provided a way of redemption, and if we do his will, dear brethren, then when Christ shall come in his glory we will stand with him and be with him always. This is a blessed thought and worth all our time and money we use in his service. May it be the lot of each one that has taken upon themselves the all saving name to share in the coming glory.

W. O. STEFFA.

Dear Restitution:

I have taken THE RESTITUTION for over one-half of a century, under its different names, and probably shall as long as we are able to read it. God grant us all grace and wisdom that we may have an abundant entrance into his coming kingdom.

L. W. PAGE.

Dear Restitution:

I cannot think of doing without THE RESTITUTION, for it is all the preaching I have. It is a great comfort to me to read the letters from the dear brothers and sisters that are isolated and alone as I am.

A. B GRIFFITH.

To the Household of Faith:

Though few and scattered abroad over the land yet we seem very close together in faith and love. Are we as strong in faith and hope as we were one year ago, or have we grown cold and indiffrent? Oh and thought! Let us start in the New Year, striving to gain that which is worth far more than all this vain world. What is in this world, does it satisfy? No. If it did how long could you enjoy it, who knows? We have no assurance of an hour. Let us so live that we may be worthy of eternal joy in an everlasting kingdom at the appearing of the blessed King. Let us be ready.

B. FRANK SKEELS.

Dear Little Flock.

Another year has gone by on swift wings since our last "Love Feast" yes just think of it, one more year cast behind us forever! We can never recall the year 97 neither can we change any action or deed done in that time, we can pray forgiveness for the past wrongs, and watch for the temptations that are waiting at the door of 98. (Yes they will come in with the new year.) Prayer is a great and grand privilege but we should Watch as well as pray as the night of doubt and sin advances and be ready for the dawning of that beautiful endless day. The Eastern horizon is already sending out rays of the coming light so we know the hill-tops will soon be bathed in the glorious light and splendor of God's eternal love. May the time hasten.

Your Sister,

LAURA M. SKEELS.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I am thankful for this opportunity of witnessing that I am on the Lord's side and striving earnestly with his help to continue faithful. Though at times my faith falters and doubts arise within my heart, I know "His grace is sufficient" for all trials and his promises are sure. His keeping power which is able to keep each of us close to the Savior's side, is ever ready to be bestowed upon us. How grand to know that he is able and willing to keep us abiding in his love, free from sin every moment and every day of our lives! My heart rejoices in the blessed thought that his great love is never-failing; that he is so anxious and longs for our fellowship and this is almost beyond our comprehension. But we know it is so, for he sent his Son to die for us, and he is ever present with us, and the "Lord delighteth in thee." I am also glad that we may know something of how much he loves us. He has given us so many words of comfort and cheer, to help us on our way; and so many promises of his constant care for us. His sympathy for us is so great and we may feel that compassion, that sympathy which is so far beyond any human sympathy for we know, that he is ever with us, that, "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about them that fear him." Why? Because he knows our many weaknesses; he knows we are in need of help and sympathy at all times and he will give us this longed for rest, here if we but consecrate all to him. Oh what a a privilege to be a servant of such a Savior as this. May he give us more faith to take him at his word, to trust in him more fully, that we may come to know something of this wonderful love.

Lovingly,

LETTIE BARNES.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Notice.

WILL our friends please remember that we do not have the books and tracts at this office that are advertized by Brother Joblin, or Brother Wiley Jones. Do not send to this office for them, but send to their address as given in the advertisement. This will save both trouble and delay. PLEASE REMEMBER.

"Hath Everlasting Life," No. 4.

"He that believeth on the Son, hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son, shall not see life." John iii. 36.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

Teacher. Is there anything to be known in order that we may have (zoe aionios) "life eternal?"

Carrie. There is. See John xvii. 3: "This is life eternal (zoe aionios) that they might know thee, the ONLY TRUE God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

Teacher. Does that mean that we are to believe that JESUS, himself, is the ONLY TRUE GOD?

Carrie. By no means. It says, know THEE, the only true God, AND Jesus Christ," whom the only true God "has sent." The one sending, and the one sent cannot be the same.

Teacher. The reason why I ask this question is, I recently heard Dr. Henry, Pastor of La Salle Ave Baptist Church, Chicago, deliver two discourses in Wilson's Gun, on the Deity of Jesus," in which he asserted his belief in the Trinity, and also that there was only one God, and that Jesus was that one God. His language was: "Jesus of the New Testament, is the Jehovah of the Old Testament." Again, he said: "Should any ask me what Jesus meant, when he said: 'He that hath seen me hath seen the Father,' he said he meant exactly what he said, that he was in reality the Father, the Jehovah of the Old Testament. But the text quoted by Carrie, shows that the way to (zoe aionios) life everlasting, is to "Know Thee, the only true God, AND Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." The conjunction "and," separates between the "only true God" and Jesus Christ, as the one "sent" by the "only true God," and a knowledge of BOTH is essential to the obtaining of (zoe aionios) life everlasting. Are there other passages which show the distinction between the "ONE GOD" and "Jesus Christ?"

Carrie. Yes, Very sharpones. See 1 Tim. ii. 5: "There is ONE GOD, and ONE MEDIATOR between God and men, the MAN Christ Jesus." Notice "there is one God" and also "one Mediator," and this "one mediator" is "the MAN (not the God) Christ Jesus." If Jesus is "the Jehovah of the Old Testament," how could he officiate as a mediator between himself and man? A mediator stands between two parties.

Teacher. Why did he stand as a mediator between the "one God" and "man?" It was that man may have (zoe aionios) life everlasting, was it not?

Albert. It was. Common sense teaches that he could not at the same time be the JEHOVAH of the Old Testament, and a "MAN" officiating as a mediator between Jehovah and man. Jehovah never could become a man, neither could man aspire to be Jehovah. Such teaching blocks the way to a knowledge of "the only true God and Jesus Christ," so essential to the obtaining of (zoe aionios) life everlasting.

Teacher. Dr. Henry described Jesus as being "co-equal, co-eternal and co-existent with the Father."

Albert. To be co-equal, etc., requires that there be a separation or a contrast as to equality," etc., could not be drawn. Dr. Henry described Jesus as being "God," "Jehovah," "the Father," "the Almighty." In Eph. iii. 14, says: "I bow my knee unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." Paul did not seem to realize that Jesus was the Father, as Dr. Henry says, or he would have known that if he bowed the knee to Jesus, he would be bowing the knee to the Father, but he says, "I bow my knee unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." The relationship of Father and Son, excludes the idea of the Son being "CO-EXISTENT," and coeternal with the Father. Who ever heard of a son being as old as his FATHER? and also co-existent with his Father? yet this is the egregious nonsense some theologians will make to sustain a dogma of their creed.

Teacher. We are told that "God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost," are all three co-existent.

Lucy. Yes, I know we are, but God the Father "the Jehovah of the Old Testament," flatly contradicts it. See Isa. xlv. 5: "I am the Lord, and there IS NONE ELSE: there is NO GOD BESIDE ME." As God, the "Jehovah of the Old Testament, says decisively, "there is NO GOD beside me," what becomes of Dr. Henry's teaching, there is "God the Son and God the Holy Ghost," beside him. Why will such preachers contradict God?

Teacher. Is there any other passage of Scripture that is as plain as the one you have just quoted?

Lucy. There is. See Isa. xliv. 6, 8: "I am the first and the last, and beside me there is NO GOD. * * * Is there a God beside me? Yea, there is NO GOD. I know NOT ANY." Trinitarians say, they know of two others beside him. In one breath they say there is "God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost," and in the next breath they deny it, by saying there is only one God, and immediately contradict that by affirming a trinity of Gods. A contradictory mauling up of words which is entirely devoid of the least grain of common sense. No amount of theological tinkering can make three one, and one three.

Teacher. Jesus ought to know whether he is the second person (or God) in the trinity, or not. What does he say?

Lucy. See Mark xii. 29: "Jesus said, the first of all the commandments is, "Hear O Israel, the Lord our God is ONE Lord." Take this in connection with 1 Cor. viii. 6: "To us there is but ONE GOD the Father." Here the "Father" is pointed out as being that "ONE GOD." Dr. Henry says, there is "God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost," as well. Which of the two will you believe, God's Word, or the tradition of men brought down to us from the Roman Catholic Church.

Teacher. We have seen that the relationship of Father and Son precludes effectively the teaching that the Son can be co-existent and co-eternal with the Father. Common sense alone would suggest that. I want to ask in what way the teaching that Jesus was co-existent with the Father, and in point of fact is himself "the Father," "the Jehovah of the Old Testament," affects the doctrine of (zoe aionios) through Jesus?

Arlon. We read: "As the Father hath life (zoe) in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself. The Father is the Original One, in whom alone was inherent life, and next we read "so hath he GIVEN TO THE SON to have life (zoe, not psuche) in himself." Now the Son could not be the Father, nor the Father the Son, each must sustain his own relationship. Now, the Father gives the inherent life he alone possessed, to his Son. Then there must have been a time when the Son did not have (aionios zoe) everlasting life, which was alone resident with the Father. The Son must exist as a Son, before the Father could convey a gift to him, and previous to receiving the (aionios zoe) everlasting life, as a GIFT from his Father, he possessed the (psuche) soul, or animal life, from his mother.

Teacher. So far, so good. But has not God a plan to convey the inherent (zoe) life he has given the Son, to others, who may be worthy of receiving (aionios zoe) everlasting life?

Arlon. He has. See John xvii. 2: "Thou (the Father) hast given him (the Son) power over all flesh, that he should GIVE (aionios zoe) eternal life to as many as thou hast given him." He derived this power from his Father.

"Ye will not come unto me (the Son) that ye MIGHT have life." John v. 40.

Destroy the literal individual relationship of Father and Son, by the foolishness of trinitarianism, and you destroy the God-given channel of (aionios zoe) everlasting life to the world of believers.

Teacher. Appellations of Deity are ascribed to Jesus, in the Scriptures, are they not?

George. Yes, we find that to be the case.

Teacher. If he is not the Deity, the Jehovah of the Old Testament, how shall we understand them?

George. Ascriptions of Deity are given to those through whom God manifests himself. In proof I will give a few passages of Scripture. See Ex. xxiv. 1 "And he (Jehovah) said unto Moses, come up unto the Lord, thou and Aaron, and Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel, and worship ye afar off. and Moses alone shall come near unto the Lord; but they shall not come nigh, neither shall the people go up with him. * * * Then went up Moses and Aaron, and Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel, and they SAW THE GOD OF ISRAEL."

Teacher. This is plain language. "they SAW the God of Israel." How do you make that represent falsely?

George. Connect this with John i. 18: "NO MAN hath seen God at ANY TIME." That will cover the first quotation.

Teacher. That looks like a direct contradiction. George. And so it would be, if Scriptures did not explain themselves. See Num. xii. 8. "With Moses I will speak mouth to mouth, (how) even APPARENTLY, and not in dark speeches, and the SEMBLETHE of the Lord shall he BEHOLD." Hence the "God of Israel" he "saw," and spoke with "mouth to mouth" was "the SEMBLETHE of the Lord," "the God of Israel."

Teacher. Who was it?

George. See Acts vii. 38: "This is he, (Moses) that was in the church in the wilderness, with the ANGEL which SPAKE to him in the Mount Sinai, and with our Fathers; who received the lively oracles to give us." Hence "the GOD OF ISRAEL," which they saw, was "the ANGEL which spake unto him."

He was a manifestation of the Deity, and as such he used the title of Deity.

Now, as Jesus was God manifest in the flesh, in a higher and grander sense than an "angel," he being his only begotten Son, in whom dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead, even his words and works he said were not his own, but that his Father worked and spake through him, it was no wonder that appellations of Deity were ascribed to him, yet those appellations did not signify that he was the Father, the Jehovah of the Old Testament, any more than the "angel" was "the God of Israel."

Review. No. 1.

The Messenger. A Magazine....specially advocating the kingdom of God, the Return of the Lord Jesus, and the Hope of Eternal Life. Editor R. K. Strang, Glasgow, Scotland.

HOW DID THE LORD JESUS VIEW HIS MESSIAHSHIP?

The above is the title of an article by G. G. Mitchell in the Messenger for September, 1897. It professes to be supplementary to one in October, 1896, and seeks to supply additional evidence in support of what I term a complex Messiahship. The article appears to me to entirely fail in its object, but the reader will judge.

2. With the profession of Catholicity as against "the common restricted idea of royalty in relation to his Christhood," the article is in certain respects extremely one-sided. There is an obliviousness of certain plainly stated truths in relation to our Lord, coupled with a readiness to perceive certain others which seem to chime in with the design of the article. Notably in the former category are the Lordship and the Priesthood of Jesus. The first mentioned formed a conspicuous element in the Apostle Peter's address on Pentecost. "God hath made Jesus ... both Lord and Christ." This Lordship, whatever be its significance, is manifestly quite distinct from the Messiahship; but it is not given in the article under consideration. There is not even the faintest glimmer of light in it to indicate the possibility that this Lordship may have any share in expounding any of the many sayings and doings of Jesus in relation to his mission, as "to whom all power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." This plain statement even is ignored.

3. Let us look at an illustration. The chief element in the mission of David the son of Jesse was certainly his royalty. He, too, like Jesus, was "Jehovah's Anointed." But David was also more than a king; he was a prophet, and also a poet—"the sweet Psalmist of Israel." It is quite unwarrantable to treat the Messiahship of Jesus as is done in the article, as it would be to make a selection (if it were possible) of the general sayings of David, and to weave them all into his kingship.

4. I have no desire to characterize the article severely, although I regard its vital elements in it that really merit no milder judgment than what I ventured to offer in the October, '96 article, entitled, "What did the personal converts of Jesus believe?"

5. In the first paragraph of the article it is said, "Let any one call to mind how frequently Jesus found occasion to correct, reprove, or instruct those about him concerning their mistaken ideas and beliefs about Scriptures matters—the law, the Prophets, the Kingdom, and kindred subjects," etc. But is a matter of such importance as" etc., say, or rather, give the instances, especially such as apply to his disciples' "mistaken beliefs" concerning the "kingdom;" for this is really want the purpose of the article requires. One really fails to see what is intended by "those about him," or what "the Law, the Prophets.....and kindred subjects," have to do with such an enquiry. I have tried to "call to mind" instances of what I have suggested, and I venture to affirm that there is not so much as one instance of our Lord "correcting a mistaken belief" of any one of "those about him," as to the nature of "the kingdom."

6. The only distinct instance given in the article of a "mistaken idea" on the part of his disciples, is this, "He reproved them for not knowing more than they did of the character of the work which he then had to do. They ought to have known the Christ was to suffer before his glory." This is true; and might even be put much more strongly. But the real question here is, Does this show that "the Lord Jesus viewed His Messiahship" differently from his disciples? This suggests another question, Did the suffering and death of our Lord pertain to his kingly office or to his priesthood? The crux of the whole matter is just here. What did his Royalty, his Lordship, and his Priesthood respectively embrace? I have already shown from the Apostle Peter's words on Pentecost that his Lordship is distinct from his Messiahship. His Priesthood, again, was conferred in a special manner by "the word of the oath" of Jehovah, and that not according to the order of Aaron, but "after the order or "similitude" of Melchizedec." Aaron was anointed, but there is no record of the anointing of Melchizedec, either as king or priest, for he was both. A due regard to these facts is sufficient to show that the Priesthood of our Lord was not due to his Anointing or Messiahship. This will also explain his allusions to his sufferings and death, as when he said "the Son of Man is come not to be ministered unto but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." So also his sympathy, "his help and solace," his "seeking and saving the lost," his invitation—"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." To apply the sufferings of the Messiahship and not to his Priesthood, seems to me to show an entire failure to distinguish between those that are. The pre-eminent the priest-hood [illegible]

7. Before noticing some arguments in detail, it may be admitted that there are some statements in the article that are true enough in themselves. The question is as to what may be their value for showing "our Lord's views of His Messiahship? If the article had been headed—How did the Lord Jesus view his Mission as a whole? there would have been less lack of point and clearness throughout its seven pages.

8. Much stress is laid on the alleged disappointment felt by the disciples at the humble circumstances in which our Lord appeared, and at the non-fulfilment of their hopes of the established of the promised and expected kingdom. "He deeply disappointed many, even some who were strongly disposed towards him." If this is meant to apply to the period previous to our Lord's death, the only evidence offered in the article, is the statements of his avowed enemies, and the messengers from John the Baptist while in prison. The former asked, "How long dost thou cause us to doubt? If thou be the Christ tell us plainly." The insincerity of this demand—as if telling them plainly would satisfy them—is apparent, but ignored in the article. For what is Lord's reply—"I told you and ye believed not." John x. 25. The context shows who these were—"They took up stones again to stone him." They were the supporters of the ruling party who plotted his destruction, and at length succeeded. The fact is the article fails to recognize one of the plainest features of our Lord's times, namely, that there were three distinct classes he had to do with. (1) This ruling party; (2) the multitude; and (3) the disciples. The first class—"The chief priests and the scribes—sought how they might take him by craft, and put him to death." But they said, not on the feast day lest there be an uproar of the people." These last were the multitude. The second class mentioned,—"the common people who heard him gladly." These are not to be confounded with another "multitude." —Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude, with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders of the people." This rabble it was who cried out to Pilate, "If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend".....Away with him, crucify him." This class was well apostrophised by our Lord as "the children of them who killed the prophets; who had taken away the key of knowledge, entering not in themselves, and hindering others who would. So much, then, for this first proof of disappointment on the part the disciples.

The mother's work is such that it demands continual advancement in her own life, in order that she may lead her children to higher and still higher attainments.

Within eighteen months famine and pestilence have killed 8,000,000 people in India.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Bible.

'Tis a ray of purest light,
Beaming through the depths of night,
Brighter than ten thousand gems,
Or the costliest diadems.

'Tis an orb—more radiant far
Than the fairest evening star:
Yea, the sun outshining even
When it rides midway in heaven.

'Tis a fountain pouring forth
Streams of life to gladden earth:
Whence eternal blessings flow,
Antidote for human woe.

'Tis an ocean, vast and clear,
In which rays divine appear,
Bearing truth, the choicest store
Ever borne the wide world o'er.

'Tis a mine, far deeper, too,
Than on mortal ever trod;
Search we may for many years,
Still some new, rich gem appears.

Blessed Bible! Precious Word!
Boon most sacred from the Lord;
Glory to his name be given
For this best, rich gift of heaven.

Thoughts for Skeptics.

If the Bible is not a good rule of life, why not provide us with a better one? We have "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" and "All things whatsoever ye desire that men should do to you, do ye even so to them," in the Bible. Now if you have anything better produce it, or desist o finding fault with the Bible.

The idea that nothing is to be taken on trust, is a favorite one with many, and is as absurd as other infidel arguments. Infidels talk of the Bible, but how much have they read of it? They talk of the Koran, the Shasters, and a lot of other near-Zenish trash, which they could not read a page of to save their lives. They argue about astronomy, when they do not know enough to calculate an eclipse of the moon; they disprove the Bible by geology, of which they know nothing except what some one of a dozen wrangling geologists has told them; they say the New Testament was compiled by the council of Nice, when all history shows that that council never had anything whatever to do with the matter; they quote learnedly from authors which they never saw, and could not read if they should see them; and then they pretend that they cannot be humbugged by pious cant, and that they receive nothing without due investigation.

By this rule they would not ride in a steamboat till they could build an engine; would not believe the time shown by a watch, until they knew how to make one; would not call a doctor to a croupy child till they had explored the whole domain of medicine with its "ologies" and "pathies;" would not send a telegram until they understood telegraphy; would not do anything till they knew everything.

On a thousand occasions in common life we are forced to consult those who are honest, truthful, and experienced in matters with which we are unacquainted. We do not surrender our judgement to them, but our judgement tells us that their opinion and their experience is worth our careful consideration. In nine-tenths of the affairs of life, we depend for guidance at the first, upon those who are better informed than ourselves. To do otherwise would be accounted folly in business;—why is it less foolish in matters of religion? Surely prejudice is a poor guide; and a candid weighing of the facts in common life would silence many of the arguments of which infidelity boasts.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works of Philadelphia, Pa., have received the largest foreign order for locomotives recorded for many months, the value of which aggregates over $600,000. The contracts call for 22 locomotives for Cuban Railway; 10 for Grand Trunk, Canada; 24 freight and passenger locomotives for Central Brazil; one truck locomotive for Cia Penoles of Mexico; one for Norwegian State Railway.

It is said that of the eleven millions of people in Mexico, eight millions never saw a copy of the Bible.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth Marshall Co. Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

"A RELIGION that does not govern a person now will not save him by and by. That which does not distinguish a man from a wicked world, now will not distinguish him from the perishing world of mankind by and by."

ONE of the members of the British Government recently said that England would resist the closing of Chinese Ports even to the extent of war, and the fact that Russia has declared its purpose to evacuate Port Arthur as soon as matters between Germany and China have been settled, shows that the miles of Men of War scouring the Jubilee year convinced the powers that they are in no shape yet to tackle that maritime power.

ANY one interested in the Gold fields of Alaska should send to Mr. W. B. Kniskern, General Passenger Agent of the Chicago and Northwestern R. Any reader of this paper can get one free by simply applying as above stated.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Daily Mail telegraphs from Vienna that the Anti-Semitic Amazons, which is continuing to increase in numbers and in influence. Prince Liechtenstein spoke at the meeting and said that it was a scandal which must be abolished; that Jewish Children should attend the same schools as Christians. Other speakers advocated the rigid boycotting of all Jewish shops. It is a significant sign of the fervor of the anti-Jewish feeling in Vienna that a Jewish firm announces its insolvency today.

"THE eclipse of the sun as seen at Bombay, India, was accompanied by a rapid fall in temperature. An earthy smell pervaded the air, and the scene resembled a landscape under a wintry English sun. The duration of totality was two minutes, with a marvelous corona of pale silver and blue. The native astrologers predicted terrible calamities. The natives swarmed to devotional exercises, and there was general fasting, but no great alarm. The Nizam of Hyderabad liberated fifty prisoners, giving each a gift of money and clothes."

We recently read of a traveller in Ceylon accompanying a missionary on his pastoral visits As they were walking through the garden he noticed that some of the cocoanut trees were marked "X". On enquiring why they were so marked, he was told that every "X" tree was devoted to the Lord. The traveler also noticed that the missionary's wife, as she cooked the monday meal, threw a handful of rice into the pot for each member of the family, and when two handfuls into another pot standing near. The traveler asked why the two handfuls were put into the other pot? The wife replied: "That is the Lord's rice pot and I remember him when cooking each meal."

REFERENCE to the disturbed condition of Crete and other parts of the Ottoman Empire, the Scotsman says: "Behind Crete stand rank after rank of other troubles and difficulties that have been growing in number and dimensions while the peace negotiations have been creeping towards conclusion. In Albania there is armed rebellion. The whole of the Balkan Peninsula is, indeed, in a state of more threatening unrest than was the case when the fighting closed, and as for the adoption and application of the much spoken-of Turkish reforms in Armenia and elsewhere, the subject is one that must fill those interested in it with something like despair. The rising in Macedonia is very serious. Turkish troops have come into collision with the insurgents, and there has been much bloodshed on both sides. Large bodies of Turkish reinforcements have been hurried into the disturbed districts."

IT is our pleasant duty to announce that five more soyal traitors join on the Saving Name and become members of Church of God in Cleveland on Sunday Jan. 16th. And we scarcely need say it was another day of rejoicing —especially so as four of them belonged to the Senior Class in the Sunday School, and three of the daughters of believing parents,—one formerly connected with the Methodists,—and the fifth is the daughter of our beloved Bro. Crick. She had for some years been a member of the Disciple Church or Kingdom, which by no means filled the bill of God's Kingdom. It gives us pleasure to introduce to the Church scattered abroad Sister Hattie Pate, Sister Sarah Nichols, Sister Jessie Nichols, Sister Lizzie Swearingen and Sister Cowells, praying that they may all adorn the doctrine of Christ, and be found with him in peace at last."

Jesus Coming to Reign.

A missionary from China named Timothy Richard, was taking a furlough in England recently, and at a missionary meeting at Stockwell Orphanage he related the following in evident. He said: One day two Mohammedans came to my house in Pekin, one was an officer of the Government and the other a high priest of the Mohammedan religion . . . We talked and talked and talked about religion in every aspect, almost, but I felt persuaded that they had some special object in calling, but I could not get it out of them. When I returned their call I sat and talked about two hours to try to find out what they were after, but I did not succeed. When I rose to go I said to them, "Now, if I read your minds aright, you are men who fear God, and who are searching for higher truth, but you have not asked me any particular question that I can lay hold of. Won't you be frank, and tell me exactly what it is that you want?" Then to my astonishment, what do you think they said? Our sacred books say that Jesus Christ is coming again, to reign; and we want to know by what signs he is to be known? for we want to be amongst the first to receive him!" We are wondering if he could give them anything approaching to a Scriptural answer? It is extremly doubtful, although quite possible; for many foreign missionaries have taught millenarian views when they got away from the denominational hush.

The above incident taken together with the fact that more than four hundred thousand volumes of the Scriptures were issued in China last year, confirms the opinion we have expressed before, that the Bible is doing an uplifting work in the dark corners of the earth, although not taking them out as a people for his name, to rule the world in the age to come in righteousness. It may pave the way to a hearty reception of Earth's new rulers when the mid-heaven proclamation is made, "Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his Judgment is come, and worship him that made heaven and earth and the sea and the fountains of waters." Oh how the restlessness of human governments makes us long for the new era thus to be introduced.

Questions Answered.

An isolated Sister wishes to know how to explain John viii. 51 in harmony with our faith respecting man's nature and destiny. It says, in the words of Jesus, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, if a man keep my sayings, he shall never see death."

We think we can help the Sister by reminding her

1. That natural life is derived from the first Adam, and then he had no other life.

2. That the first Adam brought death to himself and his race by sin,—and that death means loss of the only life he had to lose.

3. That God has never instituted a system of means by which mankind can EVADE death. It passed upon all. In Adam all die, whether good or bad, obedient or disobedient

1. That the words or sayings of the Second Adam are spirit and they are life, that is, they are means of obtaining spirit nature instead of Adamic nature, or divine life in place of the human nature of existance; and that he has been made a quickening spirit.

5. That he will exert his quickening power upon those dead ones in whom the spirit while they lived in natural life, see Romans viii. 11. And this is further proven by Col. iii. 2, 3. It says of the Colossians, "Your life (future life, of course) is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life (future life) shall appear then shall ye also appear with him in glory." because then imparts to them his own everlasting nature, so that they can after that never see death,—or literally, never die.

The last death being inevitable,—whether the saying of Jesus or not, then certainly John viii. 51 refers to future life, not the present life. The words of Jesus respecting Abraham seeing his day (v. 56) confirm this, and invite us to look ahead to the day that made Abraham glad, and the benediction of the forevermore is pronounced

Another correspondent wants to know if it is wrong, "to quote profane or vulgar language spoken by others." In our opinion the correspondent supposes that it is wrong, if he is in the habit of At any rate people are near the danger line when they debate as to the right or the wrong of an act. But enough in this direction.

Can a person quote profane language without violating the commandment of Jesus in Eph. iv. 29? It says, "let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth; but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace (favor) unto the hearers." We do not see how a Brother or Sister could repeat profane language without violating this positive command.

We are persuaded that one given to do that does not realize how exceedingly sinful this sin is in the sight of God,—nor how such a habit blunts the moral perceptions, and tends to the classification of sin, such as big and little ones. As all this is foreign to the Word of God; the classification is made by the rules of social life, and are altogether wrong. We never saw a graduated scale of sin in the book of God. What are reckoned little sins by men are reckoned and catalogued with those considered the vilest, by God. No one will say that there is any good to the use of edifying that it may minister favor to the hearers in repeating the foul language of others?

No one will deny that we are commanded to abstain from all appearance of evil. Is there not an appearance of evil in quoting profane language?

The Spirit in Peter says, Just Lot was vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked, and will not every just (first one be vexed with filthy conversation?

And now the question is, can a justified one consistently quote profane language? The answer is, no! It is the Spirit's answer. Hearing him through the beloved Paul; "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." 1 Cor. vii. 1. And again, in Eph. v. 4, we are told not to let filthiness, nor foolish talking nor jesting be named among us as saints, which are beneath you, but rather giving of thanks." But a Justified one may do it from carelessness, or inadvertiness, or moral obtuseness or from any other cause; and he may obtain pardon by confessing, and forsaking, and asking for it in Jesus' name.

If these lines come under the eye of any one who is not morbidly apprehensive, and loves to be singular, and studies oddity, let him be careful,—we have been talking of a habit you are peculiarly liable to: and we want to say in conclusion that no one can touch a filthy thing without defilement.

Editor Restitution:

This week's RESTITUTION has come with many pleasant words of comfort. I am at Sister Sipe's; commenced preaching here Dec. 26th, will close Sunday 16th inst: preached every night but four since we commenced, twenty discourses in all. have had fair attendance and good interest manifested. There are ten brethren here, an earnest, faithful little company, striving to enter in at the strait gate, and gain an inheritance in the world to come. There are some here that are almost persuaded to obey from the heart that form of doctrine delivered unto them.

I leave here for New Orleans Monday morning, will preach there if I can secure a place. From there I go to Montgomery, Alabama, then to Augusta, Georgia, then to Columbia, South Carolina, then to Wilmington, North Carolina; will preach in above cities if I can secure a place. Will preach at Newber, Goldsboro, Pollocksville, North Carolina, during the month of March; and at Hopgood the first of April, expect to visit Niagara Falls, Newark, New Jersey, during the month of April, nothing preventing

I notice a letter in THE RESTITUTION from Bro. O. G. Allard, that is to the point. Are we as a people living in harmony with our profession? A church professing to believe in the soon coming of the Master, and living as though the Master would not come for a million of years, and we knew it, and that we had the assurance that we would live on until he came; and we could accumulate wealth and enjoy it uninterrupted until the Master come, and then we could take all our wealth into the kingdom and enjoy it, but it is written, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon, by their fruits ye shall know them." Let us fear lest a promise being left us and we come short of it through being overcharged with the cares of this life, and we be found unworthy of eternal life at the coming of the Master.

Your Brother patiently waiting for and looking forward to the coming of the King of all saints.

D. M. BUDLER.

Dear Editor:

Thinking that the brethren and especially those who are acquainted with Bro. D. M. Budler would be interested to know what he has been doing since coming South, I will say that he commenced a series of meetings here at Hammond, La., Dec. 26, and continued to Jan. 16. The attendance was not large, but those that did attend seemed for the most part to be deeply interested and the interest increased to the last. The Word was proclaimed with such simplicity, earnestness and power that we have all been built up and strengthened in the faith and feel to say like Paul, "Forgetting those things that are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." By keeping this prize ever before us when we see how disappointing and unsatisfactory everything in this world is, we shall be made to long with greater earnestness for the time to come when sin, sorrow and sighing shall be done away, and God's will will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Bro. Budler goes from here to New Orleans, where we hope the way may be opened so that he may be able to present the truths of the gospel of Christ to the people. Believing that some of the seed sown here has fallen in good ground, and hoping that it may yet bring forth fruit unto everlasting life I remain your Brother in Christ.

ALBERT SIPLE.

Notice.

We have with us Bro. Zilmer, of Wisconsin, who will labor with us in the Evangelical field. We find him to be a man of rare talent, excellent qualities and zealous in the work, and he comes to us highly recommended. The evangelical committee have engaged his service for the State of Indiana and wish to place him where most needed. Any of the brethren desiring his service or knowing of a good opening will please let us know immediately.

War News.

London, Jan. 21.—The St. James' Gazette this afternoon, commenting upon the dispatch from Yokohama saying that a fleet of nine Japanese warships will leave Japan in the course of a week for Chinese waters, says:

"Japan is prepared for war. That in a nut shell is the news from Yokohama today, and it is really the first news from Japan since the beginning of the Chinese crisis. It was obvious the Japanese government had stopped telegraphic communication, which it never does except when mobilizing, the army or navy. That is precisely what it has been doing. It is almost certain that the destination of the fleet is Wei-Hai-Wei, and there is no doubt the movement means that the status quo in China, so far as Manchuria and Corea are concerned, shall not be altered by Russia or any combination of Russia's allies, in defiance of Great Britian and Japan. So long as the defender's policy is equality of opportunity in China they are in a position to enforce their claims." It further says, "Even with Great Britain a mere sympathetic onlooker, it is probable that Japan could finish off all the Russian and German warships east of Suez in short order. Great Britain, even including the Powerful, has not a vessel in the north Pacific capable of standing in battle line against three battleships Japan possesses."

Paris, Jan. 21.—The news that the French warships Bruix and Vauban have been ordered to sail immediately for China is confirmed. The two ships will sail on Jan. 21, Monday next. Admiral de Beaumont has been appointed commander-in-chief of the French squadron in the far East. He will hoist his flag on board the Vauban. The Bruix is a steel vessel of 4,754 tons displacement and 9,019 indicated horse-power. It has an armored belt ten inches in thickness, carries four 9.4-inch guns, one 7.4-inch six 5.5-inch guns, and twelve rapid-fire guns.

Berlin, Jan. 31.—The Berliner Neueste Nachrichten announces that the German warships are still sounding Kiao Chou Bay, adding that the exact site of the port is not yet fixed, and that the government intends that the construction of the commercial port shall be borne by private companies. It is further stated that one company has already been formed to construct the docks.

Pekin, Jan. 21.—The prospects of the British loan are not bright. The British and Japanese Ministers are acting in concert in the matter. The loan will be, if arranged, at 3 per cent, and will be issued at par. Colonel Varnoff will proceed to the camp of General Nichsat Lutai.

London, Jan. 23.—The situation in the far East is becoming more strained and even many English papers are admitting the appearance of a war cloud. In all probably Russo-French opposition will succeed in defeating Great Britain's loan, backed though the latter country is by the full strength of Japan.

It seems in the first place that Japan is unwilling to wait indefinitely for the payment of the war indemnity and is therefore likely to send a diplomatic note to China fixing the extreme limit in which the conditions of the treaty of Shimonoseki are to be carried out. If the money is not forthcoming in that period Japan will definitely and permanently occupy Wei-Hai-Wei, in which step Great Britain would concur provided the place in regarded as an open port for trade. The best relations possible exist between Japan and Great Britain, although up to the present no formal alliance has been concluded and none is likely to be because Japan is not part of John Bull's outfit.

London, Jan. 22.—The Sultan of Turkey has determined to spend 15,000 soldiers to Palestine in honor of Emperor William's visit there. The garrisons of Beirut and Damascus will be augmented by 5,000 men, and the Sultan will also give the Emperor a piece of ground at Jerusalem, which, according to tradition, was the site of the last supper which different Christian communities have vainly sought to acquire. It is understood that Emperor William will transfer the ground to the German Catholic missionaries.

Besides the understanding which at present exists, Japan's relations with the United States are much improved, particularly as their interests are almost identical in the far East. It is absolutely certain Japan will energetically, even at the cost of war, support her rights in China, considering she is the power which has the greatest claims on that country. While not desiring war, it does not fear it, and for weeks past the utmost energy has been silently displayed getting the army and navy fit for action. Now all is ready, and the fleet which will in a few days sail for Chinese waters will act in conjunction with that of Great Britain, and the two will thus be able to easily dispose of all other squadrons together in Chinese waters.

It should be remembered that even the best British vessels on the China station, such as the Powerful, are unable to cope with the superb battleships Japan now possesses. In two or three weeks Japan can mobilize 100,000 men and all of her navy. I believe it quite a mistake to suppose that Great Britain's relations with Germany are strained. Kiao Chou is to be virtually an open port, and the reception everywhere accorded Prince Henry and the German vessels by the British authorities on the way to China show that there is some sort of an understanding.

The war cloud now represents England and Japan versus Russia and France. Japan holds the key to the situation, and Germany is more or less of a spectator. China wants money and Britain's offer is refused it will be the turn of France and Russia. As these will demand concessions solely beneficial to themselves, Great Britain will protest. Then if these financial negotiations are carried through it will be for the British government to show whether its fleet is as bad as its bark, which the continental critics say it is not. The tone of all British Ministers in recent speeches is remarkably firm and even menacing. The army and navy are both being strengthened for the great crisis which many believe to be approaching.

London, Jan. 22.—While events are moving with somewhat dramatic rapidity in the far East and complications may any day develop a situation fraught with momentous dangers, when the known facts and position of affairs are analyzed, there is really not much reason at the present moment to suppose that a solution of the crisis will be found in a resort to war. There is reason to believe that diplomatic circles do not fear that it will be necessary to appeal to arms, unless Japan breaks from its mentors. So far as the European powers are concerned the diplomats throughout are satisfied that the Chinese question will not break the peace of the world; but, they have always feared that Japan will prove a firebrand. Unless it can be restrained from impetuous action, the departure of its fleet from Yokohama today, for Chinese waters, may prove to be the striking of a match which may lead to a dreaded conflagration.

Leaving out the possibility of war, the diplomatic game is most interesting. The Marquis of Salisbury is slow in playing his trumps; but unless Russia and France have something up their sleeves, it would appear that he has a decided advantage, for the British Premier has forced Russia to show its hand.

It no longer conceals the fact that it regards the whole of Manchuria and the Liao Tung peninsula as being its exclusive prey; but, by insisting that Talien Wan be made a treaty port the Marquis of Salisbury has countered the Muscovite designs on Port Arthur, for the latter is of little strategic value without Talien-Wan. France, of course, resents the proposition to open Nen Ning, which would clash with its exclusive interests in Tongkin, while both Russia and France are both deeply concerned in Great Britain's claim to extend the Burmese railroad into the Chinese Province of Yun-Nan. France has secured privileges in Yun-Nan which would be seriously discriminated by the British railroad diverting to the north the commerce of such a rich province, while a railroad from Rangoon to Shanghai, which would be the natural outcome of Great Britain's demands, would be a disastrous competitor of the great trans-asiatic line from Saimarcand to Port Arthur, which Russia is so laboriously constructing.

Poetry.

Old Year, Farewell!

Old passing year, adieu, adieu,
We've journeyed with you the twelve months through;
In sunshine, shade, and clouds and rain,
Over desert and o'er fruitful plain.

Old passing year, adieu, adieu,
Soon you will be numbered with the dead;
Soon you will be the grand New Year
How shall our second test appear?

Old passing year, adieu, adieu,
Have we tried to walk in the narrow way
Heavenly?
Have we [illegible] to sin,
And walk like men [illegible]?

Old passing year, adieu, adieu,
Have [illegible] twelve months
[illegible]
We can take with us to God's throne?

Old passing year, adieu, adieu,
Our watch as we've journeyed the twelve months through,
[illegible]
Have been guarded and kept by his holy power?

Old passing year, adieu, adieu,
Have [illegible] and [illegible] him true?
Have we stood to watch, and watched and [illegible]
For the coming King? Bright glory to-day

Old passing year, adieu, adieu,
Have we walked with Jesus and loved him true?
Our garments [illegible] in the blood of the Lamb and white,
As we [illegible] this year's end? Good Night.

May the coming year bring a greater light,
And lift the veil from the darkened sight
Of those who are resting in "sand-bags,"
And think their world all peace to gain.

The dying year knocks, we need
Wonder, you that we hear the need
Of the approaching year, so loud in din,
So sounding out the dirge like a funeral hymn.

Hark! now from the dark and dismal tower
The midnight bell—Twelve, the hour,
Why watch the moments speed out of sight,
Old Year, you're a last Good Night.

Sacrifices.

The earliest ideas of mankind are generally the correct ones. They probably came from God at creation, or sprang from the heart before sin entered the world. This is true of sacrifices. At first sacrifices were not connected with sin—they were not offered to cancel sin. They were a gratuity, an expression of love and gratitude. God never ordered sacrifices as a cancel of sin, otherwise salvation would have been planned through works and not through grace. Paul expresses it thus—Sacrifices "could not make him that did the service perfect as pertaining to the conscience."

God did not order sacrifices under the law of Moses. What he did do was to make rules regulating these offerings. Sacrifices antedated the law of Moses by thousands of years. Cain and Abel offered sacrifices, but not for sins. The sacrifices which Noah offered after the flood were not for any sins which he had committed, but for God's preservation of himself and family and the creatures with him in the ark. Abraham frequently "built an altar to the Lord" and made offerings, but they were the spontaneous gifts of an abiding faith in God. When he offered up Isaac it was an act of obedience and not an offering for sin. If it was a type it typified a love and obedience offering and perhaps shadowed forth God's love for man.

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son." This is the key of sacrifice. All the ancient examples of sacrifice given in the Bible it is love and gratitude speaking through the offerings. Sacrifices had long been offered before the law regulating them was given through Moses. God accepted these offerings as an evidence of the righteousness of the one making the offering and not as an evidence that they had sinned. Paul makes this clear in Heb. xi. 4. By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts." We see from this language that Abel did not offer the sacrifices for any sin he had committed, but it was a pure offering in righteousness, a gratuity, a gift of loyalty. The same is true of the offerings of Moses.

A misconception of the intent and nature of sacrifices has led to many mischievous errors which lie at the very foundation of the Atonement as it is presented to us by many teachers.

Sacrifices must be voluntary. Their true spirit and intent is set forth in the following words recorded by Moses. "Speak unto the children of Israel that they bring me an offering of every man that giveth it willingly, with his heart." The will and the affections working in one can bring an acceptable sacrifice. The first three chapters of Leviticus show over and over that all sacrifices were voluntary. "If any of you bring an offering to the Lord"—is the foundation of all the rules regulating sacrifices. No man was required to bring a sacrifice, but if he brings one it must be in the prescribed manner. "Offerings" and "sacrifices" are used in the same sense.

The law of Moses makes no provision in sacrifices for open, premeditated or willful disobedience. Transgressing any of the great commandments was considered a sin. For such transgressions there are no provisions and no cases recognized. He who was guilty of presumptious sin was put to death. Sacrifices for the expressions in ignorance or of accident were often made—not to cancel the sin but to show the good intent and the loyalty of those who made the offering.

Offerings to cancel sin were foreign to God's plan and were neither required nor accepted. David says "Sacrifice and offering thou didst not desire; Burnt offering and sin hast thou not required." Isaiah compares the people of Judah and Jerusalem to Sodom and Gomorrah in their wickedness. They too had the idea that sacrifice would cancel sin. So they brought them continually. The more wicked they became the more the sacrifices multiplied until God said "To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices to me?" "When ye come to appear before me who hath required this at your hand?" Isa. i. 11-13. Samuel says "To obey is better than sacrifice." Hosea says "I desired mercy and not sacrifice, and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings."

Israel had the wrong idea of sacrifices. Their history shows that they thought that sacrifices would cancel sin. Jehovah remonstrated through the Prophets again and again, yet the system grew until God said. "Your sacrifices and oblations shall cease." The sacrificial system as regulated by the law of Moses was not a remedial provision that God had introduced. He had only established order and pointed out a method by which the gifts would be accepted, but he had not provided a remedy for sin. The offering could not cancel sin. The sinner must die. God had by the provisions of the law only pointed out how a faithful and loyal heart might bring his offering in an acceptable manner. And thus like Abel God would accept his gift as an evidence of his righteousness. This law regulating sacrifices was for the ignorant and the innocent in conscience and intent; but no provision for the obdurate sinner. The compassion of the high priest according to Paul was "on the ignorant and on them that are out of the way" but willful sin is not mentioned.

If these offerings were a type of the offering of Christ as some claim them to be, and if these are an evidence of loyalty and love, then so too is his offering of himself, an evidence of his loyalty and love to God. If God accepted him as an offering it was not because he was a sinner, nor yet a kind of "pay up" for some other sinner, but because he had kept all his Father's commandments. It was an evidence of his love and loyalty. And because of his faithfulness God has highly exalted him to be a Prince and a Savior or Life-Giver, so that now remission of sins is preached in his name—not by sacrifice, but by repentance or a turning from sin in the sinner. Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered, and being made perfect he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him.

It was not in the act of dying alone that secured to us salvation, but in the obedience to God in all the things which led up to that death. Thus he was exalted to the Life-Giver, and this is why remission of sins is preached in his name. The offering was not to cancel any sin which he or any one else had committed, but a test of his loyalty and love, and because of faithfulness he was made Lord, and now remission comes to us, if we are faithful to him. Thus Jesus made his atonement, and it is thus (by obedience) we make our atonement—Jesus appearing in the presence of God for us, as our high priest.

The real question in regard to all sacrifices is, do they cancel sins, or were they gifts of willing and obedient hearts whose love and loyalty prompted the sacrifice? The Scriptures have plainly declared that God did not want and would not accept sacrifice to cancel sin. Obedience is declared to be better than sacrifice. Jesus was obedient. That obedience led to a Roman cross. He came to do the will of God. Obedience counts for much in the plan of redemption. "When he cometh into the world he saith [illegible] five and offering thou wouldst not, but a body hast thou prepared me. In burnt offerings and sacrifices for sins thou hast had no pleasure. Then said I, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God." Heb. x. 5-7. From this Scripture we see that Christ came not to offer sacrifice for sin, but to do God's will. In verse 9 he states that, "He taketh away the First that he may establish the Second. Here are presented two ideas in contrast. 1st. The idea of cancelling sin by sacrifice. 2nd. The idea of doing God's will. The first could not accomplish forgiveness. The second was established by Jesus who did the will of God, and Calvin in his obstinacy even unto death, became the author of remission and salvation. Remission comes through his obedience. It was not the death of Christ that God approved, but the obedience which led to that death. The whole course—the sinless conduct of Christ in all his actions culminating in the cross, secured redemption to all who will obey him.

This great offering may be considered in yet another light—an offering of God in behalf of man and to show his love to us. Not to be considered as an offering to cancel man's sin, but an offer of eternal life. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." Man's offerings show man's love and loyalty to God, while God's offering of Christ was in man's behalf and shows God's love to man. This is God's sacrifice. He gave his Son up to die because he loved the world, but the rulers were the murderers.

The law contained a shadow of good things to come, but not the very image of those things, for it did not make the comers thereunto perfect. It was not possible that the blood of bulls and goats should take away sin. It was not a remedial system then, and could not be for, mankind are sanctified by doing the will of God. Christ did that will, and being made perfect through suffering he was crowned with and became the author of eternal life to all who obey him." Heb. ii. 9, 10; Heb. v. 9.

The effect is often taken for the cause, and while the Apostles sometimes ascribe salvation to his death, they are always careful to tell us the steps which led to it. Even his blood is said to give us redemption, and this is readily understood when we remember that the blood represents the life, and so Paul says, "We shall be saved by his life." Rom. v. 7-10.

"The sacrificial system has passed away." Yes, men say so, but is it true? What reason can be given for the assertion? Does not God receive offerings and sacrifices now if made in faith by his dutiful, loving children? The sacrifice of labor, of time, of means, of talents all—and even animals are they not accepted if offered by faith as did Abel? Has God changed? Are we not entreated to offer the sacrifice of our lips, and our bodies as a living sacrifice? Rom. xii. 1. Is not the sacrifice of a broken spirit, a broken and a contrite heart yet received? Psa. li. 17. Will there not be offerings of animals in the ages to come? Zech. xiv. 21; xlv. 17-25. Will not the Passover be fulfilled in the kingdom of God? If we compare the law regulating sacrifices in the coming ages suggested by Ezekiel we shall find God has not changed. The ten commands given to Israel will be the same ten when they are written in the heart under the new covenant after the Redeemer comes to Zion. Ezekiel declares there will be an altar in the new Jerusalem upon which offerings are continually made. Read Ezek. xlii. xliii. These Scriptures can have no reference to any past temple or Priest. The Messiah takes the kingdom, the land is divided, the tribes reinstated, the temple rebuilded, the altar, the priests and the service all there, and the high and holy lessons of love and sacrifice will then be taught mankind. Then the people will make to God an offering in a clean vessel.

God is not so short-sighted that he made a law and then afterward made one he liked better. He has no two laws nor two plans. The law regulating sacrifices was God's recognition of righteousness and love in those who offered them and he has not changed. He still receives our offerings if made in righteousness, but not as a sacrifice to cancel sin.

Yours for obedience.

Dear Bro. Underwood:

OUR LOVE FEAST.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in the Lord:

The writer of this having been in darkness, came out of the Catholic church, followed for a time Robt. G. Ingersoll, baptized into the Disciple church, and having the courage of his convictions, stepped out on the Lord's side, and the Kingdom of God which is Christ, and accepted the precious truth was then [illegible] it [illegible] because [illegible] Christ.

[illegible] Peter says, "Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear." Paul exhorts us to put on the whole armor of God that we may be able to withstand the adversary, and have our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Paul exhorts us to choose Abraham's part and [illegible] for the want of a preacher.

Dear Brothers and Sisters are you not of the disciples of Jesus? He [illegible] "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." "Now do you call [illegible] preaching? Paul says preaching was foolishness to them that perish, but unto us which are saved it is the power of God." Separate yourself from the world, and follow Christ. I John ii. 15, "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him."

Work with Christ. I Cor. iii. 9. "For we are laborers together with God: ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building."

Wait for Christ. Luke xii. 40. "Be ye ready for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not."

Jesus says to the apostles, "Search the Scriptures." John v. 39. Apostles say, "do it daily." Acts xvii. 11. What would be the result? Prov. ii. 3-5, "Yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding. If thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures; then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord and find the knowledge of God." Matt. v. 6, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." Jas. i. 5, "If any lack wisdom let him ask of God." Is there anything more you desire? Then read Phil. iii. 15. "Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded, and if in anything ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you." We can only walk in the light as we are willing to walk by it. "Can two walk together except they be agreed." The time is short. The day of grace will soon close, so be up and doing. 2 Tim. ii. 15, "Study to show thyself approved unto God." Is this and you want [illegible] for a preacher, you will see a preaching the gospel of the kingdom yourself. Paul plants Apollos waters, God gave the increase Luke viii. 11. The seed is the Word of God. So plant the Gospel of the kingdom and let it grow and when the proper season they can water and then God will give the increase. Eccl. xi. 6. "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand; for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they shall both be alike good." Isa. lv. 11. "So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Way stand ye idle in the Master's vineyard? Send forth his Word, sow the seed and let it grow, it [illegible] a little time to mature and grow to some longer than others. Remember, salvation is by Christ. Acts iv 12. "For there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Luke vi. 46. "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"

May we all be found watching and doers of the Word, so we may have an abundant entrance into the kingdom when Jesus our Master comes, is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

Dear Restitution:

Eighty years have come and gone, and I am yet spared. O help me to praise my blessed Lord for all he has done for me. Through many trials my Savior has led me. He says he never will forsake, but to the end will go with me. What few days were allotted me, I will use them for the Lord I will visit each neighbor and give to them God's Word. There is a work for you and me while here on earth. May I prove faithful till I am called away. Then can I hear the welcome voice say to me, "Well done, enter thou into my [illegible]

Dear Restitution.

In our platform [illegible] we have another brother and a [illegible] mite. Paul said, "But exhort one another daily while it is called today, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin." And how much this applies to us as we see God's purposes ripening on every hand, and that 'knowing the time, that it is high time to awake out of sleep, for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.' I long for the time when we [illegible] with Abraham, Isaac, [illegible] all the worthies in the kingdom of God, and when every tear is wiped from our eyes and fig[illegible] I hope and trust to be [illegible] afraid. [illegible] Lord comes.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

Dear Restitution:

I will write to say I can't do without The Restitution. We are few in the faith of the coming kingdom. We do not have any preaching here oft, how I would like to go to our meeting and see my dear sisters and brothers in Christ. I went with a few sisters up in Genesee to our tent meetings. I enjoyed it very much. I have longed to meet with the sisters and brothers since I was baptized and I did not [illegible] a chance till the 29th of October. Brethren and sisters, pray for me that I may be faithful, for I am just a babe in the faith.

Your Sister waiting for coming the of the Kingdom,

AMANDA CRAMER.

Dear Restitution.

How [illegible] I have enjoyed reading of the Jewish sisters preaching in the Chicago churches. I most surely believe in the Restoration of Israel to their own land. It makes my very heart ache to see God's truth so much suppressed and spiritualized away from people who would be glad to learn the truth from their own ministers; but if they do not see it nor teach it—why it cannot be true, like priests, like people. The dear Lord will know what to do with Palestine; but they will have no Zionists in Palestine. As does Rev. Joblin says, we must be possessed with a loving and benevolent heart to be accepted of him. Glory to his name. Oh, for the spirit of prophecy and the truth as it is in Jesus. Oh, I need the prayers of God's faithful children.

Your Sister in the truth,

MRS. M. J. MANSFIELD.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

As our editor has again requested a word from all believing ones, I will add my mite by saying that I am looking for the Savior to come me[illegible] hope it may be soon, for it will be a release from all the care and oppression of this life. What a happy meeting with all the faithful ones that will be, for it is only the faithful few, those who are earnestly seeking for his coming, whom he will reward when he comes. Let us be careful and prayerful in these last days least we are weighed in a balance and found wanting. Yours in truth.

MARIE THUSSELL.

Dear Restitution:

I cannot do without the paper, it is [illegible] the precious [illegible] Christ, and all [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] dear [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Some Old Testament Portraits of the Bride.

"Come hither, I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife." Rev. xxi. 9.

The union which subsists between Christ and His people is constantly represented in Scripture as a marriage union. This idea runs through the Bible from Genesis to Revelation, through type and shadow, till the nuptials are celebrated at the coming of Christ.

It is of this union between Christ and His church or spiritual people that I want to speak to you this morning, and to trace some of the types and illustrations of it to be found in the Old Testament Scriptures. "Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning." I want to show you how the calling out of the Christian Church, although a secret hidden in the Divine mind from "before the foundation of the world," was all the same, present in the oldest days in many of the acts and lives of God's people, and is "the mystery which hath been hid in God," but "now revealed unto His holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit." And as there is no reason why it should not be clearly revealed to us, I shall take out of the Old Testament no fewer than five photographic portraits of "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife and with a necessarily brief description of each of them, submit them for your inspection; and then we shall close our meditation with a hurried glance at the Bride and the Bridegroom reigning together, as described in this chapter, on the throne of glory forever.

I. ADAM AND EVE, OR CHRIST AND THE CHURCH IN PREDESTINATION.

For the first typical traces of the mystical union between Christ and His Church we are carried back to the very source of our race where we witness the joining of our first parents Adam and Eve in holy wedlock. After the creation of Adam it was necessary that Eve should also be created. Adam yearned for a helpmeet; but Eve was already in the purpose of God, although not yet raised into existence. "It is not good that the man should be alone: I will make him a helpmeet for him him." He could not be socially complete until woman was taken out of him and given back to him (see Paradise Lost," book viii.)

And so God in His love provided Adam with Eve, upon whom his love might be placed. Through Adam she received all her dignity and position and blessings. And Adam and Eve are a type of Christ and the Church. For the purposes of God the Church is just as needful to Christ as Eve was to Adam. "It is not good that the Man Jesus Christ should be alone: I will make Him a helpmeet for Him." And as the church of believers is formed to hold high intercourse with Him in the heavenly Paradise. God left not "the first man" without a helpmeet, neither would He leave "the Second." And thus we learn that the Bride of the "Second Man" was in the design of the Almighty from all eternity. In Christ we see her united, as Eve was with Adam, with her Head and Lord. "According as He hath chosen us in Him, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love." That is a picture of "the bride, the Lamb's wife," in the mind of God—in predestination. "Before a single member of the church had yet breathed the breath of life, all were in God's eternal mind, predestinated to be conformed to the image of His Son." Just as Eve was Adam's converse, counterpart, opposite—though not opposite—his other self; so in the counsels of God the New Testament Church was necessary to complete the mystic man; and hence she is called "the fullness of Him that filleth all in all." And just as in the primeval paradise there would have been a blank in the creation without Eve, so in the paradise of the heavenlies there would have been a blank in the creation without the bride, the overcoming Christian Church.

And even the manner in which God formed Eve is significant and typical. "A deep sleep" must fall on Adam and his partner formed out of himself to share his dominion and blessedness. Is not this "deep sleep" a type of the depths of death to which Jesus descended in order to bring His bride into spiritual being? Of that dead rib, in figure, the living woman was built. It was to that awakened or risen Adam that the woman, taken out of himself, was presented: "And Adam said. This is now bone of my bone, and flesh of my flesh."

And is not all this a type of Christ and the Church? From before the foundation of the world "the bride, the Lamb's wife was in the purpose of God chosen and glorified with her Divine Bridegroom in his reign over a restored creation. But the death of the "Lamb" had to be an accomplished fact before the church could be set up. And so Christ died. "Christ also loved the Church and gave Himself for it."

And what ought to be the church's feeling in view of such a glorious position and fellowship in the new Eden of the Apocalypse? What affection Eve must have felt for her husband! What sweetness she enjoyed! What mutual confidence there must have been! What a sense of dominion! In all his dignity and in all his glory she was completely identified with him. He did not rule over her but with her. Together they were lord and lady of all creation. But Eve owed all her position and standing and dignity to him. "For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man. . . Nevertheless, neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man in the Lord." And nothing can be more conspicuous as a type than "the first setting up of man in Eden, and then viewing the woman in him, and afterwards forming her out of him, and that, too, under the figure of death, the similitude of the crucifixion of Christ. The church is quickened out of the death of Christ and becomes part "of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones." She becomes part of Himself. She will hold the very nearest place to her Lord; she will sit with Him on the throne. He shall reign, in companionship with His bride, the overcoming church, over the redeemed and regenerating nations of the earth.

II. ISAAC AND REBEKAH; OR, GOD SEEKING A PARTNER FOR HIS SON.

Leaving the first foreshadowing of the heavenly state typically enacted in Eden, in which we view Christ and the Church in predestination, we come for our next picture to the patriarchal period in which another phase of the Bride and Bridegroom is presented to us in the story of Isaac and Rebekah, or God seeking a partner for His Son. In the call of Rebekah we have a striking illustration of the bride of Christ. "The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a certain King which made a marriage for His Son." Rebekah was necessary to Isaac, as Eve was to Adam; and just as in Eve's case, she, too, was the subject of secret counsel, while yet she was in ignorance of her high destiny. Abraham would make a marriage for his son. His whole thought and plan centered in Isaac. "I will make thee swear by the Lord, the God of heaven, and the God of the earth, that thou shalt not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Canaanites; among whom I dwell. The covenants of God and the whole plan of redemption hung upon the all important point—"a wife unto my son."

And you remember how Eliezer is despatched, according to the custom, to look for the bride. But you also remember that before that, Isaac had first of all to be offered up and received in a figure from the dead. Then it was that the bride was thought of, and Abraham's servant sent off from Canaan to the far country to bring her home. And this is his testimony: "And he said, I am Abraham's servant. And the Lord hath blessed my master greatly, and he is become great: and he hath given him flocks and herds, and silver and gold, and men-servants and maid-servants, and camels and asses. And Sarah, my master's wife, bare a son to my master when she was old: and unto him hath he given all that he hath." Eliezer reveals the father and the son. He speaks of the boundless wealth of the Father. He tells the unconscious bride of the son's being endowed with his father's wealth and power by virtue of his being "the only begotten" and the object of his father's love. Jewels are given to Rebekah, and raiment Eliezer procures to her the dignity, the nobility, the splendor of both the character and position of Isaac, and the blessedness of breaking with her present connections, to be made one with that beloved and highly favoured son of his master. He tells her that all that belongs to Isaac will belong to her, if she will but consent to become one with him. And all this testimony operates so forcibly upon Rebekah's heart, that when her father says to her, "Wilt thou go with this man?" and the thought of being associated with one so noble and rich as Isaac having captivated her heart, she unhesitatingly replies, "I will go." Then she gladly leaves all and goes forth to meet the bridegroom, whom having not seen she already loves. Then the meeting. Afterwards the marriage and the two are one, and Isaac lavishes his goodness and his possessions on the desire of his heart!

I am sure you cannot fail to see the portrait of the heavenly bride in this Old Testament frame. God's seeking a bride for His Son follows exactly the lines of this patriarchal story. After God the Father had received His beloved Son from the dead, then the Holy Ghost was sent to this far country to fetch a bride for Christ. It is by telling of the Father's grace and the Savior's love that He seeks to attract the heart and draw the poor sinner away from a world of sin into a union of life and inseparableness. Jewels are displayed—the glories of Christ, the beauty of Christ, and the fulness of Christ: eminent is provided righteousness procured by the death of the Cross and the resurrection to life; and all are given to and put in the possession of the believer, who abandons his original connection and condition, like a bride leaving father and mother, and kindred and natural relations, for her husband. Believers in their mystical union as a church then become one with Christ as His bride in the most intimate and endearing of all ties: the nearest tie; and according to the custom in all ages and countries, she assumes the name of her Lord, and shares with Him all the honorable titles by which he is distinguished, as well as all the riches, glory, and happiness which he has laid up in store for her; and, like Eliezer with Rebekah, the Holy Ghost leads the bridal church along the heavenward path to meet the heavenly Bridegroom. And as the days go by and the end of the journey draws near, the longing church is looking for the coming of Christ. What a meeting it will be! As Isaac lifted up his eyes, so the loving eyes of Jesus are looking for the home-coming of His bride: and the eager, expectant bride, like Rebekah, is lifting up her eyes to catch the first glimpses of Him whom, having not seen, she already loves. By-and-by she will see Him face to face, and be like Him, for she will see Him as He is!—J. Anderson Watt.

In the Way.

Jesus, thou my Guide, my Shepherd,
Strengthen me to do thy will;
Lead me by thy side my Saviour,
Safely unto Zion's hill.

Then, yes then, with joy I'll greet thee,
Sing the song that like shall name,—
Sing the song of thy salvation,
How he lead me, How I came.

I am hoping, watching, waiting,
Looking for the coming hour;
Praying that I may be worthy,
And being in some golden shower

GOD AND ANGELS.

Teacher. Realizing the imperfect manner in which the original terms by which God is known, as rendered in our Common Version I ask the

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS,

to join in an investigation. Difficulties are made apparent when we place the following Scriptures together

Says Jesus: "No man hath SEEN God at any time."

Says Jesus: "He that hath seen me, hath SEEN the Father."

Says Jacob: "I have SEEN God face to face." Gen. xxxii. 30

These passages to a person who does not search deeper than the surface appear to be contradictory. What is the difficulty?

Earl. I have an extract here from a learned writer, which I would like to read to you, which will in some degree remove the fog:

"The names of God which occur in the Bible are not arbitrary sounds; and one of the chief imperfections of the English authorized translation, or rather version, is the slovenly manner in which all the names by which God has been pleased to make himself known to his people, have been rendered after the fashion of the Septuagint, by the two words, 'Lord' and 'God.' These words do not convey the idea of the Spirit in its use of terms. 'Lord' is of Saxon origin, and signifies monarch, ruler, governor, something supreme or distinguished. * * * It fails to represent the meaning of Ail, Eloah, Elohim, Shaddai, and Yehowah: for all of which it is often or rather most frequently, and almost generally used. The word Adon (another of the names of God used in the original) is properly enough rendered by 'Lord,' but not the other words, for which it should never be used. The common use of the word God, in the English language is as little justifiable as that of the word Lord. God, in Saxon, signifies good, a meaning which cannot possibly be extracted from any of the names recited above; God is indeed good, but that word is not a translation of any of the words before us, and when used in their stead, leaves the mind in the dark concerning the things which they were intended to convey."

Teacher. What do these original names signify?

Carrie. I will answer by reading an extract from another writer: "All, signifying strength, might, or power; Eloah, having the same signification; and Jehovah, or, more properly Yahweh, literally I-shall-be, are all names appropriated to the unnamed Deity; but Shaddai and Elohim are plural names otherwise applied. Shaddai signifies mighty or powerful ones, from Shadad, to be strong or powerful; while Elohim is the plural of Eloah, and means gods or powerful ones. Now, these PLURAL NAMES are frequently employed in the record of God's transactions WITH MEN; and it will be found they are descriptive of the angels. In Heb. i. 6, Paul quotes a statement from Psalm xcvii. 7, in which the word 'Elohim' occurs. In the Psalm it is rendered 'gods'—'Worship him all ye gods.' In Heb. it is rendered as follows: 'Let all the ANGELS of God worship him.' Here, to Paul's mind, Elohim represented angels.

Again, in Exod. iii., we have an account of the unconsumed burning bush, which God selected as a medium of communication with Moses. It is stated that Moses hid his face, and was afraid to look upon God who announced himself from the bush, as the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob;' yet in the second verse, we read, 'the ANGEL of the Lord appeared to him in the flame of fire out of the midst of the burning bush; so the AGENCY was ANGELIC, though the power was of GOD.

Again, in the instance already cited, Jacob says, that he had 'SEEN GOD face to face' while from Hosea we find that it was not the Most High God that Jacob saw, but one of the Elohim, or angels. The prophet (Hosea xii. 4) referring to the incident, says, 'Jacob in strength had power WITH GOD; yea, he had power over the ANGEL, and prevailed.'

These instances prove that 'Lord' and 'God,' as employed in the English version, do not always signify the GREAT INCREATE, but sometimes, in fact, almost generally, those glorious beings, who act and speak in HIS NAME, and with HIS AUTHORITY. Keeping this in view, many seeming difficulties made much of by unbelievers entirely disappear."

Teacher. Jesus said: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." Did he mean that he was Jehovah, or Yahweh?

Arlon. No, because he said (John i. 18): "No man hath seen God at any time," and he never contradicts himself.

Teacher. Have you Scripture evidence that he was not the Increate Yahweh?

Arlon. Yes, we read "God cannot be tempted." But with regard to Jesus we read in Heb. ii. 18: "For in that he himself hath suffered, being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted." This is a fair test. God CANNOT be tempted, Jesus WAS tempted.

Teacher. What relation does all this bear to the question of (zoe aionios) life everlasting?

Arlon. It is essential to understand the right relationship of Father and Son.

Teacher. What Scripture do you base that thought upon?

Arlon. Upon John xx. 31: "These are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the CHRIST, the SON OF GOD, and that believing ye might have LIFE (zoe) through his name." (No life apart this belief).

JESUS COULD NOT be the Father, the Jehovah or Yahweh of the Old Testament (as taught by Dr. Henry) and the CHRIST the SON OF GOD, at the same time. Neither could he be the Father at one time, and the Son at another. If we ever get life (zoe) "through his name," he must be believed as "the CHRIST, the SON OF GOD."

Teacher. Does the Bible generally carry out that thought?

Albert. Yes, sir, see John iii. 16: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, (not some one else begotten son) that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," (aionios zoe). We must believe in God's "only begotten Son," and not believe that the Jehovah of the Old Testament lost his identity as Yahweh, and become his own Son, and was his own Father. This is the nonsensical foolishness that arises from the teaching that Jesus was half God, and half man. He was born wholly man, but since his resurrection, he was given wholly the Divine nature. "As the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself," and it is the Divine purpose that the Son shall convey the same to others. Namely those who "believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God," not Joseph's son but "the Son of God." And the Son of God is not the Jehovah or Yahweh of the Old Testament, nor Yahweh the Son, their relationship is not interchangeable, and never was. God had no "begotten" Son, before Jesus' birth from Mary.

Teacher. Is the teaching that Jesus is the Jehovah of the Old Testament out of harmony with the plan of God to give (zoe aionios) everlasting life to others?

George. It is. We find the teaching of Scripture is that inherent life (zoe) originated with Jehovah, or Yahweh, he gave the same to his Son (showing there was a time when the Son did not have it) and he gave the Son a plan by which he could transmit it to others.

Teacher. Is it God's plan to give the life direct, or always through a channel?

George. While it is a gift of God, no one can possibly get it, except through the proper channel. "The gift of God is (aionios zoe) eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." God, or Jehovah, or Yahweh of the Old Testament, is the giver, and Jesus the Christ, his only begotten Son the channel. Therefore, to teach that the Jehovah of the Old Testament, and Jesus of the New Testament, is the same person, would antagonize the God-given plan to give (zoe) life to others.

Teacher. Does the doctrine of the trinity act as a cloud to obscure the vision of others with regard to the teaching of Scripture on the life question?

Lucy. Most certainly it does.

Teacher. How?

Lucy. The ransom of dying creatures required the sacrifice of a perfect life. Under the law a blemished lamb would not be accepted. The trinity represents that what they call "God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost," were three persons, who were all equal, co-eternal, and co-existent," and that Jesus was the Father, the Jehovah of the Old Testament. Now, Jehovah, the great Increate, could not possibly die, no God possessing inherent life could die. Our sacrifice must BE A PERFECT MAN, and not an Eternal God. An Eternal God could not lay aside that nature, and become a perishing, mortal man, born of a woman through natural generation. Our sacrifice was born like any other human child, the only difference being the operations of nature were set in action by the power of the Holy Spirit, in place of the will of man. Man, a perfect man could make an atonement for sin, and not a Trinitarian God.

"The Son of man came to give his LIFE a ransom for many." Mark x. 45.

"The man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all." 1 Tim. ii. 5, 6.

"While we were yet sinners Christ died (an Eternal God could not) for us." Rom. v. 8.

"HIS OWN SELF bore our sins in his own body on the tree." 1 Pet. ii. 24.

Only blind credulity could sanction the idea of Uncreate self-existent Deity could lay aside such a character, and personality, and become a mortal man by means of natural generation.

Selected.

[Selected by R. M. Reynolds.]

Some Old Testament Portraits of the Bride.

"Come hither, I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife." Rev. xxi. 9.

III. JOSEPH AND ASENATH: OR, THE CHURCH IN THE HEAVENLIES.

And now, I fear, we must take a more hurried glance at the portraits that remain. Turning over a few pages of the book of Genesis we we see another striking "likeness" of "the bride, the Lamb's wife." The story of Joseph has always been recognized as a beautiful illustration of the many phases of the story of grace. With that ancient story you are all well familiar. You remember how, when he presented himself to his brethren, they rejected him; they put him in the pit; and by their envy he was afterwards brought to the dungeon, the place of death. Then, in the good providence of God, "he was taken from prison and from judgment," and made ruler over all the land of Egypt; and not only so, for he also became the channel of blessing and the sustainer of life to Israel and the whole world

One [illegible] that I want you to note is that, when he had been exalted to this position of dignity and glory, he took to [illegible] Moses was [illegible] for [illegible] the bride [illegible] sinners who afterwards become penitent Christians. I do not say that it is wrong to find similitudes of gospel graces wherever they may be [illegible] aptly found; but perhaps the true analogy is to find in these, at first no kind, and then repentant brethren the prototypes of the remnant of Israel and Judah, who will yet, according to prophecy, "look unto him whom they pierced" and be delivered. But in the mean time their brother gets married; and the woman whom he marries is described as a strange woman. Her name was Asenath, and she belonged to what we could not call a pagan or heathen country—in fact, she was an Egyptian. All the same she became the bride of Joseph, and was intimately associated with him in his rulership and glory. It is true that she does not figure in Joseph's subsequent reception of his brethren as recorded in the story; but, nevertheless, she was his wife and must have been known as such when the brethren ultimately came down to dwell in Egypt.

Well, the exaltation of this strange wife shadows forth the Christian Church in the heavenlies in Christ Jesus. In the first picture we had the church in predestination; in the second, the church under Holy Ghost convoy; and now we see the church, as Paul describes her in Ephesians, reckoned as sitting with the fulness of the body in the heavenlies with Christ. This is the church's privilege now. There is nothing in it contradictory of what I have already showed you; it is simply another phase of our glorious redemption. Our divine Joseph presented himself to his brethren, the Jews; but they rejected him—they put him in the place of death. God exalted him; and meanwhile the bride chosen in him from the foundation of the world is, while physically on earth, spiritually "complete in him," and associated with him mystically in the heavens. "As he is, so are we in this world." It is a profound mystery indeed; but ours is an upward calling. Our Lord is in the heavens, and we are called and gathered to a risen and exalted Prince and Savior. And I repeat, this is our sacred and glorious privilege now by faith—a privilege that should give both tone and character to our whole profession, and energize us with spirituality and power for Christian service, while all the time we occupy the place of nearness and intimacy with him and his bride. It was in Egypt that Asenath became the bride of Joseph; Egypt was her native country. In Egypt, too, under a figure, the church is spiritually the bride of the Lamb; that is to say, it is while she is yet in the world—in it, but not of it. May the Holy Ghost lead us more and more clearly into the fulness of power of this wondrous truth—namely, that here and now all truly consecrated believers are seated on the throne with him unto whose hands the Father Almighty has put the reins of all earthly government, till all be brought into subjection to his sceptre!

IV. MOSES AND ZIPPORAH: OR, THE CHURCH IN THE WORLD.

And now let me show you another Old Testament portrait of "the bride, the Lamb's wife," which is the antithesis of the one you have just seen. Every Bible student knows that one of the finest types of Christ to be found in the Old Testament is Moses. That he was a type is obvious not only from his life, but also from direct Scriptural statement. "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken." That type works itself out in various ways; but I want you to see it particularly in the union of Moses with a stranger in the land of Midian. You remember the story of the priest of Midian and his seven daughters, who [illegible] Moses against [illegible] shepherds who [illegible]

[illegible] Moses was [illegible] for [illegible] who [illegible] Egyptian bride [illegible] Moses, it is the rejection of his mission: "Who made thee a prince and judge over us?" "Joseph was personally hated; Moses was officially refused."

And as these [illegible] exhibit different phases in type of Christ and the Great Deliverer, who is both Joseph and Moses combined, so their respective brides exhibit different phases of the great mystery of the Christian church. The church under the allegory of "Asenath" was united to the Deliverer in the time of his exaltation; the church under the allegory of "Zipporah" was united to the Deliverer in the time of his rejection. In plain words, Zipporah represents the Church pursuing its mission in a world that hates that mission and opposes it. Our position as true Christians is both that of Asenath and that of Zipporah. We are with our Lord in the heavenlies, where he says: "The glory which Thou gavest me I have given them;" and we are [illegible] with our Lord in the world fighting the battles of the Evangel, conscious all the time [illegible] "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world." "I in them, and thou in me." So that under the figure of "Asenath" we are a church triumphant; while under the figure of "Zipporah" we are a church militant. The deliverance which Joseph's Egyptian bride shared with him in effecting, during the famine in Egypt, in which his brethren and the whole world were blessed, is antitypically still future to the Christian church, and awaits the time of her translation or [illegible]. But the deliverance which Moses' Ethiopian bride shared with him, in bringing the Israelites out of Egypt and through the wilderness to Canaan, is antitypically the work of the church during the gospel dispensation, in evangelizing the nations for her own election and calling. It is a dispensation of election—the election of the Christian church, and notwithstanding all the church's enthusiasm and enterprise—a dispensation of universal, or even of general conversion. A type enacted by a single person could scarcely be expected to show this clearly, as in the case of Zipporah. But, all the same, the Israelitish deliverance was an election to salvation. So is the church's. This election is of a people taken out from among the nations. The church is that people; and, therefore, in a sense, all that she does, with all her missionary propaganda and effort is virtually to work out her "own salvation with fear and trembling." In the dispensation to come, in company with her Divine Consort, she will gloriously "work out" the salvation of all the nations of the earth.

V. BOAZ AND RUTH: OR, THE BRIDE REDEEMED.

The last Old Testament portrait of the bride that I have to show you, and only in a few words, is that of Ruth. She is a most interesting type, in marriage with Boaz, of the fact of the church redeemed. Ruth was a Moabitess, and therefore a stranger by nature to the covenant and promise. Death also was written on her house. A Moabitess and her own husband dead! No affair from the land of promise, [illegible] and prosperity mortgaged and [illegible] Widow [illegible] does her [illegible] Naomi [illegible] shadow [illegible] Principles [illegible] Moses [illegible] shepherds [illegible] covenant [illegible]

[illegible] the heart-broken Ruth is brought in [illegible] fearfulness of her soul to the fields of Boaz. But how gracious was her welcome there! Is she thirsty?—she may drink. Is she hungry?—she may eat. Does she glean?—handfuls of corn will be purposely left for her. But this was not all; the type of the heavenly bride's redemption had yet to be completed. And next we see her identified with Boaz in the figure of death—she lay at his feet: and what the other Kinsman was unable to perform, Boaz performed. He redeemed her to be his bride. "And Boaz said unto the elders, and unto all the people, Ye are witnesses this day that I have bought all that was Elimelech's, and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, of the hand of Naomi. Moreover, Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of Mahlon, have I purchased to be my wife, to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance, that the name of the dead be not cut off from among his brethren, and from the gate of his place: ye are witnesses this day." All the elders bare witness. Ruth, the Moabitess, once the stranger, the desolate, the object of the gleaning kindness of the reapers, now the bridal companion of the wealthy prince Boaz! Redeemed! Bought back! A welcome stranger, without house or hall, now occupying the most honored place on earth, the beloved bride of Boaz, and the mother of David! And this is the church—the Christian church—"the bride, the Lamb's wife," chosen and purchased with the sovereign price of priceless blood—redeemed from among men by her divine God and Kinsman! And surely the work is done! Nothing remains but to dress her in marriage array, issue the marriage invitations to Jew and Gentile, celebrate the heavenly marriage nuptials, place her beside her Lord on the throne, and call upon the universe to "be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready..... Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb!"

VI. THE REAL BRIDE AND BRIDEGROOM: OR, THE CHURCH IN GLORY.

And now I have done. We have been looking at some old prophetic pictures of "the bride, the Lamb's wife," during which I trust we have heard something like the angel's voice that spoke to John, saying also to us: "Come hither, I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife." The angel referred to the church in translation: he bade John look upon the real bride and Bridegroom—the church and her Redeemer-King in glory. The gospel age selects and makes ready the chaste virgin, the faithful church, for the coming Bridegroom. And in the end of the age when she has been made ready"—arrayed in fine linen, clean and white, the righteousness of the saints"—the Bridegroom comes, and they that are ready go in with him to the marriage: the second Adam and the second Eve become one in that sinless union of eternal Eden, and then the glorious work of restitution begins. Two names are given in the text to the church: one is the "bride," implying that the nuptials were not yet celebrated; the other is the Lamb's "wife," implying that she would not be a bride only, but Christ's married wife; and the use of both terms also implies that the bridal joys will be continuous throughout the unending privileges of that blessed and honorable relation. In the next dispensation—the new heavens and new earth—the church becomes the "bridal wife" of the Lamb: and then shall "the Spirit and the bride say, Come! And let him that heareth say, Come! And let him that is athirst come! And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely!" Even so, come, Lord Jesus!"—J. A. Wirt, in Morning Star.

Whatever may be his calling and its perplexities, let the father take into his home the sunnesmiling countenance and pleasant tones with which he has all lay greetest visitors and strangers.

There are now 1,000 natives of India ordained to preach the gospel to their own nations.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the universal reformation of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, present visitation of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Important Notices.

All persons sending us literature should give their name, postoffice, county and state plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in a letter is at the risk of the sender. It is only to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it for one watching and much mail must be sent almost incredible to a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittance should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

We learn that a company in London and other parts of England are forming an association for the sale of Palestinian products. The capital of the company has been fixed at £2000, in shares of £25, so as to secure a wide personal interest in the business. This step has been taken by request of the Jews in Palestine who are anxious to make their living out of the soil. This surely marks a new era in the history of that land.

THE Independent informs us that a number of pious Israelites in Southern Russia are establishing associations for the reading and study of the Scriptures both in the homes of the people and in their public assemblies. Much attention will be devoted to the prophetical books of the Old Testament, and to investigating the claims of Christians that Jesus of Nazareth has in his life and death been the fulfiller of many utterances of the prophets which have for so long been stumbling blocks to the Jews.

WE copy from "The Last Days" a prayer which was part of the Easter service held last year in the Church of St. Alban, Protestant Episcopal, London, England:—"Vouchsafe, we beseech thee to bless and hallow this image made in honored memory of the most Blessed Virgin Mary, Mother of our Lord Jesus Christ, and grant that whoever shall before it endeavor or supplicantly to venerate and honor the Most Blessed Virgin, may by her merits and prayers obtain grace in this present time and eternal glory in the world to come."

IN glancing over the items which tell us of the moral and religious condition of the world after the misrule of six thousand years, how it makes us long for the coming of the Just One. In spite of every human device for the betterment of the world's conditions, "No better, rapidly," is the unavoidable conclusion. But while the man of faith is to some extent saddened by his environment, it is at the same time a door of hope to him. They are clear indications that the long dark night of sin, and sorrow, pain and death, will soon give place to a bright tomorrow, the morning without clouds. Hail, hail happy day. May the Sun of Righteousness soon arise,—and if we sleep,—may its beams waken us to an incorruptible and glorious life,—and if found with the left-over remnant of God's children, in the twinkle of an eye we shall be changed to the faithful, a glorious prospect.

THE October number of the Jewish Era contained a letter from Joseph Rabinowitz, who for a number of years past has been preaching Jesus of Nazareth as the true Messiah, making thousands of converts in Russia and other countries. The letter is dated Kischniff, Russia, Sept. 25, 1897, and in it he says the majority of the Russian Jews confess with assurance that they have a Father who is mighty to save his people, yet "beloved for the Father's sake," and bring them back with joy to the Holy Land in due time. These orthodox Jews know assuredly that the help of Israel cannot and will not come from the hills of Switzerland at Basle, but from Jehovah, Creator of heaven and earth.....I have the pleasure to inform you that the Lord's work is progressing. My desire is ardent and I am strengthened in the Lord by the dom of God and the coming of our Lord, with great interest. May he be glorified in all that he grants me to do here, and give his increase to the seed sown in the Jewish hearts who regularly attend our synagogue.....

A PARAGRAPH in "The Christian Herald and Signs of our Times" states the appalling fact that the number of murders in the United States last year reached a total of ten thousand six hundred and fifty-two, which is an average of nearly thirty a day. Do we need any stronger proof that human affairs cannot stem the tide of iniquity that is inundating the land of Bibles, and Schools of science and art, and mechanics, and general intelligence? Have we not the proof before us that the Bible is the Book of God? More than twenty-five hundred years ago God's prophet Daniel said that many should run to and fro, and knowledge should be increased in the time of the end. That must be the time we are living in. The picture of the time of the end was not completed till Jesus compared it to the time just preceding the flood, and as it was in the days of Lot; and still further by asserting the scarcity of faith when the Son of Man is revealed, and the abounding of iniquity as the primal cause.

More Signs of the Times.

We can scarcely take up a magazine or paper without observing that the tendency of things is from bad to worse morally and religiously. Word comes to us from England that a number of young in the highest circles have founded a new religion. We quote a few sentences from their printed manifesto:—

"The kingdoms of the earth are unhappy because they have forsaken the worship of their ancient gods. When the people forget those gods who made the world beautiful and happy, the gods in their divine displeasure quitted our planet, abandoning it to the outer darkness of despair. But their celestial mercy is infinite and they have now condescended to lavish their divine effulgence once more upon the earth,—and mankind shall be led back to the gods of the divine Cæsars. Let us then turn to Olympian Jove, father of gods and men, sublime upon his ivory throne; to Phœbus, Apollo, the Lord of poetry and light," etc.

The High Priestess is said to be a very charming and beautiful lady, and is likely to secure as much adoration as any of the gods and goddesses she seeks to proclaim. A new temple has been fitted up near Holborn, and pleasant dinner parties are given from time to time in honor of Bacchus.

"Occultism in a most grotesque and monstrous form has lately come to light in Paris and other French communities, says the Literary Digest. This is particularly manifest in what is known as the "Satanist Society," or "Devil Worshippers," whose chief center of influence is Paris. Belgium is said to be permeated with this form of occultism, and even in Great Britain societies of this kind are established, where the rite of the "Black Mass" is celebrated.

The Anarchist Atheists of New York say openly and frankly, God never existed. There is no God, and never will be. In the name of freedom we mock the Jewish religion. As true revolutionists we fight against religion, the State, private and public property. These three things must be destroyed. We aim to throw off the yoke of the State under whose weight we lie by means of powder and dynamite, which we intend to use against religion, public and private property. We will take the capitalists in one hand and religion in the other and both shall go by means of dynamite and powder."

A Blind Leader.

On Sunday, Jan. 16th, Dr. Spriecher, one of Cleveland's most noted Presbyterian ministers lectured on "What do we know about a Future Life?" The newspaper reporter says he did not at first assume positively that we have lived previous to this life, but later on made a number of strong statements. He advanced the theory that the human soul is the perfection of many stages of progression,—and that he believed that the life of the lower animals was as immortal as the life of humanity, not yet perfect but a step in the line of upward progression. "Neither" said he, "is the soul life of the human perfect. It may be that God carries it upward and onward."

So far as he ever shows, no reference was made to the Scriptures, and he has no conception of ever hearing angels from them, respecting which he believes that [illegible] by the search, and rejoices that Editor Wm. T. Stead of London has taken up the study, and hopes he will find out something.

Is he not one of those who, because they receive not the love of the truth, that they might be saved, shall have, (as the spirit in Paul says) a strong delusion sent to them by God, that they should believe a lie, that they all might be condemned who believed not the truth?

On Sunday Jan. 22nd, this gentleman said, in answer to a question, "That the atom of itself possessed no intelligence, but it did possess a mind stuff." "Mind stuff," is the latest. In answer to another query the Doctor said, "We will probably have the same tastes that we have here. We may ever have use for dogs and other lower animals there." In answer to the question, "Does the Bible contain a Revelation from God?" He said the Bible could never have been produced by merely human power in the age in which it was written."

Prudent doctor,—you saved your salary and your standing in an influential body by one short sentence. But what does that sentence imply? It implies that it could be easily made to order in this enlightened age. And doubtless much improved with a chapter about "Future Life" when Editor Stead concludes his psychic researches. We are warranted in putting this construction upon that sentence, by which he says, "I do not claim that no other books have ever been inspired." But we ask the gentleman if his other inspired books are in harmony with the Bible? If not must they not have come from other gods? And if so, is it a matter of choice which God we serve?

OUR LOVE FEAST.

Dear Restitution:

It is with pleasure I take my pen in hand to say to the loved ones scattered abroad that we extend a cordial invitation to all of the one faith to come and be with us next August. Brother George Kidwell and a Latter Day Saint hold a debate at Spout Springs, in Hickory County, Mo. It begins on Monday at 10 o'clock, after the second Sunday in August, 1898. Come one and all, we will be glad to meet with you and you will be at home with us. Brother George is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. He is zealous for the cause and understands the Scriptures and is an able talker. Brethren and sisters, come and let us work while it is called day, for the night cometh when no man can work. Brethren, Christ is the medium of all the light and glory and rest and peace and joy we have. Yes, every ray of joy and gladness, every blessing comes to us through him. Blessed Jesus! By divine arrangement we have obtained his name, entered his service, identified ourselves with his cause, become representatives of his religion and joint-heirs with him to the surpassing wealth of God's favor to be dispensed in the ages to come. Oh, what a destiny. Ought we to give him a divided heart? Ought we to give him a half and half service? Surely not. Surely we shall not, if we think of ourselves as risen with Christ. "And let not sin reign in our mortal bodies," and be ever able to say from the heart "for me to live is Christ." Oh! we talk about following him fully, and since the blessed Lord is ever saying to us "follow me" it may be proper to talk about it, but better to do it. What a pattern to work to. His life was one long errand of mercy, and his example taught us how to walk and to please God. Toward God he manifested confidence, obedience, fidelity, he prayed to the Father and taught us to pray, he obeyed him and taught us obedience. Toward men he manifested patience, kindness, long-suffering, compassion, and grace for the present, he renounced pleasures, splendor, pomps and joys, and became a houseless wanderer and sacrificed to the right and the true, the holy and the good. As to the future he looked forward to a kingdom, crown and throne of glory in the day of coming triumph, and with all this in prospect, he was led as a lamb to slaughter, and was it not for our encouragement and comfort it was written, that he for the joy set before him endured the cross and despised the shame? Is not the same joy set before us when he answers back, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." We know, beloved, that we can overcome if we will. He would not address the struggling members of his body thus, to tantalize them. Yes, he sets before us the joy that was set before him, and positive promises as to seats upon his throne. Blessed Jesus. May his example and loving message be our beacon light, and be to us what they have been to thousands in the past, and now dear brothers and sisters, let us ever walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called with all lowliness and meekness, with long suffering, forbearing one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace. Oh, let us build upon that most holy faith and keep ourselves in the love of God. Pray for me, dear brothers and sisters, and may God speed. The coming of his dear Son, is the prayer of a Sister.

MARY E. HOWARD.

Editor Restitution:

We cannot think of doing without the dear RESTITUTION, as it is all the preaching of the one faith we have here. I am a great sufferer with incurable lameness in both limbs but I am still watching and waiting for the change to come. I have a good home with my daughter and husband Mr. F. C. Bellow and wife of the same faith, for which I am truly thankful. Pray for me that we may keep the straight and narrow path, and enter in through the gates of life into the city and have a right to the tree of life, where pain and sickness can never enter, and meet all the dear ones in the kingdom with the dear Savior and receive a crown of glory that fadeth not.

Yours in hope of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord,

MRS. T. M. SPENCER.

Dear Restitution:

We are at the close of this another year, which is about to fall into the past with all its joys and sorrows, troubles and deaths. We are one year nearer the coming of our Redeemer, which from the signs of the times will not be in the far future, and our prayer is ever, Come our Lord, come quickly. We send greeting to all our brothers and sisters of THE RESTITUTION. We feel as if we were acquainted with all of them. May the Lord preserve and keep us in the "Holy Faith" and raise us up in that last day, is our prayer.

D. T. & C. SEELY.

Dear Restitution:

I hasten to send in my subscription for 98, just noticed the paper ran out in December, excuse my tardiness. I do sincerely love the paper, for I believe it is teaching nearer the truth than any paper that I know of. I hope it may grow and prosper in the truth as it is in the Lord Jesus, the Christ. I and my family rejoiced and was exceeding glad to read in THE RESTITUTION of last week the article "A Day long to be Remembered," as the writer, A. H. Zilmer, of Clarno, Wis., lives near us and being all of his life taught to believe in the Evangelical doctrine, and to leave that church and join in the little flock, that it is the good Lord's pleasure to give the kingdom, certainly must be a good-send to the one faith, especially in this community as there was no one in this country to preach the one faith we know of, or in the whole State. We believe most sincerely Bro Zilmer will be a great blessing to the Church, believing him to be a man of very good character and of great earnestness in his conviction. May he and all of us stand fast in the one faith and inherit eternal life when our blessed Lord comes, is my prayer.

Yours in the one faith,

L. P. CRALE.

Dear Bro. Underwood.

I wish to say to the brothers and sisters abroad that I am still anxiously looking for our dear Redeemer, and will be so glad when we can look up and say "This is the Lord, we have waited for him." It is with great pleasure that I peruse the columns of the dear old RESTITUTION and hear of the good work that is being done in other places. Oh, may we all strive to live better Christians and do more for the cause of Christ the coming year than we have ever done before. May we all be found ready, is the prayer of your Sister in Christ.

MRS. F. W. CRAIG.

Dear Restitution:

Our time on the paper being expired enclosed please find $1.50 to apply on subscription for we do not wish to be without the paper, as it brings to us many good thoughts to encourage us on toward the kingdom. That golden age which we are anxiously waiting and working for, when shall be fulfilled the Scripture, On earth peace, good will toward men. When the curse shall be removed and all things be made new, when righteousness shall fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. When many people shall say, "Come ye and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob and he will teach us of his ways and we will walk in his paths, for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem, and he shall judge the poor of the people. He shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor. He will swallow up death in victory, and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces. When the wilderness and solitary places shall be glad and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose. When the inhabitants shall not say, I am sick; when the lame shall leap and the eyes of the blind shall be opened and the tongue of the dumb sing. When every man shall sit under his own vine and fig tree with none to molest or make him afraid. Then Jesus shall go out with joy and be led forth in peace. The mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands. Then the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. They shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away. Glorious prospect for those who shall be ready when the King in his beauty shall come; but solemn thoughts if we are not ready. Brother and Sister, are you ready? Am I ready? If not, there is but one way, genuine preparation, and the time is short. The war clouds exist and every thinking person knows it will burst soon in a dreadful storm to be followed by a morning without clouds through the rising of the Sun of Righteousness with healing for the nations, leading on to a glorious and happy millennial day, during which war, strife and oppression will cease, the people's woes be cured, the fruitful earth yield abundance for all, while joyful tribes in all lands will be wedded into one united and obedient family, under the righteous rule of God's immortal Son Jesus. With all this in view, how beautiful the prayer we daily offer "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

May that glad day soon come is the hope of your Brother and Sister.

W. A. & M. MOORE.

Dear Restitution:

I will say that by God's help I am journeying on toward the kingdom which is under the whole heaven. The blessed Master has said, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Dear brothers and sisters, the crown is worth working for, for it fadeth not away. Are we letting our light so shine before men that they may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven? This is no time to be idle, for Christ will soon come, and will we be found ready? "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another and the Lord hearkened and heard it; and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and thought upon his name, and they shall be mine saith the Lord, in that day when I make up my jewels." May we not forget the assembling of ourselves together, and so much the more as we see the day of Christ is near at hand. Pray for me that I may be ready when he comes.

Your Sister in hope,

MARGARET ANDREW.

Dear Restitution:

I feel that I can't do without THE RESTITUTION for it is all the real gospel preaching I hear, even in this large city. True I hear a good deal of so-called preaching, but it is so mixed up with human philosophy, it can't be called the truths of the gospel of the kingdom as was preached by Christ and the Apostles. I feel every day like exclaiming with good old Peter, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." I shall ever bless the time I met good Bro. Joblin, who was the means under God to open my eyes to see the beauties of the words of the Holy Bible. I thought I could see it before, but I see it differently now. THE RESTITUTION has been a great help to me. Now, dear brothers and sisters, I hope you all will pray that I may be among those who shall rise first when Jesus comes for his saints. I think the times show that he is near, even at the door, and let us watch and be ready.

Your affectionate Brother in Christ,

JULIUS SAUNDERS.

Editor Restitution:

My husband and I join in sending our love and greeting to all of like precious faith as it is in Christ Jesus. The more we know of him the more we desire to know. As we are justified by faith, and faith without works being dead, let us walk as the Lord has [illegible] and he will teach us of his ways and we will walk in his paths. If it is not in preaching, we can help them that can preach. We are commanded to do good to all men, especially the household of faith. We are watching and waiting for the return of our King to restore peace on earth, good will toward men. Asking the Lord to clothe us in our right minds, and to bless all of his dear children and save at last, is our prayer,

MR. & MRS. SIDNEY GOULD.

Editor Restitution:

I suppose by those spirited in the earliest, but now, behold I record again filled with heavenly grace. As I have never given a word, I will drop a few lines to let many know that I am yet alive and faithful to it. For forty years have been studying God's plan of the ages. I will mark down a little of what I have learned. Matt. xi, 28-30, I say to all of the saints, I know I have Christ's yoke upon me, and nothing upon this earth can make me pull it, nor to turn the yoke. Matt. xxiv, 6, 11-13. As I have never called for any one to help me put on the wedding garment and to know what the oil in the lamp was. Answer, Elder E. Hoyt, Grand Rapids, Michigan. For this I taught. "Whoso readeth, let him understand." Rev. i, 3, "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy and keep those things which are written. For the time is at hand." I am very thankful that God's beloved Son has given me to understand the Book of all books. I desire not to make my letter a sermon, but must say that I am not known among the brethren and sisters, yet well known among those who have a never-dying soul to save and fit up for the skies, while as poor mortals here to wait for our great King to come and bring life and immortality. Amen and all is in it.

God's Care.

Another rising sun has set,
Another day is done,
We all are drifting down life's tide
E'er life is well begun

We meet with friends we have as well,
We sigh as soon we part,
In memory's cell we still find
Them mixed in the heart

So as the sunbeams gathers warmth
From Sun, ere sunbeams bright,
Some good, true friend may show us truth
Through sorrow's darkest night.

And let us all remember well
If we will do our best,
That in some way and manner
God will direct the rest

Then may God bless those whom we love
Bless those we whom we pray,
And grant that we among the blest
Shall meet on judgment day

The Religion of the Christ.

My object in writing this article is not to present collective evidences as a proof of Christianity, they serve more to strengthen the faith of believers, but I, as a Jewess by flesh, find the strongest proof of Christianity, in what I have seen in the person of Jesus, the Christ.

Some 1,900 years ago, he appeared as a Galilean peasant, teaching new doctrines, and gathering about him a band of devoted followers, which in time were scattered abroad by persecution. His fidelity in proclaiming himself as the Christ, the Son of God, brought him to the cross, but after three days he appeared again, and his followers went everywhere, preaching Jesus and the resurrection.

The four gospels each present a different aspect of the Christ. His Divine origin is claimed by all of them. Matthew wrote his gospel to the Jews. He presents Jesus as the Messiah of the Jews, and the Savior of the world. Mark writes for the Romans, and presents Jesus principally as the Son of Man, and the risen Savior. Luke writing for the Greeks exalts the Divine origin of Jesus, and the importance of his resurrection. John makes especially prominent his Divine origin, and his second coming.

The central figure in all the gospels, is the person of Jesus Christ. Jesus, therefore, is a real living being, whose life and teachings all the gospels truthfully report, although written by four different persons. Concerning this central figure, it is not a creation of fancy, like fiction, but they relate facts concerning it. They speak of the religion he taught, as one of the heart, which contrasted strangely with the time in which he lived. For instance, the Greeks, Jews and Romans did not regard meekness and passive qualities as beautiful, or desirable. Yet while the Christ was keenly alive to his dignity as being the Son of God, and yet, who was more humble than he? These gospel writers relate facts concerning a person who was real, whose heart, spirit and mind, should be a blessing extending through all ages. If his origin was divine, then Christianity is also divine. It is impossible to separate the teacher from his teaching. In the truest sense the world beholds the glory of God reflected in the Christ, and for one to be a Christian, such an one must likewise reflect the character of Christ, his religion is one of the heart, and not of the head. The Creator bestowed on man great power, and sublime faculties, and by their misuse, lost the boon of immortality. But Christ came to redeem and offer eternal life on the condition of conforming to the likeness of Christ.

The gospels with their central figure, open up a rich field for the intellect, and for the acquisition of knowledge, not found in any other religion. Its teachings feed and stimulate the intellect, as well as the heart. The most intelligent, level-headed instruction is that found in the Bible, and we know that we are perfectly safe in studying everything in its light. It furnishes the most exquisite subjects for the imagination to enlarge upon, as for instance, the prodigal son, the woman that was a sinner, the widow receiving her son from the dead. The beauty and power of Christ's Word is a source of purest joy. In our mind, our arms grasp the feet of Christ, we look up and see the Lord's eyes rest lovingly upon us, we hear his voice in warning and tender compassion, and feel his hand in benediction upon our bowed head.

Jesus has revealed the Creator of the universe in a tangible way which to us is the most precious thing [illegible] kind and gentle with us, full of truth and strength, that we may rely upon him, and he become very dear to us, and come very near to us in the person of Christ. He brings us a message of love and mercy, and if we will only repent, and receive him into our hearts, he will fold us to his heart, and hold our hand that we may not fall. He will comfort and guide us, and no man shall be able to pluck us out of his hand.

Christ in his religion sets up a perfect standard and a perfect moral law which if we follow, we cannot fail, but have a pure conscience towards God and man. Our will is greatly influenced by our environment, affections and imaginations, and thus if it is not governed by Christ's own will will be resisted in doing what is right, just as it ought to do, by having intimate contact with God, and by the person of Jesus Christ the Spirit of God through his Word fills our minds and assists our wills to do what is right, though everything and every body around tempts us to do otherwise. Buddhism, Mohammedism, or Judaism cannot help us, cannot fill us up, and elevate either intellect, conscience or will, it cannot fill us with the grace of God, and engage us to as living as perfect as that of Christ. No other religion has power to deliver us from the guilt and power of sin, none other contains the promises to deliver from the presence of sin, or promise a kingdom of perfect sinlessness. This can only be conceived in the mind and the heart of a loving and Divine Creator, Father and Savior

From all I have said, till now, it is evident that Christ is real, and if real, then divine, and if divine, it is of the greatest importance what position we take towards him and his religion. Biblical criticism and consequently doubt as to the authenticity of the gospels are very numerous. We do not care so much about the objections which so-called Biblical critics make. It is of no importance who wrote these things, and how they wrote them, and where they wrote them. We bless God with a grateful heart, that we have got the Bible, and through it have revealed to us the love of God as expressed in the gift of his only begotten Son, who came to die for us, and by his death conquered death forever, that we may have eternal life. We may come to the Bible blind like Bartimeus came to Christ, and as he gave him sight, so he is willing to give us spiritual light. He is just the same yesterday, today and forever. If we have such a personal experience of a personal Savior, who has led us from paths of self-righteousness, and unrighteousness, into paths of true righteousness, who has not only opened our eyes to heavenly, pure and beautiful thoughts, and also inspired us to heavenly zeal, ambition and noble deeds, which we had no wish or power to do, before we knew him. If he has such a power in our own life, we may justly smile at all critics, gnostics or infidels, for we have the wealth of Christ's redeeming love in our heart, nothing can shake our faith. I pity those people, I for pray them, and against all their arguments, We simply tell them the story how we came to him, and cried out to God to have mercy for Christ's sake, and how God spoke peace to me.

He leads us past temptation and smooths care from our brow, and wipes tears from our eyes, and helps us to be pure and loyal. Who will be the safer when the Lord shall come, the doubter or the believer of Christ's religion? I gladly invite all to come and stand with me on the Rock of Ages, it is broad enough for the whole world. It will hold us in time of sorrow and trial, when nothing else will hold. Why did God choose Christ to be a propitiation for our sins, our prophet, our high priest, and our coming King? Because God's righteousness, and Christ's righteousness are the same, and man's righteousness make him unfit to ever enter the presence of God, otherwise than under the atoning blood of Christ. By fully satisfying the righteousness of God Christ became the Savior of the world, and because of it he shall be its coming King. The Bible as we have so often said before, being Divine, and a revelation of the Divine mind, cannot be misunderstood by the true child of God, in spite of the human headings put at the top of the Old Testament pages. And so, if God is true and God's Word is truth, God's ancient people, the Jews, having suffered the full pain of their iniquities, shall be restored to their land, their God and their savior, and Christ the [illegible] throne of his Father, and of their father David, and he not only the King of the Jews, but King of the whole world, judging the nations in righteousness, such as he has described in the sermon on the mount. Already the wind is blowing among the dry bones of Israel, the Jews are stirring themselves, many already have gone to Palestine in order, and [illegible] preparations in heaven, and [illegible] for the glory of the Son of Man [illegible] soon appear. In the twinkling [illegible] and the dead in Christ shall [illegible] we who are [illegible] shall [illegible] meet him in the air, [illegible] part from him, but to [illegible] in great power and glory, [illegible] who pierced him and [illegible] We grand mourn, [illegible] Great Savior, and rejoice [illegible] King, and go out and [illegible] Judea to his foot. Amen.

Katharine Greenleaf.

The Thousand Years Reign

This is a subject that [illegible] minds and makes us rejoice, when we are reading and studying it. The first passage upon this subject we are anxious to look [illegible] found in 1 Thess. iv. 13-18; [illegible] would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." Here in this Scripture we have the first resurrection, the saints meeting the Lord in the air, and this is what we are longing and praying for, and it will surely be a glorious meeting that will know no parting.

Now, we will quote some Scripture that will bring the Savior and the saints to the earth again. Zech. xiv. 1-5. "Behold the day of the Lord cometh and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle, and the city shall be taken, and half of the city shall go forth into captivity and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the Lord go forth and fight against those nations as when he fought in the days of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the Mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley, and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north and half of it toward the south. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal, yea, ye shall flee like as ye fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah, king of Judah, and the Lord my God shall come and all the saints with thee." Here the Lord has come to the earth with his saints after having raised the dead and changed the righteous living and have met him in the air and have become immortal, and dear brothers and sisters, may it be our happy lot to be blest with the blessing of being of the numberless throng, robed in white linen which is the righteousness of the saints. Zech. xiv. 6, 7. "And it shall come to pass in that day that the light shall not be clear or dark. But it shall be one day which shall be known to the Lord, not day nor night but it shall come to pass that at evening time it shall be light." Isaiah xxxv. tells us of some of the grandeur that we shall enjoy after Christ is King over all the earth." The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them and rejoice and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly and rejoice even with joy and singing, the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it the excellency of Carmel and Sharon. They shall see the glory of the Lord and the excellency of our God. Strengthen ye the weak hands and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not, behold your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense [illegible] come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be [illegible] of the deaf shall be unstopped. [illegible]

[illegible] God and streams in the desert. And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water: in the habitation of dragons [illegible] where each lay shall be grass with reeds and rushes. And an highway [illegible] and it shall be called the way of holiness, the unclean shall not pass over it; but it [illegible] those: the way faring men [illegible] fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous [illegible] it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there: And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

Isa. ii. 1-4: "The Word that Isaiah the son of Amoz saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem. And it shall come to pass in the last days that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of Hosts hath spoken it." This state of things will be quite different from the way they are now. We see the prophet says every man will have his own vine and fig tree, that certainly will be universal. Things will be divided on an equality, and all will have a home and plenty.

Isa. lxv. 21-22: "And they shall build houses and inhabit them, and they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them. They shall not build and another inhabit; they shall not plant and another eat; for as the days of a tree are the days of my people, and mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands."

[illegible] 11:15 [illegible] day will [illegible] the [illegible] of David that [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] the blind shall [illegible] of the deaf [illegible]

[illegible] are called by my name, saith the Lord, that doeth this. Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt. And I will bring the captivity of my people of Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God."

Dear brothers and sisters, what a [illegible] that God has [illegible] Word, and that we can [illegible] precious promises [illegible] reading and searching [illegible] that we will be worthy [illegible] upon us. "Well [illegible] faithful servant, enter [illegible] of thy God."

A Good Man Numbered with the Dead.

On Dec. 30th, 1907, at his residence 2007 S. 56th St., Phila., Pa., Brother Alexander D. Watson, aged 65 years. When a young man he joined the Methodist Church. His delight was in prayer and searching the Scriptures which led him to a deep acquaintance with the most important truths of Christianity. "The sleep of the Dead." "Life only through Christ. The Life Giver." "The Earth the future abode of the Righteous." After obtaining a knowledge of these truths, he joined the Advent Church, and afterwards connected himself with the Church of the Blessed Hope, under the pastorate of Elder C. C. Ramsay. At all times he manifested a high regard for divine ordinances, and had a peculiar pleasure in attending upon public worship, and at the Lord's Table, where with joy he drew water out of the wells of salvation. Thus upheld by the good hope of the gospel, thus having displayed in lovely concert the diversified graces of the Christian profession, thus having been abundantly refreshed by the consolations of Christ, this blessed sufferer, this ransomed sinner, this victorious believer fell asleep in Jesus. We laid him to rest in Mount Peace Cemetery, waiting the voice of the Life Giver. He leaves a wife and daughter to mourn his loss. Services were conducted by Elder H. C. Taylor and Elder C. C. Ramsay.

"The tears are due to those who weep,
For sin and sorrow's pilgrims found,
They gently lie and sweetly sleep,
Low in the ground

The storm that wrecks the wintry sky,
No more disturbs their deep repose,
Than summer evening's latest sigh,
That steals the rose."

For Our Children.

Be Careful.

"Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."

Be careful, little boys,
Lest words be spoiled by noise;
Lest speech be soiled with words profane;
For he who does no abuse he finds,
The Father's name in vain.

Be careful, little girls,
Lest you forget the thoughts within,
From them it is that comes the wrong,
That stains the fair with sin.

Dear Restitution.

I am a little girl eleven years old. We do not live very close to the Church of God, so we do not get to attend very often. But we take The Restitution and it does us so much good to read it. I desire an interest in your prayers. Written in love.

The Crossbill.

Some caged birds, though they do not beat themselves against the bars of their cage and die of fright and despair, are never quite reconciled to captivity, never forget their former liberty, and never cease to long to get their wings to free untrammeled flight, never lose entirely their instinctive fear of human beings, in short, are never very happy. They are uneasy and restless, and will not eat when watched, and often gravel in a sort of stupor of abject fear upon the floor of the cage. Their songs, for these poor creatures sing as captive will to cheat an aching heart, do not delight the ear that comprehends their import; they rather incite us to tear open the doors of the prison house and let the [illegible] feel [illegible] wish to his [illegible] brightest, cheerfulest, and best contented of bond-servants; for he is the honored servant not of fear, but of love. He has a thousand and one ways of showing this, not the least of which is his evident delight on being noticed or caressed, and the quaint little self-taught tricks with which he seeks to entertain his friends. A party of spectators gathered about his cage is a signal for the performance to begin; he leaps up to the ring attached to the roof of his cage, and, falling backward, swings upside down, supported by his claws, taking hold with his bill, which he uses as a parrot does its feet, and letting go one claw, he hangs suspended; then, in loosing his clenk, he sways backward and forward, held by one claw alone. The enthusiasm with which all this is done and the pride and pleasure the crossbill takes in "showing off" before an appreciative assembly makes his performance doubly amusing. After a series of such aerial gymnastics, if a lead pencil, pencilder, or any such article be extended toward him, he will fasten upon it with his strong beak, and allow himself to be carried dangling from the end, uttering a subdued little croak of exultation as he is shown in turn to each one about him. A distinguished ornithologist, writing of this bird, says:

"The dear little bird is so quaint and engaging, and so fearless of human beings whom it appears never to have learned to regard as enemies, that it seems as if its trustful, innocent ways should be its protection and that no sportsman could have the heart to shoot it. It is only after repeated experiences of the cruelty and treachery of mankind that it becomes timid and wild. Should his little mate be killed, the crossbill commiserates sorrowfully perched on the branch from which she has fallen and revisits the spot again and again in hopes of finding her. He seems to have so loving and gentle a nature it is almost impossible for him to understand evil or unkindness. The rapture of affection for his little companion is such that he will flutter over the top of the tree where she sits, never weary of pouring out his whole heart in song, until he sinks to rest on his perch by her side. Besides their songs the birds have three funny little words they say to each other. These words are plainly enough 'Gup, gup,' 'Gip, gip,' and 'Yock, yock.' The last is only uttered in confidence to each other as they sit side by side, never after they have taken flight. The word 'gip' repeated once or twice is as much as to say, 'Look out!'

"When one of the birds utters it all fire on the alert, and if he flies the whole flock takes wing. 'Gup' is 'Come back.' When one bird is away from the others and they cry 'gup' he immediately returns to the flock.

"Both male and female are pretty singers. Their song is copious and melodious, but very tender and soft, especially that of the female. As the birds are hardy and easily kept, it is a little surprising they are not more often caged and made pets of. Certainly they are far more interesting than canaries, and more satisfactory in every way than the wild and suspicious creatures whom we keep cruelly and closely confined, because if we afford them the slightest opportunity they will fly away never to return. There are many species of crossbeaks, many of which are found native in the United States, but all have their plumage more or less marked with the crimson stains alluded to by Longfellow in his beautiful little translated poem on this bird, called:

THE LEGEND OF THE CROSSBILL.
(From the German of Julius Mosen.)

On the cross the dying Savior
Heavenward lifts his eyelids calm;
Feels but scarcely feels it trembling
In his pierced and bleeding palm.

And by all the world forsaken,
Sees he how with zealous care,
At the cruel nail of iron,
A little bird is striving there;

Stained with blood and never tiring,
With its beak it will not cease;
From the cross He could free the Savior,
He'Creator's Son release.

And the Savior speaks in stillness:
Blest be thou of all the good!
Bear in token of this moment
Marks of blood and holy rood!

Another Day of Rejoicing.

After an absence from the Millbrook church of nearly four months, it was our privilege to again visit them Jan. 15th, this being our regular appointment. It is always a pleasure to visit these people as they are alive and at work, the interest is always good, and one does not have to come in from the heartless world and sit down by smouldering embers; but a live bright Christian warmth cheers you on to other duties as well as the present ones.

After services and the Lord's Supper, on Sunday evening, Sister Sheets came to me and desired baptism. Over a year ago Brother Sheets took the all-saving name upon himself, after which he was united in marriage to this young lady and has been improving the time, teaching her the way of life more perfectly. We gladly helped her to put on Christ, and now may they walk with sweet Christian love, in patience until the perfect day shall give them the more abundant life.

Wife and I will (D. V.) begin a series of meetings in Southern Michigan, near Vicksburg, Br. dy Township, the 29th of this month.

Yours still worging for the Truth.

B. W. Woodward.

Dear Restitution:

I wish to insert a little notice in our paper.

A son of our late Brother James H Simpson, wrote to my father, (J. S. Haveh,) last week, asking him to immerse him. He came last Saturday and was immersed yesterday. Last evening he had the pleasure of attending Brother J. F. Wagoner's meeting where the right hand of fellowship was extended to him. Our young brother's name is Earnest W. Simpson. He leaves for his home in Russellville, Ind. this morning, with the best wishes of all.

Your Sister in Christ.

Obituary.

Sister Angie Smith died at her home in Sheridan Co., Neb., Dec. 28, 1897. She with her husband G. O. Smith first heard the glorious gospel of the kingdom preached by Elder Almus Adams in 1892 and they embraced the faith as taught by the Scriptures, baptized into the all saving name of Christ and joined the Church of God at this place. She lived a constant Christian life and after an illness of four years of suffering of rheumatism and consumption which she bore with Christian patience and fortitude and was conscious until the last, being at her death 35 years, 9 months and 4 days old. She leaves a husband and 3 children, two sons and one daughter to mourn their loss, but their sorrow is not like that of those who have no hope, for they know in the resurrection morning when the trump of God shall sound that the dead in Christ shall rise first, and then they will meet the sweet loved companion and mother. Often during her last illness when she knew this life was fast passing away, she would call her loved husband to her bedside to read words of comfort from the Word of God, or sing some of those soul inspiring hymns of which "Wait and Murmur not," or "Meet me, Meet me over there," was her favorite, and how she has said to the writer, "You will meet me in the kingdom of God, won't you?" and all I could say was, "I will try, dear sister." Funeral service was conducted by Bro. H. Ward, a member of the Seventh Day Church of God, subject, the resurrection, his text being St. John xi. 24. 25. He showed from the Word of God that the loved one there cold and silent in death's embrace should come forth to life and immortality, and if we were only faithful as she had been, we should meet her face and clasp hands in that eternal home of the blessed, no more to part, no more to sorrow, no more pain nor tears, for God would be there to wipe the tears from all faces. Oh, blessed hope, may God bless and comfort the family in their bereavement, is the prayer of one that loves them.

'Tis hard to break the tender cord,
When love has bound the heart;
'Tis hard, so hard, to speak the words,
Must we forever part.

Dearest loved one, we have laid thee,
In the peaceful grave's embrace;
But thy memory will be cherished,
Till we meet thee face to face.

Your Sister in hope of eternal life,
Mrs. E. J. Watkiss.

Notice.

We have with us Bro. Zilmer, of Wisconsin, who will labor with us in the Evangelical field. We find him to be a man of rare talent, excellent qualities and zealous in the work, and he comes to us highly recommended. The evangelical committee have engaged his service for the State of Indiana and wish to place him where most needed. Any of the brethren desiring his service or knowing of a good opening will please let us know immediately.

Dear Restitution:

Will you please say to the brethren on the Pacific coast, through your columns, that I am at Wenatchee, Wash., and intend to hold a series of meetings here and at other places during a few weeks, and would like to correspond with all who desire meetings.

There may be some who live near the place of our meetings and would desire to attend. To all such who love the Master, we say, come, we want to see you and form your acquaintance, and you may be a help to the cause by attending our meetings. Direct all correspondence or inquiries to me at Waterville, Wash., in care of R. Corbeley.

The Great Revolution.

This is the title of a book of 80 pages with paper cover, written by J. B. Craton. Every Bible student admits that it is very interesting reading. It points out prophecies that are now being fulfilled that are signs of the near coming of the Lord. The chapters are as follows:—1. The end of the Age. 2. The Lord's coming is near. 3. A Planetary Crisis. (From Astronomy.) 4. Prepare War. 5. Times of Dan. and Rev. 6. History repeats itself. 7. A power rising. (The labor organizations, the Lord's battle-ax.) The chapters of the supplement are:—1. A ray of hope. 2. Restitution. 3. The redeemed shall come to Zion.

The above head-lines of chapters will give the reader an idea of the book. Send eight two-cent postage stamps and get a copy by mail. Address, J. B. Craton, Wilsey, Morris Co. Kan.

Presents for Friends.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding, fifth edition; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of "Early Lessons;" and one of "Honoring the Son,—all five for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth.

A Free Map of Alaska.

Corrected to date, showing location of Gold Fields and actual mining scenes, besides containing latest mining laws, routes of travel, and other valuable information, will be mailed free on application to C. Traver, Marine National Bank Building, Pittsburg, Pa. or W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.—Feb. 12.

A short time ago the British and Foreign Bible Society published an interesting table of the languages and dialects into which the entire Bible had been translated. The number of languages into which the whole Bible has been translated was shown to be 107. This admirable Society has now furnished a new table of almost equal interest, showing the languages into which the New Testament has been translated. These number 101; that is to say, the New Testament has been translated into 208 languages. Of the 101 New Testaments, only twenty seven have been published in which the Bible Society has had no share in the publication. Eighteen of the names belong to Europe, no less than forty-two to Asia, twenty to Africa, twelve to Oceanica and nine to America.

Any one interested in the Gold fields of Alaska should send to Mr. W. B. Kniskern, General Passenger Agent of the Chicago and Northwestern R. R. at Chicago and get a copy of the folder just issued by this company showing the route from Chicago direct, and giving much valuable information concerning the country and the way to reach it. Any reader of this paper can get one free by simply applying as above stated.

We the undersigned, realizing that the distributing of tracts is a good way to spread the truth, and that the time is short in which we can work for the Master, do hereby agree to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purpose of raising a fund to be used in supplying tracts to those who will distribute them free.

The Hot Springs of Arkansas.

It is announced that all three of the great hotels at this resort will be open this winter. The Arlington has never closed, the Park opened January 6th and the Eastman January 25th. In addition, there are fifty hotels and three hundred boarding houses giving accommodations at reasonable rates to all classes of people. This is the only health and pleasure resort under direct Government control. The curative properties of the hot waters are vouched for by the Surgeon-General of the United States. Send for illustrated descriptive matter and particulars regarding the greatly reduced ninety-day round trip excursion rates, to the nearest coupon ticket agent of the Vandalia Line.—Feb. 16.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

We have received a new supply of this valuable work, which treats of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the one hope, one faith, one baptism, by the late Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. This will need no introduction to many of our readers, as they already know of the good work that has been accomplished through its circulation. In order to each. Send to this office.

FUTURE PROBATION.

Is there awaiting any of the unrighteous? A 150-page pamphlet by Wm. Gibson Moorcroft. The work was issued and sold at 25 cents. We have a good supply and will send them post paid for ten cents per copy. This is an excellent opportunity for any who are interested in this subject to get this work by a talented author. Send for one to this office in a hurry.

ALL THINGS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

This is the title of a tract containing 12 large size pages and is a reprint of a work issued many years ago, and we suppose was written by Christ Benjamin Wilson. It is clear and comprehensive, and can be had for 5cts each or 30c or $1.00.

THE COMING NATION.

A sermon delivered by H. V. Reed. This discourse shows plainly that the Coming Nation will be the return of Israel restored to Palestine and the Scriptural evidence given. 26 pages price 10 cts or three or 25 cts.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

A splendid lecture by M. Joblin. Very good to put in the hands of those needing truth. 16 pages each.

Necessity of Baptism. A 4 page tract, written some years ago by Brother J. M. Stephenson, and it appeared as a wrapper article. It is so good we thought best to put more it in this way, and offer it at 2 cents each or 15 cents per dozen.

Bible Plan of Salvation. A 4-page tract telling how to interpret the Scriptures, the design of God's plan, etc. 2 cts each or 15 cts per dozen.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the

"Thou art the Same, and Thy Years shall not Fail."

The flowers that bloom in spring-tide's chaplet bright,
And glitter in the dew—
The flowers must fade
The birds that hymn their notes of song
When leaves are sparkling in the sun
Must cease to be so gay.

The sun that rises in the morning
To wake and warm the world
Must set at length
The seed that ripens with the year
With harvest home is gathered
Must ultimate decay.

All come and go, all wax and wane
O Lord save only Thou,
Who dost remain
The same in all thy years—
All things which fall as now
We trust to thee. Amen.

Christ's Prayer to the Father.

The glory which Christ spoke of in his prayer in John xvii. 5, which appears as spoken of in the past is yet future. "And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." The word "world" is a mistranslation which should have been age, meaning aions, an indefinite period of time, one age before the flood. After the flood the second age an indefinite period of time, in which we now live is used as singular and plural forms, and the third aions is the glory Christ spoke of in his prayer to the Father. Seeing the first age was destroyed by water, the second age will be destroyed by fire. "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation. For this they willingly are ignorant of that by the Word of God. The heavens were of old and the earth standing out of the water and in the water. When by the age that then was being overflowed with water perished. "But the heavens and the earth which are now by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." 2 Pet. iii. 3-6.

Jesus in his prayer to the Father longed for that glory which the Father purposed in him in redeeming poor, fallen man, whom the devil after the creation had caused to transgress and brought death and the curse on the earth. Since that time man has been a natural wanderer from God, begotten in iniquity and born in sin. Because of disobedience God said "from the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread all the days of thy life, from dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." God cursed the earth saying "thorns and thistles shall it bring forth." Since that time we see it verified, sickness, sorrow, pain and death, separation from loved ones has been ever since the fall of man, and will continue until Christ comes and subdues all things, and delivers the kingdom up to the Father, then will be brought the saying of the prophet Isaiah xxxii. 1, "Behold a king shall reign in righteousness and princes shall rule in judgment." Earth's millennial age will not be brought about by earthly kings, for they are incapable of establishing a peaceful form of government. When earth's rightful King will come to establish a righteous government and the princes who are to help him rule, whom the Lord has been calling out to help rule with him in his kingdom, by being obedient to the gospel call, so when he comes in all his glory and all his holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. Matt. xxv. 31. "Enoch the seventh from Adam prophesied of these saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints." Jude i. 14. "Therefore let us keep ourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that renouncing impiety and worldly desires, we should live prudently, righteously and piously in the present age, waiting for the blessed hope, even the appearing of the glory of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself on our behalf that he might redeem us from all lawlessness and cleanse for himself a peculiar people devoted to good works. So that, having been justified by his favor we might become heirs according to a hope of aionian life. For our commonwealth is in heaven from where also we are expecting a Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who will transform our bodies unto a conformity like his glorious body according to the energy by which he is able even to subject all things to himself. Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed when he comes in the glory of his Father with the holy angels." Mark viii. 38.

Now Jesus had spoken unto the multitude saying, "There shall be some of you standing here that shall not taste of death until you have seen the Son coming (in a visionary form) with power and great glory. After six days Jesus taketh with him Peter, James and John and leadeth them by themselves to a lofty mountain apart: and he was transformed in their presence, and his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can make white." This was a visionary form of his prayer. Moses being there to represent the sleeping saints, Elias the living saints.

Now, brethren, let us fight the good fight of faith wherunto thou art called, let us make a good profession before many witnesses, let us keep the commandments of God until the glorious appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ, who in his times will show who is the blessed and only Potentate, King of kings and Lord of lords, the only one possessing immortality, inhabiting light, whom no one of men have seen, or is able to see, to whom be honor and might Aionian, Amen. Now to you who are troubled, rest with us. When the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, when he comes to be admired of all them that believe, wherefore he called us by this gospel to the obtaining to the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ, that he so loved us and has given us everlasting consolation and good hope through faith, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, so also we believe that God through him, will lead forth with him, those who fell asleep, for this we affirm to you by the Lord's Word, that we the living who are left over to the coming of the Lord will not by no means precede them who fell asleep. Because the Lord himself will come down from heaven with a shout and with an archangel's voice and with God's trumpet, and the dead in Christ shall be raised first. Then, we the living who are left over shall at the same time with them be caught away in the clouds for a meeting of the Lord in the air, and so we shall be always with the Lord.

The apostles were not following cunning devised fables, but had a foresight of his coming glory. Peter says, "We were eye witnesses of his Majesty, for he received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice from the excellent glory to him saying, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard when we were with him on the Holy Mount. Beloved, now are we the sons of God and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." John iii. 2.

Christ when he was praying to the Father wished all his dear children to share with him in his glory, and that glory will be completed in him when he comes back to this earth and raises his sleeping saints, and earth is restored to Eden beauty. Then the battle cry will cease, the mighty nations will not draw their swords to take their fellowman's life. Then the lion will not oppress the poor, neighbor will not try to get the advantage of neighbor, earth with its great earthquakes and famines, pestilence, fearful sights, and great signs and commotions, and men's hearts failing them for looking after those things which are coming on the earth will then cease, for God's own Son is coming back to subdue all things to himself. "And I saw in the night a vision, and behold one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven and came to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion and glory, and a kingdom that all people, nations and languages should serve him. His dominion is an everlasting dominion which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." Dan. vii. 12-14.

"But in the last days it shall come to pass that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountain and it shall be exalted above the hills and people shall flow unto it: and many nations shall come and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob, and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths, for the law shall go forth of Zion and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among many people and rebuke strong nations afar off: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks: nations shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more, but they shall sit every man under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it." Micah iv. 5.

"And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof; for thou was slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood; out of every kindred, and tongue, and people and nation and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth, and there will be no more death, sorrow nor crying, for the former things are passed away. And there shall be no more curse, but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it, and his servants shall serve him." Rev. xxii. 3.

"I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold, I am alive forever more, Amen. And have the keys of death and hell, or the grave." The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death, and when death is destroyed then the righteous can look up and say, "Lo, this is the glory that should come. For even so come Lord Jesus, come quickly."

MRS. GEORGE OSBORN.

Literal or Symbolic Time.

We believe in the continuity of the prophetic time periods that God revealed unto us. He showed us his mysterious measures and numbers by appointing us "a day for a year," as shown through the prophet. Through this revelation we find that Gentile times cover a period of 7 times, revealed to us by figure through Nebuchadnezzar's experience of 7 times passing over him in a wild beast of the field condition—"Until thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men and giveth it to whomsoever he will." This seven times or prophetic seven years reaches through 2520 continuous years of time. Also that time times and a half time, or 3½ years of prophetic time, and which equals 42 months of prophetic time, or 1260 continuous years.

We understand from the 70 weeks of fulfilled prophecy that a week was a week of years. So we make no mistake when we claim the "appointed day for a year." We are enjoined to "Prove all things and to hold fast that which is good." Hearken to this "And the vision of the evening and the morning, which was told is true, wherefore shut thou up the vision for it shall be for many days." "Then I heard one saint speaking and another saint said unto the numberer of secrets, How long shall be the vision concerning the day or continued, and the transgression that maketh desolate, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot." And he said unto me, Unto 2300 evenings and mornings, Then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." This vision entered 553 B. C., and 2300 year days each down the stream of time to 1847 in these our own times.

I would ask the Church of God if, from that time many errors have not been recovered in preaching the gospel? The truths of the kingdom of God were restored and published, as witness Bro. Cameron's articles in THE RESTITUTION, in which he asserts that within the last fifty years this truth was discovered, acknowledged and preached in the Church of God, immortal soulism was proved a fallacy—"The coming of Jesus in power and glory to reign on the earth, a glad hope to his followers, with many other kindred truths came to light, that were degraded and hidden by the abomination of desolation for long centuries of time. But "Thy Way, O God, is in the sanctuary, who is so great a God as our God." Psa. lxxvii. 13. Ezek. xi. 16. "Thus saith the Lord God although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries; yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come. Yet the end shall be at the time appointed." Yes, the cleansing of the sanctuary has begun and the good work shall go on until these bodies of humiliation shall be made like unto his glorious body. "Behold, I come quickly," even so come Lord Jesus.

I wish to show the errors our Futurist brethren have run into. They claim that the Book of Revelations is not a symbolic book, but that its teachings must be literally fulfilled because it is written therein, "He that adds to or that takes away from the words of this book, the plagues written therein shall be added to him, and God shall take away his part from the tree of life." But we enquire, how will or can these symbols be literally fulfilled, which successfully prove to us that the book in part at least is symbolic in its teachings? Hearken! This notice, it is in connection with the measuring of the temple of God and the altar and them that worship therein, "And the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months, And I will give unto my two witnesses and they shall prophesy 1260 days, clothed in sackcloth. These are the two olive trees and the two candlesticks standing before the Lord of the earth, and if any man desireth to hurt them fire proceedeth out of their mouth and devoureth their enemies.....These have the power to shut the heaven that it rain not during their prophecy.....And when they shall have finished their testimony the beast shall kill them and their dead bodies lie in the street; nations do look upon their dead bodies three days and a half and suffer not their dead bodies to be laid in the tomb." If these time prophecies must be literal, then it follows that these two prophets must literally be two olive trees and two candlesticks. Also there must be a literal beast with ten horns and seven heads, and on his horns ten diadems and upon his heads names of blasphemy, and he must be like a leopard with feet of a bear and mouth of a lion and he must overcome the saints. Ah, yes, we know that John used symbols as other prophets did to show forth the things that should shortly come to pass. Let God be true though every man be a liar. In the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly. I will correct them in measure."

Another point showing their error. "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words and seal the book even to the time of the end many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." These present indications show that we are in the time of the end; while to the Futurist, is he at all sure that the 7 times are yet in course of fulfillment? "Go thy way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed to the time of the end." The time of the end means to us 360 years, or one prophetic time or year. To the Futurist it must mean a literal year only, and the words to be closed up and sealed till the time of the end. It follows that the words of the book [illegible] and understand Daniel's prophecies until the last time or last year of the end of the prophecies, else the angel spoke falsely.

"None of the wicked shall understand, but they that be wise shall understand." The feet of the Lord addresh days, but the days of the wicked shall be shortened." Jesus in teaching his disciples said, "Take heed that ye be not led astray, for many shall come in my name saying, I am, and the time is at hand; go ye not after them." Luke xxi. 8, 24. "And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the time of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Here again is the long continuity of time shown in the "Times of the Gentiles." The fierce anger of the Lord shall not return until he have executed and till he have performed the intents of his heart, in the latter days ye shall understand it perfectly. "And I will recompense their iniquity and their sin double. Therefore, behold I will cause them to know: this once will I cause them to know mine hand and my might. Behold evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great tempest shall be raised up from the uttermost part of the earth, and the slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth ... because of fierce anger,' For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still." Isa. x. 4.

"How long, O Lord, wilt thou hide thyself forever? How long shall thy wrath burn like fire? Thou shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion. For it is time to have pity upon her; yea, the set time is come. Who knoweth the power of thine anger and thy wrath according to the fear that is [illegible] smote thee, but in my favor have I had mercy upon thee. I the Lord will hasten it in its season. After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their mind, and on their hearts also I will write them, and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people." Will the Lord cast off forever? Hath God forgotten to be gracious? Hath he in his anger shut up his tender mercies? "And I said, this is my infirmity: but I will remember the right hand of the Most High."

"Happy is the man that findeth wisdom; length of days is in her right hand, in her left hand is riches and honor. So teach us to number our days that we may get us an heart of wisdom." "Who is wise and he shall understand these things prudent and he shall know them, for the ways of the Lord are right, and the just shall walk in them, but the transgressor shall fall therein. Look therefore carefully, how ye walk, not as unwise but as wise, buying up the opportunity, because the days are evil, wherefore be ye not foolish, but understand what the will of the Lord is." In reading this passage one's mind at once reverts to the wise and foolish virgins as the cry went forth, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye forth to meet him." "If a man love me he will keep my words."

How true is this quotation from Ezekiel in the light of these Scriptures. "Even when the number of seeds is filled in you, for he hath weighed the world in the balance. By measure hath he measured the times, and by number hath he numbered the times, and he doth not move nor stir them till the said measure be fulfilled."

"Soul Sleeping Doctrine."

No doubt this name was invented and used as a reproach by some man claiming to be a Christian, and yet it expresses more truth and common sense than was intended. See here, in natural sleep we rest with the voluntary powers of the body and mind suspended. Webster. Our experience and observation says that is true. Then if the powers of the mind are suspended in sleep, is not the soul asleep as well as the body? Or is the soul independent of the body or the mind? If so, where is their abode, and what is the manifestation? I am free to confess that I cannot take [illegible] powers of the body and mind are suspended in sleep, or if the soul is dependent on an active organism for manifestations, then when the organism is overcome by sleep then the soul must also sleep. Then if the soul cannot think and act and remember when the organism is asleep, pray tell us how it can and does think and act and sing and shout, when the body is dead and its powers are all suspended? If there is a little soul in this world that can explain and extricate itself from this dilemma, I would be pleased to know its name and its origin, but if it cannot be found, then I must still conclude that it is all a pretentious arrogant delusion, and that the soul certainly sleeps when the body sleeps, and when the body sleeps in death, and all its powers are suspended, then the soul must necessarily sleep also, as there is no channel or organism through and by which it can play its antics. Then soul-sleeping doctrine is the true and sound doctrine after all is done and said. And we are all soul-sleepers if we only knew it. Let us endure sound doctrine, and let the fables go.

"Is My Name Written There?"

When we look over our Love Feast, and see the names of loved ones, and names of other ones that we hold dear not there, we are constrained to think of that final gathering, when those who have not been faithful shall be cast out. Matt. xxiv. 51; Rev. iii. 5.

Jesus bids us rejoice that our names are written in heaven, rather than over any other gift or power that we may possess. Luke x. 20.

But brethren, keeping it there is of more importance to us; seeing that it is better not to have known the Way of Life," than to depart from it and die in our sins. John viii: 24, 24; 2 Pet. ii. 21; Luke xii. 47.

To you who are troubled, we say, "Cheer up" and "Cast not away your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward." For Christ as a Son over his own house, whose house are we if we hold fast the confidence, and the rejoicing of the hope of the end; for we are made 'partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end." Heb. x. 35; iii. 6, 14.

"Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand. By which also ye are saved if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain." I Cor. xv.

Hence, the necessity of cultivating or working out our salvation with fear and trembling.

R. A. HEATHCOTE.

What Day?

What day of the week was Christ crucified on? When we look along the line we find that Catholicism has handed down the date of Friday, and her daughters have accepted it. But the Bible student cannot accept it as truth, because it makes the words of the blessed Master void: when he said as "Jonah was in the belly of the great fish three days and three nights, so shall the Son of Man be in the heart of the earth three days and three nights." Now, if he was crucified on Friday he could not remain in the grave three days and three nights and rise on the first day of the week, and the record says he did rise the first day of the week. Mark xvi. 9. So we must conclude that some mistake has been made. Now, dear reader, I think the trouble is, they jumped at the conclusion that he was crucified on Friday because it was the preparation day for the Sabbath. They overlook the fact that there were other Sabbaths besides the weekly or seventh-day Sabbath. The truth is the day after his crucifixion was the yearly or passover Sabbath, and came on Thursday, so he was crucified on Wednesday, was in the grave Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and so we see there were two Sabbaths passed while he was in the grave.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft post-office money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

When we are right, very little goes wrong.

Good for Turtullion,—he said, "I adore the fulness of Scripture. I do not admit what thou bringest in of thine own without Scripture."

"Our individuality is not destroyed by being with the multitude. Each must do his own work, and do it with all his might."

"If we attend carefully to our duty, and keep both beams and motes out of our own eye, those of others will not often seriously trouble us."

By continued meditation on the Word of God a man as naturally improves and advances in the godly life as a tree thrives in a well-watered soil.

We understand that "Zionism" is growing rapidly in the United States; there being no less than thirteen societies in New York City and Brooklyn, and others are being formed by the "richer Jews."

Christian graces are said to be like perfumes; the more they are pressed the sweeter they smell. Like stars that shine brightest in the dark; like trees, that are shaken, the deeper root they take, the more fruit they have.

The Holy Scripture is a golden epistle sent to us from God. This is to be read, searched, inwardly digested diligently. Ignorance of Scripture is the mother of error, not devotion, as many say.

If Jesus does not organize the twelve tribes of Israel into a kingdom, out of what or whom will he organize a kingdom? "He shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." See Luke i. 30–33.

We learn through the press that efforts are being made to construct a railway from El-Tor to the Summit of of Mount Sinai. A depot will be erected near the spot where, according to tradition, Moses stood when receiving the commandments. The line will also pass the cave in which the prophet Elijah remained in hiding while fleeing from the priests of Baal.

Mrs. Browning says:—"Ah, get to work, 'tis the best we can get in this world. God in cursing gives better gifts than men in benediction. God says sweat for foreheads,—men say crowns, and so we are crowned, ah, geshed by some tormenting circle of that which snaps with a secret spring. Get work, get work. Be sure 'tis better than what you work to get."

In the closing part of an article on the Sultan Abdul-Hamid, in a religious paper, we find these words: "Let us all earnestly and persistently pray that the Holy Spirit may fall on Sultan Abdul-Hamid with such mighty power that his wicked heart shall be changed and right and peace reign in his Kingdom." How we wish the heart of the author of that exhortation could be so changed as that she would believe and accept what the spirit in Paul says is God's saving power to those who believe. Abdul-Hamid rejects the Holy Spirit's Word—The gospel of Christ—(Rom. i: 16.), and the above exhortation shows that its author does the same. Both need to be lectured by the word of truth, see James i: 18.

This is what Dr. Channing wrote concerning the twisting or wresting the Scriptures to suit preconceptions:

"Of all the acts sagacious dupes invent,
To cheat themselves and gain a world's consent,
The worst is, Scripture warped from its intent,
That men go wrong with an ingenious skill;
Bend the straight rule to their own crooked will!
Thus with a bright and shining lamp supplied,
First put it out, then take it for a guide."

Mr. George Combe, an eminent phrenologist, says:—"No idea can be more erroneous than to suppose that man is an immortal being on account of the substance of which he is composed. System of Phrenology pp. 595–7. Cicero, having reckoned up the opinions of philosophers as to the soul's immortality, concluded thus:—"Which of these opinions is true? Some God must tell us. Which is most like truth is a great question." Institutes Vol. I. p. 56.

In regard to Reason and Faith, Dowie says.—"The adversary may swallow implicit, ignorant believers, but he must chew and pick the bones of the understanding believer, before he can assimilate him and make him like himself. The implicit believer stands in the open field and the enemy will ride over him easily; the understanding believer is in a fenced city and hath outworks to lose before the city he possess: that is, reasons to be answered before his faith is shaken, and he will sell himself dear, and lose himself by inches, if he be sold or lost at last."

It has been truly said that nothing is now perfect, and "nothing will be perfect until the return of the Lord from heaven. The hope of the moral universe is suspended upon that. The groanings of creation converge upon that. The Christian will not be like his Lord until he appears, and the whole church awaits the same glorious epiphany for her deliverance from spot and wrinkle and corrupt associations of worldliness, hypocrisy and every other evil that clings to her. True Christians, therefore, fix their eyes upon this grand, certain, and exclusive hope—the coming of the Lord from heaven. There is no hope for the church but this; and there is no hope for the agonizing world but this. Oh let us hold fast to this blessed hope, whose realization shall make the church the radiant Bride of the glorious Bridegroom."

"Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up." Matt. xv. 13. Note the contrast:—

"No wind that blows can ever kill
The tree God plants.
It bloweth east, it bloweth west,
The tender leaves have little rest,
But any wind that blows is best,
The tree God plants
Strikes deeper roots, grows hi der still,
Spreads higher boughs for God's good-will
Meets all its wants.

There is no frost hath power to blight
The tree God shields;
Its roots are warm beneath soft snows,
And when spring comes it surely knows,
And very fast to blossom grows,
The tree God shields;
Grows on apace by day and night,
Tall, sweet to taste and fair to sight,
Its fruit it yields.

There is no storm hath power to blast
The tree God knows,
No thunderbolt, nor beating rain,
Nor lightning flash, nor hurricane,
When they are spent, it doth remain,
The tree God knows
Through every tempest stand it fast,
And, from its first day to its last
Still fairer grows."

Friends of the Truth in Racine, Wisconsin, recently tried to get the Y. M. C. A. Hall for an Evangelist of the Faith to speak in, and found that the ministers of the city had recently objected to its being used for lectures on the "Second Coming of Christ," by another person. Of course they did not get it. What plea will these blind leaders make before him whom they try to keep away? Think of the above action of the Racine clergy and then know that one of the most popular clergyman in Cleveland in his last Sunday evening lecture, gave utterance to the following sentiments:—He said, "There were men who were Christians and did not know it:" said he thought "baptism was not essential to salvation;" said "a man could be a Christian who did not believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ;" said "the divinity of Christ was an intellectual conception;" said he believed it possible for one who had never heard of Christ, to be a Christian." At the same hour in another vast temple in the city another popular Presbyterian minister was lecturing on "Fiction—its religious element;" the particular novel under discussion being James Lane Allen's "The Choir Invisible;" the Rev. Doctor describing at length the principal characters. We heard of no additions to the church, however, although this was the third lecture of the course.

"The Wrong Signal."

"What has has happened?" said Mr. Hamilton to his son, who entered the room in a hurry, and with the air of one who had some interesting news to communicate.

"A freight-train has run off the track and killed a man." said Joseph.

"How did it happen?" said Mr. H.

"The Watchman gave the wrong signal."

Making a wrong signal cost a man his life. There is another source in which wrong signals occasion the loss of life—of life spiritual. He who fails to declare the way of salvation as it is laid down in the word of God,—who teaches that all men shall be saved,—or who teaches that men may secure salvation by their own works, gives the wrong signal. In consequence, men take the wrong track and go down to death.

The private professor whose reputable standing in the church and in society gives influence to his example, pursues a course of conduct utterly inconsistent with the injunction, "Be not conformed to this world," and the younger members are led to similar practice, by degrees he loses all spirituality and becomes one of those who have a name to live but are dead. Giving the wrong signal refused the disaster.

A believer exposes himself to temptation. He has power to resist the temptation and escapes. One of less power is led to follow his example and falls into sin. His predecessor gave the wrong signal, practically said there was no danger there. It was the wrong signal.

"Occupy Till I Come!"

These are the words of our Lord and Master, who has the right to command us, after having laid down his life for us, and we have handed ourselves over to him. To occupy is to be employed,—to be industrious, faithful, in the Lord,s absence,—using the money (or talents) entrusted to us so that we may be able to render our account with joy when he returns.

There is no doubt but what we all keep busy enough, so far as that is concerned, but the question for us to consider is, are we occupied as the Lord would have us? Are we doing what he told us to he told us, or are we mapping out our own work and doing it in our own way? If so, the serious question is whether or not we are on his pay roll? To say nothing here as to what the Scriptures aver on this point, certain is it that common-sense, and reason, and experience would say no, under such circumstances.

Another serious question, and one most profitable to ask is, what has the Master told us to do while he is away in the far country? It would be easy to count upon hundred commands that he gave for us to observe; but there is one, bearing upon our duty both to him and the world at large, that towers above all the rest, and shows us what we are the called to do as co workers with God. It is just what the Acts or doings of the apostles show that they did. Jesus told them to go into all the world and preach the Gospel of the Kingdom, and they did. They called out men and women for God's name, to live and reign with Christ when he comes. "Till I come," shows how long they must work on this line. When he comes their present commission expires. All their efforts up to that time, are to win a bride for the Master; and woe to him who neglects that work for speculations about what is to be, or what is not to be after the dawn of the New Era, and the Lord is King over all the earth. See what the Master says about meat in due season. Matt. xxiv: 46. Luke xii: 43.

Question Answered.

In answer to the request of a correspondent to explain Matt. xxvii: 51, 52, 53, we say to him, you had better just believe what it says, and then by comparing Scripture with Scripture you will know as much about it as any one else. You cannot surely expect us to manufacture testimony for the occasion. It says, "And behold the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom." This was the rich curtain that hung between "the holy place," and "the holiest of all," and shut off all access to God as manifested between the cherubim; and Heb. ix: 8, informs us that the Holy Spirit signified by this that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest. This thick veil hung there through the long ages that preceded the death of Christ, and into the holiest of all none might enter but the High Priest, and he only once a year, by the blood of bulls and goats, had access to God. But the rending of the veil dramatically shows us that a new and living way has been consecrated for us, and we have boldness now to enter into the holiest by the blood of Christ. Read carefully Heb. ix. and x. and see that the law was only a shadow of the good things which have come.

We learn, too, from our text that the earth quaked and the rocks rent and graves were opened when Christ expired, and many bodies of the Saints which slept arose and came out of their graves after his resurrection. We do not know who they were, or anything further in reference to them. But we do know that they without us shall not be made perfect, because Christ is the first-fruit, and the second-fruit are those who are his at his coming. There are those who think that they who came out of their graves ascended to heaven with Christ, and were referred to in Ephesians iv: 8, where it says he led captivity captive and received gifts for men. We cannot agree with this. The context shows that the gifts received for men were the gifts and graces of the spirit, to equip the apostles for the work before them. Jesus was death's captive; he conquered death, and let it captive, and holds the keys of death and the grave i. e. the power over death.

"Current Events in the Light of Prophecy."

"Glad Tidings," remarks that the Far Eastern Question has of late been absorbing public attention throughout the world. China has been considered to be "outside the prophetic area." But the coming reign of God through Christ is to be world-wide; "Unto him every knee shall bow." What effect the recent actions of Germany and Russia in China will have upon the familiar Eastern Question, that is closely bound up with the Holy Land it is difficult to say. These may lead to a re-arrangement of the European Alliances, and may hasten the confusion that is to exist among the nations when the Lord comes.

The Scotsman says:—"As 1898 opens, the eyes of the augurs are turned to the East. It is not now our familiar Eastern Question that chiefly interests and puzzles Europe. That is still unsolved. It seems further from solution than it was a year ago; for the Greeks attempted prematurely and blunderingly to cut the Gordian Knot with the sword of war, and, failing, they have made the tangle greater and made the knot tighter than ever before.

The Sultan is still in dire straits for money. After much negotiation the Ottoman Bank has advanced the paltry sum of one hundred thousand pounds. This is to pay the troops in Thessaly and meet the liabilities of the army contractors.

There has been extraordinary bustle in British military circles of late. Troops have been hurriedly despatched from Malta and England to take the place of the regiments in Egypt that have been sent up the Nile. The supplies of war material have been enormous,—far beyond what would be required for the reclaiming of another portion of the Soudan to Egyptian authority, as in former campaigns. The sudden decision and the extraordinary preparations would be inexplicable if that were all, or if it were simply to meet a threatened advance of the Dervishes. There is evidently something more important. This is the explanation given by the Press Association:—"As to the object of sending British reinforcements to Egypt, official reticence in London is still strictly maintained, but few possessing any knowledge of affairs in that part of the world incline to believe that the tactics are purely defensive, and are pursued solely in consequence of a fear that the Dervishes may attempt to regain some of their lost posts. The possibility of an early advance on Khartoum may explain matters somewhat, and there is a disposition in some quarters to believe that the move may be indirectly intended as an intimation to those favoring the repeated aspirations of the French to be the first on the Upper Nile, that this country, or at all events Egypt with the aid of this country, has definite intentions in the same direction, and will be prepared to further those intentions in the most effective manner possible. But the Paris correspondent of the London Standard states that the French advance to the Nile is progressing so rapidly that shortly the head waters of the Nile will be claimed as part of the French possessions in Africa."

"Serious anti-Jewish demonstrations have taken place in France in connection with the Dreyfus-Esterhazy affair. It is more than likely that a strong feeling of animosity will spring up against the ancient people all over the mystical Babylon, before the anti-typical Cyrus and his hosts appear upon the scene for their deliverance."

On the 8th instant, newspapers throughout the country made the announcement that "Russia has Manchuria." While the other great powers were talking about the future of China, several thousand Russians have occupied Kurin and the ancient capital of Manchuria, the home of the race which furnishes the present reigning dynasty in China. It is now virtually Russian territory, and a long step has been taken toward the accomplishment of all Russia's designs in Eastern Asia. This lops off one of the most important divisions of the Chinese Empire,—a province of some 6,000,000 or 8,000,000 inhabitants. The papers say England and Japan will have to bestir themselves to prevent the northern part of China becoming Russian territory.

Report of Meetings.

Editor Restitution:

The meetings held by Sister Kathleen Greenbaum, at Lanark, Ill., Jan. 30th, were continued over Sunday, Feb. 6th, much interest was manifested. On Sunday morning she chose for her subject of discourse "Christ as Savior, Priest and King;" and presented it so plainly to the people that many said, "We never heard such doctrine," and after the meeting closed many, although strangers, came flocking around the rostrum to shake hands with Sister Greenbaum, manifesting a spirit of love and interest in the things of the kingdom. Sunday evening at the Progressive Church after the Union Temperance services held by Miss Morrow, Sister Greenbaum had the privilege to make a few appropriate remarks relating to the rescuing of souls for Christ and then becoming Christians in fact by obedience and living a Christlike life. From here she has gone to Dixon. May the blessings of God be with her and her good works.

From a Brother in Christ,

Obituary.

Editor Restitution:

I would be pleased to have the obituary of my daughter printed in The Restitution.

Dear brothers and sisters, I feel encouraged when I see so many good letters. I feel like striving more than ever to do my duty to God, and to do unto others as you would have them do unto you. It has been a sad New Year to us, as death has taken our dear daughter and Sister Ida from us. I feel as if I had nothing worth living for, but I have others that need my care, so I will say, Thy will be done, not mine, the Lord knows what is best for us and will have mercy on us. I hope we will all meet in the kingdom without the loss of one through Christ, our Redeemer. Amen.

May God bless you all is my prayer,
Fanny Norbury.

Miss Ida Norbury Dead.

"This community was startled Saturday morning last to learn of the death of Miss Ida Norbury, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Norbury, east of this city, which occurred at Olathe, at 12:30 A. M., that morning, in the 25th year of her age.

Both Miss Ida and her sister Annie, who have been conducting a dressmaking school at Olathe during the past year, took sick at the same time with typhoid fever about two weeks ago last Sunday. Their parents went at once to their bedside. On Friday Miss Ida rested easier, and the relatives here received word to that effect Saturday morning. They had just arrived home with the welcome news, when a messenger arrived with a dispatch stating that she was dead.

The remains were shipped to Lebo Saturday night and from there were brought to her parental home. Arrangements had been made to have the funeral obsequies held on Sunday afternoon, but owing to the heavy rain the services were postponed until 9:30 A. M., Monday. Her funeral was attended by a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends, Rev. Woodside, of Colony, Kan., preaching the sermon at the M. E. church. A number of beautiful floral tributes were placed upon the casket by loving hands as a last token of respect to the deceased. The remains were interred in the Hartford cemetery.

Miss Norbury was a lovely young lady and was admired and respected by all who knew her. She possessed of a lovely Christian character, having united with the Christian church in this city in January, 1896. While in Olathe both young ladies made many lasting friendships, and during their illness they did not want for anything, although strong comparative strangers.

The family of the deceased are grief-stricken over the sudden calling away of their beloved daughter and sister. We join the many friends in extending our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family in their sad loss of a loved one."

Editor Restitution.

Mr. Francis Malcolm died suddenly Dec. 10th, of paralysis of the heart. He was 87 years and about 3 months old, having been born in the year 1810. He was a good Christian and was prepared to go at any time the Lord saw fit to call him.

Respectfully,
A. J. Walker.

Poetry.

Come Thou, O Lord Jesus.

Coming? Yes coming
To gather the Bride;
Closer, yet closer,
Dear Lamb, I abide.
O'[illegible] heart [illegible]
To keep Thy blessed Lord when soon [illegible]

Watching? Yes watching
Dear Lord we pray
The signs of thy coming
Pervade earth [illegible]
Our lamps trimmed and [illegible] burn bright on [illegible] Hill
Well-watered, and [illegible]

Waiting? Yes waiting
Dear Lord thy voice
To greet Thee when
Our hearts now [illegible]
That we will go [illegible]
Casting [illegible]

Looking? Yes looking
Dear Lord every hour
For thy incoming
Glory and power.
We [illegible]
The conquering Lord, [illegible]

Longing? Yes longing
Dear Lord, for a change
Into thy Likeness,
Translation [illegible]
Together the bride [illegible]
Blessed Redeemer, [illegible]

Coming? Yes coming
Dear Lord quickly come,
And gather thy Bride
To her heavenly home.
We long to be There, thy glory to share,
In the blest home thou hast gone to prepare.

Coming? Yes coming
On glorious clouds,
Until thy appearing
We'll tell it aloud
That soon thou will come, to gather thy Bride,
Robed whiter than snow, to sit at thy side.

The Little Horn with Eyes and Mouth Speaking Great Things.

"There is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days."

Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the metalic image, reveals four universal kingdoms of men, and out of the fourth would arise ten kingdoms. "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces, and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."

After this Daniel had a dream and visions similar to that of Nebuchadnezzar's with another horn, or power. This other power, or little horn having eyes, and a mouth speaking great things is the subject and object of this article, to ascertain if possible, its times, its work, and its end. In order to do this we will trace the dreams and visions of Daniel on down, barely sketching enough to introduce the little horn as we pass along.

The fourth beast has ten horns, "I considered the horns, and behold, there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots: and, behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things." Dan. vii. 7, 8, 10. "I beheld till the thrones were cast down, etc., and the judgment was set, and the books were opened. 4. Daniel was grieved in my spirit in the midst of my body, and the vision of my head troubled me. I came near unto one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things."

"These great beasts, which are four, are four kings which shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever, even for ever and ever. Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, and I would know the truth about the ten horns that were in his head, and of the others that came up, before whom three fell; even of them that had eyes, and a mouth that spake great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows, —I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them."

How long? "Until the Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom." Dan. vii. 15-22.

"Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, etc. And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise: and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings. And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws: and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time. But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and destroy unto the end." This is the third time this little horn has been introduced in the 7th chapter of Daniel, and the next event is the coming of the Ancient of Days (or Christ) when the saints take the kingdom, and possess it forever. This little horn appears again in the 8th chapter of Dan. after the vision of the ram and he-goat. "Therefore the he goat waxed very great; and when he was strong, the great horn was broken, and for it came up four notable ones towards the four winds of heaven. And out of one of them came forth a little horn, which waxed exceeding great, toward the south, and toward the east and toward the pleasant land. And it waxed great, even to the host of heaven; and it cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground, and stamped upon them. Yea, he magnified himself even to the prince of the host, and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down. And a host was given him against the daily sacrifice by reason of transgression, and it cast down the truth to the ground; and it practiced, and prospered." Dan. viii. 8-13. How long?

This question is asked in reference to the treading down of the sanctuary and the host by this little horn; and the answer is, "Unto 2300 days then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." See Ez. xxxix. 12, 11. 16; Ex. xv. 17, also Psa lxxviii. 54. Daniel don't understand the vision yet: Gabriel is sent to make him understand the vision. "Understand, O son of man: for at the time of the end shall be the vision. Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation: for the time appointed the end shall be." Dan. viii. 16-19. "The ram which thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia. And the rough goat is the king of Grecia: and the great horn that is between his eyes is the first king. Now that being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power. And in the latter time of their kingdom, when the transgressors are come to the full, a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences shall stand up. And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power: and he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper, and practice, and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people. And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand; and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by peace shall destroy many: he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes, but he shall be broken without hand."

Twice in this 8th chapter of Daniel and three times in the seventh chapter has this little horn been treated of extensively, and the specifications of its powers and crimes are numerous and specific, yet there seems to be a hidden mystery about it which time alone can bring to light: for Daniel says, "I was astonished at the vision: but none understood it." Chap. viii. 27.

And again Gabriel is sent to inform Daniel, and said, "O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding. Therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision. Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy.

Of this prophecy of 70 weeks of Jewish history, 69 weeks was fulfilled in the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus in A. D. 70, therefore an interregnum of over 1800 years to the last week of Daniel's 70. This last week is covered by that little horn we have been considering. That time is called the time of the end. Dan. viii. 17. Also the latter days chap. x. 14. This little horn has not put in his appearance but will after the ten toe kingdoms are in position, for he plucks up three of the ten. This little horn makes a covenant, or league with the Jews for one week, and in the midst of the week he breaks his covenant with them, chap. ix. 27. and then he takes away the daily sacrifice, chap. viii. 11, and sets up the abomination that makes desolate. See Mark xiii. 14, 19; Rev xiii. 5-7; Dan. vii. 25; also viii. 24, 25.

A few words in reference to Daniel's interpretation of the metalic image. The third, or Grecian kingdom is symbolized: its belly and thighs of brass: on the margin it reads its belly and sides were brass. History confirms the fact now. When the [illegible] passed from Greece to Rome it was in its consolidated form, and later it was divided, and sub-divided, but the toe kingdoms come out of the extremity of the feet; therefore those kingdoms cannot be the toe kingdoms that must be in existence when the God of heaven sets up his kingdom. These toe kingdoms must symmetrize with the other parts of the image. These kingdoms cannot exist long before the little horn comes up and plucks up three, and his time is seven years: the last week of the 70 of Dan. ix. 24. called the time of the end.

After portraying the power and crimes of this little horn, the question is asked, How long the vision—to give both the sanctuary (the land covenanted to Abraham) Ex. xv. 17, and the host (Jews) to be trodden under foot? Unto 2300 days, (not years) then shall the sanctuary be cleansed.

This little horn power we have been contemplating is a descendant of Nebuchadnezzar symbolized by a tree, the tree was to be hewed down and destroyed. Dan. iv. 23; but, leave the stump of the roots in the earth with a band of iron and brass, (what for?) that a spout may come out of the extremity of the iron, or Roman kingdom, and he will make a league, or covenant with the Jews for one week, the last week of Dan. ix. 27, and 7 times shall pass over him. One time is 360 days, 7 times will be 7 times 360 equals 2520 days, and in the midst of the week, or after 1260 days he breaks his covenant with them, by taking away the daily sacrifice, and setting up the abomination of desolation. Matt. xxiv. 15, and they shall be given into his hands for a time and times and dividing of time, or 1260 days the last half of Daniel's seventieth week.

The 1260 days Dan. vii. 25, and the 2300 days of Dan. viii. 14, and Dan. xii. 7, 11, 12, are all measured with the same rod, but have different ending, or epoch. For instance the question in Dan. viii. 13. How long the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot? 2300 days. The answer is not in strict accord with the question: it should have been as in Rev. xi. 12, forty-two months. The 2300 days covers the 42 months or 1260 days, and reaches down 1040 days to the cleansing of the sanctuary; the first epoch probably in the restoration of all things, etc., "And there was given me a reed like unto a rod; and the angel stood, saying: Rise, and measure the temple of God: and the altar, and them that worship therein. But the court which is without the temple leave out, and measure it not: for it is given unto the Gentiles; and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months. And I will give power unto my two witnesses, (I understand the two witnesses to be the saints, and the holy people, or Daniel's people) and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and three score days, clothed in sackcloth." While these two witnesses are prophesying clothed in sackcloth the little horn of Dan. vii. 25, is treading down the mighty and the holy people, chap. viii. 10-13, 24, 25, and "they are given into his hands for a time and times and dividing of time." And while in their hands are powerless, having no power, therefore symbolically dead." Rev. xi. 7, "And when they shall have finished their testimony the beast (the little horn) that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them. And they of the people and kindreds and tongues and nations shall see their dead bodies three days and a half, (forty-two months) and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves. And after three days and a half the spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet, and great fear fell upon them which saw them. And I heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them, come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud; and their enemies beheld them." The book of Daniel is a book of hidden mysteries closed up and sealed to the time of the end. "But, behold; the lion of the tribe of Judah, the Root of David, hath prevailed to open the book and to loose the seals thereof." Rev. v. 5. "Therefore go; take the little book (the book of Daniel) which is open in the hand of the angel which standeth upon the sea and upon the earth. And I went unto the angel, and said unto him, give me the little book. And he said unto me, take and eat it up, and I took the book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up, and it was in my mouth sweet as honey: and as soon as I had eaten it my belly was bitter. These bitter things contained in the book are what made Daniel sick. Dan. vii. 28.

"And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great Prince which standeth for the children of thy people: and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time: and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one, that shall be found written in the book." Dan. xii. 1. "And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels. And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven. And the dragon was cast out, that old serpent called the Devil, and Satan, which deceived the whole world." I did not know when I commenced writing about the little horn with eyes and a mouth speaking great things, that I was on trail of the serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, but I knew I could see his work all along the line.

We will give some of the names by which the little horn is characterized. "A king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences." Dan viii. 23. By his nativity an Assyrian. Isa. x. 5, 24, 25. By analogy he is Gog. Ez. xxxviii. 1; xxxix. 4. A Babylonian by direct line through its stump root sprout. A Roman by analogy, and implication through the stump band of brass, and christened with a Greek name, Apollyon. Rev. ix. 11. He is the man of sin. 2 Thess. ii. 3-9. He is the Anti-Christ of whom Christ said, "I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive. Would you like to know his name? His name in Hebrew is Abaddon, and is the angel of the bottomless pit. Rev. ix. 11.

Our Love Feast.

Editor Restitution:

I have been reading some of the good letters in THE RESTITUTION, and I thought I would write a short letter and ask a few questions that I think are of very great importance for us to understand and know the true meaning, as all Scripture is given to us by and through inspiration. There are great many preachers in our country that advance some very queer ideas on certain Scriptures, so I thought I would come where I could get the light I am searching for. The Scriptures I would like to have explained are these; 2 Thess. ii. 1. 7 verses of this chapter introduce a character that I have thought represented the Pope of Rome. From 8th to 12th verse introduces a different character, and I have thought it represented spiritualism in its true form and when we read Rev. xiii. we find those same characters, one as the leopard beast, the other as the two horned-beast. The two horned-beast comes up out of the earth. Now as I understand this two horned-beast causes great trouble in our land and country by enforcing all the authority and rulings of the first beast. If this be true, can we look for our Savior soon, or must we wait for the full development of the two horned-beast, which will cause trouble as times? Believing we have men in the Abrahamic faith that can explain I wait. Yours.

S. B. Perry.

To the managers of The Restitution and all its friends;

I am thankful for the sending of the paper for 1898. I believe in its doctrines because I find it in general the doctrine of the Bible, and I am thankful that God has given me a desire to know and do his will, and I am waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, for unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation. "I am the light of the world, he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." John viii. 12.

Thy Word is my delight,
It leads me in the light;
And if in darkness I should stray,
It says come back, this is the way.

And when I would give up,
And slum to do the right;
It bids me courage take,
To run the way of life.

Pass on the heavenly way,
And do not go astray:
And soon your path will end,
In everlasting day.

J. Harris, Sen.

Dear Restitution:

A question, who can answer? Alone for years I have earnestly contended for the true faith in Christ. I have been treated with contempt and sneered at, and once was told by a preacher in the Congregational church that we were what he called "Anti-Christ," and if I did not quit teaching that the church was not the kingdom, he would turn me out of his house. I told him I should teach it so long as God gave me strength to do it. The trustees of the church told me they guessed I would not go just yet, but the preacher is gone, but not until he broke up his church or nearly so. I have the young peoples Bible class, which is more than twice as large as it should be for one teacher. Now, I want the prayers of all that I may teach that class just as Christ would have me. We were working on Lake xxi. 24 and Rev. xx. just before I received Bro. W. H. Wilson's of Jan. 5th. Oh, how it cheered us on. Now, for the question. It seems to me I never wanted any help on any passage of Scripture, but here would come our good old paper with just the article I wanted. Praise God, for the love he has for his people. These noble workers cannot imagine how their encouraging, inspiring and instructive articles cheer our lonely hearts who are alone in this wilderness of confusion. May God bless them for it.

My prayer is, Come Lord and come quickly.

C. H. Fussell.

To the in three scattered churches:

Once more it is our privilege to send greeting to each other, and oh, how I love to read those letters from the brethren. It is a great pleasure to me, as we cannot see each other, that we can through The Restitution hear from each other. It is a great help; it gives cheer and strength to some that are often cast down. Then let every one write a few lines for The Restitution that it may be the means of strengthening some. I want to see a letter from all of the brethren in this way.

J. W. Booth.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

Seeing our subscription is already past due, we enclose money for another year. We have no preaching or religious association here, except what we get through The Restitution. If there is a believer living near Greenfield, Mo., we would be glad to make their acquaintance. With love and greeting to all that are in the faith, I remain your brother.

Wm. Updegraff.

To the Household of Faith:

I have not yet joined the church, but I go to the Bible class, trying to do that which is good in the sight of the Lord, so that I may be able to enter into the straight and narrow gate which leadeth to life eternal, and be among the few when he comes that he will find watching and waiting for him to come and wipe away this awful curse from off the earth, and make it an Eden home for the righteous to dwell in. In the next age where there will be no sorrow, nor death, nor crying, for the former things will have passed away, where nothing will hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the Lord. It will be a glorious time when these shall come to pass, and this awful curse removed, and this earth made a home for the righteous.

A hoping friend,

Cleveland Southerland.

[Glad to hear that you are striving to do right. Keep on in your attendance at the Bible class, and in the study of God's Word, and we hope very soon you will see the right path clearly and what your duty is, and to hear that you have been baptized and have taken upon yourself the name of Jesus.—Ed.]

Dear Restitution:

I for the first time mingle my voice in praising and glorifying our Savior with all those that are of like precious faith that was once delivered to the saints, in thanking him for all his goodness and benefits during the past year, and I ask of him to continue to bestow upon all his people goodness and benefits, for he saith all power is in his hand, in heaven and in earth. So dear brothers and sisters, let us abide in him, that when he shall appear, we may have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming. Dear brothers and sisters, I ask your prayers that I may hold out and prove faithful.

Yours in hope of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord,

J. C. Mitchell.

Dear Home band of Faith:

With sad hearts mother and wife join me in the thankfulness to God, for being permitted to join in one more love feast. We have just heard of the death of Bro. G. M. Merritt. After long years in the self-same with whom [illegible] last year [illegible] be at rest, he expired on Wednesday Dec. 15, 1897, leaving to his dear wife and children, brethren and friends, this legacy: "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith." 2 Tim. iv. 7. Words of comfort and instruction were offered by Bro. Jas. T. Mingerief on Friday 17th. The interment was at Shady Grove, near Hot Springs, Ark. Bro. Mingerief's text was Job xiv. 14, showing the absolute necessity of the resurrection of the body in order to life after death. To the bereaved ones, Put your trust in, and cast your cares on the Lord, for he careth for you. For that dear sufferer cannot come back to us, but we can prepare to meet him, where sorrow and sighing will be no more. Amen!

Yours in hope of life in Christ,

H. A. Hembreeds.

[This letter should have appeared sooner but was overlooked.—Ed.]

Dear Restitution:

I am almost ashamed to write to you after getting the paper so long. I like the paper so well and always read it as soon as I get it, and I thank the kind friends who thought enough of my husband and myself to send it to us. It always does me so much good to read The Restitution and I will miss it greatly when it stops. I would like very much to subscribe for the paper, but sorry to say we are in poor circumstances now. My husband has been out of work for over two months, he is now in Kansas looking for work. He has been gone five weeks from home, and I am so lonely without him, if it wasn't for the children and this dear paper I would almost despair, but I trust in our dear Lord to provide and guide us in the right path. Your belief has been mine and husband's for the past three years, although we neither one belong to a church we try to live up to the teachings of the Bible as near as we can. I read the papers and give them to others to read. I will now close by thanking the dear friends again for sending the paper. Dear brothers and sisters, please pray for us that we may be ever faithful to the end and be ready to receive our dear Lord Jesus when he comes.

I remain a true friend,

Mrs. P. P. Smith.

Dear Restitution:

As I have to send you a letter I will send you a few thoughts on the parable of the three measures of meal. One writer said the measures did not count at all in the parable; another carries the last measure into the eternal age. Now the woman took leaven and hid it in three measures of meal. The leaven is the gospel preached in the three dispensations or ages of the world. The first measure represents the law age. The leaven or truth worked to a certain extent in that age, but the whole did not become leavened. The second measure is the gospel age or our time, and leaven working to a greater extent than it did in the law dispensation, but the whole lump will not become leavened. The third represents the millennial age or age to come (as Paul said, whereof we speak). Now in this millenial age the leaven will work until the whole lump becomes leavened; until all will know the Lord from the least to the greatest; now, I am fully persuaded that the Lord Jesus will soon come without a sin offering unto salvation to every one that believes. Soon may it be.

Submitted in love,

C. T. Wilbie.

Dear Restitution:

We like the paper and do not want to do without it. We feel encouraged when we read so many good letters from those of the one and only true faith. We feel like pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. We are a little band here in Clarksville, sixteen in all, we meet twice a week. On Sunday Bro. Geo. Moyer preaches for us, and he is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth. We all think very highly of him and would miss him greatly if he should leave us. We meet Thursday evening for prayer meeting and reading of the Word, and to exhort each other to so live that when our blessed Lord shall come again that we may be permitted to enter into his rest, and share with him in his glory. May God bless all the household of faith, is our prayer.

S. M. & A. Seitz.

Dear Restitution:

As we cannot do without the paper we will send a little money. We meant to send to you ago, but sickness and many cares returned us from so doing. To the loved brethren and sisters participating in the love feast, I send greetings. May we be a [illegible] to the world to [illegible] is my prayer.

Mrs. M. Smith.

7. An understanding son watcheth to guard law: but he who is shepherdeth beastliness dishonoreth a father.

8. He who increaseth his wealth with usurious interest and excessive gains is gathering together for the one who is merciful to beggars.

9. The one who turneth his ear away from listening to law is even making his votive-prayer an abomination.

10. He who causeth the upright to err in an evil way will make himself fall into corruption: And the transgressor will pass through good things and not enter into them.

11. A rich man may be wise in his own estimation; but a needy man with apprehension will find him out.

12. Because of responsive-help for justified ones there hath come to be much glory; but in the places of their irreverent men are being taken prisoners.

13. The one who revealeth his own irreverence will not have been prosperel; but the one who discourseth reproofs will have been loved.

14. Blessed-happy is the man who always stoopeth because of true reverence; but the hard-hearted will fall into evils.

15. A hungry lion and a thirsty wolf is he who acts the tyrant though he is indeed a beggar of a needy nation.

16. A king in need of revenues is a great sycophant; but the one who hateth iniquity will live a long time.

17. The one who becometh surety for a man under accusation of murder will be a fugitive and not in security. Chasten a son and he will love thee, and will give a cosmos to thy soul; He shall hearken to a nation that is an evader of law.

18. The one who goeth his way justly will have received responsive-aid; But the one who goeth his way in crooked ways will have become entangled.

19. The one who tilleth his own land will have been filled with Bread; but the one who pursueth after leisure will have been filled with penury.

20. A man worthy of confidence will have received many blessings; but the evil man will not be unpunished.

21. He who dishonoreth the face of the justified is not good; Such an one will give away a man of worth for a morsel of bread.

22. A man with an evil eye hasteth to be rich, and doth not know that the one who showeth mercy will control him.

23. He who reproveth a man's ways will have more graces than he who speaketh graciously with his tongue.

24. He who casteth away father or mother and thinketh he is not sinning is a partner of an irreverent man.

25. An unreliable man renders judgment according to probabilities; but one who trusts in the Lord will be in a state of careful diligence.

26. He who trusts in a rashly bold heart is wanting in good sense; but he who goeth his way with wisdom will have been saved.

27. He who giveth to beggars will not have besought for himself; but he who turneth away his eye will be in much perplexity.

28. In the places of the irreverent the justified sigh; but in their loss the justified will have been increased.

COMMENT.

The 28th chapter is made up of disconnected aphorisms; but each a jewel of wisdom of itself with a chaste and appropriate sitting of well-selected words. To reset the thought is not an easy thing to do—that is to translate the thought with its very ancient and obsolete idioms I mean. Whether I have succeeded in a degree the intelligent reader must judge.

And I have brought to bear great congruity with the text as well as a thorough acquaintance with previous translations and tried to do conscientious work unbiased by previous prejudices and convictions.

The wisdom, nay divine prescience speaks for itself in these aphorisms and to the thoughtful, reverent mind I apprehend they carry along with them and obedience to their dictates "the promise for the life that now is, as well as the life that is to be."

Read for yourselves and see the seed-thought they contain expanded into the flower and fruit of the later gospel parable and precept.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Merit Always Wins.

The hard times of the past three or four years have been very destructive to all industrial affairs, and the railways have had an unusual amount of difficulty in making both ends meet. Roads that have, during this trying period, earned dividends while at the same time affording high class transportation facilities to their patrons, have, indeed, been fortunate. And such an event speaks well for the management of the roads.

The record of the Nickel Plate road during the recent period of industrial depression has indeed been remarkable and it speaks most eloquently of the conservative judgment of the managers. For this road has made great and steady progress in the material of its roadway and appliances, and in perfecting its equipment. The interests of the public have been in nowise neglected; in fact, the success of this road has inured to the benefit of the public as much, if not more, than to the stockholders. The condition of the road today shows this. Great and valuable improvements of a permanent character have been made—in the shape of strengthening the roadway, bridges, and other accessories, and procuring new and improved safety appliances; new coaches have been added, elegant Wagner sleeping cars put on, new and powerful engines have been placed in service, and everything has been done to raise the standard of the road, to perfect its service, and to give it a leading place among the best roads in the country. The result has been obvious. The people have observed the progressive spirit of the road, have given it a liberal patronage, have enjoyed its excellent facilities, and that tells the whole story of a highly successful enterprise.

Among the most noteworthy improvements effected by the Nickle Plate route is the introduction of a first-class dining car service which has won the approval of the best class of patrons. Then the coaches have been illuminated by the brilliant Pintsch gas, heated by steam, and placed in the care of a colored porter. So the passengers have had the best that money can afford, at the lowest rates.

The through train service of the Nickel Plate, running in connection with the West Shore and Fitchburg railroads—over the great Hoosac Tunnel route, between New York, Boston and Chicago, ranks with the best in the country and has become deservedly popular. Elegant new coaches, and palatial Wagner buffet sleeping cars run through without change; the service is unexcelled, the time fast, the scenery most fascinating. Located along the south shore of Lake Erie are many substantial and attractive summer resorts that are yearly growing in popularity, and this class of travel promises a continually increasing source of revenue to the Nickel Plate road.—mar 2.

The Great Revolution.

This is the title of a book of 80 pages with paper cover, written by J. B. Cratou. Every Bible student admits that it is very interesting reading. It points out prophecies that are now being fulfilled that are signs of the near coming of the Lord. The chapters are as follows:—1. The end of the Age. 2. The Lord's coming is near. 3. A Planetary Crisis. (From Astronomy.) 4. Prepare War. 5. Times of Dan. and Rev. 6. History repeats itself. 7. A power rising. (The labor organizations, the Lord's battle-ax.) The chapters of the supplement are:—1. A ray of hope. 2. Restitution. 3. The redeemed shall come to Zion.

The above head-lines of chapters will give the reader an idea of the book. Send eight two-cent postage stamps and get a copy by mail. Address, J. B. Cratou, Wilsey, Morris Co. Kan.

Through Pullman Tourist Sleeper.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters. Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

"Without Blemish and Without Spot." 1 Pet. i. 19.

1. Some Josephites and some of Socinian taint, have imagined that our Savior's flesh was "sinful," and that he needed repentance and baptism for remission of sins. But the blood is the life of the flesh (Lev. xvii. 11), and if those who counted his blood "an unholy thing" were blaspheming apostates, are they any better who count his flesh an unholy thing? That flesh he compared to heavenly manna, and willingly offered "without spot" to God. The same Greek for "without spot" is translated "without fault" in Rev. xiv. 5, and sons of immortals. Read Heb. ix. 14; x. 29; xiii. 12; Jno. vi. 51; 1 Jn. i. 7. Not even Timothy who was born in sin, needed circumcision for justification (Gen. ii. 5; Acts xvi. 3); why then imagine that Jesus who was born holy, needed baptism for remission of sins? The nature of Emmanuel was better understood by the inspired John than by Josephites and Socinians. Matt. iii. 11, 15.

2. Paul's gospel teaches that Christ was cut off ("not for himself," but) "for the sins." Dan. ix. 26; 1 Cor. xv. 3; 1 Tim. i. 8. Observe the "OUR" five times in two verses. 1 Jn. iii. 4, 5. He was "holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners." Heb. vii. 26. Hence it seems only "profane and vain babbling" to say that he was punished with death for sin of his own. Jno. viii. 46; 1 Tim. vi. 20; 2 Tim. ii. 16. In the sublimity of Divine love he spontaneously and of his own accord "gave himself for us," saying, "I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself." Titus ii. 14; John x. 14, 18. ("But for this voluntary and disinterested sacrifice, there would be no redemption." —Dr. Jno. Thomas, Eureka iii. 382.)

3. Thus by purity and dignity combined—the purity of "That Holy Thing" born of Mary, and the dignity of "the only begotten Son of God"—He was fully qualified as Mediatorial SURETY and RANSOM, to be "the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world. 1 Jno. ii. 2. He who "knew NO sin" was willingly "made a sin-offering on our behalf," and suffered the RIGHTEOUS for the unrighteous." 1 Pet. iii. 18; 2 Cor. v. 21. Dinglott. It is from "the second death that believers are thus ransomed; yea, and even the first death is rendered rather a sleep than a death, for they "sleep in Jesus." 1 Thess. iv. 14; Rev. ii. 11.

4. Being "made under the law"—in willing subjection to the law—He kept it all, ceremonial and moral: and was "obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Gal. iv. 4; Matt. iii. 15; v. 17; Phil. ii. 7, 8. By which two things, obedience and death, he redeemed us, ("bought us off," Dinglott) from the curse of the law, not only discharging the penalty incurred by OUR sins, which is death, but meriting the reward of his obedience, which is life, —"The man which doeth those things shall live by them." Rom. vi. 23; x. 5. And as "it was not possible that he should be holden of death." He was raised from the dead to die no more, and says, "Because I live ye shall live also." Acts ii. 24, 27; Rom. vi. 9; Jno. xiv. 19. Thus "the church which is his body" (Ephes. i. 23; comp.

through her living Head) that "endless life" which is a gift from the Father to the Son, and from the Son to the church. Jno. v. 26; xvii. 2; Rom. vi. 23. And though now free from Mosaic law, we are "under law to Christ," to whom "ALL" both just and unjust, are responsible as the Judge of living and dead. Rom. x. 4; 1 Cor. ix. 21; Jno. v. 22, 28, 29; Matt. xxviii 19, Acts xxiv. 15.

5. "All we like sheep have gone astray," but the holy Lamb "proceeded forth and came from God" to seek and save such lost sheep. Isa. liii. 6; Lu. xix. 10. Does not this prove that the unblemished Lamb—the very GOOD to the fold and WAY to the Father—was never himself a lost sheep sent to seek the lost? And that he was never "dead in trespasses and sins" as were all of us who are "by nature the children of wrath." Ephes. ii. 1, 3. To be an acceptable sacrifice, the literal lamb that prophetically typified Christ had to have no blemish nor "any evil-foreordness." Lev. xxii. 19 to 24; Deut. xvii. 1; Mal. i. 7, 8, 14. No inherent sin was in the cherubic veil that typified the flesh of Jesus. Heb. x. 20; Ex. xxvi. 31. Adam, though a mere type of Christ and therefore inferior to him, began life with flesh that was not "sinful." Rom. v. 14; Gen. i. 31; Eccl. vii. 29. Is it to be supposed then that the inferior Adam began with a holier body than the higher Adam? To answer the question, "Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean?" I need only repeat the angelic words, "For with God nothing shall be impossible." Lu. i. 37.

6. "There is one God the Father," and "one Lord Jesus Christ," his only begotten Son (1 Cor. viii. 6), even that Son who truly came "in flesh" (en sarki) that was holy at his birth, without fault at his death, saw no corruption in the tomb, and was made immortal and "perfect" at his resurrection. His sanctification should, perhaps, be viewed as twofold, (1) That which he had of the Father through the creative Spirit, at the miraculous conception, before being born or "sent into the world," and (2) That which was manifested by himself in a sinless life and sacrificial death. Jno. x. 36; xvii. 19.

7. "The Holy One" is the Father's name, and also the Son is called his "Holy One," "The Holy One and the Just," "That Holy Thing," "The Most Holy." Hab. i. 12; Acts ii. 27; iii. 14; Luke i. 35; Dan. ix. 24. Now I "tremble at the Word of the Lord" (Isa. lxvi. 2, 5), and cannot adopt the sentiments of Josephites, Unitarians, Socinians, and such like remnants of old Pharisaism and Sadducean "leaven" which tried to rob the Son of his due, under pretense of giving glory to God. Jno. ix. 24. Of such leaven the Lord commands us to "BEWARE." Matt. xvi. 6, 12. "All men should honor the Son even as they honor the Father."

A CONSENSUS OF REPRESENTATIVE WRITERS.

"Jesus was 'a body prepared' by special Spirit-creation, the Cherub upon which the effluent power of the Eternal Substance rested.....HE WAS CLEARLY IN AN INTELLECTUAL AND MORAL CONDITION PARALLEL WITH ADAM'S BEFORE HE TRANSGRESSED."—Dr. Jno. Thomas, in Phanerosis, Published 1869. "The referring the promised progeny to the 'Holy Ghost' renders it necessary that he himself should be an 'holy one.....Born a man, the Redeemer bore a veritable human life, but similar to that of Adam BEFORE the fall."—Dr. Olshausen, on Luke i. 35. "Christ's body was pure and sinless whilst ours is impure."—Martin Luther, quoted by Olshausen. "Christ's humanity was formed by the Holy Ghost antecedent to all actions of its own, absolutely holy. He was called in his mother's womb, 'That Holy Thing.' Lu. i. 35."—Dr. A. A. Hodge, in Outlines of Theology (Presbyterian.) "His conception must be otherwise than by ordinary generation, that so, though partaking of the human nature he might escape the corruption and pollution of it and not be conceived not shapen in iniquity," —Matt. Henry (Presb.) "A virgin was beyond the law of nature enabled to conceive, and that which was conceived in her was originally and completely sanctified."—Bishop Pearson, on the Creed. "In order to reverse the universal sentence passed upon mankind and to purge their universal corruption, a Redeemer was to be found pure of every stain of inbred and contracted guilt."—Bp. Horsley. "Christ in the truth of our nature, was made like unto us in all things, sin only excepted, from which he was clearly void, both in his flesh and in his spirit."—Episcopalian Creed, Art. xv. "Man in his original state was sinless.....Adam was formed immediately by God, as was the humanity of Christ. In each the nature was spotless, and richly endowed with knowledge and true holiness."—Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge. "The Son of God took upon him our nature, yet without sin; honored the law by personal obedience, and made atonement for our sins by his death."—Baptist Declaration of Faith. "We, with our sinful flesh, were devoted to death. But God sending his own Son in the likeness of that flesh, though pure from sin, condemned that sin which was in our flesh; gave sentence that sin should be destroyed, and the believer wholly delivered from it."—John Wesley, on Rom. viii. 3.

Parables of Saloomoon. Chapter 29.

1. Better is a man of convictions than a stiff-necked man: For when he becomes inflamed with rage there is no healing.

2. When justified men have their encomiums sung lawless will have rejoiced: but men sigh for irreverent rulers.

3. When a man is friendly to wisdom his father rejoiceth; but he who shepherdeth harlots will lose riches.

4. A justified (com. trans. righteous) king causeth a place to arise; but a man who evadeth law diggeth it down.

5. He who covertly prepareth a net for the face of his friend is throwing it around his own feet.

6. There is a great snare for a man who is sinning; but a justified man will be in joy and rejoicing.

7. A justified man knoweth well how to judge the needy; but the irreverent man doth not apprehend in a knowing way, and a beggar doth not have a scrutinizing mind.

8. Transgressors have flamed out much; but wise men have turned away wrath.

9. A wise man judgeth nations; but a faulty man though an object of wrath and laughed at doth not stoop.

10. Men who are participants in sins hate a holy one; but the upright will seek out his soul.

11. A person devoid of good sense bringeth out all his anger; but a wise man dealeth it out portion by portion.

12. If a king hearkeneth to an unjust word all those subject to him are evaders of law.

13. When a lender and a borrower have come together the Lord maketh a visitation (an oversight) of them both.

14. When a king judgeth beggars in truth his throne will have been established for an instrumental testimony.

15. Blows and reproofs (convictions) give wisdom; but a child who is being led astray causeth shame to his parents.

16. When the irreverent were many, many sins have occurred; but when they fall the justified have become fearful.

17. Chasten thy son and he will give thee rest, (interval-rest) and will give harmonic-beauty (cosmos) to thy soul.

18. There shall be no interpreter for a nation that evadeth law; but the one who watcheth to guard law will be blessed-happy.

19. An obdurate member of a household will not have been chastened: For even if he apprehend he will not obey.

20. If thou seest a man swift with words know that the one devoid of good sense hath more hope than he.

21. He who liveth wantonly from his childhood will be a house-servant: and at last he will have brought woe upon himself.

22. A passionate man stirreth up strife; and a wrathful man diggeth up sin.

23. Haught, pride bombasteth a man: but the Lord stayeth up the lowly for glory.

24. He who taketh part with a thief, hateth his own soul: and if when an oath hath been administered, those who have heard will not tell.

25. Because they are afraid and ashamed of men, they have been tripped up: but the one who trusteth in the sole Lord will have rejoiced.

26. Many serve as courtiers the face of leaders, but a man's justification cometh to pass from the Lord.

27. An abomination to an unjust man is a justified man, an abomination to a transgressor is a way that restoreth to uprightness.

28. Who will find a manly wife? More precious indeed is such an one than very precious stones.

29. The heart of her husband will take courage on her account: such an one will not be wanting in noble spoils.

30. For she stirreth up her husband's manner of life unto all good things.

31. Spinning wool and flax she hath made a truly useful thing with her hands.

32. She hath become as it were a vessel that cometh with merchandise from afar; and she gathereth together their livelihood.

33. And she ariseth, O nights, and hath given food to the household and employment to her female courtiers.

34. Taking a view of a field she hath bought it, and with the fruits of her hands hath she planted a possession

35. Girding up her loins with strength she hath put her shoulders to work.

36. And she hath tasted that employment is good, and her lamp is not accustomed to be extinguished the whole night long.

37. Her arms hath she extended to things of profit and she hath put her hands to a spindle.

38. Her hands hath she opened to the needy and her hands hath she extended to the beggar.

39. Her husband is not troubled about the affairs at home, whenever he tarrieth somewhere, for all those with her are clothed (underclothing meant).

40. Double cloaks hath she made for her husband, and undergarments for herself of fine linen and purple.

41. And her husband comes to be looked around at in gateways, whenever he taketh his seat in a joint-council in the midst of the old men the dwellers of the land.

42. Coarse linen garments hath she made and girdles hath she sold to the Canaanites.

43. Her mouth hath she opened attentively and in accordance with law and she hath enjoined order on her tongue.

44. With strength and appropriate beauty hath she clothed herself (under-clothing meant) and she hath rejoiced in last days.

45. Covered passage-ways are there for her houses, and she hath not eaten the food of sloth. Her mouth she openeth wisely and as the law defineth; and her charitable conduct hath caused her offspring.

46. To arise, and they have become rich; and her husband hath praised her.

47. Many daughters have acquired riches. Many have been the cause of ability; but thou hast exceeded, hast excelled them all.

48. Liars may be pleasing and a woman's beauty is a vain thing; an understanding woman though is blessed; and let her praise fear of the Lord.

49. Give ye unto the fruits of her lips, and let her husband be praised in the gates.

COMMENT.

Chapter 29th opens with a character-building definition of the difference between a conscientious adherence to right and mere foolish stubbornness. How true to all history and experience.

The 2nd verse while historically true in a general way, in a deeper sense is only true in a Messianic realization of our ideal hope. Why is the ideal government in Scriptural teaching always a royalty and not a democracy?

For the reason that persistently and consistently from the Greek of Genesis which asserts God's sovereignty as the first and most important—in short "the greatest thing in the world" to the closing chapter of John's Apocalypse "the God of our Fathers" is in reality the King of men, whatever for the time being or in outward semblance the form of government may be.

"The righteous King" of the 44th verse is "the Christ."

The gist of the gospel is in the 6th verse. Our courts and our judicial procedure will be what they ought to be when they conform to the requirements of the 7th, 8th and 9th verses.

The 10th verse tells us why the Christ was hated and crucified and I have no doubt that he was familiar with this particular aphorism of the Wise Man.

The 11th verse ought to be read in connection with the instruction "Be wrathful and sin not."

The 12th verse teaches the responsibility of the governing "powers that be" under God in bringing prosperity or judgment penalties on a people.

Leaders and borrowers ought to ponder reflectively on the 13th verse and brokers will read it with interest also.

The 14th verse can be interpreted only in the light of our later gospel.

Parents in this generation will do well to read and profit by the instruction proclaimed in the 15th, 16th and 17th verses.

Our nation as a whole will do well to read and reflect on the 18th verse.

The 19th and 20th verses are for the obdurate sinner and the careless talker.

The 21st verse is for the spendthrift and the pleasure-seeker.

The 22nd, 23rd and 24th verses give us instruction in regard to curbing our inordinate desires and passions.

The 26th verse tells what true courtier-service is. The 27th verse gives the rationale of the "irrepressible conflict" between sin and righteousness whether it be in the abstract or the concrete.

Beginning with the 28th verse and ending with the 49th (which is made a separate chapter in the C. V. and R. V.) we have the wonderful parable of the so-called "Virtuous Woman." As I have published this before with comment, some years ago at this paper I shall now be brief. Like all the other parables of Scriptural teaching, the natural truth is transparently clear even to the casual reader and finds his ready assent: but the underlying deeper spiritual significance and teaching is not seen without spiritual quickening of the spiritual perceptions and exercise therein. "The manly wife" here in the profounder spiritual meaning of the parable is the working partner or the wife of Christ in the spiritual bond of marriage perfected. The household over which she presides is the household of faith and all the relations of the union herein depicted are the ideal relations yet to be realized in the so-called "hope of Israel." She truly honoreth her husband in commendable utilities and "her husband praiseth her."

CHAS. GARDNER.

Romans viii. 6.

Editor Restitution:

If you will allow me a little space in the columns of your much esteemed paper, I would like to submit a few thoughts that come to me as I study my Bible.

I will take for the foundation of my thoughts Rom. viii. 6, it says "For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." First let us see what it is to be carnally minded. In the seventh verse it says, "The carnal mind is enmity against God." Now let us see what a carnal life would be, and what will be the end of such a life. We read in Gal. 19, "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; adultery, fornification, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like." Now, I do not think one has to be heir to all of these to keep one out of the kingdom, but I do understand that any one who is guilty of one of these things is sowing to the flesh, and if they do not repent and turn their back upon it they shall of the flesh reap corruption, or in other words, they shall be "cast into outer darkness." Matt. xxv. 30. Now, let us see if I am not correct, we read in Rev. xxi. 8, "The fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderer, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death." As we have shown what will be the end of one that is carnally minded, we will endeavor to show what will be the reward of one that is spiritually minded. The text says, "To be spiritually minded is life and peace." Now what is it to be spiritually minded? Paul says in Rom. viii. 9, "Now, if any man had not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Does this mean that we have the literal spirit of Christ sent down from heaven and put into each one of those who have been baptized into his name? I say no. It does not mean any such thing; but it does mean, that, when we have come to a knowledge of the truth, and have repented of our sins, and have been baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, then our minds should be turned [illegible] from worldly lusts, and turn to [illegible] that are heavenly. Paul says in Gal. v. 22, "But the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." Now this is just such a spirit as Christ manifested when he was on earth, and this is the kind of a spirit that we should try to cultivate in ourselves as we grow in grace, and knowledge of the Word of God, as it is laid down before us in the Bible. Now, if we have this spirit of gentleness what will be our reward? The text says: "Life and peace." And in the 17th verse it says, "Heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ." Now do we understand what it means to be an heir with Christ? It means that they shall receive immortality, and shall be equal to the angels and can die no more. It also means that they shall receive the spirit and birth and shall be able to go and come as the wind, for Jesus says in John iii. 8, "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the spirit." Oh, what a grand thought it is to know that we can escape the second death if we prove ourselves loyal and obedient in this life.

We read in Rev. ii. 11, "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." And in the 20th verse it reads like this, "And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations." And in Rev. xx. 6, it says, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." And in the xxi. 7, it says, "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." What could one wish for that would be grander than this? Oh, what a blessing it will be to wake up on the resurrection morn, and know that we are a child of God in truth, for what is faith and hope now, will then be a knowledge. The earnest desire of my heart is that I may awake in that blessed first resurrection, and know that I am a child of God. To my mind it is the highest ambition that one can have in this life.

Submitted in love of the truth,

C. H. WILLIAMS.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world begun." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

ENGLAND and France are very near to a clash on account of African complications, and this coupled with the internal conflict in France, makes the situation in Europe very critical indeed.

Miss Frances E. Willard, the President of the W. C. T. U., a woman of world-wide renown, died in New York last Friday. Miss Willard was a woman of great ability, and has been at the head of this greatest of Woman's societies for years, simply because by her worth she belonged at the front. She will be missed in her circle.

THE relations between the United States and Spain have been strained almost to the breaking point owing to the blowing up of the Warship Maine in Havana harbor. It is well to keep down feeling as much as possible, and wait until the investigation that is ordered shall determine if it were accident or design. If some outside agency caused the disaster it will most likely result in war being declared.

BROTHER A. H. Zilmer has just closed a very interesting meeting at Tee Garden, Ind. He was there over three Sundays, and closed with large audiences, though the roads were very bad. He will try and return to them again next month. One man was immersed, and others have said that they would be very soon. We trust the brethren who have the matter in hand will be able to find work so that Bro. Zilmer may be fully occupied. We cannot afford to have him idle.

Current Notes and Events of Interest to Believers.

It seems to be the general impression in Europe that the insurrectionary outbreak in India was connected with the news of the glorious victory of the Great Sultan over the Grecian forces. The capabilities and resources of Greece being absurdly magnified for the purpose of glorifying Islam, has spread throughout Asia, and caused a ferment and enthusiasm which even causes alarm in governing circles in Russia concerning her large Mussulman population more especially in the Caucasus.

The London Daily Chronicle says:—"Clearly the engineer is more sacrilegious than the sapper. The latest plan for a mountain railway has one of the summits of Sinai for its higher terminus, El Tor, on the Gulf of Suez, being the starting point. The course selected for the line will bring the tourist within easy reach of most of the famous traditional sites included in the Sinai Pilgrimage. The higher sections of the line will be on the cogwheel system. And when we noticed that concessions had been obtained from the Turkish and Egyptian Governments for the construction of this line, we thought of the Highway the Spirit in Isaiah says shall be out of Egypt to Assyria when the Egyptians shall know the Lord (Is. 19: 21–23, 25) and he shall say "blessed be Egypt my people and Assyria the work of my hands, and Israel mine inheritance." Might not this projected road be a section of the predicted highway. It certainly looks as if the tide of empire is at last setting Eastward.

The London Daily Chronicle says "The dying century offers to us a remarkable spectacle of which unbelief is certainly entitled to make the most in its contention that Christianity has failed as a social force among mankind.....So far from our century having realized the golden dreams of the apostles of liberty, equality, and fraternity, it has seen some of the most awful wars on record, and toward its close we find vaster armaments than were ever known before, competition and rivalry carried to a point undreamed of in earlier ages, and the leading nations of the world, while preserving in their intercourse the ordinary forms of courtesy, acting as though they were all rival brigands. The old struggle for existence has, indeed, taken new forms, but it is still as keen and persistant as in the days of neolithic man. Idealism is at a discount. democracy under a cloud, militarism active as ever, and there is as yet no likelihood of any syndicate being formed to make a "corner" in swords for conversion into plowshares.

Dr. Max Nordau, by way, no doubt, of forwarding the Zionist movement, is contributing a series of articles—printed in Hebrew—to a bi-weekly paper published in Jerusalem under the title of "Hazeoi" an old name for Palestine. After passing from personal reminiscences he advises his Jewish brethren to cleave fast to "Messianism" as the national idea, and says, without an ideal, which is almost beyond attainment, no people can hope to preserve individuality and vigor.

News come to us that the railway from Beirout to Damascus, and its extension to the grain-growing Hauran is now completed. and is one of the most remarkable in the world. The country through which it passes is one of the deepest historical interest, and the difficulties which its constructors had to contend with enormous. The distance traversed by the line is about one hundred miles, and the iron way leads over the passes of both the Lebanon and Ante-Lebanon chains before Damascus, the "head of Syria," and the oldest city in the world is reached.

The Christian World says the Anti-Semitic party in the German Reichstag are trying to secure an enactment that will prevent the emigration into that country of Jews who are not subject; and making foreign Jews who have no visible means of livelihood, leave the country, preventing foreign Jews becoming subjects after the passage of the proposed enactment,—and lastly any introducing Jews after the passing of the law, to be fined not to exceed 1000 marks. Whether the law be passed or not,—its discussion alone gives evidence of the strong feeling against the Jews existing in many parts of Germany.

The same paper also says the Jews of Persia are in a critical state, and their leaders feel called upon to join the wonderful movement which has for its object the re-settlement of their race in their own Palestine. During the reign of the present Shah the sharpest measures have been everywhere adopted against the Jews, and quite recently the Shah's ministers have introduced measures which have for their avowed purpose the driving out of all Jews from Teheran. The Zionists have numerous adherents among the persecuted Israelites of Persia. In reference to the Zionist movement it is interesting to learn that an effort is being made among its leaders to begin the rebuilding of the temple at Jerusalem. They believe that the temple once built it would serve as a magnet to draw their co religionists from all parts of the world to the Holy City. And we see by the Pall Mall Gazette that so strange is the conviction in some quarters that orders have been given in England and Italy, and at this moment marble is being carved for the capitals of pillars, and wrought iron in England for outer gates and other work.

We see that a German Military Critic has been adding up the grand total of the Continental armies, and, after noting that we can form only a vague idea of what is meant by tens of millions, he tries to bring home to his readers in another way the colossal growth of modern armaments. If, he says, we could have all the armies of the continent on a war footing and drawn up in one long procession, with their guns and ammunition and baggage wagons, the column would be rather more than 24,000 miles long, and, marching day and night, it would take nearly a year to pass a given point.

It is not often the press has to record such a dual calamity as that which overtook Port-au-Prince in Hayti. On the back of a great fire which destroyed 800 houses, warehouses, and public offices and made 3000 persons homeless, came an earthquake, but fortunately without loss of life.

The San Francisco correspondent of the Examiner says: "The great sun-spots which the astronomers have been watching for years, have now formed into a fiery swirling mass about to burst from the sun's surface. The disturbance is about 100,000 miles in length, and this new world which the sun is sending out into the universe, is more than three times the size of the earth....The astronomers all over the world are watching the baby world with interest." We offer the above for what it is worth,—that may not be much.

Says the Review Herald "Russia has just placed an order for a torpedo boat destroyer that is to run forty-four miles an hour.....Each nation is trying to make the fastest torpedo boat catcher in order to be able to catch and destroy the torpedo boat that is trying to catch and destroy the ship. Surely the next thing will have to be yet faster catcher to catch the catcher that is to catch the ship that is to catch all the other ships. Where will they ever stop in their wild career of war and destruction?"

Questions Answered.

One whose letter shows signs of an anxious enquirer,—says, "I cannot understand how John was in the Spirit body; and in the 15th of 1 Cor. it says there is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. Rev. vi. 9, 10 represents the souls of the saints under the altar. They were given white robes, etc. Paul says he was having a desire to depart and be with Christ which is far better. It seems by some passages that there is a state of the soul in the third heaven or paradise waiting until the Lord comes to earth to reign."

We have frequently seen cards hung up in places of business which say, "If you do not see what you want, call for it." And we are glad our correspondent acted upon that principle,—called for what she could not see. We shall be glad to show her what she wants if we can,—and if we cannot, we hope she will come again. and ask some one else, who may be able to make it clearer to her mind. We trust she will keep at it till she has mastered these points of apparent conflict,—so that she wont have to ask the same questions a year or two later, but be able to instruct others who may be puzzled over them. And if she does not keep a file of THE RESTITUTION, she could cut out helpful explanations and paste them into a blank book for ready reference, or to lend to other enquirers. First in order comes the inquiry as to John being in

"THE SPIRIT BODY."

Our correspondent would not expect a person to be an expert mathematician who had not mastered the multiplication table, we are sure. She will see that the closing book of God's revelation is only given to God's servants; that is those who have learned, believed and loved the grand Purpose of God revealed in the other parts of the book, and accepted the conditions laid down for adopting children into

GOD'S FAMILY.

We do not think it possible for any to comprehend this last book of God before they have taken these degrees, so to speak, or graduated along this line. It is for God's children, and even they will see heights, and depths, and breadths, and lengths they have not explored, while in the flesh.

Our correspondent doubtless knows that business firms, and political parties, and governments, and others send cipher dispatches by telegraph upon important and secret matters; the senders and receivers only understanding the cipher.

After the first three chapters of Revelation, much of it is given in cipher, or what is similar,—in symbol—and the Key to the symbols must be obtained from a thorough understanding of what in the Old and New Testament has preceded this last message. But we may say in reference to the question in hand, that 1st, John tells us in the 9th verse of the first chapter that he was an exile on the "Isle called Patmos, for the Word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ."

2. That he was a companion in tribulation with all the servants of God to whom he was writing; that is, a joint-partaker in the tribulation caused by belief of the gospel of the kingdom,—and joint-partaker with them (prospectively) in the kingdom, and their companion in waiting for Jesus, the one Anointed to be King of that kingdom.

3. In the 10th verse he informs us that while in that state of tribulation and expectancy,—he was in spirit on the Lord's day. We understand this in the light of Ezekiel xxxvii. 1, where it says, "The hand of the Lord was upon me, and carried me out in the spirit of the Lord, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones." Read this chapter and see that it was a vision—no real bones.—no real valley, as the explanation following shows. This, we understand, was exactly the case with John. The Spirit took possession of him and projected him forward to the Lord's Day; that is The Day of the Lord,—the day Jesus said Abraham rejoiced to see; the "day in which God will judge, (rule) the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead."

4. The 7th and 8th verses seem to describe some of the things he saw. The 10th verse explains the circumstances under which he saw them; then follow other dramatic representations.

Our correspondent will certainly know that the subject matter of v. 7 has not yet come,—in a word, that the Day of the Lord, or Lord's day has not yet come. It was a vision of its coming and what would transpire in it John saw. Space forbids further remarks on this point. The next trouble seems to be with the words and there is a spiritual Body." 1 Cor. xv. 44. We apprehend that our correspondent's trouble grows out of the supposition that man possesses two bodies at one time,—one natural the other spiritual. In the light of early impressions this is not to be wondered at, they are hard to unlearn. Close attention to the context, however, will remove all difficulty. The Apostle shows in verses 12-20 that the future life of the saints depended upon the resurrection of Christ,—their reliving depended upon his living again; —those having fallen asleep in Christ would have perished, but for his resurrection. And verse 32 says, "If the dead rise not, it is no advantage to have suffered for God and truth.

"THERE IS A NATURAL BODY

But the Apostle avers in the 20th verse that Christ is risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept; the after-fruits are raised at his coming. See v. 23.

Verses 43, 44 show that the dead natural or animal bodies laid away in the ground are raised spiritual bodies. There is a natural (or animal) body, and there is a spiritual body. It may be thought that this teaches the existence of both at once, both in one person, or how could it say there is a spiritual body. In this way: It is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul (creature, person, or breathing thing;) the Last Adam was made a quickening spirit. Here are the two bodies,—one natural—the other spiritual. The natural is put off at death, the spiritual is put on at the resurrection. Jesus has already been raised. He is the Lord, the Spirit. And Col. iii. 3, 4 shows that the spirit life of all saints is hid with him in God. It is theirs now, but he is the grand repository of it. It cannot, in the nature of things, be associated with, or be manifested in these vile bodies, and hence Phil. iii. 21 informs us that the Lord Jesus Christ shall change these vile bodies, and fashion them unto his glorious body. Amen, and amen. Besides all this it must not be forgotten that the Scriptures say that all the faculties of the mind cease when death ensues. "The dead know not anything." Eccl. ix. 5, 10; "The dead praise not the Lord," Psa. cxv. 17; "Their thoughts perish when their breath leaves them." Psa. cxlvi. 4.

Paul's desire to

which is far better, (Phil. i. 21) is the next difficulty that our correspondent is struggling with. She seems to think that this passage conflicts with what we teach for truths; or at least, that she can see no way to harmonize it with them. With the hope of helping her out of her difficulty we first direct attention to the 10th verse of the chapter, where the Philippians are pointed to the "Day of Christ" as the time of reward. 1 Cor. i. 8 points to the same day for the same purpose. And we find the same Apostle writing to Timothy just before his execution, "Henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give him at that Day of Christ After writing thus plainly and positively, would it not be the height of foolishness for him to wish to go away to Christ before that day? How could the crown be given him at death as popularly taught if it were laid up for him, and given to him, and all others, at that day?

In Phil. i. 21 Paul discusses his own fate only in so far as Christ and his gospel are involved. He says all his afflictions had furthered the gospel, and that Christ would be magnified IN HIS BODY, whether by life or by death: and makes no reference to an immortal soul. "For me to live is [gain to] Christ;" not to himself. "And to die gain," also to Christ, not Paul. How, otherwise could Christ be magnified in his body whether by life or by death?

"But," says Paul, "If I live in the flesh," [and magnify Christ in that way] this is the fruit of my labor;" [for which, of course, he would be rewarded.] But he continues, "Yet what I shall choose I know not." [He did not know whether living and laboring on, would most magnify him, or whether dying would, and therefore could not make a choice between living for Christ and dying for him. This was the strait betwixt two, he was in. But there was a third thing he was quite decided about, and it looks as if this, in part, at least, made it difficult for him to decide between living and dying for Christ. For, although ready for either, he desired something far better, than either living or dying. What was that? He desired to depart and be with Christ right off. He wrote the Thessalonians that the Lord himself would come down from heaven with a shout, with an archangel's voice, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ will rise first: then WE [all, and all the rest who loved his appearing; yes;] "WE shall all be changed in a moment; in the twinkling of an eye;" "for this corruptible must put on incorruption and this mortal must put on immortality, and then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory; O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" Then WE, [Paul and all the rest of the living, or left over ones] shall at the same time with them [the raised ones] be caught away in clouds, for a meeting of the Lord in the air; and so WE, [Paul and all the rest] shall be always with the Lord."

In the light of 1 Thess. v. 10, 17, and 1 Cor. xv. 52-55 quoted above, is it possible to conclude otherwise, than that Paul was anxious for the day of the Lord ' to come,—anxious that he might be one of the left over ones who would escape death,—depart and be with Christ always, without dying, which would be far better than living on in mortality and suffering or dying?

Both the head and the heart of Paul were sound, or level. He loved the appearing of Jesus; it was the "Blessed Hope" to him; and those who expect to find him stultifying himself by writing one thing to one church, and some thing else to another are slightly mistaken in the man.

The word analusia. from analuo, rendered depart in Phil. i. 23, occurs once only elsewhere, Luke xii. 36 where it is rendered return. And in 22 MSS. of the Septuagint, analusis is used in Joshua xxii. 8, for the Heb. word shuv, which always signifies "to return."

"I Have Never Done Anything Very Wicked."

"I have never done anything very wicked, I am not afraid to die," said a poor woman on her death-bed, not long ago, when a friend tried to explain to her how it was that we must come to God, through Jesus, for the pardon of our sins.

As if, "never to have done anything very wicked" would save us! If we have never done anything very wicked we have done something, and that is enough to condemn us. Not to have obeyed God, by coming to him in his appointed way is a wicked thing. It is disobedience; it is rebellion. There are countless numbers of human beings who think they can be saved outside of the family just as well as if they were in.

But their thinking so, will not change the laws of our God: His promises, are made to those who are in the family: He pardons the child, and not the alien.

All are sinners before God, there is none good, not one. All need the covering robe of Christ's righteousness: it is but filthy rags.

Poor, poor indeed is he who has no other dress. The Lord of the Land, has said there must be belief, repentance and obedience, if we would share in his glory. He will not allow us to be saved on our own opinion or in our own way.

Obituary.

Died, on Feb. 4th, at the residence of her daughter in West Seattle, Wash., Mrs. Mary Eshelman, Mother of A. D. and J. F Eshelman and Mrs. G. W. Young.

The funeral services were conducted by Dr. Wm. Chapman, Pastor of the Advent Christian Church of Seattle. He selected as the basis of his discourse, 1 Thess. iv. 13–18. His remarks were particularly appropriate and acceptable, giving clear and forcible expression to the Christians hope in a resurrection of the dead to everlasting life and blessedness through Jesus Christ—a hope firmly embraced by the deceased. The following is a brief sketch of her life as delivered upon the occasion.

Mother Eshelman was born in Manheim, Lancaster Co., Pa. Dec. 11th 1818. Her maiden name was Mary Danner, being the next to the youngest of a family of eight children, one of whom, a sister, still living in Manheim survives her. At the age of twenty she was married to Henry Eshelman of the same place. Soon after they made their home at Springville, about twelve miles from Manheim, where they lived till 1856, when they, with their four children, moved to Ohio, near Canton, and three years afterward made their home in Canton, where the eldest daughter and father Eshelman died. In 1890 she, with her son A. D. and family came to West Seattle.

Early in married life she and her husband embraced Christianity and united themselves with the "Church of God," afterwards both obtained enlarged views of the glorious gospel of Christ, becoming deeply interested in the doctrines of the second coming of Christ, conditional immortality, the resurrection of the dead, and the literal establishment of God's kingdom upon the earth at Christ's coming, known as pre-millenium views. The truth of these doctrines became more precious and firmly fixed in their minds as years moved on, and remained so unto the end of their lives.

It is but Just to say, that Mother Eshelman was a faithful and devoted mother, and a devout and conscientious Christian, and died with a firm hope and full assurance of a blessed resurrection to life and incorruptibility at the coming of her Lord and Master.

She was the subject of much physical suffering during her life, which was borne with patience and fortitude. Though feeble and frail she was a busy and incessant worker all her life, enduring much and being very tenacious of life as is evidenced by the fact of her having lived beyond the allotted time of life, dying in her 80th year.

Three children survive her, who were enabled to be present to comfort and minister to her in her last moments, when laying down the burden of life and taking up the peaceful sleep of death, awaiting the glorious resurrection morn to show the beatitudes of God's everlasting kingdom.

Some Russian travellers in Thibet, describe the wonderful storms of dust that occur in Kashgaria near the foot of the Kuen-Lun mountains. The dust in the air is sometimes so dense that complete darkness prevails. Occasionally rain falls during such a storm, but the raindrops evaporate during their descent, and the dust carried with them falls in lumps. Entire forests of poplar trees are buried in dust hillocks 40 feet high. These deposits of dust are afterwards moved on by the wind, but the trees that have been buried die, even after their disinterment.

A telegram from London of Sept. 20 says that efforts are being made to construct a railroad from Tor to the summit of Mount Sinai. The mountain is only accessible on one side. A depot will be erected near the spot where a stone cross was placed by the Russian Empress Helena, and where, according to tradition, Moses stood when receiving the commandments. The railroad will also pass the cave in which the prophet Elijah remained in hiding while fleeing from the priests of Baal.

Three places, at least are known where green snow is found. One near Mt. Hecla, Iceland: another fourteen miles east of the Obi; the third near Quito, South America.

Poetry.

Childhood.

There was a time when I was very small,
When my whole frame was but an ell in height,
Swiftly, as I recall it, tears do fall,
And therefore I recall it with delight.

I sported to my tender mother's arms,
And rode a horseback on best father's knee,
Alike were sorrows, passions, and alarms,
And gold, and Greek, and love unknown to me.

Then seemed to me this world far less in size,
Likewise it seemed to me less wicked far;
Like points in heaven, I saw the stars arise,
And longed for wings that I might catch a star.

I saw the moon behind the island fade,
And thought, "Oh, were I on that island there,
I could find out of what the moon is made,
Find out how large it is, how soft, how fair!"

Wondering, I saw God's sun, through western skies,
Sink in the ocean's golden lap at night,
And yet upon the morrow early rise,
And paint the eastern heaven with crimson light.

And thought of God, the gracious Heavenly Father,
Who made me, and that lovely sun on high,
And all those pearls of heaven, thick strung together,
Dropped, clustering, from his hand o'er all the sky.

With childish reverence my young lips did say
The prayer my pious mother taught me:
"O gentle God! O, let me strive always Still to be wise and good, and follow thee!"

So prayed I for my father and my mother,
And for my sister, and for all the town;
The king I knew not, and the beggar-brother,
Who, bent with age, went sighing up and down.

They perished—the bright days of boyhood perished—
And all the gladness, all the peace I knew!
Now have that their memory, fondly cherished
God may I never, lose that too!

"He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life." 1 Jno. v. 12.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

INVESTIGATION AS TO WHO IS JESUS CHRIST?

Teacher. You have seen in past lessons that Dr. Henry, Pastor of LaSalle Ave. Baptist Church, said, "Jesus of the New Testament is the Jehovah of the Old Testament." Therefore Jehovah was Jesus, and Jesus was Jehovah, and consequently no difference existed between them. Carrie, does the Bible make a difference?

Carrie. It does.

Teacher. How many times?

Carrie. There are about one thousand three hundred and twenty-six clear distinctions given.

Teacher. And does not this enormous amount of Scripture evidence influence Trinitarians to give up such an unscriptural dogma?

Carrie. Not at all.

Teacher. Why not?

Carrie. Because they are creed bound, and wedded to an unscriptural tradition handed down to us through the Roman Catholic Church.

Teacher. Will Lud tell us what other ministers think of the trinity?

Lud. Yes. I will quote from Mr. Freeth, he said he "had no doubt in his own mind that Jesus Christ was absolutely and solely divine, and the SOLE OBJECT OF HUMAN WORSHIP." And as Dr. Henry said, that "Jesus was the Jehovah of the Old Testament," and if that was so, he must be the sole object of human worship."

Teacher. Did Jesus ever set himself up as an object for human worship?

Lud. Never.

Teacher. Did he teach his disciples how to pray?

Lud. He did.

Teacher. To whom did he tell them to address their prayers?

Lud. In Matt. vi: 9. He says: "After this manner pray ye: OUR FATHER WHICH ART IN HEAVEN, hallowed be thy name: thy kingdom come: thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven." etc.

Teacher. To whom were they to address their prayers?

Lud. "Our Father."

Teacher. Where was the Father?

Lud. "In heaven."

Teacher. Where was Jesus at the time?

Lud. On earth.

Teacher. If Jesus, was the Father, as Dr. Henry said, why say: "Our Father which art IN HEAVEN," when he was with them on EARTH, in their sight, and with whom they spoke face to face? The great Jehovah says: "thou shalt have no other gods beside me," no, not even a "Triune God."

Lud. It was evident Jesus did not recognize it as a fact that he was the "SOLE object of human worship", if so, prayer to "God the Father," and "God the Holy Ghost" is Forbidden, and we know Trinitarians pray seperately to three gods.

Teacher. To whom do trinitarians address prayer?

Lud. Attend one of their general prayer meetings, and you will frequently hear prayer addressed to the Father, the Son, and to the Holy Ghost, separately. I heard several individuals, during their prayer, ask petitions of all three. There is nothing more common than to hear them pray to THREE Gods separately. as three persons.

Teacher. What does the Jehovah of the Old Testament say about a multiplicity of Gods?

Lud. He is quite decisive about that. See Isa. xliv 6, 8: "I am the FIRST and the LAST, (that takes in all) and beside me THERE IS NO GOD.....I KNOW NOT ANY." Trinitarians evidently associate three Gods in their mind, or they would not pray to what they call "God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost," they address the three personally and separately, as to so many independent gods, each one are petitioned or prayed to, as being a God, or they would not address them by the title of "God," hence there is no escaping the inevitable conclusion that thus Trinitarians are worshipers of THREE GODS' and violate the commandment: "Thou shalt have no other gods beside me."

Teacher. Will Albert please tell us if the Apostles whom Jesus taught to pray, recognized him as "God, the Father, the Creator of heaven and earth," or did not they recognize someone else as "God, the Father," "the Creator of heaven and earth," and that Jesus was simply his holy child, and not "God the Father?"

Albert. The Scriptures are so plain on this matter, I will call on them to testify as follows: "They (the Apostles) lifted up their voice to God, with one accord, and said, Lord, thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is: (not Jesus) Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things? The Kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against his Christ. For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus (thy holy servant Jesus, R. V.) whom thou hast anointed.....the people of Isreal were gathered together, for to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done" etc. (Acts iv. 24-30). "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Father and Jesus are not the same) "For through him (Jesus) we both have access by one spirit unto the Father." ....."For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." (Jesus was not his own father) ....."Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the Church by Christ Jesus, throughout all ages, world without end.—Amen. (Eph. i. 3; ii. 18; iii. 14, 20, 21.

Teacher. Did Jesus address prayer to the Father?

Albert. He did, he says: "O my Father," etc.

Teacher. Did he recognize him as God?

Albert. He did, he says to Mary: "I have not yet ascended to your Father, and my Father, my God, and your God." He was both Mary's God, and his God, and as there is but one Yahweh, he was that ONE YAHWEH, and not Jesus, who was his only begotten Son.

Teacher. The fact of his addressing prayer to God, recognizes God as being superior to himself, does it not? and that he, Jesus was not the sole object of worship?

Albert. Yes of course, Jesus himself, says; "My Father is GREATER than I," a rather strange comparison to make if he was himself the Father.

Teacher. How do you account for him praying to his Father in heaven, if he, himself was the only one true Yahweh of the Old Testament?

Lucy. Such a procedure would certainly be unaccountable. Milton says: "If these prayers be uttered only in his human capacity, (which is the common solution,) why does he petition these things from the Father alone instead of from himself if he were God? Or rather, supposing him to be at once man and the supreme God, why does he ask at all for what was in his own power?" Notice also his agonizing prayer during the great trial of his life, when he cried out: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me" (Matt. xxvii. 47), to whom he "offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears" for deliverance from death, "and was heard for his godly fear" (Heb. v. 7). If he himself WAS the One great Yahweh of the Old Testament, to whom was this prayer addressed? It was evidently to some GREATER POWER than himself, ("My Father is greater than I") who alone had the power to deliver.

Teacher. Did not Jesus say he thought it not robbery to be equal with God?

Lucy. It appears so, in the Common Version, but whom tested by the Original, such a thought vanishes away. I quote from Mr. Bland, as follows: Paul tells us that he (Jesus) thought not of the robbery of making himself equal with God, that he counted it not a prize, or a thing to be grasped, "to be on an equality with God." (Phil. ii. 6). Revised Version. The Jews had misunderstood some of his references to the Father, and were about to stone him, whereupon Jesus said: "Many good works have I showed you from my Father, for which of those works do ye stone me?" They answered him, "For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy; and because (that thou, being a man, makest thyself God.") Now Jesus might have settled the matter definitely here by declaring that he was indeed the Infinite and Eternal Being, but he made no such claim, he counted not equality with God a thing to be grasped; as he said on another occasion, "My Father is greater than I," so he now replied in a manner that did not assert what is claimed by others for him. "Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your law, I said, ye are gods" —ye Israelites, gods, or mighty ones, —now if he called them gods. unto whom the word of God came, and the Scripture cannot be broken," that is, it perfectly true, they were gods, in the meaning of the Hebrew word Elohim which means mighty or powerful ones, and is applied to both angels and men."

Archdeacon Paley, commenting on this passage says: "He did not affect to be equal with God, or to appear with divine honours (for such is the sense, which the words in the original will bear,) 'but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of man, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.'" His subsequent exaltation is attributed entirely to the Father as the result of his obedience to death, and in such a manner that can leave no reasonable doubt as to the fact that the Father is to be regarded as a separate being from the Son and that Jesus himself was NOT God."

Teacher. Can a person believe that eternal life (aionois zoe) is a gift from God, through his Son, to man, and believe in a trinity of Gods, and believe that Jesus is the one Yahweh of the Old Testament, and also in the dual nature of Jesus and man?

Arlos. He cannot. We read: "As the Father hath life (zoe) in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life (zoe) in himself." Again, in John xvii. 2, 3: "Thou (the Father) hast given him (the Son) power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him. And this is (results in) life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, AND Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

THE SOURCE OF EVERLASTING LIFE.

1. God has inherent (zoe) life.

2. So "hath he given to the Son to have life in himself." A derived life. Therefore he was not co-equal and co-existant with God.

3. The Father gave the Son power (John xvii. 2, 3,) to give life (zoe) to others. A derived power does not show co-equality.

4. As a prerequisite to receiving eternal life, (niomos zoe) we must first "Know God," the One God.

5. Next "Know Jesus Christ," whom God hath sent. This necessitates a distinction between the Father and Son. People professing to know a "Triune God," do not Know the one Yahwah of the Old Testament.

There can be no clear distinction, between Father and Son, and believe that Jesus is the Father, the One Yahweh of the Old Testament.

That previous to receiving the (zoe) life, he did not have it, is but common sense reasoning. And also previous to receiving power as a gift from the Father, to transfer life (zoe) to others, he was destitute of that power, all must admit.

He did not boast of co-equality with God when he said: "My Father is GREATER than I." And is not co-equal, he was not God, and if a Son, he was not co existent with the Father. No Son can be as old as his father, neither can he be his own father.

Mr. Bland. further remarks:—"To the Ephesians Paul wrote: "One Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God, and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all" (ch. iv. 5, 6). To Timothy he wrote "There is one God, one mediator also between God and men, himself man, Christ Jesus" (1. Tim., ii. 5). Rather a hard text to explain upon the hypothesis that "Jehovah and Jesus were not two persons, but one person. Commenting upon this passage, John Milton wrote: "It cannot be explained how any one can be a mediator to himself on his own behalf; according to Gal. iii. 20, 'a mediator is not a mediator of one, but God is one.' How then can God be a mediator of God? Not to mention that he himself uniformly testifies of himself, John viii. 28,' I do nothing of myself,' and ver. 42, 'neither came I of myself.' Undoubtedly therefore he does not act as a mediator to himself; nor return as a mediator to himself. Rom. v. 10, 'We were reconciled to God by the death of his Son.' To whatever God we were reconciled, if he be one God, he cannot be the God [or being] by whom we are reconciled, inasmuch as that God [or being] is another person; for if he be one and the same, he must be a mediator between himself and us, and reconcile us to himself by himself; which is an insurmountable difficulty."

The Year 1897.

Dear Restitution:

The year 1897 has come and gone. Has anything been accomplished which should cause Christian people to rejoice? Some one will say, yes, we are twelve months nearer the kingdom than we were at the close of the year ninety-six. From a human standpoint, that is true. But how is it with our heavenly Father? Has he made any progress toward "the time of the end?" In the time of Noah when the question was asked, Are we any nearer to the flood than we were a year ago? To enable the person interrogated to answer the question, he would call on Noah and learn whether any progress had been made in the construction of the ark. So to answer the question asked above, we must look into the world's history for the past twelve months. There is a great work which the Gentiles still have to accomplish before the expiration of Gentile times. The war spirit of the world is to be broken before King Immanuel will begin his reign of peace. There is to be one more great war in the world and only one. Jerusalem will be the last city against which the armies of the world shall be gathered. and its citizens will be the last who will be made prisoners of war. Zech. xiv. It is true the devil with his followers will make a vain attempt after the close of the millenium to capture the camp of the saints, but God soon disposes of him and his followers.

Has God's proclamation to the Gentiles to prepare for war accomplished anything within the year ninety-seven? Nations never prepare for war except for three reasons: 1st, To suppress insurrection; 2nd, For conquest; and 3rd, To defend themselves against the encroachments, either threatened or real, of other nations. Judged by these three rules, how do we find the great European nations (all of them Gentile nations) of today? Always remember that Russia is the leader and the aggressor. She is preparing for conquest. In fact she is now engaged in taking possession of and holding the most important part in entire Chinese Empire. By what authority did the Russian government seize Port Arthur, and by what authority does she hold it? By no authority whatever. She has not even a pretence of right. Port Arthur belongs to Japan. Under the treaty of peace between China and Japan, the latter country was to have Port Arthur as part of her compensation for the war. But Russia wanted it and being a more powerful nation than Japan, took possession of it and holds it. Germany, which is the ally of Russia, has also, without any right whatever, taken possession of a very important port in China. England is the leader on the other side, and will do all in her power to frustrate and defeat the ambitious plans of Russia and Germany. She insists that all the ports of China shall remain open and free to the commerce of all nations. Great Britain now has a strong fleet in Corean waters and is preparing to send other warships to that point.

The Czar of Russia, Gog, is the aggressor and will continue to be down to the end, when his armies will be destroyed on the "mountains of Israel." Watch his movements. Great Britain, Turkish, leads the opposing forces in the great conflict. China will not fight. She is not of Gog like. But her people are the [illegible] or more of the ten lost tribes of Israel.

In answer to the question, has the proclamation of Joel accomplished anything in 1897, let me ask another. What more could any of the nations of Europe, all of them Gentile, have done during the year 1897, than they have, to get ready for war? We are in the very last days of Gentile times. Let us rejoice and be glad. King Jesus will soon come. The dead saints will be raised to immortal life, the living saints will be changed to immortality; Jesus will reign; Satan will be bound; wars will cease; peace will abound; mother earth will begin to throw off the curse; the animals will partake of the blessings and become tame and gentle, at peace with man and at peace with each other. The rose shall take the place of the Spanish needle. The dumb shall sing, the blind shall see, the deaf hear, the lame walk, and the ransomed of the Lord shall return singing songs and rejoicing evermore. May the time come right speedily.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Bro. Underwood:

We do not wish to be without the paper as it brings to us many good thoughts to encourage us on toward the kingdom. I wish to say to the brothers and sisters abroad that I am still anxiously looking for our dear Redeemer. Oh, may we all strive to live better Christians, and do more for the cause of Christ the coming year than we have ever done before.

Your Sister in the faith,

MARY FISHER.

Household of Faith:

As I was reading this morning the testimonials of so many dear brothers and sisters who are joining in the love feast, I decided to send in my mite with the rest. I can say that I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, Rom. I. 16, and that I am thankful for the promises that are laid down in his Word for all those that are found watching and waiting for the Savior; and that I am trying to live in a way and manner that will be pleasing and acceptable in his sight. I enjoy very much our love feast in reading the letters from so many of the one faith. It cheers me up and makes me feel stronger and more determined to press on in the cause of Christ, and to try and live closer to him this year than I did in the past. I can say that we are having a double love feast now, the one through THE RESTITUTION, and another by having our dear Brother Edwin Grant, from Scholl's Ferry, Oregon, here with us, who has been giving us some splendid sermons on the promises and the soon coming of Christ. I have enjoyed the meetings very much, and have thought so much of the dear ones of like faith, who never get to enjoy such meetings, and to such I would say, Be of good cheer, for all signs indicate the coming of our blessed Savior. Then if we are found faithful with our lamps trimmed and burning, we will be gathered in one happy family in the kingdom of God, no more to part; where there will be no sorrow, sickness, pain or death. Oh blessed day, soon may it come. Is the prayer of your Sister in Christ,

MRS. M. A. CALDER.

Editor Restitution:

I would like to write a few lines for the love feast. I am nearly threescore and ten. For fifty years I have been trying in much weakness to walk in the narrow way, I come short many times, but thanks be to God, I am not my own keeper, the Lord leadeth me, I am not my own; I have been bought with a price, even the precious blood of Christ, and that begets within me a blessed hope. For if we are in Christ we are new creatures. Oh, how much it means to be in Christ, to be one with him. If we are united to him by a living faith no evil can come to us, for living or dying we are his. Though death lay us low, he has burst the bonds of death, and hesays, "Because I live, ye shall live also." Oh, thank God for the blessed hope, the hope of the speedy coming of the Lord Jesus to raise up the sleeping dead, who sleep in the Christ, and to change the living ones who belong to him, to change our bodies of humiliation and fashion them like unto his glorious Body, and what need there is for the coming of the Lord. Oh how the whole creation groans and travails in pain, waiting for its redemption. Oh, how frail the earth will be when the great Restorer comes and establishes righteous rule. He comes to restore all things. He comes as our Redeemer and [illegible] He comes the Prince of Peace; he comes the great Deliverer; he comes the King of kings, and Lord of lords, and my heart cries out, "Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly," the hope of the church, the hope of the world. I love to read the letters from the loved ones, for if we belong to the little flock we love one another, though we never meet in this world we have the same blessed hope; we are brethren and sisters in him, and love them. Oh, what love the Father hath bestowed upon us, the gift of the Son of his love, and heirship with him

May God help us to be worthy of the calling wherewith we are called.

MRS. E. J. RATHBUN.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I rejoice in the Lord daily and praise his holy name, that he has brought us safely through another year, and has poured out his blessings upon us without measure. "His merciful kindness is great toward us, and the truth of the Lord endureth forever; praise ye the Lord." "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want; He leadeth me to living waters; He leadeth me in paths of righteousness. Yea, though I walk through the valley and shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him shall not perish but have everlasting life. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath begotten us again unto a living hope by the resurrection of the dead. He has ascended into heaven and is seated at the right hand of God to intercede for us. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory. He will change our vile body, and crown us with immortality, which is the gift of God. Christ gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. Let us strive to overcome that we may inherit all things, for we have the blessed assurance that if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him; wherefore comfort one another with these words.

Your Sister watching and waiting for the King in his beauty,

MARY M. RENNER.

Dear Restitution:

We are glad of the privilege of reading the letters from the brothers and sisters, and especially so when they all "speak the same thing"—one would almost come to the conclusion that there were no divisions among us, and that we were perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment. God grant that it may be so, and that the Church of the living God, the Bride of Christ, as the day approaches for the union, may grow to be more and more like her absent Lord, and that we all come into a unity of the faith, that we may with one mind and with one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. As the years come and go our faith grows stronger in the nearness of the coming of our blessed Lord; and as the signs thicken we can but feel that the time is at hand for lifting up our heads and rejoicing, for our redemption draweth nigh. How important it is that we should live close to Christ. Lay aside everything that would have a tendency to draw us away—beware of the world and its allurements—watch and pray.

Report of Labor

Editor Restitution and the Brethren scattered abroad:

Perhaps it may be of interest to some of them to know of my whereabouts and what I am doing. My work at Hammond has been reported. I left Hammond Jan. 18, for New Orleans. The morning after my arrival I began looking for a place to speak in. First I applied to the secretary of the Y. M. C. A. He was very anxious to have me speak, for he had been reading Prof. Totten and wished to hear more: but informed me I would have to see the Chairman of the Lecture Lyceum, committee of the Y. M. C. A. I at once hunted the gentleman up, presented my wants. He was in favor of having the lecture and was anxious, but informed me that the board of directors had passed a law that the officers of the Association could not make or contract for any obligation to bind the Association, therefore he could give me no assistance. The only thing he could do was to rent me the hall, and I would have to pay for the advertizing and printing of tickets, and do all the work as he had no time to give it any attention whatever. I then called on the three Jewish Rabbies. The first one after presenting my letter and certificate, asked me the object of my coming to New Orleans to lecture on the Bible. I informed him in as few words as possible. He laughed at the idea of the Coming of a Messiah and Restoration of the Jews: and I went at him in dead earnest, and as I carried my satchel with my Bible I took out the Bible and turned to the Prophets and asked him to explain away the fulfilled prophecies his face turned red, he got up out of his chair and said he did not wish to discuss the matter. I asked him if he would be kind enough to listen to me for five minutes. He consented. I condensed my argument in a small compass, and when the five minutes were up, I thanked him and rose up out of my chair. He seemed to be impressed with what I had said, and finally said to me, go and see the other two Rabbies; which I did. The first was Dr. Keller, a gentleman and refined Jew. After reading my letter he wanted to know what he could do for me. I stated my wishes. He referred me Dr. Sessler, and I found him a very agreeable gentleman. He expressed himself as being anxious to hear me, but thought if I could secure the Y. M. C. A. auditorium it would be better, and that he would give out my lectures in his synagogue, and for me to secure the Y. M. C. A. hall for that purpose, and he would see that I should have the support of his congregation, and he would announce it before his people, but he was taken sick and it was not announced.

But the night came, and it rained. We had a very small audience and one-half of them held complimentary tickets. I delivered my address. The Secretary insisted that I should deliver a discourse the next night, which I did, and at the close the President of the Lillian Whiting Club rose up and said it was a shame for the City of New Orleans to be so indifferent to religious lectures, and she moved that the Brother be requested to remain in the City until after the Carnival, and that the matter be placed in the hands of the several associations of ladies to work up an interest, and the President of the W. C. T. U. seconded the motion.

This closed the second address. I came down from the rostrum; they gathered around me and insisted on my remaining until after the Carnival, and the several society ladies would make it a success, and give me an audience worthy of my subject. I find a number of persons here that are hungry for Scriptural knowledge; that in two discussions I had given them more light on the Scriptures than they had ever had in all the preaching they had ever heard. One of them, a minister, A. G. Bakewill, of Trinity Church, his residence 1619 S. Rampart St. This gentleman is interested in the Second Coming of Christ and the Restoration of Israel and kindred, but he never heard the doctrine preached before. He invited me to call upon him tomorrow afternoon, and Dr. Heller, the Rabbi, gave me a very pressing invitation to call and see him; he wanted to see me and have a talk with me. I shall do so Monday as I agreed to. It has been a struggle here, but I am determined to be heard before I leave, if I have to go down on the wharf. God being my helper with means to hold out. Therefore I have consented to remain until further arrangements can be made. Your Brother in hope of the soon coming Lord and King.

D. M. HELLER.

Editor Restitution:

With your permission, I will try to give a short report of a meeting held by Brother O. W. Smith, near Otto, Ind.

Brother Smith began meeting on December 2nd, and continued until the 29th. At the first of the meetings the inclement weather and ice on the roads made it almost impossible for people to attend. After these gave way the interest gradually grew until the close. Brother Smith succeeded in removing much of the enmity that the other churches held against us, so much so that he was invited to preach in their house. As a direct result of Brother Smith's labor two were added to the church and many more received the good seed of the kingdom who will obey in the near future. At least some have so stated. The church was greatly built up. Bro. Smith is an energetic worker, never tiring in his efforts to speak forth the words of life in soberness, giving to both saint and sinner, their portion in due season. Not only his manner of preaching the gospel, but his sociability among the people makes friends for him wherever he goes.

The Macedonian cry has come from two other places near us, for Brother Smith to come and preach for them. He left us with the promise to come back in the spring, at which time we hope for many additions.

Brethren, while we are few in numbers we are rich in faith, and we never tire in trying to get others to see the beauty contained in the promises of God, and to get them to obey from the heart that form of doctrine which God has revealed in his Word.

Brethren, remember us in your petitions to God.

J. T. CRICKMORE.

Merit Always Wins.

The hard times of the past three or four years have been very destructive to all industrial affairs, and the railways have had an unusual amount of difficulty in making both ends meet. Roads that have, during this trying period, earned dividends while at the same time affording high class transportation facilities to their patrons, have, indeed, been fortunate. And such an event speaks well for the management of the roads.

The record of the Nickel Plate road during the recent period of industrial depression has indeed been remarkable and it speaks most eloquently of the conservative judgment of the managers. For this road has undergone and steady progress in the material of its roadway and appliances, and in perfecting its equipment. The interests of the public have been in nowise neglected: in fact, the success of this road has inured to the benefit of the public as much, if not more, than to the stockholders. The condition of the road today shows this. Great and valuable improvements of a permanent character have been made—in the shape of strengthening the roadway, bridges, and other accessories, and procuring new and improved safety appliances; new coaches have been added, elegant Wagner sleeping cars put on, new and powerful engines have been placed in service, and everything has been done to raise the standard of the road, to perfect its service, and to give it a leading place among the best roads in the country. The result has been obvious. The people have observed the progressive spirit of the road, have given it a liberal patronage, have enjoyed its excellent facilities, and that tells the whole story of a highly successful enterprise.

Among the most noteworthy improvements effected by the Nickle Plate route is the introduction of a first-class dining car service which has won the approval of the best class of patrons. Then the coaches have been illuminated by the brilliant Pintsch gas, heated by steam, and placed in the care of a colored porter. So the passengers have had the best that money can afford, at the lowest rates.

The through train service of the Nickel Plate, running in connection with the West Shore and Fitchburg railroads—over the great Hoosac Tunnel route, between New York, Boston and Chicago, ranks with the best in the country and has become deservedly popular. Elegant new coaches, and palatial Wagner buffet sleeping cars run through without change; the service is unexcelled, the time fast, the scenery most fascinating. Located along the south shore of Lake Erie are many substantial and attractive summer resorts that are yearly growing in popularity, and this class of travel promises a continually increasing source of revenue to the Nickel Plate road.—mar 2.

The Measurement of Life.

We live in deeds not years; in thoughts not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart throbs. He most lives,
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best.
And he whose heart beats quickest lives the longest:
Lives in one hour more than in years do some
Whose fat blood sleeps as it slips along the veins.
Life is but a means unto an end that end,
Beginning, mean, and end to all things—God.
The dead have all the glory of the world.

The Gospel Recovered. No. 7.

WAS THE KINGDOM OF GOD SET UP ON THE DAY OF PENTECOST?

In the two preceding papers (5 and 6) I made reference to certain important portions of the New Testament bearing on the Messiahship, about which Scott and Campbell in their writings show much reticence. I also drew attention to the fact that these modern Reformers held, along with both Roman and Protestant sects, the idea that the church is the Kingdom. Their views also as to the civilization of modern times constituting, along with the preaching of the Gospel, the great factor in the introduction of the Millennium, with their views as to the throne of David being now in heaven came under consideration.

This naturally leads to the question at the head of this article—"Was the Kingdom of God set up on the Day of Pentecost?" I do not find this question dealt with in the "Christian Baptist" (1823–30). In the "Christian System" (2nd edition 1839) by Campbell, however, there is a chapter (7½ pages) entitled, "The Coming of the Kingdom." This is followed by two shorter ones—"The Ascension of the Messiah," and "The Coronation of the Messiah." He says, p. 105 "It was impossible that the Reign of Heaven could literally commence till Jesus was glorified'..... for he left the earth to receive a Kingdom, Luke xix. 11—15. Again p. 108, "The risen Messiah makes the affairs of his approaching kingdom the principal topic of these forty days. Towards the close of these days, and immediately before his ascension, he gave the commission to his Apostles concerning the setting up of this Kingdom.....Thus, according to his promise and the ancient prophecy, it was to begin at Jerusalem." On p. 171, he says, "The first act of his reign was the bestowment of the Holy Spirit" etc....."Thus commenced the Reign of Heaven on the day of Pentecost," etc.

In connection with this part of the subject, but not in any gospel aspect, Mr. Campbell makes use of the preaching of John the Baptist, and our Lord—"The Kingdom of God approaches or is at hand." Being "at hand" only, it could not have been set up, as some maintain, in the days of John or Jesus. It might, however, having been "at hand," be set up any time subsequent to the ascension. Nearly six pages are occupied with this alone.

Let us briefly notice these statements. "Jesus left the earth to receive a kingdom," that is, according to the theory of Mr. Campbell, to sit as the Messiah, on David's throne in heaven. It is rather strange, however, that he makes no reference to the words in the parable which immediately follow—"and to return." These words, however, are really the key to the parable, and are absolutely necessary for the purpose for which it was spoken. That purpose was to correct the idea of some who thought that, he, being nigh to Jerusalem, the Kingdom of God should immediately appear. The correction consisted in the truth taught in the parable that he should go away and return. It is generally understood that this parable was founded on a usage of the Roman Empire that a candidate for royalty over a province was required to go to Rome to be invested with his office. He must then return to exercise the authority he had received. The parable has no reference to a nobleman going to Rome to be there provided with a throne from which to rule his distant province. It was not designed to illustrate our Lord's exaltation in heaven, but rather the fact that his kingdom although "at hand," was not to be set up during his presence on the earth at that time, but after his return from a "far country." This, the case of the nobleman exactly illustrates.

As in most parables, there is a special point of similitude here along with points of difference. The similitude is confined to the going away to receive kingdom and the returning to exercise authority. The points of difference are confined to the nobleman returning after a short stay at Rome, and our Lord returning after a long stay in heaven, and to the nobleman only exercising authority after his return, and that only in his own province, while our Lord exercises a kind and degree of authority while in heaven, different from that which he is to exercise when he returns.

From this it is plain that our Lord is to return for the purpose of administering that self-same kingdom which the people thought should appear when he was nigh to Jerusalem. At the same time it is a fact that our Lord has been, since his ascension to heaven, seated on his Father's throne. The distinction indicated here finds corroboration and explanation from the Apostle Peter's discourse on the day of Pentecost. He made a statement which shows that Jesus had been invested with an office additional to his Messiahship—"God hath made that same Jesus whom ye crucified both Lord and Christ." This is plain enough from Peter's words, but it is also shown in the fact that the Christing or Anointing of Jesus took place at the beginning of his ministry,—while his being made Lord took place at his ascension.

The question here is—Is it in the exercise of his Lordship or his Christship that Jesus is seated on his Father's throne? Peter supplies the answer to this question by his quotation of Psalm cx. David there says, "Jehovah said to my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool." It is therefore as David's "Lord," and not as David's Son, the Messiah, that Jesus now exercises authority at Jehovah's right hand. The first act of his Lordship was the shedding forth the power by which the gift of tongues was exercised—"Being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, he hath shed this, which ye now see and hear." Verse 33. This fact disposes of the contention of Mr. Campbell that he gave the commission to his Apostles concerning the setting up of the kingdom, and that the first act of his reign or kingdom was the bestowment of the Holy Spirit. As he says, p. 171, "Thus commenced the reign of heaven." At a future time this Lordship shall be the subject of confession by every creature—"Every tongue shall confess that Jesus the Anointed is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

This ex. Psalm is quoted by Mr. Campbell in support of his contention. It is commonly held to be Messianic, it is, however, strictly speaking, a psalm of the Messiah's Lordship. In this exalted position he is represented as "from henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool. And it is while in this position that it is said to him, "Jehovah will send the rod of thy strength out of Zion." This, Mr. Campbell maintains took place at his ascension, quoting the words "beginning at Jerusalem." The reader will judge whether there is any evidence in support of such contention.

Mr. Campbell says, p. 107, The writer to whom we are the most indebted for an orderly and continued narative of the affairs of the Kingdom of Heaven is the evangelist Luke." Strange to say, however, he omits to notice Luke records our Lord's latest intimation as to the kingdom being "at hand." In his discourse on Mount Olivet Luke xxi. 25–31, he mentioned certain future events, which he illustrated by a parable, to the effect that the disciples might know that, when they should begin to come to pass, their redemption drew nigh, and that the kingdom of God was nigh at hand. Unless it can be shown that those events have begun to come to pass, there is no warrant for the idea that the kingdom has come.

In the "British Millennial Harbinger" for March 1858, an article by Mr. Campbell contains the following statement, "No one after the events of that day (Pentecost) could, with any propriety, pray 'Thy Reign or Kingdom Come.'"

J. CAMERON.

"Get Thee Thence Satan."

Whenever the tempter entices us from the path of rectitude and right, we ought to be able like our Savior to say, "Get thee behind me Satan." If we could say that he would never get the better of us. He has so many sly ways, that if we do not watch daily unto prayer, we may be led before we are aware of it, out into sin.

Among the many, he often tries to make one think that he has sinned away the day of grace, and do what you will you can never be saved, but will go down into perdition with the ungodly. This is one way that he will work upon your minds until you will almost think it is so. Do not give away to him, because when you do he will have the victory.

"Then the holy angel hand,
Will sadly turn away;
Victory, victory, the evil spirit say."

Instead of giving him the victory, controut him with the Word of God. You know that Satan could quote Scripture as glib as Bob Ingersol, but like the great man of our day misapplieit wonderfully. Now let us take the passage of Scripture which so many stumble over.

In the seventh of Hebrew we read the admonition of Paul to the Hebrew church. He admonishes them to go on unto perfection. Not laying again and again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God. We should remember that this epistle was written to the Hebrews. A people that believed themselves a chosen people of God. A people that had been under the law, and had come out from under the law, into the knowledge of the gospel of Christ. They had left their old ceremonies and the like for a true faith in the gospel. There must have been a question of some kind about the matter. We know that the different churches did often write to him on subjects that they did not understand. Probably they had been thoroughly taught in the doctrine of the new dispensation and had received it, knew all about the coming kingdom, the reign of the saints with the Son of God at the head, all this and more of which we have not time or space to speak of.

Now Paul, (we will suppose that he is the writer) says, "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift (Christ) and have been made partakers of the Holy Ghost (or Holy Spirit) that if they had received the Spirit by the hearing of faith instead of the works of the law. And have tasted the good Word of God. That is, I think, having believed God's Word, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away to renew them again unto repentance, seeing they crucify the Lord afresh and put him to an open shame.

Now just stop for one moment and think, you who imagine that this means you. Have you tasted the good Word of God, and the powers of the world to come? Just here, let me say, that heaven is God's throne, and is as eternal as God himself, therefore heaven could not be the world to come that the Apostle was speaking of. If not, is it not the reign of Christ on earth, the saints of all ages as his co-workers in bringing others to Christ? Have you believed this with all your heart, and afterwards there is nothing in it? Have you believed in the Christ? Believed truly? Believed Jesus to be the Anointed One? Have you believed in his mission? And afterwards said, that there is nothing in it? Have you believed that Christ has offered himself without spot or blemish, and that he died on Calvary's Mount for the sin of the world? And have you said there is nothing in it? Has your conscience been purged from dead works to serve the living God, and yet say there is nothing in it? Have you counted the blood of the covenant wherewith you were sanctified an unholy thing? And done despite to the spirit of grace? If you have believed all this, and feel that you were once in favor with God, and now say there is nothing in it, then you might as well cease to think your case was almost past redemption. But, my dear brothers and sisters, whoever you are, your case is not so hopeless as this. But Satan would have you think it is, he would have you that he may sift you as wheat. Yet if you should resist him he will flee from you, and the spirit of grace will come and minister unto you. We should rely wholly upon the arm that can help in every time of need.

Yes, I think this was written to the Hebrew church, but we can take it as a lesson for us. Now, if we feel that we have left our first love, we have one redeeming quality left at least. That is to know it, and that is one half of the battle. Then if we know it and want to return to our Father's house, we should repent and do our first works.

The prodigal son returned to his father's house after he had spent his whole living, and was received with outstretched arms. The fatted calf was slain, and there was great rejoicing. And so it will be with poor sinful man, when he feels that he has strayed from sight should he go back to the old and tried paths, he will be received back with gladness [illegible]

I always feel comforted when I read John xvii. That memorable prayer of our Lord. He says, "Neither pray I for these alone; but for those also that believe on me through their word. Now, I feel that our Lord prayed for me, he prayed for you, and so let us take courage and go on unto perfection. What a consolation to know that our Savior prayed for us, and died for us. Not because we loved him, but because he loved us. He gave his life that we might live. There was a promise to the all Jews or Hebrews entering into the promised land? Well, did they all enter in? No, by no means.

Paul says, "To whom swear he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not. Well, how many entered in? Only two, Caleb and Joshua. So we see they could not enter because of unbelief. There is a promise left us of entering into rest. Let us fear lest we come short of it. If we come short of the rest promised we fall on the account of unbelief, as did those of old time. Because we have not believed the record God gave of his Son.

Jesus gave us an example in resisting the tempter. He said, "Get thee hence Satan," and the devil left him, and angels came and ministered unto him.

"Tempted and tried, yet the Lord will abide,
Thy faithful Redeemer, thy Keeper and Guide,
Thy Shield and thy Sword, thine exceeding Reward;
Then enough for the servant to be as his Lord,
Tempted and tried, yet the Lord at thy side,
Shall guide thus and keep thee, tho' tempted and tried."

A Talk with a Jew.

Yesterday, Feb. 14th, on my return from Claysville, I had a few hours between trains at Columbia City, and decided to improve a part of the time in talking to Mr.——an Austrian Jew by birth, as I had done two or three times before. In the conversation I learned two things:—

1st. That he is a Reformed Jew (?) that is, one that believes that a Gentile is as good as a Jew, and, perhaps a little better, judging from a remark he made.

2nd. That reformed Jews are infidel practically, though professing to believe the Hebrew Scriptures. They do not of course, wish to be thought such or called such, and yet they are although they spurn the name. In the course of our talk this man, who claimed to fairly represent the views of the class to which he belongs, said he did not believe the big stories of the Book that he was taught by his mother to revere; and as to miracles he thought that the mysterious operations of the laws of electricity would account for these, and that men today could duplicate the marvels of Old Testament history without setting up the claim of divine intervention. When I told him that by no freaks of electricity were the dead being raised to life today, he offset this by stating what came under his own observation. That a well-dressed gentleman came into the room where he and others were taking off his hat he said, gentlemen, you see nothing in this hat, then giving it a shake a bevy of ducks tumbled out and waddled about the room. At this point in our conversation a traveling salesman of New York City, a Jew also, came in, and the two men raised the question of Jewish persecution, affirming that it was the result of the ignorance and prejudice of the Gentiles, and that all that was endured by their people was not in consequence of their national sins, nor as a divine infliction of punishment, merited by their transgressions. I quoted Moses and the prophets in proof that God banished them from their own land and subjected them to the punishment due their transgressions, that this fact is numerously repeated throughout the Scriptures, beginning with the prophecy of Moses. The young salesman confessed his ignorance of the Old Scriptures, and I urged him to read them and that by so doing he would see the fulfillment of prophecies in the history of the people to which he belonged and be convinced of the divine authenticity of the Book [illegible] Their ignorance of the Scriptures, from which Rirsch and all the Reformed Rabbis take texts for learned discourses, is astonishing. This may be set down as a third thing I have learned by talking with Jews of this class. I had often heard it said, and read it too, that a Jew could quote nearly the whole of the Old Testament Scriptures but this is not true of this class unless there be such among them as were educated by the old teachers in the orthodox Jewish ranks in European lands. To hold the Scriptures in such irreverence; to them as a collection of fables, or largely so; to rank them on a level with merely human productions, to fail to see in them a coming and triumphant Messiah, and the predicted and promised issue of the struggling faith and hope of long and weary centuries, is to lose that keen interest in them which prompts the children of God to daily search until familiarity with the Sacred text imbues the mind with a broad and deep knowledge of divine thought and things. I would like to meet an orthodox Jew. To meet a reformed Jew is to come in contact with a frowning wall of darkness too high to be scaled, too thick to be penetrated, a tangle and a mystery that defies all effort to unravel and to solve. As a missionary to reformed Jews I think I would prove a failure from sheer discouragement at the start.

Japheth in the Tents of Shem.

A FORGOTTEN PROPHECY NOW BEING FULFILLED—A CONQUEST OF BENEFICENCE—ITS RELATION TO IT.

Noah blessed his two older sons, but cursed the youngest for his unfilial conduct. The curse came quickly, has been obvious and is perpetual. The blessings of Shem and Japheth have also been obvious and wonderful, but their peculiar relation to each other, as noted in this prophecy, has been long delayed, but seems now to be in process of exact fulfillment.

"Blessed be the Lord God of Shem: and Canaan shall be his servant. God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant." Gen. ix. 26, 27.

The general distribution of these three families was—Shem in Asia: Japheth in Europe: Ham (and Canaan) in Africa.

The dominant nations of antiquity were Asiatic; those of later dominance European. The most conspicuous "enlargements" of the race have been those of Japheth, filling Europe and the islands adjacent, and, crossing the Atlantic, finding and filling the New World and the far-off islands with peoples and with nations.

Shem has always been very religious and tenacious of his "own" religion: Japheth not so devout, morally; prone to try and tolerate new religions, but more inclined to government and the practical arts of industry and commerce. His blood seems inspired by the force of progress and expansion with a penchant for vast projects. Shem is reclusion, quite as industrious, and—smart in small ways, (the crackers and nice dishes)—but lacking breadth of conception, self-reliance and enterprise.

Japheth was "the Gentiles" of the first centuries of A. D.—"the wild olive tree"—Shem being the good olive tree." Rom. xi. Paul argues that the spiritual process is that the stock, not the scion, controls the fruit: that scions from the wild olive (Gentile) tree grafted into the good olive (Abrahamic) tree bear—not Gentile—but Abrahamic fruit: that the root in this case determines the fruit of the branches whether natural or grafts. Japheth showed himself more susceptible to Christianity than Shem. The margin—"persuade"—suggests this: God would both "enlarge" and "persuade" Japheth to dwell in the tents of Shem—to manage his government and public affairs: and do it for Shem: both blessed thereby, Japheth in doing it and Shem in letting him do it. [illegible] ments; but an affectionate, [illegible] co-operation, like bearing the garment on their noble shoulders in filial respect in the old home tent.

"CONTRARY TO NATURE,"

Japheth may well claim the privilege of this grateful return, having so many years been "partakes of the root and fatness of the good olive tree" which Shem for more than 4,000 years devoutly preserved and cultivated.

Taking a practical man-of-affairs view of Noah's prophecy and of the situation that now confronts us, the two great civilizations—the Japhetic and the Semetic—now face each other in eastern Asia: Japheth Christianized, vital, forceful, ambitious; Shem, the "broken off branches"—broken off because of unbelief—feeble, withered, decayed; the former, with all his faults, yet full of vigor, aggressive, progressive, dominant; the latter, the husks of promise, having despised his opportunity and lost the seed of thrift and power 1800 years ago, stands dazed and helpless. Will Japheth be generous toward his elder brother? Being more conspicuously in his presence than ever before, will he fairly illustrate the religion that deserves the credit of his superior advancement? The United States—no mean part of Japheth—will keep out of war in the Orient as it has in the Occident; but it cannot be an indifferent spectator. Its dignity and its vast interests forbid that it stand silently aloof in so great a deal of the nations. It would seem that American diplomacy might offer some pendant suggestions and that arbitration might find a more becoming and better solution than war will be likely to reach.

Feb. 5. The above, finished Jan. 8, seems justified by the attitude and spirit the nations in interest have assumed since that date: wonderful stride in world-wide reciprocity. Great Britain shrewdly strikes the key note: the ports of the Orient free to all nations alike.

Question.

Dear Restitution:

Will some one give an explanation in your paper of the text, "My kingdom is not of this world, if my kingdom was of this world then would my servants fight, but now is my kingdom not from hence?"

E. W. MEAD.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

"THOUGH a man without money is poor,—a man with nothing but money is still poorer."

"THE mind of a young creature cannot remain empty; if you do not put into it that which is good it will be sure to use that which is bad."

"So noted was the martyr Cranmer for always rendering good for evil, that it used to be said of him, "If you wish him to do you a good turn, you have only to do him an evil one."

WE have a letter containing $1.00 from some one at Correctionville, Iowa, who wants their address changed to Anthon, Iowa. No name is given. Will the party please send it.

THE Executive Board of the Indiana Conference have something to say through its officers and workers to the friends in the State. A number of extra papers are sent out, and we urge all to wake up to the needs of the [illegible]th, and help "as the Lord has prospered."

SOLOMON in Prov. iv. 14 says, "Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men. Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it and pass away." Young's translation reads: "Avoid it, pass not over into it, turn aside from it and pass on." We earnestly exhort the lambs of the flock to heed well this injunction.

"HE that hateth, dissembleth with his lips, and layeth up deceit within him; when he speaketh fair, believe him not; for there are seven abominations in his heart; whose hatred is covered by deceit, his wickedness shall be showed before the whole congregation." Prov. xxvi. 24-26. Beware of hatred. What an awful crop of fruit it yields.

"IF you want to choke down the spirit of resentment, just learn to pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you. Earnest and humble prayer and an angry spirit cannot dwell in the same bosom. The more we breathe the atmosphere of heaven, the easier it is to keep the spirit serene and even joyful,—even in the midst of great provocations."

"WITHOUT faith it is impossible to please him," (God). Why? Because if you do not believe him you will not choose him; and if you do not choose him you cannot please him. Just as it is impossible for your friend at the top to help you out of the pit into which you have fallen by throwing you a rope, unless you take hold and hold on to it; so it is impossible for God to save you and for you to please him, unless you voluntarily take hold and hold on to him by faith. "Faith," says Bishop Fitzgerald, "is choice," and he is right in so far as saving faith is concerned. We choose Christ when we believe "the record God has given of his Son;"—all he has done, is doing, and will do for us.

A RECENT writer said he picked from his barrel of Bell-flowers an apple that was sadly one-sided. The stem, the blossom, and the core were all to one side, while on the other there was a well developed portion of apple. What apple there was, was good enough, but there was only half as much as there would have been had the fruit been wholly developed all around. This deformed apple suggested a train of thought. Its one side was all right, but the other amounted to nothing at all. It was not balanced. It had grown all in one direction. It was not well rounded. The one lying side of it was a fine, well-rounded fruit, and consequently it was much more comely in appearance, and there was once again as much apple in it. Just so is it with preachers and teachers. He who is developed only on one side is readily distinguished from the one whose development is well-rounded. The former rides hobbies, and thrusts forward his preferences and prejudices and scolds the people just as if they had been cast in the same mould as he was, or thinks they should have been: and besides that, he is often a stickler for a correct theory of the truth,—while little attention is paid to the practice of its precepts: apparently forgetting that it is he who doeth the will of the Father,—not merely knoweth it—that shall inherit the kingdom.

THE rumor of war between the United States and Spain is not much different from last week. A number of sensational stories have been started, but the government seems to be keeping its own council, and quietly investigating the affairs of the Maine, and until that is completed and the reports in, it is not likely any definite action will be taken. Meanwhile the preparations for war are being pushed night and day, and bodies of men are being offered and the financiers of the country stand ready with offers of money to be used by the government in protecting her name, and punishing the one who dishonors her flag. It is safe to wait for developments.

A WRITER in the St. Louis Advocate recently said, "We once had a preacher who used the word thus sixty-seven times in one sermon. I told told him about it and he quit,—mended his way, and counts me his friend to this day." The Telescope remarking upon this says:—"Pulpit impediments are all too common, no doubt; but this reminds us that there are new impediments also. The correspondent fails to say whether he mended his way of listening to a preacher in order to count his mistakes. We are afraid he has not; and moreover, we are afraid that if his preacher had told him about it, he would not have "quit," nor would he have counted him his friend to this day."

"Preach the Word."

We notice at the recent Methodist Congress at Pittsburgh, President Raymond, of Virginia University, in urging ministers to preach the Word told the following pointed story:—"A young pastor in a college town was embarrassed by the thought of criticism in his cultured congregation. He sought counsel from his father, an old and wise itinerant, saying, 'Father, I am hampered in my ministry. If I cite anything from geology, there is Professor —, teacher of science before me. If I use an illustration in Roman mythology, there is Professor B. ready to trip me up for any little inaccuracy. If I instance something in English literature that pleases me, I am cowed by the presence of the learned man who teaches that branch. What shall I do?' The sagacious old man replied: 'Do not be discouraged. Preach the simple Gospel—they probably know very little of that."

The injunction to preach the Word is as imperative as ever it was, and yet how many devote their time and talents to subjects that but very remotely bear upon the Great Salvation or its conditions. This is a sad mistake. It may secure the praise of men for mental acumen or superior logical power; but be it remembered this is not what the commandment of Jesus calls for. The chief business of called out ones is to sound out the Word of the kingdom. Why will men waste their talent upon theories that will not save after they are demonstrated,—and which, instead of securing the praise of God, tend to distract and divide his children? We have often said it, and we say it again, those who bend their energies to disseminate God's saving truth, find no time for hair-splitting novelties. Even the most favored of us, have none too much time to work out their own salvation, and fish for other men. We earnestly exhort all who have named the name of Christ, to preach—teach—the Word, obedience to which will save them.

Answer to Questions.

SOULS "UNDER THE ALTAR."

Correspondent says, "Revelations vi. 9, 10, 11, represents the souls of the saints under the altar, and that white robes were given to every one of them, and I cannot understand it, or reconcile it with the passages which teach unconsciousness in the death state."

If "Correspondent" will examine this passage closely she will see that there is nothing in it that favors the old theory of the separate existence of immaterial souls,—quite the reverse. In the first place they are said to be under the altar. What altar? The altar, some particular altar. As it was the souls of them that were slain for the Word of God, and for the testimony which they held, it is evident that the altar referred to was the one on which they had been offered up. Where had they been offered? Where were they slain? As their blood had been shed, it is clear enough that they had been slain, or offered on earth,—and that shows earth to be the altar; and that again shows that they were buried under the soil of the earth,—were in the grave.

In addition to this, close attention discloses the fact that the slayers were dwellers on earth, and it was with reference to the judging and avenging their blood on these slayers that they cry out, "How long?" How could souls be slain? Immortal, immaterial souls could not be slain on an altar; and as these souls were slain, we have proof they were not immortal; and not being immortal they were mortal. All this agrees with the location of the altar, and the spilling of their blood. Immortal, immaterial souls have no blood to shed, and therefore they are not referred to in Rev. vi. 9, 10, 11. In brief, we understand the explanation to be as follows:—

The Spirit by a symbolic representation shows John what treatment his brethren would receive at the hands of the cruel power that had banished him to Patmos. And the Diaglott translation reads:—I saw under the altar the persons of those who had been killed because of the Word of God."

Be it remembered that John in the same way saw the redeemed hosts, and heard their song of triumph after being raised from the dead; in reality they are not raised yet. See Rev. v. 7-12, and Rev. xx. 4.

Is it objected that dead persons could not cry with a loud voice or any other voice? That is true; but neither could the blood of Abel really cry unto Jehovah from the ground. Gen. iv. 10.

Doubtless it lifted a load from the beloved Apostle when to the horrors signified"—that is, represented to him as above—was added something which revealed what the final outcome would be—white robes were [to be] given unto every one of them, see v. 11. The proof that the giving of the white robes was future is found in the same verse: they were to rest yet a little season, until their fellow servants also and their brethren that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled. Did correspondent ever have any difficulty with what Is. xiv. 7, 8 says about the earth singing and the fir trees rejoicing? If not, why should she be troubled with Rev. vi. 9, 10, 11, if she is a servant of God? It is a message in cipher to the servants of God.

Look Over These Items—

And then, judging by the moral and religious pulse of the world, tell us if the coming of the Lord be not an urgent need:—

In the account of Ohio with the saloons we find there were in 1896, in the State institutions for feeble minded youth, county infirmaries and elsewhere in the State 8,235 idiots, and that of that number 3,705 are children of drunken parents, and the rum-made idiots cost the State $362,186.70 annually. In the Ohio State Hospitals and infirmaries there are 9,430 insane, and Dr. Richardson Supt. of the Columbus Hospital says it is safe to say 55 per cent are there through the use of intoxicants; and the support and care of these cost $890,176.90 a year. In the Penitentaries and workhouses there are 15,334 convicts, and it is safe to say, according to Dr. Howe, that 12,500 of them were intoxicated when they broke the laws; and their annual cost to the State is $511,458.22. Besides all this the State had wholly or partly kept 74,571 paupers, at a total cost $1,380,010; and the lowest estimate is that 75 per cent of this is the result of drink, of which rum-made paupers involve an expense of $1,038,000 the sum total being about $8,000,000 a year, and no account of 8,000 drunkards who die annually in Ohio, nor the cost of the trials.

The Dow tax pays into the treasury $3,500,000 per year, but little more than the cost of the support of criminals, idiots, insane and paupers, and nothing for cost of trials, loss of labor, cost of liquor and the like, which is estimated at $70,000,000.

In the year 1800 there was estimated to be about 1,000,000,000 inhabitants of earth. It was claimed that of this number there were 200,000,000 Christians of all kinds, Greek, Roman and Protestant, leaving a non Christian population of 800,000,000. The present population is estimated at 1,400,000,000,—of these, 400,000,000 are claimed as nominal Christians, leaving 200,000,000 more unconverted ones than there were in 1800. A high official of the Episcopal Church says at the rate conversions are being made, it takes 160 years to convert one year's increase of population in Asia and Africa alone; and this puts the conversions of the world 159 years further off every year.

We are told that the Bible has been translated into 267 different languages, and that they are being scattered like autumn leaves, but it is not taken into account that blasphemous publications in Britain issued every year number 40,000,000; nor that of 300 journals, magazines and newspapers in New York, full 200 of them are hostile both to religion and good morals.

Drunkenness on alcohol, opium, chloral, absinthe, hasheesh, tobacco and poisons prevails over 800,000,000 of people to some extent. England, Germany and the United States are reckoned as the bulwarks of Protestantism, but the drink bill of these countries amounts to $2,000,000,000 a year. In 1840 only 71,000,000 gallons were manufactured in this country but in 1883 the consumption had reached 655,000,000,000; nearly ten-fold, while the population increased three-fold. The cost of this 656,000,000,000 was $900,000,000.

In Great Britain crime increases four times faster than the population; and in Scotland twenty-five times faster Murders in England increased 80 per cent in four years. Joseph Cook says the United States has become three times more murderous than the old world.

In Russia suicides increased 300 per cent in ten years; in Saxony eight-fold in 12 years. And in Europe and America self-murder has increased from 4,200 in 1840 to over 30,000 annually. From 1801 to 1876–75 years, suicides in France increased 850 per cent.

This, too is an age of gigantic thefts. A million was stolen from the exchequer of Russia,—state officials stole two millions in Kentucky,—a New York bank lost $3,000,000; as also a bank in Philadelphia,—the whisky ring six millions from the government; and Tweed and his gang stole $26,000,000 from the city of New York.

$900,000,000 a year is spent in drink, and it is steadily increasing, while only $10,000,000 a year is raised for missionary purposes—about 7½ cents for each Protestant.

It costs 90 cents to convert a heathen, while in the lands of Bibles and pulpits and schools it costs $6.30. And what does this progress backward mean? Does it mean that Jehovah has more business than he can attend to? Or, that he does not longer concern himself with the affairs of this world? No! It means that we are living in the last days—the worse and worse days. It means that earth's inhabitants are now, and have long been in rebellion, having determined to have their own way about things, and that Jehovah abandoned them to their own resources, so that they were compelled to experiment with self-government for 6,000 years; and so the universal cesspool of iniquity existing to-day is the result of all man's efforts to govern himself

WITHOUT GOD.

It means that God's word is true! He determined that man's disloyalty and conceit, and presumption should pay the expense of his folly before he would restore disordered nature and remove man's self-inflicted ills. We think the enormous and rapid increase of crime during the last fifty years indicates that we are approaching a crisis in the affairs of this world, that the almightiness of God will soon be demonstrated by seating the King upon His Holy Hill of Zion, who will hurl despots from their thrones and for the first time give earth a righteous government. Hail happy day,—soon may it dawn.

Editor Restitution:

Sister E. A. Reed delivered her lecture on the "Songs of the Vedas" at Antioch, Ill. to a crowded house. We think it very fine, for it shows a great deal of careful study and deep thought. It is the essence of the Hindoo literature boiled down, condensed, if you please, so much so that to some it was solid food, while to others it might prove quite indigestible; not that it was unwholesome but that they were mentally unused to such delectable food.

It is the result of many months and years of patient toil and careful research by the author among the literary productions of the Vedas, which no other American writer has ever before given to the world, and which, today, might be living in obscurity except for the "unwearied diligence" with which she has applied her noble energies, in the pursuit of her loved theme, which has given her world-wide reputation among the literary admirers of national lore.

On Sunday she delivered a very excellent discourse upon the unity of the two Testaments. Another in the evening upon the way and manner in which we should study the Scriptures in order to gain the most knowledge and to derive the greatest benefit therefrom. Also gave in connection an exposition of the seven-fold blessings to the churches in Asia as mentioned in the revelations. The subjects were presented in a gentle and Christian spirit, which is so characteristic of the speaker that rendered them pleasant and instructive. They were so ably supported by numerous quotations from the Word of God that her arguments were not only clear and concise, but were forcible as well, and we trust made a lasting impression upon the minds of those who heard them.

Obituary.

It is with an aching heart we pen the sadness of little Norma's death, infant son of Brother and Sister W. H. Bernard, aged 6 months and 16 days. Their home has again been visited by the dread enemy, and the ties are being severed one by one, how tenderly they cared for him through the weary days and lonely nights, only to see his lovely face grow pale, and his sparkling eyes grow dim. All that loving hearts and willing hands could do, could not stay the icy touch of death, and with breaking hearts they saw the last ray of hope vanish, the fleeting breath depart, and the little one to fall asleep. Oh, the reaper death is ever present and reaps the bearded grain at a breath, and the flowers, yes, those little flowers that grow between. But it will not always be thus, fond parents, loved brothers and kind sisters, Jesus, the Life-Giver, will soon appear and will banish all sorrow, pain and death, and little Norma with the loved and lost of all ages shall live again, and receive the smiles and tender care of him who hath said, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Sorrow not, dear ones, even as others which have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. Even in the darkest hour of sorrow we can trust him who gave his life for us; and in the morning of the eternal spring, flowers of immortal bloom shall spring from those lowly mounds where our loved ones now repose. After funeral services by Bro. I. S. Miller, we saw the little one laid away to sleep by the side of his loved sister and brothers, until the voice of Jesus shall pierce those cold dark tombs and set the sleepers free.

IN MEMORIUM.

It is our sad duty to chronicle the death of another brother in Christ, Artemus W. Chase, brother of Elder L. C. Chase, fell asleep Feb. 12, 1898. He had been very poorly for many months, but his physicians told him there was nothing the matter with him but nervousness, he died suddenly Saturday evening after much suffering, and a post mortem revealed the fact of terrible disease of heart and lungs. Bro. Chase was the son of Elder L. H. and Anna Chase and was one of 11 children, the first of the five brothers to be laid away, four sisters are sleeping with him. He was baptized into the blessed hope at the age of 16 years, and has been a true Christian all these years. He was born at Raisin, Lenawee Co., Mich., Dec. 5, 1838, was first married to Mary Smith, to them was born two daughters and one son, both baptized believers, the son now in his sophomore year in Detroit Medical College. His second wife was Dolora Phelps, she, with his two children survive him. Bro. Chase had been in the employ of the Lake Shore R. R. Co., as station agent, for the last 14 years. His sterling qualities, his promptness and honesty so recommended him to his employees that they never questioned his accounts enough to look them over after he had handed them in. He carried his religion into his business life, a good man, a true Christian, a loving father and kind husband has fallen, how good that we, with his many friends can rejoice in the hope of seeing him again among the redeemed at Christ's coming kingdom. Elder B. W. Woodward spoke to a large concourse of people from the beautiful Scriptural words, found in 1 Thess. iv. 13 leaving the sorrowing wife, daughter and son, with brothers, sisters and friends, those comforting words of hope, that we should meet the loved one again, in the sweet by and by.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Died Feb. 12, 1898 of dropsy, Bro. John Root, aged 77 years and 2 months. He has long been a believer in the age to come, having taken THE RESTITUTION for a number of years, baptized by the writer 45 years ago. The writer was away at the time of his demise. Services conducted by Eld. Newel Wood.

JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Joseph Addison said:—"When I look upon the tombs of the Great, every emotion of envy dies within me; when I read the epitaphs of the Beautiful, every inordinate desire goes out; when I meet with the grief of parents upon a tombstone, my heart melts with compassion; when I see the tombs of the parents themselves I consider the vanity of grieving for those whom we must quickly follow. When I see kings lying beside those who deposed them; when I consider rival wits placed side by side, or the holy men that divided the world with their contests and disputes, I reflect with sorrow and astonishment on the little competitions, factions, and debates of mankind. When I read the several dates of the tombs, of some that died yesterday, and some six hundred years ago, I consider that Great Day when we shall all of us be contemporaries, and make our appearance together."

In 1518 a battle was fought near Milan, in Italy, and so perfect was the armor of both armies that, although the conflict raged from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M., no one on either side was either killed or wounded, though one man broke his collar bone by falling off his horse.

Chicago's Favorite Passenger Station.

Reasonable success seems to have followed the efforts of the Management of the Nickel Plate Road to make the line popular as a passenger line for travel East and West. It is regarded as a favorite by many in making the journey to or from Chicago.

Great satisfaction will be felt by patrons of that line to learn that arrangements are made, effective Sunday, March 6th, for all passenger trains of the Nickel Plate Road to arrive at and depart from the Van Buren Street Station in Chicago.

With the many advantages afforded by this great Union Depot, located in the heart of the business portion of Chicago, and the continued advantage afforded by lower rates than over other lines, with three express trains daily, with through sleeping cars to New York and Boston, and the advantage of superb meals served in the Dining Cars and Eating Houses operated by the Road, when all considered, should show increased travel over the Nickel Plate Road.—mar. 31.

Poetry.

Like Blade O' Grass.

Confide ye aye in Providence, for Providence is kind,
And bear a' life's changes wi' a calm and tranquil mind.
Though pressed and hemmed on every side, hae faith and ye'll win through;
For like blade o' grass keps its nin drap o' dew.

Gin reit fras friends or crossed in love, as whiles nae doubt ye've been,
Grief lies deep hidden in your hearts, or tears flow frae your een,
Believe it for the best, and frae there's good in store for you;
For like blade o' grass keps it nin drap o' dew.

In lang, lang days o' Simmer, when the clear and cloudless sky
Refuses ae wee drap o' rain to nature parched and dry
The genial night, wi' balmy breath, gars verdure spring anew;
And like blade o' grass keps its nin drap o' dew.

Sae, lest 'mid fortune's sunshine we should feel owre proud and hie,
And in our pride forget to wipe the tear frae poortith's ee,
Some wee dark clouds o' sorrow come, we ken na whence or how;
But like blade o' grass keps its nin drap o' dew.

Indiana Conference Notes.

Arrangements have been made with Brother Underwood for about three hundred extra copies of this issue of THE RESTITUTION. These extra copies have been mailed throughout the State of Indiana with a desire to inform one and all of what is being done in this State to further the cause we hold dear.

Remember that THE RESTITUTION is the official organ of the Indiana Conference. Send Brother Underwood your subscription that you may receive the paper regularly and thereby keep posted. After becoming posted assist the work all you can, especially financially.

Brother Halstead's reports from Roll are encouraging. He began work at this place about Feb. 16th, and is still there at this writing.

How often do we feel the need of a more definite purpose. And in church work of a more united purpose. How many of our churches are divided into as many minor churches as there are members in the church. Why? Because there is no general understanding concerning the work before us. Why not? Because there is no head, or rather it is all heads, and each head works independent. This is contrary to the object of church work. A church should be a collection of individuals working together, aiding each other, to further the cause. The only way this can be done successfully is to all aim at the same object at the same time. This can be accomplished most easily by thoroughly organizing, and selecting and following a leader. (Be sure to get the right one to lead.) See Constitution that was recommended to the several churches by the Conference assembled at Plymouth, and reported in RESTITUTION of Dec. 1, 1897. Try it and see if it will not prove beneficial.

Suggestion. Would it not be better before adopting the Constitution recommended to the churches by the Conference assembled at Plymouth, Nov. 18-21, 1897, and printed in RESTITUTION of Dec. 1, 1897, to change the wording of Article II. Sec. 4, from "shall be given a letter of dimit" to "may be given a letter of dimit?"

Will each isolated brother or sister of the Abrahamic Faith residing in Indiana, who has not already done so, please send name and address to F. L. Austin, Rensselaer, Ind. By so doing you will confer a great favor and also lend assistance to the effort to further the truth.

Try it one year. Devote, say a tenth of your income to the upbuilding of humanity. Can't afford it? "God is able to make all grace abound toward you," 2 Cor. ix. 6-11. "There is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." Prov. xi. 24. Mal. iii. 8-12. Have to pay your debts first? Surely our first debt is to our Father. Pay the first one first. Try it. At the end of one year let all hear from you concerning the results. Try it and keep an eye on the truth, note whether it spreads more or less rapidly.

Brother G. W. Smith has returned to Ollo, to hold a series of meetings at a neighboring point some eight or ten miles distant. Whatever good may be accomplished at the latter point will be close enough to the Ollo congregation to directly strengthen or co-operate with said congregation. Another point, distant from the Ollo congregation in another direction about ten miles, is awaiting Brother Smith's opportunity to do work. Encouraging reports come from this section of the state to the effect that we may not be altogether unhopeful of having more regular and thorough work done there in the near future.

Having indirectly received information that the North Union Church desired to make another effort to advance the cause of truth in their vicinity, the writer visited some of the members on Saturday, Feb. 19th, with a view of ascertaining what to do. No definite conclusion could be reached in so short a time, but it is truly hoped that a reorganization will be effected. If so, being situated only a few miles from Eagle Creek the two congregations can co-operate in maintaining a pastor. The principal obstacle is the lack of a house. It may be possible to remedy this by organizing at Culver, where those of the faith about Maxenceuckee could assist. May all "work together for good."

The writer closed a series of meetings Sunday evening, Feb. 20, at the Eagle Creek Church. Will take up the work there again on Feb. 28, D. V. The results, although not as great as desired, were not lacking of encouragement. Interest was good, and when weather and roads were not too unfavorable, the attendance was good. The members of the church are desirous of taking hold of the work with a firmer hand. Nine of the members, (about twenty in all) after only a few moments consideration agreed to devote one-tenth of their income the coming year to uphold truth. Others will undoubtedly decide to do like wise. May all be done with an eye single to his glory.

Report of Executive Board of Indiana Conference.

The Conference Board met at the home of the Secretary on Monday, Feb. 21, 1898, to consider some questions which presented themselves.

The time for which Brother A. H. Zilmer had been engaged for evangelizing having expired it was unanimously ordered that we invite him to move to the state, and that we employ him to engage in evangelizing when and wherever the opportunity presents, and as much of the time as circumstances will admit, and that we invite the churches to engage his service, when he is not otherwise engaged.

Upon Brother Zilmer accepting the proposition he was engaged for the remainder of the Conference year, which expires in September. It was further ordered that a subscription be started for the purchase and support of a tent to be used in evangelizing during the summer months. Also, that we hold a ministerial meeting at Argos, Ind. beginning Thursday evening, March 24, 1898, and continue over Sunday. All who are interested in the Master's cause are invited to come and take part in the discussion of the subjects under consideration, whether they be ministers or not.

We hope to have a profitable meeting, and that much good will result. The following is the program as arranged:—

THURSDAY EVENING.

Inspiration of the Scriptures. A. H. Zilmer.

FRIDAY, A. M.

Minister. 1. What constitutes a minister?
2. Character. H. F. Cordill.
3. Conduct. J. L. Wince.
4. Duties. Chas. Fish.

FRIDAY, P. M.

1. The bearing and power of the Sunday School in relation to Christian work. D. E. VanVactor.
2. Ministers relation to Sunday School work.

FRIDAY EVENING.

The Coming of the Lord. J. L. Wince.

SATURDAY, A. M.

1. The best Method of presenting the Gospel.
2. Clergyman, Layman, Which? A. H. Zilmer.

SATURDAY, P. M.

1 The best way to hold what we gain. F. C. Myers.
2. Should Ministers have regular local work?

SATURDAY EVENING.

Restitution.

SUNDAY, A. M.

Workers together with God. D. T. Halstead.

SUNDAY, P. M.

Gospel. F. C. Myers.

SUNDAY EVENING.

God's Purpose of the Ages. A. H. Zilmer.

Now brethren throughout the State, we have employed Bro. Zilmer to work for and with you in the interest of the cause, and we feel that we can fully indorse him as one able to do much good, and we hope each and every one will take the matter into personal consideration and do all we can for his support. If every one would resolve to do what he can, if it be but little the aggregate would be quite sufficient to carry out the work without imposing upon a few willing ones.

And to the churches we would say, if his time is not wholly engaged in evangelical work, we ask that you make arrangements to employ his service at such time.

We feel that in this way those who do so will be greatly benefited. Brethren, the time is short. Let us work while it is day.

A. C. ROBERTS, Secy.

Shall we use a Tent?

Often have our people spoken of the utility of owning a tent. The advantages of a tent are readily recognized. An isolated brother or sister yearning to have neighbors and friends understand a portion at least of God's sacred truth could many times have that yearning satisfied if a house could only be found in which some one could proclaim the truth. It has not been long since a report was submitted to the readers of THE RESTITUTION by Bro. Wagoner, stating that the house in which meetings had been commenced, was soon closed and he had to leave the work unfinished. With a tent at command that could be remailed and the work could be completed: the isolated ones could have the opportunity of inviting their friends and neighbors to listen to the gospel. Much work could be done in a tent that it would otherwise be impossible to do. After six years experience Brother Eychaner's advice is, "By all means put a tent into the field."

The Executive Board, in session Feb. 21st, decided unanimously in favor of using a tent, provided one could be purchased. To use one successfully this coming season it would be necessary to have it ready to erect by June 1st. This would necessitate having the money in hand by May 1st. The probable cost of purchasing and equipping a tent 40x60 would be about $225.00. It would be an easy matter to make such a purchase if all interested would act promptly. Those who are anxious to see this cause furthered please note the following:

We the undersigned promise to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purchase and equipping of a tent, to be used in Indiana for the purpose of evangelizing. Said tent to belong to the Indiana Conference, and to be under the control of the Executive Board of said Conference. Said subscription to be paid by the 20th of April, 1898, providing notice is given through THE RESTITUTION that enough has been subscribed with which to purchase said tent. All notices of subscription and all remittances to be sent to A. C. Roberts, Box 340, Plymouth, Ind.

Mrs. S. J. Sigler,	$10.00
J. L. Wince,	5.00
F. L. Austin,	10.00

Evangelical Fund.

At the beginning of our Conference year an "Evangelical Fund" was started. Those who were anxious to see this fund grow, met with no little encouragement. The truth has been spoken in several communities as a result. Also Brother Zilmer, of Wisconsin has been induced to labor with us. However, the fund could continue to grow rapidly for some months yet without running any risk of having an overgrowth. Some have refrained from subscribing to said fund desiring to exercise precaution; some will receive this paper and for the first time learn of such a fund; and for different reasons different ones have not subscribed. Brothers and sisters, the Executive Board of the Indiana Conference wish to appeal to one and all to lend a helping hand to the end that many communities wherein all are "Strangers from the covenants of promise," may be evangelized, and many hearts made to rejoice on account of receiving the Word of Truth. Those of you who are not supporting local work can the more easily aid in this general work. None can afford to treasure up the truth and fail to assist in offering the same truth to others. This fund ought to be doubled at least. Will you assist? Send all subscriptions and remittances to A. C. Roberts, Box 340, Plymouth, Ind. If you cannot aid at present but expect to in the near future, send in your subscription at once, stating date when you can pay. Let us all unite in this glorious work.

Report of Evangelistic Labors.

A short time after my visit to Cleveland, Ohio, and my baptism into the the one Name, I received a communication from Bro. F. L. Austin, President of the Indiana Conference, desiring to know whether I would be willing to labor in the Evangelistic field in the State of Indiana. I replied that I would be glad to embrace an opportunity of this kind. Upon this I was invited by the Conference Board and the Church at Plymouth to preach there. I accepted the invitation and delivered two discourses on Sunday, Jan. 26th. The Board then authorized me as Evangelist in the State of Indiana. After speaking at Plymouth for several evenings I began a meeting at the Antioch church, on the Michigan Road, south of Plymouth. The weather all through the meeting was very unfavorable. The attendance on the first evening was about 15, the second 35, and several times the meeting was interrupted by rain or snow storms. The last meeting was held on the evening of Jan. 31st. It had been our intention to continue the meeting, but on account of the snow storm we held no further meetings.

At this time I received word that a meeting had been begun at Teegarden by Bro. Myers, and that my services were desired. I went to that place on Saturday Feb. 5th, and continued two weeks, this time with more satisfactory results. There was much prejudice among the people against the Advents, as we are termed, and here, too, we had to contend with stormy weather and bad roads. I am convinced that had the weather and the roads been more agreeable we would have had a crowded house every night of the meeting, yet notwithstanding these unfavorable circumstances we had good audiences. A commendable interest was manifested by the people, and we have reasons to believe that some of the former prejudices were removed. The house in which the meetings were held is a Union Church, built by the citizens of Teegarden. Quite a medley of doctrines is heredisplayed, and it is not surprising that there are some who find themselves unable to decide which religion to choose. While the success from the popular view was not large, and we cannot report a "great revival," we have tried to sow the seed—the Word of the kingdom,—to bring the truth before the people, to cause them to think, and especially to investigate the Word of God. Two persons have united with us, one by baptism, and the other who had previously received baptism upon acknowledgement of the things of the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, upon her confession of faith. With these we have in the vicinity about 9 who are of the faith. We ought to make another effort at this place in the near future, as I think there are others who will obey the gospel, some of whom have expressed their sympathies with us. We have made provision for weekly social meetings at Teegarden, and hope we may organize a class at our next visit (D. V.) Mar. 20th. Besides Bro. Myers, who secured the use of the house and opened the meeting, also Bro. Cordill of Plymout was present part of the time and assisted in the work.

I delivered 31 discourses while in Indiana, 5 at Plymouth before entering upon the regular evangelist work, 11 at the Antioch church, and 15 at Teegarden. On the last evening of the meeting we presented the matter of the Conference Evangelical fund and received toward this fund the sum of $8.00. This ended my first month's work in the State of Indiana. I have but recently come into "the faith once delivered to the saints," and the work is somewhat new to me, although I have spent over six years in the ministry of a popular denomination. I have been greatly encouraged both by the kindness of those of the household of faith, and by the results of these meetings, as well as by the kindness of the Conference Board.

A. H. ZILMER.

On the Dec. 2nd I went to Hamilton County, Ind., began meeting at the Restitution Chapel, Dec. 2nd. The brethren were all glad to see me. I also was glad to look upon their smiling faces once again The United Brethren were holding meeting close by. We had considerable stormy weather part of the time, but the attendance was fair. The little band at that place has had great opposition, but the prejudice is not very strong in that vicinity now. Number of days worked 29; number of discourses 42. People from all denominations came out to meeting. Some went to reading their Bibles to see if these things were so. Two united with the church. I made 19 visits, closed meeting the 29th, came home the 30th. I am going back the 19th of February to hold meeting southwest of Ollo, as the brethren have requested me to come there, as they have a house for me to holding meeting in. I want the prayers of God's dear children, that much good may be done through his name.

Your Brother patiently waiting for the coming of our King.

G. W. SMITH.

Hope

"Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Heb. xi. 1. We read in the Word that God has promised eternal life to the obedient children of men. We believe, or in other words, we have faith in what we read. We believe God will fulfill his promise, therefore, "faith is the substance of things hoped for." We have the faith now, but the things "hoped for," are yet future. "In hope of eternal life, which God who cannot lie, promised before the world began." Titus i. 2. This life Paul speaks of hoping for, is yet future, for Paul is not against Paul. "For we are saved by hope: but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." Rom. viii. 24, 25. It is evident from what Paul says, we haven't got eternal life now, only by faith, for he says in another place, "For bodily exercise profiteth little: but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." 1 Tim. iv. 8. Showing positively that there is a life to come, which we are in hope of. And Paul is in perfect harmony with Christ. See Matt. xix. 29, "And shall inherit everlasting life." With Luke xviii. 30, "Who shall not receive manifold more in this present time. And in the world to come life everlasting." Showing that the life everlasting is yet future and will be given in the world to come, at the resurrection of the dead, and not before; in which some seem to be very ignorant, and have no hope, and there must have been some such in Paul's day, and against such Paul warned the brethren. He says, "But I would not have them ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." 1 Thess. iv. 13-16. Then if we claim we have eternal life now, and go to heaven when we die, (or as they say) the body dies, and the real man, which now has everlasting life, is only just staying in this body goes straight to heaven. Then we have no hope, for Christ spoils it all by saying, "I will raise him up at the last day." John vi. 39, 40, 54. But to be sure which one of the men that gets life in the world to come, we need not be troubled the least bit, for Christ has forever put his seal on that. Will you take his Word for it? See John v. 28, 29, "All that are in the graves shall hear his voice, And shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life." Where does the man come from that gets life? Out of the grave. Dust of the earth. Dan. vii. 2. No wonder the good man Job asks, "If a man die shall he live again?" Job xiv. 14. The Prophet Isaiah answers him back. "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust." Isa. xxv. 19. Martha saith unto him, "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection." John xi. 24. Martha's faith was that her brother, known as Lazarus, would live at the resurrection, not simply the inner man, but Lazarus. Lazarus had been dead four days, and when Christ raised him to life, he called him from the tomb, he called him not from heaven. If Lazarus had been in heaven four days, I hardly believe Christ would have called him back to the old body, that had been dead four days, and to a life of tribulations and trials, with persecutions. He might have been overcome with the world, and missed heaven next time, and that would have been too bad.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

M. L. ADAMS.

Sleep and Death Compared.

That natural sleep is a figure or trope of natural or physical death no good Bible student can deny. It is plain to see that Bible writers use sleep and death interchangeably, and there must be a striking likeness between the two conditions. Let's see. In natural sleep we approach the border line of sleepy land, our mental vision grows dim and soon fades away, and we are lost in unconsciousness for the time being, and we see not, hear not and know not what is passing. Soul, body and spirit takes no notice of passing events, all is lost in slumber. Hours may pass, and all is lost time to us so far as our notice or knowledge is concerned. That is good natural sleep and rest. Just so in death, the natural vision grows dim and dark, and soon fades away, and we are completely overcome and wrapt in that darkness where there is no light nor order, where "The wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest." In the figure, if thoughts flit across our mind, and we know what is passing, then we are not asleep, our eyes may be closed and our breathing grow heavy, and we appear to a superficial observer to be asleep, but he is mistaken, that is not sleep. Just so in fact or in death, if we can think, act and move, we are not dead, for in death our thoughts perish, and the dead know not anything.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

The following Scriptures I take much delight in reading, and would like to see them in THE RESTITUTION. "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law."

"For he hath remembered his covenant forever, the Word which he commanded to a thousand generations, which covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Isaac; and confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant: saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance."

"Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy Word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart: For I am called by name, O Lord God of hosts."

Yours in hope of life when the Life-Giver shall have come,

D. C. SATTERLEE.

Dear Followers of our blessed Lord:

I have been permitted once more to see the beginning of another year, but we know not how long we may remain here in this present mortal life. Surely we are living in perilous times, but those that trust in God, and obey his commandments will fear no evil. What a privilege it is that we can speak to each other through our good old paper and encourage each one that has come into the fold. If we only hold out faithful until the end we know that we will be rewarded with eternal life. Dear brothers and sisters, isn't that worth striving for? I ask an interest in your prayers.

Waiting for the return of our blessed Savior,

EMMA V. BAKER.

Dear Bro. Underwood:

I should be very glad to see you and speak with you face to face for we are in the time of the end, and very great events are upon us, and they should be laid before the household. Yes, the time of the end has come, and Daniel's visions can be read and understood. Newspapers bring us startling news.

From your Brother,

LEONARD DAVIS.

Editor Restitution:

We are striving in our weak way to serve Jesus. It has been about eighteen years since myself and wife embraced the one faith, and we feel more determined than ever to press onward in the straight and narrow path that leads to everlasting life. We have Bible reading every Sunday afternoon. There are only a few of us here that believe in the soon coming of our Savior.

Ever your Brother and Sister in the one hope.

Communicated.

To and Fro.

The meetings in Missouri at De Soto, Vineland, Hillsboro, Cedar Hill, Morses Mills and Mayfield, were pleasant and we trust profitable to those who heard the things concerning the kingdom and the name of Jesus. Then for three Sundays in succession, morning and evening I had the privilege of preaching to the home congregation at Gladbrook, Iowa. On Jan. 13, I left home again and after a ride of 72 hours stepped from the train at Wenatchee, Washington. Here I found Brother Harry Patterson and soon learned that everything had been arranged for a meeting. The best and largest hall in the town had been secured, seated and lighted and although a united meeting of the Baptists and Presbyterians was in progress, we began our meeting and had a good attendance. Many of the church at Waterville, where Brother Richard Corbaley is pastor, came with him to this meeting and continued till its close. Elder Corbaley and those who came with him were a great help to us in the meeting, in singing, and by their presence. Especially would I mention Sister Platt Corbaley who left her house and work and was at the organ every evening and at every meeting. Brother and Sister Huff, Brother and Sister Fred Patterson and others were on hand and assisted much in the singing. It is a hopeful sign of spiritual life and a love for the Master's cause, when brethren come from evening to evening, and at a great distance too to the place of meeting. They have had good training.

There were 21 discourses preached and an organization effected of 21 members, some of these were members of the church at Waterville, 28 miles away, but finding it more convenient to meet at Wenatchee they put in their membership there. So what has been the loss of the Waterville church is the gain of the Wenatchee church.

Since the close of that meeting we have come to Waterville and begun a meeting here. So far have preached 6 discourses in the Christian church. The deep snow has begun to soften and makes the roads very bad for traveling and we do not know how long we will continue. The interest is good as well as the attendance and the gospel may yet prove the power of God unto salvation to some who are attending our meetings. We pray it may be so if God wills it.

A. J. EYCHANER.

Report of Labor.

Began meetings in Brady, Tp., Jan. 29th, closing Feb. 17th. The weather while there was much against us, and still the people came through snow, rain and mud. The interest increased with each meeting, much opposition had to be combated and prejudice broken down, but it was accomplished to a great extent. There was, and still are more people studying the Bible in that neighborhood than ever before. The seed that is sown will be hard to uproot, although Satan will try hard to do what he can. The church was built up, and good seed sown. Three put on the all-saving name. We left there Friday to speak two evenings to the Prairie Grove brethren before going to Fulton 12 miles distant to begin a series of meetings. We have several believers at this place, but they have never had much truth preached to them here. We began last evening in the Union Hall with a fair audiences. We pray God to give the listening ear, the understanding heart, and readiness to obey.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Editor Restitution:

A small but attentive audience assembled at the Christian church, Rockfalls, Ill., last night to hear Miss Kathleen Greenbaum, of Chicago, who came from Dixon to preach. This lady is a Jewess and of a prepossessing appearance, well educated, yet at some what of a loss for expression in the English language. She is greatly interested in the subjects of the Bible, and what she preaches is the result of self study and examination of the Book itself. Her topic last night was, "What is Truth?"

She said: "The people have made this inquiry all through the centuries. Who is Christ? There is only one God. Christ is the Son of God. He is a great High Priest, Christ's atonement cemented the covenants made to our fathers. Christ gave his life that we might have life everlasting. Christ came to give us immortality. He is our Life-giver. Death is the penalty of sin, life is the reward of righteous living. God wants to call out a people for his name. The coming of Christ and of the kingdom are contemporaneous. When the Son of Man comes, shall he find faith on the earth? We are told to watch for his coming. The millennium will be ushered in by the coming of Christ. All Gentiles are not Christians, but Christians are Gentiles. There are two stages in Christ's coming. The first will not be seen by the world. Only his beloved ones will be saved. Men try to serve both God and Mammon. It is impossible. Christ is the first fruits of the resurrection. Millions of money is spent in work, yet little is accomplished. God lays out no man's fate, he simply fore-knows man's fate. Earth and man are inseparable. This earth which has seen so much of blessing and curse is to be restored to its former state. It is to be the home of God's people."

Miss Greenbaum gave a Bible reading this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Williamson on Elm street. Her subject tonight at the Christian church will be "The Restoration of Israel."

Merit Always Wins.

The hard times of the past three or four years have been very destructive to all industrial affairs, and the railways have had an unusual amount of difficulty in making both ends meet. Roads that have, during this trying period, earned dividends while at the same time affording high class transportation facilities to their patrons, have, indeed, been fortunate. And such an event speaks well for the management of the roads.

The record of the Nickel Plate road during the recent period of industrial depression has indeed been remarkable and it speaks most eloquently of the conservative judgment of the managers. For this road has made a great and steady progress in the material of its roadway and appliances, and in perfecting its equipment. The interests of the public have been in nowise neglected; in fact, the success of this road has inured to the benefit of the public as much, if not more, than to the stockholders. The condition of the road today shows this. Great and valuable improvements of a permanent character have been made—in the shape of strengthening the roadway, bridges, and other accessories, and procuring new and improved safety appliances; new coaches have been added, elegant Wagner sleeping cars put on, new and powerful engines have been placed in service, and everything has been done to raise the standard of the road, to perfect its service, and to give it a leading place among the best roads in the country. The result has been obvious. The people have observed the progressive spirit of the road, have given it a liberal patronage, have enjoyed its excellent facilities, and that tells the whole story of a highly successful enterprise.

Among the most noteworthy improvements effected by the Nickle Plate route is the introduction of a first-class dining car service which has won the approval of the best class of patrons. Then the coaches have been illuminated by the brilliant Pintsch gas, heated by steam, and placed in the care of a colored porter. So the passengers have had the best that money can afford, at the lowest rates.

The through train service of the Nickel Plate, running in connection with the West Shore and Fitchburg railroads—over the great Hoosac Tunnel route, between New York, Boston and Chicago, ranks with the best in the country and has become deservedly popular. Elegant new coaches, and palatial Wagner buffet sleeping cars run through without change; the service is unexcelled, the time fast, the scenery most fascinating. Located along the south shore of Lake Erie are many substantial and attractive summer resorts that are yearly growing in popularity, and this class of travel promises a continually increasing source of revenue to the Nickel Plate road.—mar 2.

Announcement.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

The Second Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Nebraska will be held at the Moorlee school house about nine miles south of Holbrook, in Furnas County, Nebraska; beginning, the Lord willing, on Friday, March 25th, and holding over Sunday. We extend a cordial invitation to all lovers of truth to attend this meeting. We want to have a blessed time together in working for the Master. Submitted in love,

RENA M. GORDON, Sec.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MARCH 9, 1898. NUMBER 10.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The Bible.

Have those ever heard
Of such a book? The author, God himself.
The subject, God and man, salvation, life,
And death—eternal life, eternal death—
Proud words! whose meaning has not reached mortal minds.
Most wondrous book! Bright candle of the Lord!
Star of eternity! the only star
By which the bark of man can navigate the sea
The sea of life and death, the ocean of time
Securely only steer who regard Thee.
And, oh, make dark and clouded be the eye
Any generation, during sacrilege
Shall wicked keep from Thee its gaze
O, heaven's own book, and our only book of God,
The eternal bliss, poured Thee, and Thee alone.

Communicated.

"Hath Everlasting Life." No 8.

"He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." 1 John v. 12.

Teacher. In this lesson I would like to consider the origin of this life. In studying this question, it may be well to consider a communication I have just received.

"Dear Brother:

Will you please crack this hard nut, and spike this big gun for the enemy, and oblige.

T. E. ADAMS."

This hard nut, is in an extract from the Orthographic Review. (Indianapolis, Ind.):

"A brother asks us to give our dilemma for materialists. We have given it to the Orthographic Review readers once, but will comply with this request. It is founded upon the fundamentals of religion, which are the priest, the altar and the offering. As Christ is the anti-type of all altars, priests, and offerings of former times, we must find the three in him. As a person, he could officiate as a priest, and he made his body an offering for sin. But he taught that the altar is the greatest of the three, and hence cannot sanctify the offering. As there is nothing that the mind can conceive that is greater than humanity except divinity, the conclusion is irresistible that it was his divinity that sanctified his humanity and made the offering acceptable.

Materialists say that death is annihilation, that is, so far as sentient existence is concerned. We are told that Christ died, and there is no qualification of the term death, in his case. If death, therefore means annihilation, Christ was annihilated. This being so, divinity is susceptible of annihilation, and immutability of God, as taught in the Bible is not true! This would demonstrate the Bible to be false! If to escape this, they would say, his divinity was withdrawn, and only humanity suffered, then there was no altar to sanctify the offering, and we are left without reconciliation. This would show the Bible to be false!"

Teacher. Do you think this nut can be cracked?

Lud. Certainly. This poor man's mind is all confused because he does not understand the nature of men, or the nature or mission of Jesus as the life-giver, as revealed in the Scriptures of truth. He says there are three fundamentals, priests, altar and offering, and that the altar is the greater of the three, and that there is nothing greater than humanity except divinity, and if his divinity was withdrawn "there was no alter to sanctify the offering and we are left without reconciliation."

Teacher. Is there anything greater than the supposed divinity of Jesus?

Lud. Yes, the Great Omnipotent Jehovah, his Father, who gave him to suffer for us.

Teacher. Did God make the offering of his only beloved Son?

Lud. He did. See Rom. viii. 32: "God spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all."

Teacher. Was there reconciliation in the offering the Father made?

Lud. There was. See Col. i. 20: "Having made peace through the blood of his cross to reconcile all things."

Teacher. Was the reconciliation effected through [illegible] supposed DIVINITY, or his FLESH, which the above writer would call the humanity of Jesus?

Lud. His flesh. See Col. i. 22: "He hath reconciled us in the body of his FLESH through DEATH." Again, see 1 Pet. ii. 24: "His own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree." That which is divine in nature cannot die.

Teacher. The writer in the Review says: "If his divinity was withdrawn, and only humanity suffered, even the divinity suffer) there was no altar to sanctify the offering, and we are left without reconciliation." What is the meaning of the word sanctification?

Lud. The primary meaning is to set apart

Teacher. Who set apart, sanctified, or ratified the offering, the victim offered, or the ONE TO WHOM the offering was made?

Lud. The offering being made to God, he accepted the offering, and sanctified or set it apart, that sinners may be reconciled to him through that offering.

Teacher. Was Jesus in his personal nature HALF GOD and HALF MAN?

Carrie. By no means. This is simply a foolish mysticism of the apostacy. An appeal to the Scriptures will settle that point.

Teacher. The Scriptures are authority, but first I want to ask you what is the nature of angels?

Carrie. Jesus in speaking of those who should be "reconciled" in the body of his flesh through death," says in the resurrection they "shall be as THE ANGELS, neither can they DIE any more," therefore these angels are deathless.

Teacher. BEFORE the resurrection then, men did not have the nature of angels did they?

Carrie. No. Hebrews ii. 7, answers that: "What is man that thou art mindful of him? or the Son of Man that thou visitest him? Thou hast made Him a little LOWER than the angels."

Teacher. But how about Jesus, if he was HALF GOD and half man, he must be far ABOVE angels. How about that?

Carrie. He was not. See Heb. ii. 9: "But we see Jesus, who was made a little LOWER than the angels."

Teacher. What for?

Carrie. The balance of the verse says: "For the suffering of death." If he was half divine or half man he could not have been "lower than the angels," that he might suffer death.

Teacher. But if he was half God as well as half man, he must have had the nature of angels on his God side.

Carrie. But he did not. See Heb. ii. 16: "For verily he TOOK NOT on him the NATURE of angels."

Teacher. What nature did he have?

Carrie. See Heb. ii. 17. "He took on him the seed of Abraham. Wherefore in ALL things it behooved him to be made LIKE unto his brethren."

Teacher. What is Jesus' nature now?

Carrie. He is wholly divine now. "As the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself." Jesus says: "I am he that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am ALIVE FOR EVERMORE." Rev. i. 18.

Teacher. Do you know any way by which we might also become partakers of the DIVINE nature?

Arlon. Yes, it can be found in 2 Pet. i. 4: "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by THESE ye might be partakers of the DIVINE NATURE, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust."

These promises are those made to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and David, otherwise known as the "gospel of the kingdom," preached by Jesus, and in Heb. ii. 1-5, called the "great salvation," and in Matt. xiii. 19, the parable of the sower, as the "Word of the kingdom." There is life in this message. But to make the message effective, we must "escape the corruption that is in the world through lust."

Teacher. Through what channels do we receive the "divine nature?"

Albert. God is the fountain of life, this life he has given to his Son, and the Son will transmit it to those who obey him.

"As the Father hath (zoe) life in himself so hath he given to the Son to have life (zoe) in himself."

John xvii. 2. "Thou (the Father) hath given him (the Son) power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life (aionious zoe) to as many as thou hast given him."

1 John v. 11: "This is the record, that God hath given unto us (aionion zoe) eternal life, and this (zoe) life is IN his Son." And it must remain there, until we exchange the psuche for the zoe life. The psuche and the zoe life cannot dwell at the SAME TIME, in the same person. The environment and life must harmonize.

Teacher. Those who have not the Son have not life, what life is that?

George. They have the psuche (soul life), but NOT (the zoe) "the life." The psuche (life) ends with the dissolution of its environment, as far as his personal possession is concerned, and if he has not (the aionios zoe) the everlasting life, "hid with Christ in God," when he parts with his psuche (soul life) he has nothing whatever to look to as a guarantee of a future existence. Hence, how important it is to have (aionios zoe) everlasting life now, while the (psuche) life exists, as treasure laid up in heaven, ready to be revealed in the last time, when Jesus shall come in his glory.

Lucy. Hence, when we read: "He that heareth my Word, (the Word of the kingdom—Matt. xiii. 19) and believeth on him that sent me hath everlasting life," it is not at all out of harmony with the Scriptures when we distinguish between the psuche and zoe life. That is the KEY plain and simple. Similar difficulties exist in many minds on the subject of hell, by not noting the difference between the words hades and gehenna, both translated by the one word hell. Other errors occur, by translating differing words by the common word world. Ministers add to the confusion of people, by calling sprinkling and immersion baptism, when it is well known among students that bapto means to dip, and never sprinkle, and rhino means sprinkle, and never dip. Surely the Bible is deceitfully used by its professed friends.

Teacher. If the writer in the Orthographic Review, had understood these things which differ, he would never have been in the inconsistent quandary he is in, about the humanity and divinity of Jesus.

Who in this world ever heard of a son being CO-EXISTENT with his Father. When the relationship of father and son exists, common sense admits the priority of the father.

Again, common sense revolts at the thought of an existing person having the power to resolve himself into a non-existent state, and re-appear in life again, by or through natural birth, as an innocent babe, and grow in stature and wisdom as other children do, and at the same time behalf God, and half man. Such teaching is an inconsistent abomination, and belongs to old Babylon-confusion.

The Bible is a plain common sense book and is to be understood in a common sense way, and does not need mysterious interpreting. If people would let literal language alone, and as for symbolic language the key most always accompanies it, and relieves one of guess work. The Bible is a book to be believed and obeyed, and not interpreted and guessed at.

When Will Jesus Come?

That Jesus will come again is as plain a Bible doctrine as there is therein revealed, as the following testimony will abundantly prove.

Acts i. 11, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." The above testimony as it was announced by the two angels, robed in white, to the apostles just after our Lord's ascension is the plain out-spoken truth, and our comment upon it, is not to add to it, nor yet to take from it, but to let it speak out for itself, and that the apostles saw him taken up into heaven with the naked eye, and a cloud received him out of their sight, and just so sure as that they saw him go into heaven, just so sure he will come again.

Again in John xiv. 2, 3, "In my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again and receive you unto myself that where I am there ye may be also." Here the thought of his coming again, is one of the leading thoughts in the above language and would cause anybody to look forward to the future and expect the event to take place, and if our faith and hope centers in the same glorious event, then we also desire it.

Again in Rev. xxii. 12, "Behold, I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." Now, according to the foregoing testimony the second personal coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus, the Anointed King, is as plain as the light of day, and that we claim the same as a part of our faith and hope, and a part of the sure foundation, and we lift our voice to hasten on the glorious event, and desire to proclaim it far and near, for the good of all that it will reach, and for a witness. And now we next affirm that there will be two stages to our Lord's second coming. The first stage will be his thief-like coming for his saints, and the second stage will be with all his saints. This distinction is clearly revealed in the New Testament, and ought to be thoroughly understood so that we may KNOW what to expect, and with a desire to look forward to with certainly that there shall be no mistake about it.

First, then, the thief-like coming of the Lord for his saints. In 1 Thess. v. 2, it says, "For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." Then again in the 4th it says, "But ye brethren are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief." Now notice, here he does not come to the brethren as a thief, but to the world at large. Hence the world at large will not know of his thief-like coming, but the saints will know it perfectly for they have been taught it. Also Luke xxi. 35, it says, "For as a snare shall it come on all of them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." Also 2 Pet. iii. 10, "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night." These testimonies all teach us that the thief-like coming will take place first for the saints, to gather them together unto him. 1 Thess. i. 5. Then it is the thief-like coming that the saints are to look forward to by an eye of faith and hope, to be ready for that coming.

The second stage of the Lord's coming with all his saints. In this second stage of the Lord's coming the saints will all take a part in it, for we read in Jude i. 14, "Behold the Lord cometh with 10,000 of his saints." Also in 1 Thess. iii. 13, "To the end he may establish your hearts unblamable in holiness before God, even our Father, At the coming of our Lord Jesus, the anointed King, with all his saints." Also Zech. xiv. 5, "And the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with thee." Here is the united testimony of three witnesses speaking of the Saviour coming with his saints. One says with 10,000 of his saints, and the other two with all his saints, and as there is but one coming with all his saints they must all have reference to the one same coming.

Again we read in Matt. xxv. 31, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. (please notice the sentence here) and all the holy angels with him." It does not say angels in heaven, but all the holy angels. Now the Greek word for angel is translated messenger, and a messenger is any body sent, and that this ought to have been translated saints. Then it would read "all the holy saints with him." We know that according to the testimony already given that when Jesus makes his public manifestation to the whole world at large, that all the holy saints will be with him and share in that coming glory, as clouds or a great company, for we read in Rev. i. 7, "Behold he cometh with clouds or great company." And as recorded in Matt. xxiv. 30, "They shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven," or coming with a great company, or coming with all his saints in great power and glory. Hence in this second stage of our Lord's coming the saints are to be arrayed with him in this great power and glory.

When will Jesus come as a thief in the night to take away his saints? This is the coming we are taught to be ready for. Now there are two stages to our Lord's second coming, and that the first stage is for the saints, and that stage will be the thief like coming. We naturally inquire, when will that coming take place? For it is just what we want. We know that the time has been set, and react in days that are now past and gone, and that they are now also set. But in the face of all this time-setting that there has been done, and in the face of all there is now being done, they do not present the time of the thief-like coming of the Lord for the saints as of any special interest to them and of our preparation for that event, when it is "the coming" that we want to be worthy of.

Now, note one thing and remember that we do not know the day, nor the hour wherein our Lord will come. This is not what we are trying to teach; but it is the sign we desire to set before you. It is by this sign we do know, and now what is that sign? We now invite your candid attention to the book of Revelation, but says one, the book of Revelations is no guide for our faith and practice, but hold, let us see about this a little. Let us see what John the writer does say about it, come with me to Rev. i. 3, "Blessed is he that readeth and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein, for the time is at hand." Notice, here is a blessing pronounced upon the three different ways. First read, record, hear, third, "Keep those things that are written therein, for the time is at hand." That is, the time is at hand to read, and hear, and keep those things, because they are now recorded, and we have them within our reach. We may not understand all that there is in the book of Revelations, but let us do the best we can. When it has given us a sign that is to take place just before his thief-like coming, let us know and be ready for it, so that it does not come upon us unawares.

Now come with me to Rev. xvi. 13, 14, 15, and it says, "I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet, for they are spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty." Then the very next thing is, "Behold I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame." Here is a point of time that the saints are to watch for without any doubt, and if they do not watch their nakedness will appear and others see their shame.

Now what are the facts with regard to the fulfillment of this prophecy? As look out upon the nations of the earth today, and what do we learn and see? We learn and see the large standing armies at the back of every nation, ready, prepared for battle at a day's notice, and what are all these armies prepared for? We answer at once that they are prepared for the great battle of God Almighty, and all that is lacking yet is a sufficient time to prepare those three unclean spirits to go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world together them to the great battle of God Almighty. Then the saints of God are to watch for this event, and as soon as these three unclean spirits shall go forth to the kings of the earth and of the whole world together them. Then we look for the thief like coming of the Lord to gather his saints: that the thief-like coming will take place after they go forth to gather the nations and before the battle is fought, from the simple fact, it plainly says, "Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame." This is one of the blessings we crave, and in order to obtain it we are watching for the outpouring of these three unclean spirits. In conclusion then let us be wise, watching the movements of these three great powers and be ready for the thief-like coming of the Lord.

Is There Anything In the Paper About the Coming of Jesus?

"Is there anything in the paper about the coming of Jesus? I can't find anything about it Auntie," said Omar, last week, as he was anxiously scanning the columns of the newly received RESTITUTION. Took the paper, and sure enough, for once the writers had happened to say little about that blessed Hope that is so dear to all our hearts, but this week, Sister D. W. Post, sent a hymn on the subject, that gave Omar great encouragement, "To lift up his head for redemption is near," and Brothers Joblin, Harris, Dresser, and others spoke of it in a way that pleased him very much. And made his eyes light up, as nothing has lighted them for years. For him it is the one, the all important event. It is the goal of his dreams. His child-like faith, shames us of older years. His trust is implicit; it is perfect. God has said he would send Jesus back to earth. And that is enough. And when Jesus comes, there will be healing and happiness and a crown! No wonder he says, "O, I have found something more about Jesus! It says, 'Jesus is soon coming,'—that it is almost time to call Job, almost time for Rachel's children to come from the land of the enemy. And for David to awake in his likeness, Daniel to stand in his lot, and Paul to receive his crown.'" Would that this same gladness could fill all our hearts, that we could all have the same genuine love for the Savior's appearing. And we must have it, if we expect to share in the joys of the coming millennium. It will not do to express the hope with our lips, if it is not in the heart. If we secretly wish he would not come just yet, are we not telling and living a falsehood? But we do wish he would come. We want the storms to cease; the cruel cold to chill no more, the murderous hand to perish from the earth. We are tired of seeing poor helpless, human beings in the grasp of the monster death; looking at us so pleadingly out of dying eyes, and we, all unable, to rescue. How good it will be when it can be said, "The inhabitant shall no more be sick!" And when there will be no more heartless oppressors. No one to say 'there is no God.' There are pleasures in the present time; our lives have many a joy, but it is all mingled with sadness; it must all end. The years will go on, our friends go out of sight, our heads whiten for the tomb.

"'Tis the wink of an eye, 'tis the gasp of a breath,
From the blossom of health to the paleness of death."

Then 'Come Lord Jesus and come quickly."

Question.

I would like it some brother would tell through THE RESTITUTION where the garden of Eden was located, and oblige a brother,

J. J. MAY.

It is calculated that in large ocean steamers more than 3,000 articles of glass and china are broken on every voyage.

The amount of property which went up in smoke and flame last year was $100,824,500, the lowest record since 1883.

The cost of maintaining a cavalry soldier and horse in the British army is about $500 per annum

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

LOPPING off the branches of sin is labor in vain, and always to be renewed; there is no effectual way but to lay the axe to the root of it.

"So act that your deeds may be so many counsels and foibles if you wish others to draw from your words rules of conduct for themselves and to carry out the orders you give them."

A PRIVATE note from Brother Zilmer, dated March 7, says that he expects to move to Plymouth next week, and that he has held some meetings in Wisconsin and baptized one young man.

"OF all the forms of skepticism ever assumed, the most insidious the most dangerous, and the most fatal, is that which suggests that it is unsafe to perform plain and simple duty for fear of disastrous consequences, so says Wells."

HAVE confidence in God; there is satisfaction nowhere else—safety nowhere else. Nowhere in the wide universe can you be either at peace or be safe without confidence in him who rules the skies, and at whose disposal is your eternal destiny.

THE late Mrs. Browning said, So far as she could see, modern thought in religious matters was developing two great classes of thinkers, those who tolerate everybody because they believe nothing, and those who tolerate nobody because they believe something.

BROTHER John Foore, who has been in Arizona for some time, has returned to Parsons, Kansas, his old home. He says that Arizona has a beautiful winter climate, but it is too hot in summer. Just before leaving for Kansas he baptized one more person. May the good work of calling out a people for his name, continue.

THIS week Brother Joblin begins a series of articles on the "Law" question, and we ask that our brethren let him get through his argument, believing that he will be able to answer all the points. This subject seems to bother some, and Brother Joblin will endeavor to make plain what the Bible really teaches man must do to have eternal life, and in doing so he will, we think, show clearly that no man will get eternal life, in this dispensation, by keeping the old Israelitish laws. Follow him closely and see.

Radiation.

HUMAN beings radiate influences of various kinds. Some radiate business. They are steeped in it—charged with it—with them it is business here, business there, and business everywhere,—radiate a business atmosphere. Others in a literal and physical sense radiate alcohol; they lurch into a street car, and body and breath will radiate the fumes throughout the conveyance. Others radiate those living sunbeams, cheerfulness wherever they go. It is delightful to be in such an atmosphere of brightness and joy. On the other side, there are those who are always in trouble—or expecting it; a cloud seems to hang above and around them, and they radiate the gloom and dampness and depression. Oh, how true it is "that no man liveth to himself." We are all always radiating influences bitter or sweet, evil or good, uplifting or depressing; what shall be our aim, and how shall we reach it? There is no greater need in the world, and no higher aim possible for us than to radiate Christ! There are those whose very presence sheds a sweet odor of Christ Jesus—a manifestation of his presence seems with them as if a halo of his spirit were around them, and himself within them. His love seems to sweeten their voice, and to beam in tenderness from their eyes; and their whole being seems charged with him. Ah, it not only seems so: it is so. Realizing that they are but the earthen vessels, they know that the excellency of the glory is that which is from God through our Lord Jesus Christ, and not from themselves. Their desire is that Christ may be magnified in their body, whether by life or by death. If, then, we can reach the height to which Paul attained and truly say, "Christ liveth in me," we shall bear him about with us day by day, think his thoughts,—utter his words,—all our actions will be performed in his spirit,—and all our life long we shall radiate the light, the love, the energy, the life of our beloved Lord Jesus. God help us all to radiate Christ.

Law or Gospel—Which? No. 1.

"What shall we do to be saved?" is certainly the most important question mortal can consider; and we have been asked to place before our readers the Biblical answer to those who strenuously maintain that it requires both Law and Gospel to save. In the fear of God we attempt to do this: but we wish to be distinctly understood, that we write only for those who believe the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be the only rule of faith and practice. We are not foolish enough to contend with just one Bible against those who have already eight or ten volumes of equal value in their estimation with my one text-book, and can have more whenever occasion calls for it.

We cannot discuss every item of Gospel Truth, nor every clause of the Law, and so we will take up the question as to whether the Fourth Commandment of the Decalogue is now in force, and binding on Jews and Gentiles alike? Our answer is, It is not in force now, and therefore binding on neither Jews nor Gentiles, and proceed to prove it:—

I. For some 2500 years after creation no mention was made of the Sabbath, so far as we know. The Bible does not say that any one was commanded to keep it during all those centuries; or that any one did observe it; or that any one failed to observe it,—and therefore we have no proof of its existence during that period.

II. The Sabbath is first mentioned in Ex. xvi. 23, and we there learn that it was given to the children of Israel when, on the way to Canaan, they were encamped at the foot of Mount Sinai.

III. The reasons for giving the Sabbath to Israel were:—

1st, "That I [Jehovah] may prove them [Israelites] whether they will walk in my law or no." Ex. xvi. 4, 5.

If they had had the Sabbath before that, they would have been already proved by their obedience, or disobedience to it.

2nd, The second reason for giving the Sabbath to Israel is found in Ex. xxxi. 12, 13, and Ezek. xx. 1, 12, as follows:—"I [Jehovah] gave them my Sabbaths to be a sign between me [Jehovah] and them [Israelites] that they might know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you."

To sanctify them was to set them apart from other nations for himself. And we learn the import of this sign of the Sabbath in Ex. xix. 4-6. It was his purpose to organize them as a kingdom of priests,—a separate nation, and a peculiar treasure to him above all people on the earth. The Sabbath was a sign that this compact had been formed. It was his nation, and the Sabbath was the sign of his ownership, both to them and other kingdoms.

If the Sabbath had been instituted at Creation, and enforced among all nations, in the nature of things it could have been no distinguishing mark between God and Israel.

If the Sabbath had been given to all nations at Sinai, it would not have made Israel a peculiar treasure to God above all people on earth: all, then, would have been on an equal footing.

As Jehovah explained to Moses the reason for giving the Sabbath to Israel, he seems to have been ignorant of it up to that time.

All the rulers were totally ignorant of it, for they came and told Moses that the people gathered twice as much bread on the sixth day, and Moses explained that this is what Jehovah had said, "Tomorrow is the rest of the Holy Sabbath." Again and again he said this to them so that they could get it into their minds. See Ex. xvi. 22-30.

The third reason for giving the Sabbath to Israel is given in Deut. v. 15, as follows:—"And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm. THEREFORE, [for this reason] the Lord commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day."

This is absolute proof that they had never kept it before.

As the Gentiles were not brought out of Egypt, nor organized as a kingdom of priests, their loyalty was not proved as was that of this peculiar treasure above all people on earth, by the Sabbath, neither could it be a memorial of their deliverance.

The fourth reason why the Sabbath was given to Israel, is given in Ex. xx. 11, together with the reason why it should be observed: "For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested on the 7th day, WHEREFORE the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it."

Jehovah rested from his creative work on the 7th day, and set it apart because in it he rested. In this announcement in Gen. ii. no reference is made to any one but God. No Sabbath was given to men or for men. But when some 2500 years later he organized a kingdom of his own for the first time since the fall, and took that people into his special care, and brought them into intercourse with himself, what a fitness of things that he should set apart a day of rest for his peculiar treasure, that corresponded with, and was a memorial of his rest from creative work.

On the other hand, how incongruous to give a holy Sabbath as a memorial of Jehovah's sanctified rest after the creative work of six days; yes; how incongruous to expect UNHOLY PEOPLE to keep a HOLY DAY!! What regard had they for Jehovah and his rest? Why, he did not communicate with them at all! And what can the estimate of God's character be by religionists who think he would be pleased or honored by compulsory service of that sort? Would not such an institution be a veritable school for hypocrites?

To us it is supremely ridiculous to talk about giving a Sabbath to be observed holily by people wholly alienated from the life of God through ignorance! Supremely ridiculous to think God would expect men to renounce themselves and their interests and pleasures and devote one-seventh of their time to him

WITHOUT A MOTIVE.

Is that God's usual mode of procedure? Is there a man on the face of the earth who can show one simple promise of God to Gentiles for keeping the Sabbath which he gave to the Jews, or any other Sabbath?

In giving the Sabbath and other laws to the Jews the rewards for obedience to them were published as wide as the laws themselves. And any advantages to be derived from them pertained to this mortal life, and related to the land they were on the way to;—and as the law could neither give life after death nor confer the inheritance of saints as Paul distinctly avers,—Gal. iii. 18-21, of course Gentiles would reap no benefit from keeping the Sabbath, seeing, they were NOT REQUIRED to keep it. Their keeping of the Sabbath would be on a par with the prayers and sacrifices of the wicked,—an abomination. Prov. xv. 8 and xxviii. 9.

To the Israelites, whom Jehovah declares he severed from other people (Lev. xx. 26) he talks plainly. "All the commandments [this includes the Sabbath] which I command thee this day, shall ye observe to do,—that ye may live, and multiply and go in and possess the land which the Lord sware unto your fathers." Deut. viii. 1. A plain, straightforward proposition; with the result of obedience attached to it; and the threat that the land should spue them out if disobedient is found in Lev. xviii. 28, and Lev. xx. 22. Both sides of the picture being perfect.

IV. Positive evidence is given in Deut. v. 2, 3, that the Law given to Israel at Sinai (Horeb) had never been given to that people before. It says:—

"The Lord MADE NOT THIS COVENANT WITH OUR FATHERS, but with US who are all of us here alive this day."

In verses 7-21 the specifications of that covenant are given, so far as the ten commandments.

Moses then reminds them that God spake all this, and the people heard him, and also that he wrote them; and gives also the reason why he spake in their hearing no more.

V. Additional infallible evidence that even the Israelites knew nothing of the Law of the Sabbath till it was given from Sinai, is found in Neh. ix. 13. It reads thus:—

"Thou [Jehovah] camest down also upon Mount Sinai, and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them right judgments, and true laws, good statutes and commandments; and MADEST KNOWN unto them thy holy Sabbath, and commandest them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant."

Here we have right judgments, true laws, good statutes and commandments, including the holy Sabbath,—doubtless intended as a summary of the whole law,—all given by the hand of Moses.

Nehemiah ix. 14 being true Israel knew nothing of the Sabbath, although descended from Abraham, Isaac and Jacob whose God was Jehovah. As he did not commit his oracles to Gentiles we know they were at least as ignorant as the Israelites.

VI. We are informed in Rom. iii. 1 that God did commit his oracles to the Jews.

2nd, He did not commit them to the Gentiles.

3rd, That the advantage of Jews over Gentiles was chiefly owing to the oracles of God.

All this is in harmony with, and illustrates the facts that they were a peculiar treasure to God above all people in earth, and that the Sabbath was a sign betwixt him and them alone.

It should be remembered that 430 years before the law was given, God had made an everlasting covenant with Abraham—a covenant a thousand times more valuable than that made from Sinai because it secures to the believer everlasting life and the everlasting inheritance. And Paul in the second of Ephesians xi. 16, shows that the Gentiles had no access to that covenant of promise (the children of Israel being its custodian) and were therefore aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and both without God and without hope of future life.

Now, what was the reason? Something stood in the way: what was it? It was something that caused enmity between the Jews and them. In the Common Version it is styled "The middle wall of partition between us." In Rotherham's translation it is called the middle wall of the enclosure; Young's translation is the same; and the Syriac says "The wall that stood in the midst, and the enmity;" and Henderson's says, "Partition wall that separated us."

The Apostle in the 13th verse shows that at the time he was writing this letter, a wonderful change had taken place. He says, "But now, in Christ Jesus ye who were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ; for he is our peace [Peace between Jews and Gentiles] who hath made both [Jews and Gentiles] one, [placed them on an equal footing touching the covenants of promise] and hath broken down of partition between us; having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances, or decrees—(Rotherham) for to make of twain [the two peoples] one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both [Jews and Gentiles] unto God in One body, by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby," etc.

From the foregoing Scripture we see plainly that the Jews had been walled in, or enclosed, by a law that caused enmity between them and the Gentiles.

2. That this prevented their access to the life-imparting covenants of promise,—the result being that the Jews looked down upon Gentiles, and called them dogs, and the Gentiles on their part hated the Jews.

We know how Law-advocates bridge this chasm. They tell us there were two laws,—one the moral law, viz. the Decalogue, and the ceremonial law. They say that it was the ceremonial law that formed the Middle Wall between Jews and Gentiles, and caused such enmity. And they find proof to satisfy themselves in v. 15, where it says, "Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ORDINANCES; and understand the Word of ordinances to mean the ceremonial portions of the Law; and Christ having abolished them, Gentiles and Jews are equally eligible to Eternal Life in the Kingdom of God. We expect to show before we are through that this is very wide of the truth, but at present confine ourselves to an exhibition of the truth as we understand it Something separated the Jews from the Gentiles,—what was it? Something shut them off from the covenants of promise made to Abraham,—what was it? It was some law,—but what law? We answer, THE LAW. The Law of God, which Paul in Gal. iii. 19 says "was ordained by angels in the hand of a Mediator." [Moses].

In referring to that law and its clauses again we are struck with the words recorded in Lev. xx. 26, "And ye shall be holy unto me: for I the Lord am holy, and have severed you from all other people, that ye should be mine." We understand that he separated them by the Law as a whole. It was, so to speak, the law of the kingdom of God on earth (see 1 Chron. xxviii. 5, and 1 Chron. xxix. 23) a proper and complete national constitution and law. It was this that "severed" or separated them. From beginning to end it was designed to do just this. We boldly affirm that it was in no sense intended as a means of salvation, but of isolation: and it did its work effectually, and was then abolished.

The Great God had long before ordained that Justification should be by faith. That is, he determined to save by grace, or favor. Men could make no adequate return for Eternal Life, and therefore a faith that works by love and purifies the heart was the only condition exacted of them. God made exceeding great and precious promises to Abraham on this condition, and his faith was imputed to him for righteousness: and he was called the Father of the Faithful, and became heir of the world through the righteousness of faith.

And we want to say here that God has never departed from this principle of Justification by faith. God made no mistake,—he selected the best means to accomplish his purpose, and still adheres to it. This plan of salvation required no law to supplement it. It requires but little intelligence to realize that salvation by favor, through faith, and salvation by works of the law antagonize each other. They could not work together and hence Paul informs us that the covenant made to Abraham was not made void by the law that was added 430 years afterwards.

"THE JUST SHALL LIVE BY FAITH"

was the divine announcement after the law was added, and all the while it was in force: and Paul explains this by saying in Gal. iii. 18 that the inheritance was given to Abraham by promise, not by law; and presently adds that "if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to promise," not according to law. And again in verse 9 he says, "So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham," not those which be of law. Once more it is proved that the law was not given for salvation purposes.

Happily the Spirit knew we would want to know what the law was given for, if not to save people? So he says "Wherefore then serveth the law? And then answers:—"It was added because of transgressions till the Seed [Christ v. 19] should come to whom the promises were made." v. 19.

In this passage we find that the law was added because of transgressions,—it was to govern sinners, not saints. And they were transgressors or sinners because they had no faith. Abraham had faith and needed no law to control his conduct, because the hope of the promised blessings inspired him to live godly. He by faith saw the day of Christ and rejoiced.

It must be remembered here that God had promised Abraham that his Seed, the Christ, should be the Savior of the world. And when the vast multitude of his descendants come out of Egyptian bondage the birth of that Savior would not take place for some 1500 years. They were a multitude of sinners, and as such, the promises to Abraham counted little or nothing with them. They wanted their flesh to be gratified. Suppose they had mixed with surrounding nations, could God's promise to Abraham that the world's redeemer should be a son of his, have been fulfilled? No! impossible!

Let us read what Paul says once more. Of the law, he says, "It was added because of transgressions." Was this to be a perpetual addition, Paul? No! He says "It was added because of transgressions TILL THE SEED SHOULD COME, to whom the promise was made." Verse 16 says Christ was that Seed.

We now ask if that added law was not limited in duration to the coming of Christ? No intelligent and honest person will deny that its time expired when Christ came.

Can one of our readers fail to see why the Israelites were walled in by the law,—why God organized them into a for a stated time, or till a certain person was born, and then abolished the law that held them intact, destroyed their city and the only temple at which they could offer sacrifices, and kill hundreds of thousands of them and broke up the kingdom and scattered the rest the wide world over? This explains what Paul says in the 14th verse:—"Wherefore the Law was our schoolmaster to lead to Christ that we might be justified by faith: but the faith having come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster, since you are all the Sons of God, through the faith, by Jesus Christ.

POLITICAL KINGDOM

In conclusion we remark that so far from the truth is the idea that it was the ceremonial part of the law that was abolished by Christ, that although the whole Law formed the wall around the Israelites which shut out the Gentiles,—we think the SABBATH formed the most conspicuous part of that wall. The words, "I gave them my Sabbaths to be a sign between me and them" goes to prove it. It was the distinguishing mark that for some reason or other, they were heaven's favorite nation and produced jealousy and enmity in Gentiles.

Having proven that the Law from Sinai constituted Israel God's nation, and the subjects of his kingdom on earth; and that the strictest obedience they were capable of yielding to it did not secure life after death to inherit the blessings covenanted to Abraham:—and therefore did not make them members of the or the Seed of Abraham faithwise; it would seem proper now to examine Eph. ii. 14, 15-19 more particularly. Paul says the Ephesians had been brought nigh to the covenants of promise, and made fellow citizens with the saints by means of the blood of Christ, who abolished in his flesh the enmity, the law of commandments contained in ordinances.

It appears to us that the Seventh Day Adventists' System is built on the Two Law Theory, and on the understanding that the words, "The Law of Commandments contained in Ordinances" refer to the ceremonial part of the Law; or, as they state it the ceremonial Law. This assumption is at least, the Cornerstone of the two-law theory. This we now attempt to disprove: and

In the First place we will examine the Word, to ascertain if it necessarily means, or points to the ceremonies practiced in connection with the tabernacle and temple service. The original word for ordinances in Eph. ii. 15 is dogmas, and is defined in the lexicons to mean "A decree, statute, ordinance." Seeing the translators chose to use the word "ordinance" in this passage,—we must see what this English word means. Webster says 1st., "It is an ordaining or establishing by authority; appointment." 2nd ["A rule established by authority; a permanent rule of action; a statute, law, edict, decree, rescript;" and says acts of Parliament are sometimes called ordinances; and says it is often used in Scripture in the sense of a law or statute of sovereign power;—and that its most frequent application in the United States is to laws and regulations of municipal corporations."

There is nothing in all this to warrant the assumption of Adventists that it refers to what they call Law No. 2., or the ceremonial law. If the idea is not in the Word, they have no authority for their theory. They have taken advantage of the fact that Presbyterians and others use the word ordinance in connection with baptism and the Lord's Supper and so deluded the people.

We have already shown that the SABBATH, more than any other part of the law distinguished Israel, and showed Gentiles they were out in the cold as it were, or under a ban.

Col. ii. 14-20 also contains the word ordinances, and the 16th verse exhibits some of the things referred to as ordinances. It says "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon or of THE SABBATH, which are a shadow of things to come, but the Body of Christ."

But why not, Paul? His answer is in verses 13, 14, viz. Because God had forgiven ALL their trespasses, by blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was contrary to them, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross."

Observe, all their trespasses had been forgiven whether of the Decalogue or the ceremonies. If the blotting out of the ceremonial resulted in forgiveness, would not forgiveness of trespasses against the Decalogue result from the blotting out of the statutes, laws, edicts, and decrees respecting meat, drink, holy days, new moon and Sabbath? So that they could believe the gospel preached to Abraham 430 years before the handwriting and be baptized into Christ for remission of sin?

Poetry.

They Serve who Wait.

Thou who weary, with clasped fingers
Liest on thy bed of pain,
Why art thou not up and doing?
Is there nothing more to gain?
Hast thou gathered up all knowledge—
Is there now no work to do?
No sad words that need relieving,
In this world of sin and woe?

"Learn to labor," saith the poet:
"Daily strive with all thy might;
In the world's great field of battle,
Be the foremost in the fight."
Ah! I know within those brain-cells
Lofty plans are daily made,
While thy hand's are idly folded,
Or across thy bosom laid.

Thou art mourning thy own weakness,
Striving still for strength to do:
Listen while I teach a lesson
Hard to learn, but still most true.
Stand aside, and let the workers
Briskly pass them at the gate;
Thou'st already learned to labor;
Now thy lesson's "learn to wait."

In the halls of mirth and feasting,
Servants stand with fobbed hands,
Waiting, with their wanchful glances,
For the Master's quick commands;
Yet they may remain unbidden,
Through the feast, to come or go;
But they serve, and serve as truly
As those hurrying to and fro.

This is then thy needed lesson:
Learn it well before too late;
"Though for some to serve is labor,
Yet they truly serve who wait."
Thou art working for the hours
That within the future lie;
Thou art garnering up new forces
For the unknown by and by.

Wait and rest; for God hath promised
Strength he'll give unto the weak.
Wait and listen. In the silence
Thou shalt hear the Master speak.
So with thanks, and not with murmur,
Now accept thy lofty fate;
Sinners well can learn to labor;
Only saints can learn to wait.

The Tithing Question.

What is the Church of God?

Paul in 1 Tim. iii. 14, says "These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly; but if I tarry long that thou mayst know how thou oughtst to believe thyself in the house of God, which is the Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth." Also read 1 Thess. i. 7–8. "So that ye were ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia. For from you sounded out the Word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia; but also in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak any thing."

What sounds out from you? The gospel of Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." Rom. i. 16. Paul.

I am asked, "How can I believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent? As it is written, how beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things. So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Rom. x. 14, 15, 17.

Jesus said, "I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also, for therefore am I sent." Luke iv. 43.

It is a fact so clearly taught in the Word of God, and so universally believed by all Christians, that the gospel should be preached in all the world, that we need not enter into a lengthy argument on that point; but we desire to show that this duty is to be shared by all who are led into the light of God's eternal truth.

In 1 Cor. ix. 7–14, Paul discusses this matter in a beautiful and impressive manner. "Who goeth a warfare any time at his own charges? who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the flock? Say I these things as a man? or saith not the law the same also? For it is written in the law of Moses, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen? Or saith he it altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt this is written: that he that ploweth should plow in hope; and that he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope. If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things? If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? Nevertheless we have not used this power; but suffer all things, lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ. Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar? Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel."

The application of this Scripture to the preaching of the gospel is too plain to be for one moment denied.

We will next notice a few of the words of the Savior on this point. In Matt. x. 10, we read that the "workman is worthy of his ment," and in Luke x. 7, that "the laborer is worthy of his hire." These Scriptures are sufficient to show the duty of God's people in supporting those who preach the gospel, and if it is reasonable to suppose that God would have some definite plan by which this duty should be performed. "The tithe is the Lord's." By careful investigation we shall find that the tithing system was only introduced as the proper means for supporting the servants of God.

In Gen. xiv. we have an account of the taking of the goods of Sodom and Gomorrah and the capture of Lot, and how the Lord blessed Abram in bringing them back. On his return he was met by Melchizedek king of Salem and priest of the Most High God, who blessed him and said, "Blessed be Abram of the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth." Abram then gave "tithes of all" to this servant of God.

In Gen. xxviii. we read of some of Jacob's experience when fleeing from his brother Esau. Many are quite familiar with his dream of the ladder on which Angels of God were ascending and descending; of the renewal of the promise of God that in him and in his seed "should all the families of the earth be blessed;" of his statement when he awoke that "this is none other but the hand of God, and this is the gate of heaven;" but how few there are who pay very much attention to the solemn vow which he then made to the Lord. "And Jacob vowed a vow, Saying, If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on, so that I come again to my father's house in peace; then shall the Lord be my God; and this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house; and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee."

It is quite evident that Jacob faithfully performed this solemn vow, and the blessings of God attended him. He prospered in the things of this world; he wrestled with God and obtained the blessing; his name was changed to Israel, a prince of God, Gen. xxxii. 24–30, and he finally came to his father's house in peace. Would to God that every one who reads these lines would make this same solemn vow and as faithfully perform it as did this true child of God. These lessons from Abraham and Jacob ought to have great weight upon the minds of all who are heirs with them of the same promise. Heb. xi. 16; Gal. iii. 27.

"The tithe is holy unto the Lord; and all the tithe of land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the Lord's; it is holy unto the Lord. And if a man will at all redeem ought of his tithes he shall add thereto the fifth part thereof; and concerning the tithe of the herd, or of the flock, even of whatsoever passes under the rod, the tenth shall be holy unto the Lord." Lev. xxvii. 8–32.

This Scripture very clearly teaches faithfulness in the paying of all the tithes. Let all who are blessed in the field and in flocks and herds remember the Giver of all these good things and the claims which he makes of all who receive from his bountiful hand.

The wise man has stated the duty of rendering to God the first fruits, and the blessings of the Lord attending it. "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase. So shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." Prov. iii. 9, 10.

We can see by this Scripture that God claims the first fruits, but his plan has been reversed by the majority of people. They first supply themselves, and often bountifully and even extravagantly, and then perhaps they will offer a small amount of what they do not need, to the cause of God, which they profess to love, and which should be considered dearer than their own lives. Others who may not have so much seem to think they are justified in supplying their own desires first, and then if they have no surplus to put into the cause of God they will not be condemned. We have seen that God desires us to render to him his own first, and then he will bless that which is left for our own use.

"Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation." Mal. iii. 7–9. Here a terrible sin is marked against those who profess the name of the Lord.

It will not do to say that this Scripture applied only to the old dispensation: for by carefully reading the book of Malachi we should see that much of it has special reference to the last days, in which we evidently are living. In Mal. iii. 5, it says, "I will come near to you in judgment," and in the 17th verse we read of the time when the Lord shall make up his Jewels; and in chapter iv. 1–3 we read of the day that "that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea and all that do wickedly shall be burned up as stubble." All this shows that at least some of this has special application to our own days, and the sins that are being practiced by many who have named the name of the Lord.

If a man should rob his fellowman of his earthly goods, we would all say that he had sinned against the laws of God, and the laws of man, and yet the Lord tells us that many are guilty of still greater sin, even of robbing the Lord of that which he claims is his own. Would to God that all might view this in its true light, and cry earnestly to the Lord for mercy and pardon, inquiring "What wilt thou have me to do?" Then may we read the following verses which tell us what to do in this matter, and the blessings that are so freely offered to those who obey.

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed: for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of hosts." Mal. iii. 10–12.

Though this grievous sin is marked against us, how thankful we should be that God has offered us a remedy, and so many precious blessings on such just and reasonable conditions. Let us all faithfully prove the Lord, and thus enjoy that which is so graciously offered us.

Now we have found that the tithing system is clearly and forcibly taught in the Old Testament, how is it in the New Testament? Let us hear the words of Christ on this subject. "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." Matt. xxiii. 23. Also read Luke xii. 42. Christ does not condemn them for paying the tithe, but to the contrary, he shows that they ought to pay the tithe and also to perform the other duties mentioned.

Therefore we see that Christ not only endorses the tithing system, commands that it should be strictly obeyed; and as we have before mentioned, he says, "the laborer is worthy of his hire." Luke x. 7, also Matt. x. 10.

In 1 Cor. xvi. 1–8, the apostle Paul says of this, "Let each one lay by him in store as God hath prospered him" and we have already noticed that the Lord hath ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." 1 Cor. ix. 14.

In Heb. vii. this same apostle recognizes the tithing system as the proper plan for all time under both dispensations.

We desire now to show by still another line of thought that the tithing system was not a Jewish institution, but originated long before the Jewish age, and is in full force in the Christian age. By again referring to Gen. xiv. We shall see that the first order of priesthood of which we have any account was the order of Melchisedek. Abraham paid tithes to the same order; as we find in Gen. xiv. 20, and in Heb. vii. 1–10. It is not essential to this argument to know who Melchezedek was as a man, for we are told but little about that; but we are definitely told that he was a "priest of the most high God" "King of Righteousness," "King of Salem," which is King of Peace," and that he was even "better than Abraham." Heb. vii. 6, 7.

It is a pleasure for me to know that this order of priesthood has never been abolished, but is still in full operation; for Christ is a priest "after the order of Melchizedek." Heb. vii. 15, 17. He is the "high priest," the minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man, Heb. viii. 1, 2.

From these Scriptures we can clearly see that the tithing system belonged to the Melchizedek priesthood, and we are now living under that same order of priesthood. The Lord justly and truly demands faithfulness in the payment of all the tithes.

As to how we are to pay our tithes it would be impossible to speak of all the peculiar circumstances under which we may be placed, but the case of Jacob will perhaps meet all cases. "Of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee." Gen. xxviii. 22. "The tithe is the Lords," and this he requires of all to support his cause, and we cannot make offerings of the tithe; but as far as possible we should also give offerings to the cause of God, to the poor, and in other ways, out of the nine-tenths which the Lord in his mercy has given us. "The gold and the silver are the Lord's." Hag. ii. 8. "The world and the fullness thereof." Psalms lxxxix. 11. "It is he that giveth thee power to get wealth." Deut. viii. 17, 18. "All that we have and are came from the Lord; therefore it is but our duty and reasonable service to return him that which he requires.

Thus may we all take a part in the labor and sacrifice in the cause of our dear Redeemer, and at last come with rejoicing bringing our sheaves with us. Psa. cxxvi. 6.

JOHN FOORE.

[THE foregoing article on tithing we give on the earnest request of the writer. This subject has been thoroughly gone over, and it would seem as if the readers of THE RESTITUTION were in possession now of all the Scripture that can be produced regarding it. It has seemed to us that if a man was thoroughly "converted," so changed in his disposition and desires, that he turned his back on the "world" and its "worldly" ways, and determined to enter the service of Jesus, was wholly consecrated to the cause of Christ, that with the rest of him went his pocket book. It seems to some people that in a case of such "converting" that if only one-tenth of his pocket book goes over that but one-tenth of the "rest of the man" need go. That if all the man goes the whole of the money goes to the Lord also. Now we believe in complete consecration, and no division. There is a great deal of room for discussion when we take both sides of the tithing question, but not an atom of room for discussion if we take up the full and complete consecration question. In view of possible disagreement, brethren, do let's take the road that is without question entirely safe, and work for a few fully consecrated. While on this subject we wish to just on behalf of "many brethren" drop a word or two. Some men who have been by self or some one else constituted "ministers" or "preachers" seem to think that they may make appointments in different parts of the country, go and preach, and then find fault and say the brethren failed to "do their duty" If they are not paid well. In such cases it very often happens that the one who has failed to "do his duty" is the "preacher." If he cannot afford to pay his own way, and provide for his family while he is "out in the field," he better stay at his labor and wait until some means are provided, or till he is invited and assured that he will be paid for his time and expenses. No preacher has a right to go and "saddle" himself on a community without invitation, and then when the brethren do not enter into the work and pay as he thinks they ought, say harsh things of them, and accuse them of "worldliness" and worse evils. They may have had sickness, or other reasons for not "shelling out." Perhaps they are supporting some poor ones, and may be paying out in one way and another for more than the "one-tenth." This the transient visitor may not learn of—perhaps they do not make a "big blow" about what they are doing and few people know of their work. This is not written to cast reflection on any one, but merely as suggestions, because in some cases that we know of, blame has been laid at the door of brethren who have done many times the worth of the preacher's work, and never had any credit, because they chose to not let their right hand know what the left was doing.—ED.]

One Faith

Says one, "They think that they are right and you think you are right." Said in regard to the teaching of God's Book. What may I answer and yet be free from the charge of dogmatism? Can it be that men cannot see the truth of God alike? Is it true that God has spoken to us in riddles in regard to the most essential duties required at our hands, when without obedience to his commands Jesus says we shall be condemned? Is the gospel or "The Good News" so very infinite that we cannot understand it when Jesus says plainly we must believe it, or he that believeth not shall be damned? Since it is God's instrumental persuader we must understand it to believe it. And if we have but one faith it is the result of seeing and comprehending the gospel alike. There is absolutely no ground for the exercise of liberality toward those who preach or hold any other good news, than that which Paul preached. And if I cannot say with full confidence that I believe and teach the same gospel, do not my doubts imply that I may be preaching another gospel, and thus bringing the curse upon my head and misleading my hearers? Is any man fit to carry such important news to a dying world who is not sure that he understands the message he must deliver? Many good people deplore the want of "Christian Union" among the many orthodox churches. One person said to me, Why may we not arrive at a unity similar to the union of the American States? "Each state has its own peculiar laws and ceremonies yet they are united." I said, Yes, but they are not united on what they differ in, but they are united on that sacred compact, the Constitution of the whole body. I said further, We as a nation make our own laws for the regulation of our own affairs. But in the matter of Christianity God is the Law-giver, and forbids us making any laws, or making amendments to his plan of salvation. Let us humbly submit to his Word, and we are in unity with him.

Report of Meetings.

Dear Restitution:

A few of the isolated ones here at Oleander, Cal., have enjoyed a gospel feast recently. Brother Edwin Groat, of Scholls, Oregon, made us a visit of a few weeks, and gave us fourteen good gospel sermons. We secured the school house for our meetings, but alas, those rich life-giving sermons failed to attract many of our citizens to the feast, but however, a part of the time there was a very fair turnout, and two became obedient by baptism. They were Mr. and Mrs. Perry (my nephew and his wife). We were rejoiced to have them make a start for the kingdom, and we hope that they will continue in the narrow way, and grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. There were some others that seemed very much interested, and we hope's're long to see them become obedient, and I can truly say we have all had a love feast, and we greatly regret that we are not able to keep Bro. Groat to work here in these parts. It is a pity, that one so mild and Christ-like, and so capable of doing so much good, could not be kept to work in the Lord's vineyard. We feel that there is much need of having the gospel preached, and to warn the world of the impending doom. The low muttering thunder heard in the East, and the storm cloud now gathering, speak to us in trumpet tones of the great change that is soon to come. Notwithstanding all these they do not awake a slumbering world, but Paul says, "Ye, brethren are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you unawares;" and Luke tells us in the 21st chapter and 36th verse, that we are to watch and pray always, that ye may be counted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man, so let us do our duty, and tell them of the danger of delay, and how necessary it is to obey the gospel, and if they turn a deaf ear, it will be the way they did in the days of Noah. He preached 120 years and warned the people of the great flood, but they believed him not, and so shall it be in the coming of the Son of Man, but these things will surely come to pass, whether they hear the warning or not. One here and there is willing to heed the call, only a few. Soon the last one will be registered in the book of the high calling. Then the door will be shut. Oh, will I be there in that glorified throng; arrayed in fine linen, clean and white? Dear brothers and sisters, we can afford to share his cross, knowing there is a crown awaiting all those that love his appearing. I know we all enjoyed Brother Groat's visit with us, and it was hard to say good by, but we will pray that the Lord will bless his labors, and that if we meet him no more in this life, we may meet him in the kingdom with all the faithful, no more to part.

Tract Fund.

We the undersigned, realizing that the distributing of tracts is a good way to spread the truth, and that the time is short in which we can work for the Master, do hereby agree to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purpose of raising a fund to be used in supplying tracts to those who will distribute them free.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Editor:

I have been getting your paper for a long time and I have not written to you about it. I would like to pay you for it, but I am in a poor shape to take care of myself. I am 73 years old and badly afflicted. I suffer all the time, but can read THE RESTITUTION from one end to the other three to four times. I think it the best Christian paper I ever had. I am thankful to the good friends of the Church of God for the kindness they have for the poor. I am trying to live a Christian life. I am waiting and watching for the dear Savior. I would like to pay for the paper, but I can't. I like all the Church of God.

DAVID LANNING.

Editor Restitution:

We cannot very well do without the paper. My wife and I connected ourselves with the one faith Church at Roll, about four years ago. The more I study the Scriptures the stronger I get in the faith. May we all live so that when the Master comes we may have part in the first resurrection.

Yours in hope,

T. S. SWINDLER.

Dear Restitution:

Oh, how I love your weekly visits. It is like food when I am hungry. I cannot stop until all is devoured, and then it seems so long before another meal. To do without it, I will not, so long as I am able to get the means to pay for it. It does me so much good to read those blessed promises of God, and they are so nicely arranged by our dear brethren, Joblin, Wilson and so many others, and those letters written by the dear household of faith. I hope it does all the readers of the dear old RESTITUTION as much good as it does me, to read its weekly pages. May it continue to be a help-meet for all the household of faith, is the prayer of one that loves you all, and God's blessed Word, and tries to honor the same. Brethren, let us be faithful and a crown of glory awaits us all at the end of the race.

J. L. BARNES.

Dear Brothers and Sisters of the one faith:

As I was thinking of something to write for the love feast this passage of Scripture came to my mind. Luke xviii. 8, "Nevertheless when the Son of Man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?" What meaning there is in that one little word, "faith," without it and works we will never enter into the kingdom when Christ comes to reign. While I am thinking upon this line this good old song comes to my mind, that my dear father loved to sing so well while he lived.

"O for a faith that will not shrink,
Though pressed by many a foe;
That will not tremble on the brink,
Of poverty or woe.

That will not murmur nor complain,
Beneath the chastening rod;
But in the hour of grief or pain,
Can lean upon its God.

A faith that shines more bright and clear,
When tempests rage without;
That when in danger knows no doubt,
In darkness feels no fear.

Lord, may I have a faith like this,
And then what'e'er may come,
I'll taste e'en here the hallowed bliss,
Of an eternal home."

May we all have a faith like this, then add to it virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity, and meet in the age to come where there will be no parting, sorrow nor pain, is the prayer of your Sister,

MRS. HANNAH CRAMER.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I too want to speak for Christ as this opportunity presents itself. I love to read the good letters in THE RESTITUTION and want to be at the love feast, even though a little late. Dear brethren, I believe our dear Lord will soon come and not tarry. Some people call those that speak of the soon coming of Christ as an alarmist. If true, the Great Teacher has placed himself at the head of the class. No one has spoken more positively than he has. He said, "In my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am ye may be also." Jno. xiv. 2-3. There is nothing ambiguous about this language, any child can understand it. It means that Jesus will come again. But the message of Christ's second coming is not sensational in its essential character. It is a solemn, practical truth, it is full of warnings and admonition to sinners and worldly professors and full of comfort to the faithful followers of Christ. Jesus, in speaking of his second advent said, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." Matt. xxiv. 35. Oh, my friends, this is true, whether the world believes it or not. Brethren, the Lord appeals to us thus, "Watch ye therefore, for ye know not when the Master of the house, come at even at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning; lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping, and what I say unto you I say unto all. Watch." Mark xiii. 35-37. But if we do not watch he says he will come on us as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee." Rev. iii. 3. In consequence of people's not watching, the world will remain in ignorance of the approach of that hour. The people are the same today that they were in Noah's time. They scoffed at Noah and jeered as he built the ark. But oh, every righteous sermon he preached and every blow struck in building the ark condemned it careless, scoffing world. As the time drew nearer the people became more bold, more hardened and impudent. Noah and his family stood alone. Could one family be more wise than the whole world? The ark was a matter of infidelity and Noah was regarded as a willful bigot. "For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage until that Noe entered the ark and knew not until the flood came and took them all away." Matt. xxiv. 38-39. A picture of the world's condition is here drawn. Men no doubt said on the day the flood began as the sun came up beautiful and the sky was clear, no doubt but what they said, "Where is the sign of the flood." but oh, as it began to cloud up, fear filled every heart. The flood was upon them. The ark was closed. So today we hear men say, "Where are signs of Christ's coming? They scoff and jeer at those that believe the Word of God and say the world is just getting started, just getting so people can live. Oh, the world is full of heady, high-minded people that are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. They will not endure sound doctrine, but heap to themselves teachers having itching ears.

Teachers that tell them things that are pleasant to hear, not to think Christ will come, but that they will go to heaven when they die. Devils transformed into angels of light are the professed Christians that dare preach such damnable doctrine in the face of the positive evidence in the Word of God to the contrary. There is not one promise in the Word of God that any one can go to heaven. Oh, that the world did but know what the Book of God teaches concerning man. The day draws nigh, soon the King will come in all his beauty. Oh, brethren, are we ready. Can we say, Come Lord Jesus, come quickly. Soon he shall come, soon all the tribes of the earth shall mourn and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Matt. xxiv. 30. And the kings of the earth and the great men and the rich men, the mighty men and every bondman and every free man hid themselves in the dens and rocks of the mountains, and said to the mountains and rocks fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne and from the Lamb: for the great day of his wrath is come and who shall be able to stand?" Rev. vi. 15-17. The prophet Isaiah describes the same thrilling event from the other standpoint,—that of the people of God. He will swallow up death in victory and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth, for the Lord has spoken it. And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him and he will save us. This is the Lord, we have waited for him. We will be glad and rejoice in his salvation. Great will be the joy of those who after long and patient waiting shall see the fruition of their hope. As they see the sign of the coming of the Son of Man, with what unspeakable rapture will they witness his approach. They will then realize that the struggle with sin is forever over, sorrow and trial have passed. This world with its toil and path of thorns are all behind, before them is an eternity in the presence of one they love; one they have waited for. But on the other hand there will be anguish, sorrow and eternal death. Oh, let every one who has named the name of Christ, watch and be ready to meet the Lord. Only they that overcome will be saved. Let us ask ourselves, Are we ready for Christ to come if we truly love him; we love his appearing.

May God help us to live nearer to him in the future than we have in the past, is my earnest prayer. Your Brother in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

J. H. MICHAELS.

To the Household of Faith:

While the pilgrims in their various homes are telling of their faith and hope in the great and precious promises, the one uppermost in the mind seems to be the coming of the Lord.

"Pilgrim, yes, arise look round thee,
Light is breaking in the skies;
Gird thy bridal robes around thee,
Morning dawns, Arise, Arise."

If the repentance of one sinner causes joy in heaven, then let us work while it is day for the night cometh when no man can work. THE RESTITUTION brings us good news every week and often bad news telling us of some one falling out by the way, but we mourn not as those who have no hope; their work is done and their life is hide with Christ in God. Oh, dear ones, contemplate the glorious kingdom of God fully established, with this terrible state of affairs. No wonder the prophet said, "The sun will be ashamed and the moon confounded, for then the prayer of the poor and needy will be heard, and the arm of the oppressor broken." Amen. Dear ones, hold out a little longer. Oh, what a good company. We will have the best men and women out of every nation, or kindred, or tongue. People, those who have and are walking humbly before God. The Master has left Word for us to occupy till he comes. Be faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown. J. P. & E. L. BYSER.

Chicago's Favorite Passenger Station.

Remarkable success seems to have followed the efforts of the Management of the Nickel Plate Road to make the line popular as a passenger line for travel East and West. It is regarded as a favorite by many in making the journey to or from Chicago.

Great satisfaction will be felt by patrons of that line to learn that arrangements are made, effective Sunday, March 6th, for all passenger trains of the Nickel Plate Road to arrive at and depart from the Van Buren Street Station in Chicago.

With the many advantages afforded by this great Union Depot, located in the heart of the business portion of Chicago, and the continued advantage afforded by lower rates than over other lines, with three express trains daily, with through sleeping cars to New York and Boston, and the advantage of superb meals served in the Dining Cars and Eating Houses operated by the Road, when all considered, should show increased travel over the Nickel Plate Road.—mar. 31.

Presents for Friends.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding, fifth edition; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of "Early Lessons;" and one of "Honoring the Son,—all five for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth.

Send Me.

Not mine to mount to courts where seraphs sing,
Or glad archangels soar on outstretched wing;
Not mine in union with celestial choirs
To sound heaven's trump or strike the golden wires;
Not mine to stand enrolled at crystal gates,
Where Michael thunders, or where Uriel waits;
But lesser worlds a Father's kindness knows:
He rules some simpler view below,—
To weep with those who weep, their joys to share,
Their pain to relieve, or their burdens bear;
Some widow in her agony to greet;
Some exile in his new-found home to greet:
To serve some child of thine, and so serve thee.
Lo, here am I; to such a work send me.

Resurrection—Expository.

"That is the true light, that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." John i: 9.

This text is sometimes quoted to prove a universal resurrection of the dead ones. Not however necessarily to life everlasting, but at least to an opportunity or a chance withheld from them in a previous life. It apparently never occurs to those making this application of the text that John possibly is not speaking of the natural world into which the decendants of Adam are born after the will of man: but rather of that world to be—the new or divine order of things, of which Christ is the head and beginning. With this thought in mind the present order, or natural world that now is, can hardly be the world of John's discourse. The context I think confirms this view of the subject.

Jehovah is creating in and by the anointed Jesus, a new family,—a new world into which no man can enter except he be enlightened by the true light. "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe on his name."

The reception of Jesus as God's anointed son coupled with faith in the things concerning his name is the door of entrance into the new family of sons, and the world of which they constitute an integral part. They are in but not of this world,—in a sense they have been seperated from, and taken out from the present order of things and became constituents of a new order being created, and approaching visable manifestation and completion. This view of the matter enables us to apprehend the import of Paul's statement "if any man be in Christ he is a new creature or a new creation," also that other expression, "the world to come whereof we speak." The theme of apostolic discourse was not this world,—nor the material universe, but an age and a cosmos pertaining to the future. There are a number of passages that are somewhat obscure to those who fail to discern the proper application of the word world. Jesus said in his prayer, "Glorify thou me, with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was" John xvii: 5. The casual reader at once infers that Jesus must have had an individual existence and association with the Father before the earth was created, and hence the pre-existence of Christ as a Scripture doctrine, which is supported by other statements of like import. The more obscure and marvelous a dogma is, the more kindly the natural average man takes to it. Jesus had glory with the Father before the future world was, a record of the time and place is given see Matthew xvii: 1-10 with parallel passages, also see Dinglot of John xvii: 5.

It is doubtless the fruit of a generous heart—the thought that all men should have just and equal opportunity. If a man enters hades, having had no opportunity of hearing the gospel, it is supposed that injustice has been meted out to him unless he be raised from the dead and favoured with a knowledge of God and his requirements. This line of reasoning is presumtive and speculative and what is more, unprofitable.

It assumes that the creator is in debt to the creature man. Having created him: he has no right to dispose of him as seemeth wise and good to himself in accord with what he knows perfectly before we are born.

There are somethings too high and wonderful for frail transient creatures like ourselves to properly understand. When we give ourselves over to imagination and speculative reasoning we always go astray. Our only safe course is to abstain from philosophising where our minds are not clearly informed. We must be sure that we rightly comprehend and justly appreciate certain first principles involved in the providence of God, and the record of his dealing with mankind. Out of the same lump of clay the "potter has power to make one vessel to honor, another to dishonor" and Paul made use of this fact to silence all complaint against the Creator by the creature

The pleasure and glory of God stands foremost in all his works, whether in the material universe or in his moral government.

The omnipotent creator does not reveal himself to frail mortals, as though they were his equals, possessed of rights that primarily demand his his recognition.

He that gave life, can take it away, and if the whole population of the globe were consigned to oblivion the Creator of all things would be none the poorer. Man has nothing of himself, and at his best is declared to be vanity. Like the grass of the field and the transient flower his existence with all its pride and pomp is but a momentary shadow that vanisheth away.

The question "What is man that thou art mindful of him, or the son of man that thou visitedth him?" is sufficient to make the God-fearing think soberly, in their estimate of man's worth, and place in the works of God.

ALL MEN NOT DESERVING EQUAL PRIVILEDGE.

Our Savior commanded his disciples not to cast their "pearls before swine, and not to give that which is holy to the dogs," evidently refering to a class of men whose depraved instincts made them unfit to be entrusted with things pure and holy. Incapable of justly appreciating spiritual pearls, or responding to moral truth they were passed by as unworthy of God's goodness and favors. Is there any reason to think that favors withheld from the swinish multitude in this life will be proffered to them in another life? If it is possible for men to become spiritually idiotic, that is, incapable of responding to divine Ideas,—so degenerate through the perverse influence of sin hereditarily or otherwise, enfeebling the power of spiritual preception, and thus making them irresponsible to the law of faith, will their resurrection from the dead change their natural proclivities in any way? If not then all philosophising as to equal opportunity and a fair chance is but so much misleading speculation, unworthy of serious consideration. A man may reason very nicely from a false premise, but what does all this fine reasoning avail if his premises are unscriptural and unsound? Some one will say "Jesus tasted death for every man," and therefore every man is justified, entitled to resurrection from the dead. This mode of reasoning however involves too much; more than we can harmonise with the scriptures, besides being based upon a mis-conception of Paul's statement and meaning. It is true that Jesus tasted death on behalf of every man, but how, and in what sense? "He who knew no sin, was made sin for, or on account of us." But how was this done? Here is a matter that needs clear and definite apprehension, lest we go astray in all our reasoning. Jesus by laying hold of our nature, which had been sold out under sin through the disobedience of Adam was thereby made sin. Human nature as the result of Adam's transgression became sin's nature, therefore Jesus being made of a woman partook of a nature common to all of Adam's children, viz. the flesh of sin and thereby made sin on our account. Had he taken upon him angelic nature he would not and could not have been made sin, for then his nature and character would have been equally sinless. Being however without sin in character, was nevertheless made sin in nature, and therefore tasted death on account of our nature of which he was a partaker. This is the way and sense in which Jesus tasted death for every man. "In that he died, he died unto sin once," and was delivered or made free from the body of sin, by resurrection and glorification.

SUBSTITUTION.

The sin of the world was not metaphorically placed upon the shoulder of Jesus, but rather a man made of our sins nature condemned sin in the flesh by obedience to the divine will, hence in character sinless

Death justly demanded his nature, but had no claim upon his character, therefore "God loosed the pains of death, for it was impossible that death should hold him." If Jesus had been sinless in nature he would not have died; had he been a sinner in character he would not have been raised from the dead. Resurrection is related to character, and possible to those possessed of character as the result of discipline under law. It may be said that no man is without character, which is true in a sense, but not in the sense of being under the law of faith through a knowledge of what God requires, and has promised to the obedient. Jesus died for himself, but included all in him, so that resurrection from the dead is assured to all partaking of his death. He was not an outside party coming forward to die as a substitute in our stead but rather as a member of the Adamic race by obedience he opened the way of life, and made it possible for those dying in him to be made alive in him. Through death he "destroyed him that had the power of death, that is the devil." He did this in his own individual person, and as the result, was raised from the dead to die no more. Having thus obtained salvation for himself, he is able to save all those that believe on or in him, because through his name is granted "repentance and remission of sins."

His name has been exalted above every name and the only name given under heaven whereby men can be saved." His victory over death and the diabolos, entitles him justly to all this honor and glory; for no member of the Adamic race ever endured the hardness, or passed through the fiery trials as did Jesus the Son of God. He was faithful unto death,—even the shameful death of the cross,—voluntarily giving up his life as the good shepherd for the sheep, for in no other way could the individual members of his fold obtain deliverance from death. Resurrection is not simply or exclusively a question of power. It involves a moral element that pertains to the formation of character by the law of faith and obedience. God did not raise Jesus from the dead, simply because he had the power, but because he was morally speaking approved of God,—a man of righteousness—sinless in character, and therefore one whom death could not hold.

On our account, and in our behalf he was made sin, and as stated by the apostle "who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we being dead, or having died to sins should live unto righteousness." 1 Pet. ii: 24. He carried our sins in his own body, by virtue of his partaking of our nature, and when that body was nailed to the cross, it was the crucifixion of sin's nature common to all of Adam's children. We can therefore see how and in what way Jesus tasted death for every man, and also how others may be benefitted by his death. If Jesus had tasted death in our stead, or as our substitute then we ought to be exempt from death, which we know is not the case. The theory of substitution will not bear the test of its own weight, and we are compelled to reject it not only as unscriptural but unreasonable. We can hardly reconcile the killing of an innocent and sinless man in the place of the guilty with goodness and justice.

Justice demands the punishment of the guilty—for "the wages of sin is death." The law of life is obey and live,—disobey and die. No substitute can cheat the law out of its just demands, nor can it be justly accepted as meeting the requirments of the law. To crucify a sinless son—in order to save the guilty,—punish an obedient child in order to deliver the disobedient from the chastisement justly merited, would be exceedingly unjust and cruel. Any theory therefore resting upon the assumption that Jesus tasted death as a substitute for every man must of necessity be erroneous and misleading. We should be very cautious as to how we build on a false foundation, and see that we clearly apprehend the premises from which we attempt to reason. Where doubt and obscurity exists it is better to wait until further study and reflection shall enable us to see our way clearly, rather than deceive ourselves with a fascinating but unscriptural theory.

THE LAW OF MOSES.

The Mosaic law sought nothing higher than the betterment of present conditions—it promised temporal blessings, on stipulated conditions. But it is silent as to the bestowment of any future reward involving resurrection from the dead. Doubtless for this reason the Melchisedek priesthood is said to be based upon better promises than that pertaining to the sons of Aaron. It is the righteousness of faith in these better promises, and not that that of the law that justifies and comforts the believer with the hope of resurrection. The author of the Epistle to the Hebrews affirms that the law was "faulty." and he was justified in this statement from the fact that Jesus did not hesitate to make manifest its faults. See Matt. v: 21—38. And Paul declares that there was something the law could not do viz "condemn sin in the flesh." If however as some say the condemnation of sin in the flesh was accomplished by the crucifixion of Jesus, we would infer that the law of Moses would have been all powerful to condemn sin, for it could and did kill men right and left. But death whether by crucifixion or otherwise is not what Paul means by the condemnation of sin. His words are "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for or on account of sin condemned sin in the flesh." Rom. viii: 3. To condemn sin in the flesh was to maintain freedom from the law of sin that works death. The apostle discovered this law of sin and death working in his members, so that the good he would do he did not and the evil he would not do, that he did. He could will to do good, but was unable to perform.

In this unhappy condition he found himself fettered and chained, a captive to the law of sin, and being powerless to deliver himself from this unwelcome bondage, he could but exclaim "O miserable man that I am, who shall deliver me from this body of death."

But after he had become armed with the mind of Christ, he could triumphantly say "the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."

It was the law of the Spirit of life that enables Jesus to condemn sin in the flesh, and maintain freedom or the mastery over the motions of sin in his flesh. He was tempted—tried in all points, but yielded not to sin. His experience with the adversary in the wilderness, and again at the most critical and trying hour in his history when the agony of his soul and his changed countenance indicated the struggle within, fully illustrates how he condemned sin in the flesh; and subjected himself to the divine will to the end. "For the glory that was before him, he endured the cross, despising the shame." He exercised faith, that is he believed the testimony of the Father, and though it was necessary to pass through death and hades, to obtain the victory, it was all the sweeter, and the more triumphant, in "that fullness of joy" and exaltation that followed his resurrection.

We conclude then that deliverance from the "bondage of the law of sin and death" inherited from Adam can only be attained by the gospel, or what in other words Paul styles the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," and moreover resurrection is possible to those only who come under the operation of this law, for no other promises resurrection.

WHY NECESSARY FOR JESUS TO DIE?

In part, this question has been anticipated and answered. But some one may ask if he did not die in our stead, why did he die at all, seeing that he was free from personal transgression?

The answer to this question will appear when we come to consider the following propositions:

1. Jesus was made in all things like his brethren of the Abrahamic family in nature, flesh and blood.

2. He was made of a woman and inherited the nature and condition of his mother, who in the royal line of David, was nevertheless a descendant of Adam.

3. All of Adam's posterity being as yet in his loins when he transgressed, of necessity inherit the consequences of his transgression, and come under the Edenic condemnation of death.

4. Jesus through his mother became a partaker of the nature sentenced to death, and though sinless in character upon which death had no claim, yet it was necessary that his nature, his flesh and blood being made free from the death sentence, as this could only be accomplished through death.

It will therefore be seen that Jesus died for himself, as well as for others. It was necessary that as a member of the race under the death sentence that he be made free from that sentence, by passing through death and resurrection. To this end he fulfilled all righteousness, being circumcised on the eighth day, and afterward being baptized of John, whereby he prefigured in ceremonial form, his own death, as the heritage of sin. Repentance and remission of sins was not preached in his name until after he had obtained salvation for himself through being made free from the consequences of Adam's transgression. By one man's disobedience death came upon all his children. So likewise by one man's obedience resurrection is assured to all in him—that is to those who put off the old man, and put on the new, by baptizing thus legally dying, and passing out from under the death sentence. Baptism is to the sincere and intelligent believer of the gospel is death and resurrection in figure—a form of doctrine whereby he is transferred from Adam to Christ. The profound significance of baptism is hardly apprehended by those who fail to comprehend the doctrine of the atonement. It is not simply the door into the visible church or kingdom, as many advocate, nor is it exclusively for the remission of personal sins, as many think. It is the divinely appointed legal way of being made free from the consequence of Adam's transgression. Alienation from God and death are the result of the first man's sin, while reconciliation and resurrection are obtainable only through the second Man's righteousness. All men in Adam are alienated from the life of God, hastening toward death and hades, but in Christ who is the resurrection and the life, there is hope of deliverance, not only from our present alienated condition in sin, but also from death as the consequence of sin. Baptism, therefore, is that obedience of faith by which the believer severs his relationship to the old man, and puts on the new; and becomes legally related to a resurrected and living head, even Jesus the Son of God. Doubtless, some think there is hope for a man in some otherway than being thus related to the Christ. It is vainly imagined that the death of Jesus on the cross, in some mysterious way which they cannot comprehend or explain, entitles all men regardless of mental and moral condition to resurrection from the dead. If Paul had shared this opinion, or conviction, why should he say that he could wish himself accursed from Christ, for my brethren—my kinsmen, according to the flesh who are Israelites." Rom. ix. 2-3. Paul saw his Jewish kinsmen zealous for God, but in their blindness of heart seeking to attain unto righteousness in their own way, and while in this hopeless condition, falling asleep in death. It was indeed sad and sorrowful to see a people who had the law—the covenants, and the oracles of God, still out of Christ, and in view of it the Apostle says, "I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart." But if there had been hope, or even the shadow of hope for them apart from Christ, why this "heaviness and sorrow of heart?"

We cannot too clearly apprehend the necessity of being reconciled to God in the appointed way, and of becoming participators in the death of him, who is the way, the truth and the life. We thus judge, says Paul, "that if one died then all died," that is all died in him, not involuntarily, but by the obedience of faith. There is no other way of dying with Christ. His death has no bearing upon the man who knows him not, and it possesses no efficacy whatever, save for those who die with him. If we be dead with him, we hope also to live with him.

There is no promise of resurrection or life in Adam, but in Christ there is promise of both. We cannot think too soberly or seriously here. It is a question of life or death,—sin or righteousness. To a man in Christ it is sad and sorrowful to see his neighbors and friends fall down in death, apart from Christ. If we have been legally inducted into him, and are rich in faith and hope toward God, let us hold fast, that we may be fitted and polished for his service and purpose in the day of his triumph and glory.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The weight of the Greenland whale is 100 tons, which is equal to that of 88 elephants or 440 bears.

It is said that out of the enormous number of women in Constantinople not more than 5,000 can read or write. Like women anywhere else, though, they can talk.

The longest stretch of straight railroad line in America is on the Lake-shore railway, beginning at a point three miles west of Toledo, O., and running sixty-nine miles without a curve.

Hamburg is a well known market for household pets. A civet cat costs $5, a fama jackal $7, and an affectionate Brazilian snake $40. An alligator one foot long can be had for $1.50, but at two feet he is worth $5, and at seven feet $35.

The work on the Jungfrau railway is being pushed forward in spite of the severe weather which prevails in Switzerland. In Lauterbrunnen water power to the extent of 2,400 horse-power is now available, and half of this force is being utilized for the dynamos employed in the boring of the Elger Glacier Tunnel.

The Congregationalist states that "out of a possible 70,000,000 of population in this country it is safe to say that more than 60,000,000 are directly or indirectly connected with some religious body. Christians possess the country and they have the power and the right to insist that its administration shall be in accordance with Christian principles and customs."

The total gain of all denominations for the year is said to be: Ministers 6,204; 2,872 churches, and 680,951 members. The Catholics have made the greatest gain in church members. The Methodists come next, and the Baptists next. The Salvationists report a gain of 524 ministers and ninety churches. Christian Scientists report a gain of 500 ministers and thirty churches.

One of the uses for which balloons may be employed is the investigation of the sea bottom. It has been found by aeronauts that frequently the bottom is clearly visible from a balloon through the water. This fact has recently been made use of to recover a torpedo boat which had been lost off Toulon. Not only was this found, but also two others, which had vanished at an earlier date.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so as that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and use safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors would preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

"Bless the Lord,

O, my soul" seemed to be the expression on every countenance in the Church of God in Cleveland on Sunday, Feb. 6. We always have cause enough to be in that happy frame of mind, but we had a special reason for joy and gratitude on that occasion, because one whom we had long since learned to love for his quiet, earnest search for truth, and religious turn of mind, determined to forsake all to follow Christ, and associate himself with those who had taken, and were bearing his name. Our new brother Thomas Shelton, been counted with the Church of England, and at least one more of the popular denominations, but never experienced the freedom the Truth alone can give. We are happy to say that daily association with several of those who cherish that Blessed Hope, was instrumental in leading him out of darkness into the marvelous light. God bless both him and those living epistles, we pray.

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

At the opening of the British Parliament the speech from the throne contained the following significant passage:—"In view of the enormous armaments which are now maintained by other powers, the duty of providing for the defence of the Empire involves an expenditure which is beyond former precedent." The Prime Minister, in the debate on the Address in reply to the Queen's speech, endeavored to allay the public anxiety. He was very guarded in his utterances, but in effect reiterated the declarations of Cabinet Ministers made during the recess, that Britain would uphold her rights, even at the cost of war. Lord Kimberly, leader of the Liberal Party in the House of Lords, in the part of his speech which dealt with foreign affairs, said there had seldom been an occasion on which there were so many subjects to cause public anxiety; showing that a deep impression that a crisis in the affairs of this world is surely approaching, has taken possession of those in authority.

While public attention has been largely absorbed by events in the far East, and speculation has been rife as to the probable outcome, things have been occurring in the Turkish Empire which show that the breaking up process is steadily going on, and they point to the likelihood of further and greater eruptions shortly. Turkish atrocities in Macedonia, and popular feeling in Bulgaria is highly excited over the flight of the panic-stricken population from Macedonia into Bulgaria. The Bulgarian Government has remonstrated with the Government at Constantinople, and relations are strained.

In Albania there is great unrest. The Times Vienna correspondent writes:—"There have been increasing symptoms of unrest in the Balkan Peninsula. As the spring approaches, the situation in Macedonia and Albania becomes daily less promising."

In Thessaly, according to a London Standard telegram, reports are of a most disquieting nature. Turkish troops occupy villages by force, and maltreat the inhabitants. The Standard also says, "Crete and Europe stand just where they did when the Powers first took the business in hand. There is, however, this sad difference, that "Crete is more miserable, more poverty stricken, more blood-stained, and more divided by vindictive memories and mutual hatreds."

The proposal of Russia that Prince George of Greece has been withdrawn because Turkey objected, and Austria and Germany refused to join the other powers. Following the withdrawal of the Prince, came the announcement that the Russian Government has called upon the Porte to set aside out of the Greek war indemnity one million pounds in settlement of this year's installment of the sum due by Turkey to Russia.

Egypt delivered from the blighting influence of the Turk, continues to prosper under British control and guidance. At the opening of the Egyptian General Assembly the Khedive alluded to the decrease of taxes since 1891 by half a million. The government had a scheme for the further reduction of taxation by £216,000 yearly.

Palestine would soon follow the example of Egypt if she were delivered from the thraldom of Turkish misrule.

The tide of persecution of the Jews on the Continent will impel the Zionists to find a refuge for their brethren in Palestine. The excitement in France over the Dreyfus case is extraordinary. The French have lost their heads, and their cry is, "Down with the Jews." This may intensify and extend the "time of Jacob's trouble," from which the people will be delivered and restored to the land of their fathers—a purified and converted nation.

Law or Gospel—Which? No. 2.

VII. In the third chapter of the second epistle to the Corinthians the Apostles declare themselves able ministers of the NEW COVENANT, (v. 6) not of the letter, but of the Spirit; [then follows the reasons why they were ministers of the NEW, not of the old, called the letter, viz.,] "for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life."

VIII. The letter written, engraved in stones, is called the "ministration of death," and "the ministration of condemnation," in verses 7 and 8.

The reason why the letter engraved on the stones is called the ministration or service of death and condemnation, is this:—"It made men conscious of sin, and condemned them for it,—and provided no means for its remission, or forgiveness. It cursed every one who continued not in all things written in the book of the law to do them,—and no man could be justified by the law in the sight of God, for says the Spirit (Gal. iii. 9, 10) "the just shall live by faith," not by obedience to law.

The glad announcement is made in the 13th verse of this 3rd of Gal. that Christ hath redeemed us [Paul and all Jews] from the curse of the law, what for? Answer, "that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles, through Jesus Christ." The law and its curse stood in the way of this.

But how did Christ redeem them from the curse of the law? We have the answer in Eph. ii. 15 where it says he abolished the law of commandments contained in ordinances, that is statutes, decrees, or edicts; and of course the curse of the law would be abolished with the law itself. This is further proved by Col. ii. 13, 14, where Paul says the Colossians were quickened together with Christ, having been forgiven all their trespasses,—(they had not earned their forgiveness—by keeping the law, for it adds:) "blotting out the handwriting of ordinances i. e. (statutes, or decrees or edicts, that was against us) which was contrary to us, [because it was impossible to keep them, and hence were cursed by them] and took it [the handwriting of ordinances] out of the way, nailing it to the cross."

Verse 16 enumerates some of the things they were relieved of by the blotting out of the writing referred to, for it says:—

"Let no man therefore, 'rule you' (Diaglott) in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day (or festival,—Diaglott) or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath, which are a shadow of things future (Diaglott), but the body [they were a shadow of] of Christ." Hence the folly of holding to the shadow after the substance had come.

Returning to 2 Cor. iii. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, etc., we find the Old Covenant and the New, the letter and the spirit, the death-dealer and the Life-Giver, still further visibly contrasted:—

Verse seven says, "Now, if the dispensation of death engraven in letters on stones, was attended with glory, so that the sons of Israel were unable to look steadily into the face of Moses, because of the brightness of his countenance which [dispensation—glory in Common Version is added] is passing away now, rather, shall not the dispensation of the spirit be attended with glory?"

Verse 9, "For if the ministry of condemnation be glory, much more does the ministry of righteousness abound in glory." Righteousness could not be attained to through, or by means of, the ministration of death,—the Old Covenant, or law of commandments, see verses 10, 11, "For even that having been glorified has not been glorified in this respect, on account of the surpassing glory" [of the ministry of righteousness.]. "For if that which was to be done away [came] with glory, much rather that which abideth is in glory," Rotherham's trans., or, "Far superior, is this remaining glory." Diaglott trans.

Verses 12-14 say, "Seeing, then, that we have such hope, we use great plainness of speech." What hope does he speak of? Answer, the hope that the ministration of the Spirit, that they served under, and that remaineth would far exceed in glory that which is done away,—he continues:—

"We use great plainness of speech, and not as Moses, put a veil over his face for the sons of Israel not to gaze intently to the end of that being abolished."

The splendor of this ministration of condemnation would disappear, because the institution itself would disappear; the purpose for which it was established would be accomplished; the grand event up to which that institution led, would take place, and therefore would be done away.

Israel was devoid of faith: and would not for a moment consider the possibility of the Sinaitic Covenant passing away; and still less could they, through blindness of mind, contemplate its ending, or of its being done away by the Messiah. They expected it to be the Law or Constitution by which David's greater Son would rule the kingdom when he should come. The Scripture in hand shows that the veil was also a symbol of their blindness.

IX. Our Lord Jesus plainly teaches the end of the law, in Matt. v. 17, 18, where he says, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil; for verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one iota or one tip of a letter shall by no means pass from the law, till all be accomplished." In this language we have infallible evidence that through all the centuries since the giving of the law from Sinai, it had never been all fulfilled,—every son of Israel had offended in some point and became guilty of all. Jas. ii. 10. Is not this he of whom it was predicted that "He will magnify the law and make it honorable?" We know he was made

UNDER THE LAW

(Gal. iv. 4) and therefore what the law said, it said to him. Rom. iii. 19. Did he violate any point of the law? Nay, verily: sin is the transgression of law," 1 John iii. 4, "And he did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth." 1 Pet. ii. 22. Seeing, then, that he perfectly kept the law, and yet was made a curse on our behalf by hanging on the tree, that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through him (Gal. iii. 13, 14,) have we not absolute proof it was God's purpose that he should take it out of the way of the Gentiles, in view of the promise to bless all the families of the earth in Abraham and his Seed? (Gal. iii. 8), after fulfilling every jot and tittle of it?

X. In Deut. xviii. 15 Moses says,—"The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee [Israel] a prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken."

Again, in verse 18, "I [Jehovah] will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee [Moses], and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him."

Verse 19, "And it shall come to pass that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him."

Moses was the mediator of the Old Covenant,—the Law from Sinai. Gal. iii. 19. "The law was given by Moses." John i. 17. "THE law was given by Moses;" not a part of it, but the whole law; there was but one law given at Sinai, but it contained many clauses and stipulations; Moses received the whole of it from God, and delivered it to the people,—yes, the whole of it. No part of it originated with Moses. And when the Spirit's Word says "the law was given by Moses," it means just what Paul expressed by the word "mediator," in Gal. iii. 19. He received it of God, and gave it to the people, as the history itself shows.

A prophet like unto Moses must be pre-eminently A LAW-GIVER.

We are told that the Decalogue was a perfect moral law, and was given to all people, and for all time. If that be true, what need was there of another law-giver, or another law? We hold there was pressing need of another law-giver and another law, because

1st. The law from Sinai awarded only temporal blessings for obedience to it, and made no provision whatever for everlasting life. Jesus came that we may have life.

2nd. Four hundred and thirty years before the law from Sinai, God made a covenant with Abraham, and his Seed the Christ, which insured everlasting life, and an everlasting inheritance, and an eternal weight of glory: but it needed ratification by the blood of Christ, and a risen Savior.

3rd. Faith and loving obedience were the conditions exacted of man by this covenant: and Abraham was justified on that principle—that is he obtained a righteous standing before God; his faith being reckoned to him for righteousness; and he became an heir of all the covenanted blessings.

4. The Spirit in Gal. iii. 17 says the law from Sinai did not revoke the covenant of promise made to Abraham. That covenant remained intact; it selected just the kind of heirs God wanted to exalt to his own divine nature of existence, and was allowed to stand, and stands today, and it is taking out a people yet, is the Gospel preached to Abraham, because the promises made to him have not yet been withdrawn, the number of heirs is not yet complete.

Every person should now be able to see why the law from Sinai makes no allusion to future life, or offers nothing but temporal blessings for obedience to it. Spiritual blessings,—exceeding great and precious—had been promised 430 years before as we have seen, and the conditions accompanied them, and all this constituted the Gospel to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the ancients who believed what was promised. For salvation purposes there was no need for it. See Article No. 1 in the last number of the paper before this.

We trust what has been said will enable all to see the pressing need of another law-giver like Moses, who would stand in the same relation to the covenant made with Abraham, as Moses did to the covenant from Sinai. Jehovah told Moses that he would put his words in the mouth of the prophet he would raise up, and that he should speak all he would be commanded,—and that the people would have to take the consequence of not heeding those words. And this agrees with the announcement of Jesus that the words he spake would judge his hearers, not the words of the law given by Moses. Presuming our readers have kept pace with the subject, we will now show the need of another law-giver:—

1st, Only the pure in heart shall see God.

There is no moral power in a command to transform the minds of men and induce them to lead holy lives. Love is the motive power of the gospel. The Apostles said, "We love him because he first loved us." How did they know of his love? Did they learn it in the ten commandments, or in the exceeding great and promises by which they could be partakers of divine nature, and the gift of his Son to procure that life? Undoubtedly the latter begat love in them; and it is faith working by love that sustains the hope of righteousness. Gal. v. 6. Another law-giver was needed then. But 2ndly, The law-giver like unto Moses says, "Be ye perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven, is perfect," etc.

Was the whole law from Sinai capable of making men perfect? Do we not read in Heb. vii. 19, "The law made nothing perfect; but the bringing in of a better hope did, by which we draw nigh to God?" Did we not need another law giver? Is there not a vast difference between the temporal hope of the Israelites, and the Better Hope,—the spiritual hope brought in? Does not the Spirit in 1 John iii. 3 say, "Every man that has this hope [of being made like Christ] purifieth himself, even as he is pure? Was not another law-giver needed?

3rd, Gal. iii. 21 says the law from Sinai could not give life. How then could the blessings promised to Abraham be shared under it? Was not another law-giver needed? "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" was needed to "FREE US from the law of sin and death," says Paul. Rom. viii. 2.

4th, Jesus in Matt. v. 6 says, "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness." Would the law in its entirety appease this hunger and quench this thirst. The spirit's answer in Gal. iii. 21 says no! So we needed another law-giver.

5th, Gal. iii. 11 says "No man is justified by law—the just shall live by faith." Would there have been any salvation at all without another law-giver? How could we be saved without the law of pardon from the prophet like unto Moses, viz., faith, repentance, baptism?

6th. We have absolute proof that the prophet like unto Moses SUPERCEDED MOSES as to morals, for he CHANGED the law of killing, and adultery, and divorce, and false swearing and an eye for an eye, etc. He was not an imposter: he changed Moses' laws to adapt them to the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus,—the ministration of the Spirit: 2 Cor. iii. 6-15, of which Paul and Timothy were able ministers.

7th. The Law from Sinai expired when Christ came, and he issued commands in keeping with the recompense of reward HE offered (viz. life, everlasting life, glorious life) and which were calculated to purify unto himself a peculiar people, to show forth the praises of him who called them out of darkness into his marvelous light.

Is it not astonishing that men seem on other subjects, should think that the code of Jesus and that of Moses could be in force at one time, and for one purpose, when given for two purposes, wide as the poles apart?

Peter's model sermon at Pentecost ruled out the Law from Sinai as a means of salvation, by preaching the gospel of Christ, and its conditions of faith, repentance and baptism alone, and later, by identifying the prophet unto Moses, for us. Acts iii. 22.

The great world-wide commission of Jesus before leaving for the Father's right hand in the heavens, ignored the law from Sinai as a means of salvation. Besides preaching the gospel and baptizing believers of it, he told them to teach converts "to observe all things whatsoever I HAVE COMMANDED YOU." Will this insure salvation, or will it not? Jehovah says, "HEAR YE HIM." Is not that enough? What presumption for mortals to add to that!!!

If the Lord will, we will review the Two Law theory in our next.

We intend to publish these articles in tract form after we have completed the study, if considered suitable for distribution.

A Warlike Era.

The beginning of the year 1898 will be memorable in history as an epoch-making period. At no time during the century just coming to a close have there been so many and such widespread evidences of popular unrest and international friction threatening to culminate in the clash of arms as within the last few months; and if we are not to pass into a warlike cycle it will be because of the universal knowledge that the advances made during the last generation in the science of arms and the construction of war engines has rendered a conflict between first-class powers, whether by land or sea, so destructive as to approach annihilation. In the present stage of the science such wars are likely to be brief and ruin in speedy victory for one party or the other; but while they last they inflict more widespread destruction of life and property than at any previous period in the world's history. It is to the general consciousness of this fact, perhaps, rather than to any special development of a spirit of amity or increased regard for the rights of each other among many of the nations of the world, that we are to look for a continuance of peace.

The war between Spain and the Cuban insurgents has now fairly entered upon the fourth year of its duration with less prospect of success for Spain than during the first year—in fact, the success of the revolution is now regarded as practically accomplished with the terms of peace to be settled at an early day by the acknowledgment of Cuban independence or by intervention. This was followed in the second year of its progress by a similar outbreak against Spanish rule in the Philippine Islands, and, although this was claimed to have been suppressed about the time of the withdrawal of Weyler from Cuba, it is now reported to have broken out afresh. The most formidable war of the last year was that between Greece and Turkey, and, although it was brief, it was conducted while in progress with great vigor, especially on the part of Turkey, which was completely victorious, although restrained from reaping the full fruits of its success by the action of the allied powers.

Apart from our own differences with Spain over the Cuban question, which have grown chronic and repeatedly assumed a critical aspect within the last year, there has been an unusual amount of friction growing out of differences on boundary questions, chiefly between the republics on the western continent. These issues have led to threatened ruptures between Peru and Bolivia and Chile and the Argentine confederation in South America, and, latterly, between Nicaragua and Costa Rica in Central America, besides tempted revolutions in Nicaragua, Brazil, and Venezuela. Although the situation is still critical in Central America, the point of actual hostilities has not been reached.

In the old world the heaviest war cloud has hung over China during the last three months, and, although it had partly lifted for a time, there are now evidences of gathering strength. Curiously enough this involves the principal nations of western Europe, Russia, France, Germany, and Great Britain, with Japan as a deeply interested spectator and likely to become a deeply interested spectator and likely to become an important contingent in case of actual hostilities—the controversy growing out of conflicting interests in the appropriation of Chinese territory. This is liable to develop into formidable proportions, and will be watched with eager interest throughout the world.

Coming farther west there are now threatenings of a renewal of trouble with the Afghan tribesmen in the northwestern border of British India, which caused so much anxiety in England and such heavy loss of life and property during the closing months of the last year. In case of war between Great Britain and Russia these difficulties will inevitably be renewed and become formidable, backed as the tribesmen would be by Russian influence and furnished with Russian arms.

The prospect of a clash between English and French claims in the Niger country in west Africa has occasioned much anxiety in England, and, although an actual conflict has been averted for the time by the declaration of the French Cabinet that it has no purpose to encroach upon English territory, the full significance of these professions cannot yet be understood. For nearly twenty years the French government has been making desperate efforts to gain a foothold in central Africa, with an ambition to extend its power from the Atlantic Ocean on the west to the Red Sea on the east, and should its schemes be successful it need cause no surprise to find it contesting with England for supremacy on the upper Nile as well as on the Niger.

For the time being the friction between England and Germany over affairs in Africa seem to be suspended, and under the influence of an apparent combination of interests in China may remain so. Nevertheless, Kaiser Wilhelm's friend, Oom Paul of the Transvaal republic, has been causing considerable anxiety to his English neighbors in south Africa by his preparations for some anticipated movement on the part of his enemies, and should actual conflict result would look to Germany for active sympathy.

The best assurance both England and Germany have of continued peace on the part of their volatile and ever watchful rival, France, consists in the evidence furnished during the late Zola trial, that it is resting itself on a volcano which is liable to burst into eruption at any moment. The threat of war between Bulgaria and Turkey may be passed over as of no particular moment, as Russia will be likely to hold the combatants in check unless it has reason to anticipate some profit for itself from an actual conflict. In the meanwhile Russia, with characteristic and stolid indifference to the troubles of its neighbors, is likely to go on appropriating Chinese territory without asking leave of its rivals, while France, relying on its friendship, will try to follow its example in southern China, leaving Great Britain, Germany, and Japan to quarrel over the remainder.—Chicago Tribune.

A queer polyglot religious service was recently held at the Seamen's Bethel, at Douglas on the Isle of Man. The Gospel was read in Gaelic, a hymn was sung in Manx, prayer offered in Welsh, and the sermon was delivered in English. On a previous Sunday the Lord's Prayer was said in Cornish, a language the last speaker of which died in the early years of this century.

Poetry.

The Harvest Call.

Abide not in the land of dreams,
O man, however fair it seems,
Where drowsy airs thy powers repress
In languors of sweet idleness.

Nor linger in the misty past,
Entranced by visions vague and vast;
But with clear eye the present scan,
And hear the call of God and man.

That call, though many-voiced, is one,
With mighty meanings in each tone;
Through sob and laughter, shriek and prayer,
Its summons meets thee everywhere.

Think not to sleep to-hold thy hands,
Forgetful of thy Lord's commands;
From duty's claims no lie is free—
Behold! Today hath need of thee.

Look up! the wide-extended plain
Is billowy with its ripened grain,
And on the summer winds are rolled
Its waves of emerald and gold.

Thrust in thy sickle, nor delay
The work that calls for thee today;
To-morrow, it will come, will bear
Its own demands of toil and care.

The present hour is all thy task;
For present strength and guidance ask,
And trust his love whose sure supplies
Meet all thy needs as they arise.

Let the broad fields, with harvest white,
Thy hands to strenuous toils invite;
And he who listens and believes
Shall reap reward of ample sheaves.

Up! for the time is short; and soon
The morning sun will climb to noon.
Up! ere the birds, with trampling feet
Out-running thine, shall spoil the wheat.

While the day lingers, do thy best!
For soon the night will bring its rest;
And, duty done, that rest shall be
Full of beatitudes to thee.

"Be Not Deceived."

Dear Ones:

I have no other apology to offer for appearing before you this morning than that I was chosen, and in the fear of God I will do what I can.

I have, for consideration, chosen Paul's words to the Galatian brethren, recorded in the 6th chapter and 7th verse, "Be not deceived: God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

These words contain the destiny of the human family: "what a man soweth that he also reapeth." Is it any wonder then, that Paul starts out with these warning words, "Be not deceived?" And do you know, God in his holy Word has often repeated this admonition, that it might warn us of dangers ahead.

We have been told repeatedly, of late, that "It is a fine thing to be a Christian." This we most sincerely believe; for it is true christianity that makes the man of God, ennobling and elevating his character; thus fitting him for the highest responsibilities of life. It makes the mother an example of true piety and good works; it teaches the children obedience to parents, and reverence for old age, thus filling our homes with peace and happiness. But this is not exactly the thought presented by those uttering the words, "It is a fine thing to be a Christian." Their thought as expressed, was, that in true Christianity there were many fine points, hard to be attained to, or in other words, that with our mortal environments, it was hard to reach the perfection of Christian character; but we know this can be done, because it has been done.

We have, recorded in God's Word, such characters, men that were accounted worthy to walk and talk with God, and then we have that perfect pattern, the Son of God, in whom was no sin neither guile in his mouth. He was perfected in his mortality, or else he could never have redeemed you and I. A perfect sacrifice was essential to take away sin; for without the shedding of blood there was no remission; but now we may behold the Lamb of God, that sinless One, whose blood was split that we might come under its cleansing power and be made perfect in him. The way in which we accomplish this was shown us last Sunday.

The first essential step in our reformation is faith. We must have faith in God, believe that he is, and that he is the rewarder of those who diligently seek him.

The second essential is repentance, which includes a sorrow for, and turning away from sin, when we see ourselves lost. We loathe and hate the enemy of our souls, who has brought us to that condition, and in true contrition of heart we denounce and turn from sin to serve the true and living God, thus becoming dead to sin. We are buried with Christ in baptism, raised in the likeness of his resurrection coming forth from our watery grave, a new creature in Christ Jesus. A child of God, perfect before him, and it is in this perfected state that we begin our new life. Will we prove loyal? We shall find satan wily and cunning in his efforts to lead us astray: but we shall find also that the grace of God is sufficient for us if we abide in him. Our service must be from the heart: for a mere forced submission to the will of God would prevent all real development of mind or character.

God designs that man, the crowning work of his creative power, shall reach the highest possible development. This, the religion of Jesus enables us to do: for in it is contained the highest principles of right doing, its essence is love, therefore, love must rule every action of our lives. "Be not deceived whatsoever a man soweth that also shall he reap." We may sow to the flesh and reap death: but will it pay, or in other words, what will a man give in exchange for his soul?

We may use our time and talents for the treasuring up of the riches of earth. They will bring us vexation and care; or, we may educate and fit ourselves to fill the highest positions of honor and state; it will only give back a few fleeting days of glory, and that mingled with sorrow. We may even wear the crown that decks the brow of kings of earth, they too will fade away, hence, the necessity of every man proving his own work; for "if any man think himself to be something, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself, but let every man prove his own work, then shall he have rejoicing in himself alone, and not in another." The evidence must come to ourselves and that through the test of God's Word. "Search the Scriptures," is written for our instruction and by it we may be thoroughly furnished unto every good work.

We remember that "these of Berea, were more noble than they of Thessalonica, in that they received the Word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily whether these things were so." If the influence of Scripture searching was ennobling and uplifting in those days will it not be even more so in these days of evil and false religions? Yes, the more we have of the Word of God treasured in our hearts, the purer our lives will be and the better can we give a reason for our hope. It is the Sword of the Spirit with which we are to fight the enemy, and right here I would like to urge upon our young people the necessity of a careful, prayerful study of God's Word for themselves. Do not deceive yourselves with the thought that the research and productions of others is sufficient. They may have found the truth; but how do you know? We are told to "prove all things, hold fast the good." You can only do this by the Word of God. He has given you talents to be improved, "Be not deceived; for God is not mocked," or "will not be denied" the Diaglott reads. He wants your undivided heart. The warfare against self is the greatest battle that was ever fought. The yielding of self, surrendering all to the will of God, requires a struggle, but we must submit to God before we can become "holy, as he is holy." "Be not deceived, evil communication corrupt good manners." This is a very sinful and common indulgence. Our tongues are unruly members and often bring us under condemnation. How often we hear professed Christians, repeating unclean and impure stories that they have heard from the lips of an ungodly person, even taking the name of God in vain. "God will not hold him guiltless who taketh his name in vain." To the child of God how sacred that dear name should be; and never should it pass our lips only in loving reverence and adornation, "for with the sacrifice of lips, God is well pleased." "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." David said "I will take heed unto my ways, I will keep my mouth with a bridle, that I sin not with my lips, when the wicked are before me." "If any man seemeth to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, that man's religion is vain."

No sin is small in the sight of God, yet, I do not believe that God looks upon all sins as of equal magnitude. There are degrees of guilt in his estimation, as well as in that of man's. God estimates all things as they really are, while man's judgment is partial and imperfect. The drunkard is rebuked without mercy, while the sins of pride, selfishness, and covetousness too often go unrebuked. Yet, there are sins that are especially offensive to God, for they are contrary to the benevolence of his character. But let none deceive themselves with the thought that God, in his great love and mercy will yet save even the rejectors of his grace. If we will reap life, we must sow to the Spirit.

But, "Without holiness no man shall see God." The children of God are called to be representatives of Christ, showing forth the goodness and mercy of the Lord. As Jesus has revealed to us the true character of the Father, so we are to reveal Christ to the world, that do not know his tender pitying love. "As thou hast sent me into the world," said Jesus, "even so also have I sent them into the world, I in them and thou in me." "Ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ, known and read of all men." If this be true then in every one of his children. Jesus sends a letter to the world. What kind of a message are you carrying my brother, my sister? Is Jesus dwelling in you so richly that you are telling of his pardoning love to those unacquainted with him? Christians are set as light-bearers, to those out of Christ. Perhaps they do not read the Bible, or do not hear the voice that speaks to them in its pages. They do not see the love of God in his works. If we truly represent Christ, we shall make his service attractive, as it really is. Christians should never gather up gloom and sadness. Let the thorns alone, they will only wound you. Gather the flowers that grow along your path. Has there not been some bright spots in your experience? Have you not had some precious seasons, when your heart throbbed with joy in response to the spirit of God? Has not God's promises, like the fragrant flowers, been a well-spring of joy, and will you not let their beauty and sweetness fill your life and heart? Oh that men would honor and give praise to God, for his wonderful goodness to the children of men.

Love to God must be the spring of action, and if that love be genuine we shall not ask how little we may do to meet the requirements of God, but will gladly yield our very being to his service, knowing that the spirit of unselfish labor for others gives depth, stability, and Christ like loveliness to the character, and this enlarges our opportunities for doing good. If we are Christ's our thoughts are with him, all that we have and are, is consecrated to him. We long to bear his image, breathe his spirit, do his will, and please him in all things. Those who become new creatures in Christ Jesus will bring forth the fruit of the spirit. Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, godliness, faith, meekness, temperence. They will no longer fashion themselves according to the former lusts, but by the faith of the Son of God, will walk in his steps, reflect his character, and purify themselves, even as he is pure. The things they once hated they now love, and the things they loved they hate.

The loveliness of the character of Christ will be seen in all his followers. Love, beautifying and ennobling must be the controling power of all our actions, that he may work in us to will and to do of his good pleasure, and thus our whole nature will be brought under the controling influence of the spirit of Christ. The true joyous life of the Christian, is to have Christ formed within, the hope of glory. The power of choice God has given to men. It is theirs to exercise. Jesus says, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life, and have it more abundantly," and again, "Choose ye which ye will; for ye cannot serve two masters; for you will either love the one and hate the other," or, at least you will serve the one and neglect the other. Oh, you that are outside of Christ, how long will you still halt between two opinions? will still hold yourself aloof from Christ? His tender, saving-love is still extended. Will you still grieve his holy spirit until you shall reach that time when it shall cease to plead. God has said, "My spirit shall not alway strive with man," and thou, O child of God, thank him for the bright pictures he has given us. Let us group them together, the blessed assurances of his love, that we may look upon them continually, and when we seem to doubt his love, and distrust his promises, let us turn to, and gaze upon the scene of Calvary. It is there we behold the Lamb of God, the sacrifice for sin. From that scene we may lift our eyes and behold the King in his beauty. His bride has been chosen, the angels have gone forth and gathered his elect ones, the sleeping saints have heard his voice and have come forth, and now let us be glad and rejoice and give honor to him; "for the marriage of the Lamb has come, and his wife hath made herself ready. He that is unjust, let him be unjust still, he that is filthy let him be filthy still, and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still, and he that is holy let him be holy still; for behold, I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give to every man as his work shall be." "Be not deceived: God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth that also shall he reap."

May it be yours and mine to reap life everlasting, is my prayer. Amen.

Bro. Underwood:

Please Discontinue the Restitution to my address as I have Concluded to support it no longer unless you change it and have it an open paper free for Discussion as i dont see how you can make any question interesting without having both sides of it. your Paper has been taken up to a great Extent on Love feast, now what can you learn from the Love feast when you Read One you have most all of the Rest of them Lovefeast is right in its owen Place which is in a Church or House at social meeting More than Once i have told you to publish certain articles of mine in the line of progress and knowledge but you failed more than Once to Publish them for fear of a discussion, now how much knowledge Can you get on Bible questions where we differ, without a Discussion, you Cant make any question interesting without both sides being showed up, now i have always payed you up in advance when sometimes it was hard to get the money and i never had any excuse to offer, so my subscription expires in Mar so when it runs out stop the paper untill you Change then Probly i may Start in again, i meet on the Level and Part on the square with all mankind, your Bro in Hope

[We give this letter because it shows what some people think of us. We also give it because it introduces a subject that we wish to speak of. This paper is not open to all the subjects that may be brought forward. At the beginning of the present year we tried to outline what we thought was for the best at this period in our history. In brief that policy was, that we use this year, all its time and all our energy, in preaching the GOSPEL. We tried to make it clear that we meant the preaching of only that that is necessary to save a man. We say with all due regard for the feelings of those well-meaning brethren who have various advanced theories that they are very anxious to talk and write about, that we are a little short on time. We have no time to spare to follow you out to a finish. There may be—no doubt is—very much in what you want to bring out; but in view of the little time we have, and the fact that your theory being true or false will make no difference in what a man must do to be saved, we ask you for a few months to devote your energy to God's work that he has given you, and leave your pet theory to rest awhile. Another point that we wish to set at rest is the idea some have that this paper is, or should be, an open vehicle, ready to catch any thing that any one may wish to throw into it. This paper takes the ground that there are some things that are plainly taught. That there are some subjects that God has made so clear, and stated so positively, that there is but one side to them. We do not admit that God has made two sides to his truth. On these plain questions God stands on one side and the devil on the other. We do not wish to have the brother who wrote the letter at the head of this to get the idea that we think he is antagonizing God—that what he may have written is wrong in itself. That is not the idea, at all, brother. it is that we want none of your "progress" and "knowledge." What we do want you to write out is what God says on the vital question of man's salvation. In answer to the question "How much knowledge can you get on Bible questions where we differ without a discussion," will just say we do not care the snap of a finger for such "knowledge." We have told you that we have no time for this search for knowledge. We are after God's knowledge, and do not want that which will come of a vain disputation on some subject that cannot have a particle of bearing on the answer to the question "What must I do to be saved?" Perhaps by this time, my brother, you will discover by "reading between lines" that this paper is not open for "free discussion of all subjects," and in passing we will tell you that there is not a paper in existence that is either. If this paper were such we would get some brother to write on the nature of man and show that we are mortal and liable to die, and that our only hope of life beyond this is by resurrection, and is through Jesus Christ. Then to get the other side we would ask the bishop of the Methodist Church to give us his views, and so we would get the very best man on that side to show it up. Regarding the "Sabbath" question we would have Bro. Joblin finish up his articles on "Law or Gospel—Which," and then after he has shown that "grace" is our only hope, we would ask Ellen White to give us the other side, so in this way we could compare them and "take our choice." Then regarding the "Trinity" we would have Brother Wilson show from the Word of God and from common sense that there is one God, that he is distinct and separate from his own Son, and that both are separate from the Holy Spirit, and yet show their unity of purpose and action, then we would ask the Pope of Rome to give us the other side, and we would have a chance to choose which was right. Further as regards baptism, we would get any one of a dozen good brethren or sisters to show us from the "only creed" that we have that immersion is the only proper way, and the real significance of the ordinance, and then to get the other side, we would appeal to the Bishop of the Episcopal Church and after getting his views would be able to judge as between "immersion for believers" or "sprinkling for struggling infants." With all these before us we could rely on each as "authority" on the questions, and rest assured that these matters were "settled." Brother, do you think we need a paper that is open for "free discussions?" This paper is published to present to its readers the truth of God's Word. If we sometimes err and come short, it is because of our frailty and weakness. We do not claim infallibility or perfection, and will surely make many misteps, yet we have the courage to own our fault, and try again to do his will. If only the ones who are able to dig so deep for hidden truth would realize how important it is that men should be informed of the fate that awaits them if they neglect the preparation for future life, we feel sure no pen would be stayed and no tongue stopped until all around about us knew the correct answer to the question "What must I do to be saved?" Brethren, think on these things, and not on so many things that do not answer the all-important question.—ED.]

Obituary.

Dear Restitution:

Allow me space in your columns to announce to the brotherhood of the Church of God, that we have lost by death on 15th of Dec., 1897, near Hot Springs, Ark., a very worthy member in the person of J. M. Merritt; who passed away in the 55th year of his age, after suffering death many times from pains brought on by an eight years' attack of rheumatism, accompanied with paralysis, which during the last year of his sickness, especially the last four months, was so great as to render him entirely helpless. He had to be given food and water with a spoon, and his position changed every few minutes night and day. He could not remain in any one position more than thirty minutes, frequently not more than five, so excruciating were the pains. He bore his afflictions with great fortitude and much patience. His nearest neighbor said, "He was almost another Job." He was born in Henry County, Georgia, principally raised in Louisiana, where he joined the M. E. Church and remained with them three years. After this he took membership in the Christian Church, remaining with that organization until he became acquainted with the great doctrine of the gospel of the kingdom of God, as presented in the Bible. He was a firm believer in this faith and taught the same from the rostrum, and everywhere else he could get a hearing from one or more. He leaves a wife, three daughters, three sons, some grandchildren, two brothers, three sisters and many friends to mourn his loss. A goodly number of neighbors and friends assembled with the relatives of the deceased at the church, to whom words of comfort were addressed by the writer, from Job xiv. 14, using other kindred Scriptures in giving our sleeping brother's belief in that grand resurrection life of Jesus, which will be given to all who are worthy. Luke xx. 35-36; Rev. iii. 21. Many tears were shed in the last sad look at the face of the deceased before the coffin was closed. After which he was laid away to await the resurrection of the body. Now weeping ones, let us endeavor to put on the whole armor of God, and wear it rightly, that we may be able to meet with all the ransomed ones, our Redeemer in the clouds, and so ever be with him.

JAS. L. MERCHEF.

Married

On Dec. 29, 1897, by Judge Shaw, at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. B. Jones, four miles west of Abbeville, La., Mr. Oliver M. Jones and Miss Clementine, daughter of Sister Sara E. Overman, formerly of Otto, Kansas, now of Abbeville, La. The wedding was very quiet, as only the most intimate friends of the contracting party were present. The groom is respected and trusted by all who know him, while none know Clementine but to love her. The young couple went to housekeeping at once at Dospit, La., where the groom is largely engaged in rice growing. The best wishes of a host of friends go with them to their new home.

A SISTER.

Question.

Will Bro. Joblin give a few thoughts on the 3rd and 20th of Phil.? Rev. Gillaspie, a Christian minister, deduced this conclusion, "Since conversation is used in the sense of citizenship, therefore, we are but sojourners here, and heaven is our nativity or country. Hence we will go home when our sojourn is ended."

Yours in the hope of life,

A. B. WISE.

Report of Meetings.

Dear Restitution:

Bro. J. L. Herriman of Nebraska, and Bro. T. E. Adams of Kansas, have been with us for about two weeks holding meetings. There have been five added to our congregation here by immersion. Our last and youngest daughter Rosa being one of them. To the Lord be all the praise.

We now go thirty miles north to Garden County, in Sister Hicklin's neighborhood, to hold some meetings. The harvest truly is ripe, but laborers are few. Pray that the Lord may send more laborers into the vineyard. Brothers and sisters, be up and working for the Master. If you cant preach, you can talk and buy tracts and give them to people to read. In that way you can spread the gospel to a dying world. Love to all,

M. L. ADAMS.

Editor Restitution:

February 22, Sister Kathlene Greenbaum came to Antioch, Ill., and, began meetings the evening of the 23rd, and remained over Sunday the 27th, going home to Chicago the 28th. While here she gave some very excellent discourses. She is an honest, earnest worker, and whatever topic she chooses to give the public is handled with all the force and power at her command, apparently throwing her whole being into the spirit and letter of her theme, thus making the subject forcible and convicting as well as attractive. Some of the themes which she presented were thrillingly interesting and being supported by an abundance of Scripture references were placed beyond successful contradiction. She made many warm friends while here who will welcome her with pleasure should she ever return to us. May he who has caused the light of the gospel to illumine her mind lead her into all truth, that the work which she seems best to enjoy may result in gathering many sheaves for the golden harvest.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

I take a great deal of comfort in reading of the good news of the glad tidings of the blessed kingdom in the columns of THE RESTITUTION. I am isolated from all believers of like precious faith, but God helping me I will keep faithful and ever be on the watch for our coming Savior. May we all be prepared to meet him and receive the crown laid up for those that love his appearing, is the prayer of your Sister,

MRS. JNO. ROBINSON.

To the King's Household, Greeting:

I have been much edified and encouraged in reading the letters from the brethen scattered abroad. Many of them are strangers to me; but since they are made nigh by the blood of Christ I recognize them, and rejoice with them in anticipation of the outcome of our faith in the Beloved. But we are reminded that each one has a work to do. There are no parasites in the vineyard of the God. If we would possess we must strive. If we would have bread we must labor. If we receive strength and courage from others we should use this gift so that others may be likewise profited. We desire to acknowledge our obligations to THE RESTITUTION and its whole staff of contributors for the work they have done during the past year, in so ably setting forth the Word of life, that saint and sinner may have been warned and comforted. We must see the utility of this method of preaching since it brings before the eye as well as the ears the plain doctrine of Christ, and enables the memory to retain the living words of truth, and to compare more readily Scripture with Scripture. I rejoice to see the evidence of the personal possession of the spirit and knowledge of Christ manifested in the letters of our brethren. Many of them are comparatively illiterate in what the world calls learning; yet with what strength and beauty, fervor, and love they discourse upon the ground and reason of their hope, setting forth the faith of the gospel with rare uniformity. How thankful we should be to our heavenly Father for enlightening our minds with his glorious truth, so we may see eye to eye, and speak the same thing that the world may believe that he has sent his Son to save them. We are commanded by the Savior to "Occupy till I come." That implies possession of something, and urges upon us to hold on to whatever he has placed in our care. Weare not to give it away, nor suffer it to become impaired by neglect. In a word it relates to our possession as householders in the absence of him who is Lord over his own house and abideth forever. We then must keep our house neat and clean and in order, so it shall meet the Savior's approval when he returns. May he return soon, and may we be able to exclaim with joy "This is our God, we have waited for him."

Yours steadfastly in the hope,

A. B. & CALLIE WINCE.

Dear Restitution:

I send you one dollar to apply on my subscription. I have taken the paper over thirty years. We cannot think of doing without it. We feel very lonely here, as we are very much isolated. We are growing strong in the promises of God as the signs of the times indicate the near coming of the King in his beauty. Scarcely a day passes that I do not say something to some one of Jesus and his love. I am anxiously watching those Eastern nations, believing prophesy is being fulfilled daily. I want to say to the brethren and sisters, after reading of Bro W. H. Wilson's account of his talk with those Jews, their being baptized into the Christ life. I thought if we could have been with them and heard them accept their rejected Messiah, it would have been the happiest event of our life. I want to say to the household of faith, consult the Scriptures, keep posted on the Eastern question, and I think you will be sure our redemption draweth near.

G. W. SMITH.

Dear Restitution:

Another year, time stays not in its flight, and as 1898 was ushered in upon us we were brought face to face with the perilous times that were to come in the last days. When men are lovers of their ownselves, covetous, boastful, etc., without natural affection—despisers of those that are good. Every man's hand against his brother, killing and robbing, no matter whom or where, on the slightest provocation. The most revolting crimes being perpetrated both in high and low places. Truly the whole creation groans for the appearing of our Savior, King. When he comes will he find faith on earth? The nations seem on the eve of universal war. The mighty men are fast waking up, and all the men of war are drawing near. What shall we see next? Truly we are living in grand and awful times, and as we look about us we see the careless on every side, those who are willingly ignorant. Ignorance of God's plan of salvation is bad, but willing ignorance is much worse. How we desire the multitude of blessings promised under the righteous rule of our coming King; how we desire to see the good of all ages crowned with immortality, and oh, how greatly we desire to see all of those we hold near and dear by the ties of love and friendship, and who are still outside the Ark of Safety, realize that there is, "No other Name under heaven whereby they can be saved but the name of Jesus, and that the time draws near when he is coming for his own. "But who may abide the day of his coming for his own? and who shall stand when he appeareth?" "Sing and rejoice! for, lo, I come and will dwell in the midst of thee, saith the Lord."

May we all share in the blessings of that time.

MRS. C. W. RUSSELL.

Dear Restitution:

With willing hearts and hands we cheerfully toil on as becometh humble followers of the Christ, our blessed Lord, waiting and watching for the developments of the sure words of prophecy, which when coupled with the glorious promises that our God has made to the children of men, seems to us as being visibly manifesting among the nations at this writing. Dear brothers and sisters in the one faith, how it behooves us to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we have been called. We wish to tender our sincere and heartfelt thanks to the many fearless and able writers of THE RESTITUTION, which furnishes us with all the preaching we enjoy in our isolated home.

J. A. & M. HOUSE.

Editor Restitution:

As our time is up for the paper, we hasten to renew our subscription as we do not like to be without the paper, as it is all the teacher we have aside from the Bible. Our Savior has said, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of righteousness." Dear brothers and sisters, we are striving for that crown, and we ask you to aid us with your prayers, that we may be faithful until death, or until the Master appears to reward the faithful. Come Lord Jesus and come quickly.

MR. & MRS. E. GARTON.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

It is my prayer that we may all live so that when Jesus comes he will say, "Good and faithful servants, enter thou into the joys of the Lord.

Your Sister in Christ,

MRS. ELSIE JACKSON.

Dear Restitution:

We feel thankful for the privilege of joining you once more in the love feast. And we can say with the poet that,

"We are one day nearer home,
Nearer our Father's home."

I love to read your loving words; it does me good and gives me a foretaste of "The sweet by and by." "And when this epistle is read among you, cause that it be read also in the church of the Laodiceans; and that ye likewise read the epistle from Laodicea." Col. iv. 16. Wishing you a happy year in the service of the Master, I will give way for more able pens, preferring to be a listener.

Yours in hope,

KITTIE C. HUMPHREYS.

Presents for Friends.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding, fifth edition; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of "Early Lessons;" and one of "Honoring the Son,"—all five for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Announcement.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

The Second Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Nebraska will be held at the Moorlee school house about nine miles south of Holbrook, in Furnas County, Nebraska; beginning, the Lord willing, on Friday, March 25th, and holding over Sunday. We extend a cordial invitation to all lovers of truth to attend this meeting. We want to have a blessed time together in working for the Master. Submitted in love,

RENA M. GORDON, Sec.

Indiana Tent Fund.

We the undersigned promise to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purchase and equipping of a tent, to be used in Indiana for the purpose of evangelizing. Said tent to belong to the Indiana Conference, and to be under the control of the Executive Board of said Conference. Said subscription to be paid by the 20th of April, 1898, providing notice is given through THE RESTITUTION that enough has been subscribed with which to purchase said tent. All notices of subscription and all remittances to be sent to A. C. Roberts, Box 340, Plymouth, Ind.

Tract Fund.

We the undersigned, realizing that the distributing of tracts is a good way to spread the truth, and that the time is short in which we can work for the Master, do hereby agree to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purpose of raising a fund to be used in supplying tracts to those who will distribute them free.

Chicago's Favorite Passenger Station.

Reasonable success seems to have followed the efforts of the Management of the Nickel Plate Road to make the line popular as a passenger line for travel East and West. It is regarded as a favorite by many in making the journey to or from Chicago.

Great satisfaction will be felt by patrons of that line to learn that arrangements are made, effective Sunday, March 6th, for all passenger trains of the Nickel Plate Road to arrive at and depart from the Van Buren Street Station in Chicago.

With the many advantages afforded by this great Union Depot, located in the heart of the business portion of Chicago, and the continued advantage afforded by lower rates than over other lines, with three express trains daily, with through sleeping cars to New York and Boston, and the advantage of superb meals served in the Dining Cars and Eating Houses operated by the Road, when all considered, should show increased travel over the Nickel Plate Road.—mar. 31.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

A Crown of Life.

Heart-tired down with sorrow,
Sick and weary-spirited,
Lord! There is a promise,
A day is each to-week,
Weary I am waiting,
Though the night be black and long
Remember, "He who overcometh
A crown of life shall wear."

Overcometh all the trials,
And the hard-ships he may meet,
With a tender, loving patience,
And a love that's mild and meek:
Love for him who knows our heartaches,
Casting on him all our cares;
He will help us bear our burdens,
We can find a solace there.

Is it not well worth the waiting,
For that bright and glorious day?
Struggling through the many trials,
Of the dark and dreary way.
For a life with him who loves us,
Suffered too, that we might live?
Hearts made pure, through pangs of anguish,
Will a crown of life receive.

The Gospel Recovered. No. 8.

WAS THE NEW COVENANT MADE WITH CHRISTIAN DISCIPLES IN THE APOSTOLIC AGE?

In No. 7 of this series of papers, I dealt with the question, "Was the Kingdom of God set up on the day of Pentecost?" Closely connected with this is the question—"Was the New Covenant made with Christian Disciples in the Apostolic Age." This subject was slightly touched on in paper No. 6. Its importance, however, demands more special consideration.

In the "Messiahship" Mr. Scott speaks very confidently the "New Covenant having gone into operation:" page 172, of our Lord having "negotiated a new Covenant," page 237. In a paragraph quoted in full in No. 6, he speaks of "the organic law—the two tables or ten commandments made at Sinai with the twelve tribes of Israel, bring the type of the disciples of the Messiah receiving the organic law of "the Spirit of life" and being nationalized as the Kingdom of God."

The New Covenant is recorded in Jer. xxxi. 31—34. It is expressly promised to be made "with the House of Israel and the House of Judah." It is fully quoted in Hebrews viii. and the first Covenant which was made at Sinai with the twelve tribes of Israel is spoken of in such a way as to show that it was still in existence. The Apostle says "In that he saith a new covenant he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." From this it is evident that the first or Old Covenant had not yet vanished away; and moreover that in was binding on unbelieving Jews and on unbelieving Gentile proselytes. Paul says, Gal. v. 3, "I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law."

There is a leading provision in the New Covenant which had no place in the Christian church in the days of the Apostles. I refer to the statement, "They shall teach no more every man his neighbor and every man his brother, saying know the Lord, for all shall know me from the least to the greatest." This provision had not only no fulfillment in the mission set on foot by our Lord and carried out by his Apostles and others after the alleged "negotiation of the New Covenant" with the disciples; but the very opposite was the case. Preaching and teaching were a prominent part of our Lord's own work during his personal ministry. And the charge he gave to his Apostles just before his ascension was in exact keeping with this—"Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations"—"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." This work was chiefly carried out by means "of every man teaching his neighbor," of which the "Acts of the Apostles," bear ample testimony. In fact, the work of Walter Scott himself is a standing proof that this provision of the New Covenant had no fulfilment in his experience.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MARCH 31, 1898. NUMBER 13.

Lord possessed by the House of Israel and the House of Judah is the result of another provision of the New Covenant stated in these words—"I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts." Heb. viii. 10. In whatever way this is to be effected, it is certainly something different from anything recorded in the experience of the disciples in the first century. The Apostles and others were certainly endowed by supernatural agency, but this was not for their own special enlightenment, but for the purpose of teaching others—of "saying to their neighbors, know the Lord."

I have avoided saying anything as to any other covenants, such as that made with Abraham. The New Covenant is a national matter which may be seen from the parties with whom it is to be made—"the House of Israel and the House of Judah." This finds corroboration from the mention of a former Covenant made with their fathers on coming out of Egypt, "which was also national. There is nothing corresponding to this in the alleged "negotiating the new Covenant" after Pentecost. The true key to the matter is only to be found in "the restoration again of the Kingdom to Israel," according to the Divine purpose repeatedly declared in the Scriptures.

The words of the Apostle Paul in 2 Cor. iii: 6 call for some consideration here. He says, "Our sufficiency is of God, who also hath made us able ministers of the New Testament." The word rendered "Testament" here is otherwise rendered "covenant." The word rendered "made" here is nowhere else so rendered in the New Testament. It really means fit or sufficient. In Col. i: 12 it is rendered "made meet." This is the only other instance where it occurs as a verb. In 2 Cor. iii: 5, the verse immediately preceding the verse under consideration, it is used as an adjective (sufficient) and as a noun (sufficiency)." Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything as of ourselves; but our sufficiency is of God." Comparing this use of the adjective and the noun by the Apostle with his statement in verse 6, we learn that he is using the verb in a similar sense—"who hath fitted us to be ministers of the New Covenant," and the Revised, "who also made us sufficient as ministers of a new covenant." The Apostle views this New Covenant as a prospective institution for he says in verse 12, "seeing then that we have such hope."

Our Lord in instituting the ordinance of the supper, said, "This is my blood of the New Covenant shed for many for the remission of sins." Moses took the book of the Covenant, and read it in the audience of the people. He then took the blood, previously shed, and sprinkeled it on the people and said, Behold the blood of the covenant which Jehovah hath made with you." Exod. xxiv. Thus the old covenant was ratified. So shall the blood of Christ already shed be effectual for the ratification of the New Covenant when it shall be made with the House of Israel and the House of Judah. The same offering and the same blood which was instrumental for the remission of the sins of individuals, will serve for the remission of the national sins of the House of Israel and the House of Judah under the New Covenant.

Mr. Scott came very near the truth concerning the New Covenant when he penned the following words in "the Messiahship." That they (the people of Israel) were to be for some great purpose preserved in their long dispersion, as a distinct people, such as we see them, and afterward in the latter day restored to their ancient domain, is prosignified with equal clearness by their prophets. p. 172. Surely there was here the place where the New Covenant with Israel and Judah could have fitting fulfilment, rather than with individual Jewish and Gentile converts in the first century.

Apropos of this Mr. Scott made another near approach to Gospel truth. This was in 1842 in connection with the Second Advent movement of William Miller. Both he and Mr. Campbell were deeply impressed. An eminent preacher named Moses Chandler had devoted his labors to the Western States. I shall only quote a few sentences from Baxter's biography of Scott. "The teachings of Miller with respect to the Second Advent were creating great excitement in the West. .....Campbell wrote and spoke much in regard to the matter.....Even entered warmly into the discussion and investigation of the subject.....He was regarded for a season as identified with the Second Adventists.....He invited preachers of that faith to Carthage.....He did not forget, however to present before them the views of the Gospel in which he was regarded as peculiar.....A number of the Second Advent preachers embraced his views and publicly advocated the same..... He did not seem to be convinced with regard to the time at which they expected it to take place....." He wisely held that "the moral lies not in the chronology of the event but in the event itself."

Mr. Scott simply took advantage of the Advent movement for the promotion of his own. He retained his old position to the last, nearly twenty years from this time.

It was reported that Mr. Campbell once held that "the Millennium was at hand, and that Christ would personally appear;" but that he changed from this. Some one (understood to be James Henshall) had asked him how he came to change his opinion about the personal advent of Christ to introduce the Millennium? He is said to have replied that when he saw "the Ancient Gospel" make such rapid progress, he concluded that the Millennium was to be introduced by its proclamation, and not by the personal advent of Christ." Mr. H. is reported to have said that Jesus Christ would never return to live on this cursed earth again." Herald of the Kingdom, vol. x. p. 80. Hence the title of his Magazine—The Millennial Harbinger.

Hrouth. (Book of Ruth C. V.) Chap. 1.

1. And it came to pass while the judges were judging that a famine also occurred in the land: and a man of influence went his way from Bethleem of Joudas to sojourn in a land of Mooab, he and his wife and his two sons.

2. And the man's name was Elimelech and his wife's name Noocmin and the name of his two sons Maaloon and Chelaioon, Ephrathiites of Bethleem of Joudas: and they went into a land of Mooab and were there:

3. And Elimelech the husband of Noocmin died, and she and her two sons were left forsaken.

4. And they took for themselves Moabbitish wives, the name of one Orpha and the name of the other Hrouth; and they dwelt there about ten years:

5. And both Maaloon and Chelaioon died also, and the woman was left forsaken of her husband and of her two sons.

6. And she and her two daughters-in-law arose and turned away from the land of Mooab, because she had heard in the land of Moab that the Lord had visited his laity to give them bread.

7. And she went out of the place where she was, and her two daughters-in-law with her; and they were going their way on the highway to return into the land of Joudas.

8. And Noocmin said unto her two daughters-in-law, Do ye forsooth go your way and return each to the house of her husband, may the Lord have caused mercy in relation to you, even as ye have done in relation to the dead and to me.

9. May the Lord have granted unto you and may ye have found rest each of you in the house of her husband. And she kissed them, and they lifted up their voice and lamented.

10. And they said unto her, we are going to return with thee unto thy laity.

11. And Noocmin said, return forsooth my daughters! And why do ye go your way with me? Are there still more sons of mine in my womb, and will they be yours for husbands?

12. Turn back, my daughters, because I have grown too old to be husband'ed: yea, and I said it is my condition to become a husband'd, and should I bring forth sons,

13. Will ye wait for them to be grown or will ye have withheld yourselves for them from becoming a husband'd? No, my daughters, because things have become exhittered to me for your sakes, because the hand of the Lord hath gone out against me.

14. And they lifted up their voice and lamented still more and Orpha kissed her mother-in-law and returned to her own laity; but Hrouth followed after her.

15. And Noocmin said unto Hrouth, Lo, thy sister-in-law hath returned unto her laity and unto her gods: Do thou also return after thy sister-in-law.

16. But Hrouth said, Persuade me not to forsake thee nor to turn away from after thee, because wherever thou goest thy way I am going to go and wherever thou campest I shall have campod. Thy laity will be my laity and thy God my God:

17. And wherever thou mayest die I will die and there will I be buried: Thus may the Lord have done and thus may he have added, because death will separate me and thee.

18. And when Noocmin saw that she was constrained to go her way with her, she ceased talking with her any more

19. And they both went their way until they arrived at Bethleem, and all the city resounded with the report of them, and they said, Is this not Noocmin?

20. And she said unto them, Call me not Noocmin: call me a bitter thing, because the Sufficient One hath been very bitter toward me.

21. I went my way full and the Lord hath returned me empty: and why do ye call me Noocmin, and the Lord hath brought me low, and the Sufficient One hath afflicted me?

22. And Noocmin and her Moabbitish daughter-in-law returned from a land of Moaab: and they arrived in Bethleem at the height of the barley-harvest.

CHAPTER 2.

1. And there was a man of influence an acquaintance of Noocmin's husband: and the man was able in strength of the kindred of Elimelech and his name Booz.

2. And Hrouth the Moabbitish woman said unto Noocmin: I am going my way into a field forsooth and I am going to glean in the stubble behind him in whose eyes I may have found favor, and she said unto her, Go thy way, daughter.

3. And she went her way and going gleaned in the field behind the reapers, and it fell to her lot to be in a portion of the field of Booz, the one who was the kindred of Elemelech.

4. And lo, Booz came from out Beethleem and said unto the reapers, The Lord be with you: and they said unto him, May the Lord have blessed thee.

5. And Booz said unto his young man who stood over the reapers, Whose maiden is this?

6. And the young man who stood over the reapers answered and said, The Moabbitish maid is she who returned with Noocmin from a land of Moaab;

7. And she said, I will glean forsooth and gather among the sheaves behind the reapers, and she came and hath stood from morning until evening, indeed, and hath not stopped a little even in the field.

8. And Booz said unto Hrouth, Hast thou not heard, daughter? Do not go thy way into another field to glean, and not hence; Stay here with my maidens.

9. Let thine eyes be unto the field wherever they are reaping, and do thou go thy way after them: Lo, I have enjoined on the young men not to touch thee: and when thou art thirsty do thou also go thy way unto the vessels and drink from those the young men get their water from.

10. And she fell upon her face and did homage on the ground, and said unto him, Why is it that I have found favor in thine eyes so that thou dost recognize me and I a stranger?

11. And Booz answered and said unto her, It hath been told all that thou hast done in relation to thy mother-in-law since thy husband died, and how thou didst forsake thy father and thy mother and the land of thy birth and go thy way unto a laity whom thou didst not know yesterday and third day.

12. May the Lord have requited thy doing. May the wages have become great from the Lord God of Israel in whom thou hast come to trust beneath his wings.

13. And she said, May I have found favor in thine eyes, O lord, because thou hast consoled me and hast talked to the heart of thy hand-maid, and lo, I will be as one of thy hand-maids.

14. And Booz said unto her, It is already the hour to eat: Come here and eat of the bread, and dip thy morsel in the sour-wine; and Hrouth took her seat beside the men-reapers; and Booz heaped up barley cake for her and she ate and was filled and left off.

15. And arose to glean, and Booz enjoined on his young men saying, Let her glean between the sheaves forsooth, and do not embarrass her.

16. And do ye carry for her and let fall from the shocks for her, and she shall eat and glean and do ye not reprove her.

17. And she gleaned in the field until evening, and whipped out what she had gleaned, and it amounted to about an ephi of barley.

18. And she took it up and entered into the city: and her mother-in-law saw what she had gleaned, and Hrouth brought and gave to her what there was left from that with which she had been supplied.

19. And her mother-in-law said unto her, Where didst thou glean today, and where didst thou do it? May the one who recognized thee have been blessed. And Hrouth told her mother-in-law where she had done it and said the name of the man with whom I did it today is Booz.

20. And Noocmin said unto her daughter-in-law, He is one who ought to be blessed by the Lord, because he hath not failed of his mercy in relation to the living and the dead. And Noocmin said unto her, The man is near to us, he is of our next kin.

21. And Hrouth said unto her mother-in-law, and that is the reason he said unto me, Stay with my maidens until they finish all the early harvest that is mine.

22. And Noocmin said unto Hrouth her daughter-in-law, It is a good thing that thou didst go out with his maidens and they will not meet thee in another field.

23. And Hrouth cleaned to the maidens of Booz in her gleaning until they had finished the summer harvest of the barley and the wheat.

CHAPTER 3.

1. And she man ; her home with her mother-in-law. And Noocmin, her mother-in-law, said unto her, Daughter, shall I not seek rest for thee that it may become well with thee?

2. Now is not Booz our familiar acquaintance in our intimacy with his maidens? Lo, he is winnowing the threshing-floor of the barley this night.

3. And do thou bathe and anoint thyself and put on thy fine under-apparel and go up to the threshing-floor: Do not make thyself known to the man until he hath finished eating and drinking.

4. And it will be when he hath lain down to sleep, do thou learn the place also where he lieth down to sleep, and do thou go and uncover his feet and lie down to sleep, and he will tell thee what thou shalt do.

5. And Hrouth said unto her, All thou mayest have said will I do.

6. And she went down to the threshing-floor, and did all that her mother-in-law had enjoined on her.

7. And Booz ate and drank and his heart became merry and he went to lie down to sleep in a portion of the straw, and she went secretly and uncovered his feet.

8. And it came to pass in the middle of the night that the man awoke and was disturbed, and lo, a woman was lying at his feet.

9. And he said, Who art thou? And she said, I am Hrouth, thy hand-maid, and do thou put thy wing over thy hand-maid, because thou art a nearest of kin.

10. And Booz said, Blessed art thou of the Lord God, daughter, because thou hast been good in thy last mercy more than in thy first in not having gone thy way after young men, whether he be poor or rich.

11. And now, daughter, fear not. All that thou hast said will I do for thee: For all the tribe of my laity knoweth that thou art a woman of ability.

12. And now of a truth am I thy nearest kin, even though there is a nearer of kin than I.

13. Do thou camp for the night, and it shall be in the morning if he will confirm as nearest of kin let him do it: T'will be well; But if he be not willing to confirm as nearest of kin to thee, I will confirm for thee as the Lord liveth: Lie down and sleep till morning.

14. And she lay down and slept at his feet until morning, and arose before a man his neighbor was aware of it. And Booz said, Let no one know that a woman came to the threshing-floor.

15. And he said unto her, Bring thy upper-girdle (the cole across the breast) and he laid hold of it, and measured out six of barley and placed it upon her; and entered into the city.

16. And Hrouth went in unto her mother-in-law; and she said unto her, Daughter, and Hrouth told her all that the man had done for her.

17. And she said unto her, These of the barley he gave unto me, because, said he, thou must not return empty unto thy mother-in-law.

18. And she said, Be seated, daughter, until thou knowest how the thing will turn out; For the man will not rest until the matter be consummated today.

CHAS. GARDNER.

"Ye are Not your own."

To the brethren scattered abroad, Greeting:

The Apostle says we are not our own. For this reason we have taken up the cross to follow the meek and lowly Jesus. Through evil reports, as well as good reports we are called upon to crucify the flesh and the lust of the flesh. The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh, so that we cannot do the things that we would. Now, brethren, if we can do this, bring the flesh into subjection to the Law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, who has made us free from the law of sin and death, let us all try and overcome the flesh with affections and lusts thereof; for we are not our own. For because we have been bought with a price; even the precious blood of Christ. As a Lamb slain to redeem us from under the curse. We should glorify him in our bodies and spirits, which are his, and purify ourselves in obeying the truth. The time is not far distant when the exalted state of men will be brought low, and the humble will be exalted. In behalf of these things, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and Spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. Brethren, think of these things, and when we enter into our secret prayers, if we there think of any that we have wronged in any way, forgive them or ask forgiveness before you offer your prayers, so that your Father in heaven may forgive you.

Fraternally yours,
JOHN S. ARNOLD.

The X ray customs inspection is now in full working order in France. Formerly only about one-third of the trunks and parcels were examined, but now all are inspected. The shadow on the screen in railway stations enables the examination to be far more rapid than the old method. Cigars, cigarettes, and other contraband goods rolled in clothing are easily discovered.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Restitution.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

BROTHER A. B. ZILMER is now located at Plymouth, and correspondents will make note of this change in his address.

THE meeting at Argos was a profitable one for all who were able to attend. The weather prevented many from going. A report will be given in due time.

A card from Sister Woodward tells us that Bro. Woodward will pass through this city on Thursday of this week, and arrangements have been made for him to preach in the church in the evening. All are welcome.

OUR usual custom is to drop an issue of our paper whenever there comes a month with five Wednesdays, only getting out four papers each month. This time we have decided to issue as usual and then if it seems best we will drop two sometime in the summer months. We trust this will be agreeable to our patrons.

THE War news, as we go to press, is yet indefinite. The report of the investigation regarding the blowing up of the Maine has been given to congress, but no definite action has been taken in regard to it. Spain has a fleet of twelve vessels all equipped for war which are now steaming across the Atlantic toward this country. The United States vessels of the Atlantic squadron have usually been painted white, being peaceable, but an order to paint them black ready for war came to them Saturday, and they are likely to be ordered to service any moment. Sentiment is divided as to the real issue, and it is lacking little in either balance to make for war or peace. If it be war, no one can see the end, as complications may arise that will call not only two nations, but the whole world into conflict. We wait with anxiety the outcome. The China affair is far from settlement, and with Salisbury sick and practically out of the British Government, and Gladstone lying at the point of death, it makes some difference who gets the control in England. The student of prophecy has plenty to see now as he looks from the watch-tower. History of the world is being made fast. Be on guard.

The Spirit Birth—What is it?

"Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." John iii. 3–5.

That Nicodemus understood the Savior to here teach a second birth will at once be seen by reading the fourth verse: "How can a man be born when he is old?" The Savior answers him at the fifth verse in these words, "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God." Our subject being twofold we will endeavor to show from the Scripture what the spirit birth is and also what the kingdom of God is. Our Savior here teaches a water birth and a birth of the Spirit. But to be born of water alone will not secure unto the believer eternal life; they must also have a Spirit birth, which birth does not take place until the coming of the Lord who will change these vile bodies and fashion them like unto his most glorious body. But faith in the gospel of the kingdom must precede baptism, otherwise it is of no account. We know of no other way of getting into Christ. The apostle says, "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Gal. iii. 26, 27.

Baptism which is the water birth, brings us into Christ, and the only way in which we can secure a spirit birth is by remaining in him, for Christ says, "I am the vine, ye are the branches, and if any abide not in me they will perish," but by remaining or abiding in him we have the promise that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. Our Savior after having been born from the dead possessed a Spirit body in which he ascended to heaven, and the angel told his disciples, that this same Jesus should come in like manner as he went away. Nicodemus, although a ruler of the Jews, understood not these sayings of Christ, as will be seen by reading the fourth verse of John iii., and our Savior to correct his ideas of a fleshly birth said unto him at the sixth verse, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit. Marvel not that I said unto thee, ye must be born again," or born from above, as in the marginal reading.

Verse seventh, "The wind bloweth where it listeth, (pleaseth) and thou hearest the sound thereof, but cannot tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit. Nicodemus said unto Christ, How can these things be? Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master (teacher) in Israel and knowest not these things?" And I might say that we have many teachers in Israel like Nicodemus of old, who do not understand these things, and who claim that they were born of the spirit at conversion, but unlike the Savior they do not possess miraculous power to come and go without being seen or heard. But all who will be born of the spirit will be spirit beings and will be able to perform miracles and also to impart the Spirit unto others. The Pentecostal outpouring of the Spirit is but a Type of that which is to come. That persons are begotten by God's Spirit power through the gospel to a hope of life by the resurrection of Christ the Scriptures do teach, but in this begotten state we see only as through a glass darkly. But when that which is perfect is come, then which is in part shall be done away. Then shall we face to face, and be known even as we are known. The good Seed or Word of the kingdom (see Matt. xiii. 2) must be in the heart and bear fruit which will finally develop into Spirit birth or everlasting life.

In the Scriptures of truth we find type and antitype from Genesis to Revelations. We have two creations, two Adams, two begettings one after the will of the flesh, the other after the will of God or from above, which ends in a Spirit birth at the resurrection. See 1 Cor. xv. 51-53.

The Scriptures show us two births, two deaths, and two resurrections, one on the plane of flesh, the other on the plane of Spirit, the heads of each being Adam and Christ; and we must bear the image of the earthly man before we can bear the image of the heavenly man Christ Jesus. And now, dear reader, let me say to you, that if ever you expect to bear the image of this heavenly man you must get into him now in this life. It is said that the ark was like a figure whereunto baptism doth even now save us. Do you think that when God sent a deluge of water to destroy man off the face of the earth, that Noah and his family would have been saved had they remained outside of the ark instead of getting into it? How then can any expect salvation out of Christ, the great Antitype of the ark? But you say, how are we to get into Christ? For an answer to this most important of all questions, we must have a "thus saith the Lord." Eternal life is too weighty a matter to entrust to our feelings. We are still in a mortal state and liable to be deceived as mother Eve was. Our feelings are no guide in matters of religion. Salvation then is made dependent upon faith and baptism, as will be seen by the Savior's commission to his apostles. See Mark xvi. 15, 16. Now that this same gospel was to be preached throughout this dispensation is true, as we have had no new revelation since, but as there are so many gospels preached nowadays we have to search as for hidden treasure to find the one which was once delivered unto the saints. A great many people think that all Scripture is gospel. But while the Scriptures contain the gospel of the kingdom, yet they are by no means all gospel, as they treat of a great many other subjects. The word gospel means good news, glad tidings about something. But before we try to show what the gospel of the kingdom is, which must be believed in order to salvation, I want to show that baptism is an equal factor in God's plan of redemption. On the day of Pentecost, after Peter had convinced his Jewish congregation that Jesus was the true Messiah for whom the nation had been looking, they cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do to be saved?" Peter said, "Repent, and be baptized every one in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Acts ii. After Saul's conversion, Ananias said unto him, "And now why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." We have abundance of proof in the Scriptures that this is God's mode of pardoning the sinner, regardless of the teachings of puny man. Does any one suppose that if Saul had refused to obey God's command by omitting baptism—as many do nowadays—that his sins would have been pardoned. I think not, for baptism is the first command after faith and repentance, but faith in the gospel of the kingdom must precede baptism, otherwise it is not valid, and all who have been sprinkled or baptized in infancy and before they are capable of exercising faith, have not been Scripturally baptized, and consequently their sins unpardoned, for the Scriptures teach but one way of pardon for sin, and that by faith in the gospel and baptism into Christ, and nothing short of getting down into the water and burying the old Adam's nature, and putting on the new or Christ nature, and rise from the liquid grave in which we are enveloped, being born of water, to walk in newness of life.

There is a beautiful design in baptism, aside from the forgiveness of sins. It represents the burial and resurrection of our Savior. And by this act of baptism we show our faith in a resurrection from the dead. When a person is baptized into Christ they then become joint-heirs with him to all the promises of the gospel; heirs of the kingdom which God hath promised to them that love him. James ii. 5. God is calling Christians to a kingdom and glory. 1 Thess. ii. 12. And this kingdom with its ruling element is being prepared since the foundation of the world and will finally be given to those for whom it is prepared. See Matt. xxv. 34; also Dan. vii. 14-22. This kingdom which the gospel is the good news or glad tidings of, and which is to be shortly set up upon this earth under the supervision of Christ and his redeemed church or bride is the burden of prophecy from Genesis to Revelation. This kingdom is spoken of in the Old Testament Scriptures as the kingdom of Israel, but in the New it is called the kingdom of God, kingdom of heaven, and also kingdom of Christ. Our Savior when speaking of this kingdom said, "The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence and the violent take it by force." See Matt. xi. 12. This kingdom of Israel of whom Zedekiah was its last prince has been taken and retaken, and passed through many hands, and was finally to be no more until he come whose right it is to rule in it. Then God will give it him, and because he did not set it up at his first advent is why his nation rejected him. They overlooked his first coming which was to be one of humiliation and suffering, and also of sacrifice for the sins of the world, and saw only his second coming as a mighty conqueror and king. The kingdom of Israel restored will be the kingdom of God and is to be restored under Christ. See Acts i. 6, 7. This was God's kingdom in the past. See 1 Chron. xxviii. 5, "And David said, Of all my sons, for the Lord hath given me many sons, he hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel; and Solomon sat on the throne of the Lord as King instead of David his father." But the perpetuity of David's throne by his fleshly successor (which was but a type of the spiritual Seed) was conditional and they failed to comply with the conditions. See 1 Kings ix. and xi. Now if David's immediate successors had proved faithful to their charge there never would have failed a man upon the throne of Israel up to the coming of Christ. But they did not prove faithful and on this account there has been an interregnum of David's throne and kingdom; but when placed in the hands of David's spiritual Seed it will have no end. See Luke i. 30-33. The Apostle Peter says that God raised him (Christ) from the dead to sit on David's throne. Acts ii. 30, 31. God says through the Psalmist, "I will make him my first-born, higher than the kings of the earth." There are no conditions affixed to this promise. "Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David; his Seed (Christ) shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me, it shall be established as the moon and as a faithful witness in heaven, and when the Lord shall build up Zion he shall appear in his glory." The glad tidings of this kingdom have been spoken of by all the holy prophets and reiterated by Christ and his inspired apostles. It is the subject of nearly all of Christ's parables and teaching throughout the New Testament Scriptures. But it is to be remembered this kingdom of Israel restored, will be a divine theocracy ruled on the plane of Spirit over nations in the flesh, for one thousand years. After this kingdom is set up the gospel will have served its purpose by having taken out from among the Gentiles a people for Christ, who are called the Elect according to the fore-knowledge of God, and who are to reign with him over the nations. And these elect ones will be born of the Spirit as our Savior told Nicodemus, before they can inherit the kingdom of God. The millennial reign of Christ over the nations will be the fifth universal monarchy or kingdom. See Dan. ii. and it will be the last one as it is to stand forever.

The Bible is the highest source of political as well as spiritual knowledge. It embraces the most perfect political history of the world. Its historical part gives us an account of the origin and earliest existence of human government, and its prophetic part gives us a knowledge of the characteristics and final doom of all human governments, and of the universal and everlasting divine government which is to succeed them. By a careful study of Nebuchadnezzar's metallic image, (Dan. ii.) one cannot fail to see that we are nearing the second advent of the Son of Man in the clouds of heaven, and when the mystic stone suddenly smites the image (which was in human form representing all human governments) and shivers it to atoms, while it (the stone) becomes a mighty mountain (kingdom) and fills the whole earth. Our Savior could not set up his kingdom at his first advent because the fourth or Roman kingdom was not in its divided state at that time history shows us that Rome ruled as a unit for nearly three hundred years after the birth of Christ and instead of our smiting the image then, Rome smote and killed him and scattered the church. Christ himself said that Jerusalem should be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And as we have shown that Gentile times or human governments began with the metallic image of Daniel and ends with the passing away of the Roman kingdom in its divided state in its last extremities (the toes) which already show signs of mortification. Then at that time the God of heaven sets up a kingdom which will never be destroyed. Daniel in interpreting to the king his dream said, "Thou art this head of gold—which represents the kingdom of Babylon—and after thee shall arise another king inferior to thee, which was the Medo-Persian, represented by the breast and arms of silver, and the third or Grecian kingdom represented by brass, which is inferior to silver, and the fourth or Roman being represented by iron and clay, still inferior to brass. And as time advances we see in the symbols a degeneracy of all human governments, which does not look as though our world would grow better, while man in his mortal state bears rule over it.

But our Savior taught the opposite of this doctrine, for he asked the question before his ascension into heaven, "When the Son of Man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?" Our Savior being a prophet foresaw the evils of the last days. He says, "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of Man." How was the world in the days of Noah? Did God send a deluge of water to sweep man from off the face of the earth because the world was growing better? No. Noah and his family only were found righteous before God. Read Paul's epistles to Timothy and see if the very characters that he speaks of are not in our midst, and he puts them in the last days. It is true we have plenty of church members and church-going people, but they are as a body pleasure-seekers. They have a form of godliness, but they deny the power thereof." (The gospel as taught by Christ and his Apostles.) The Apostle says, "From such turn away."

Another feature of the last days as given by the prophet Daniel is the increase of knowledge. Has there ever been in any age of the world such rapid increase of knowledge and such great facilities of spreading it as we now have in our railroads, telegraph and telephones. But these things are all in the wisdom of God, and only preparatory to that age which is soon to be ushered in. For in that age the prophet says, that the knowledge of the Lord is to cover the earth as the waters do the sea, and Micah says of that age, that the "law shall go forth from Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem, and he shall rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nations shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. Yea, all Elders shall fall down before him (Christ) and confess him Lord of lords and King of kings; For the kingdom is the Lord's and he is governor among the nations." Who would not pray for this kingdom to come that God's will may be done on earth as it is done in heaven? I do not wonder that those who confine themselves to the New Testament Scriptures do not see the beauty of God's plan of redemption. The Apostle Peter compares the prophecies to a light that shineth in a dark place, and our Savior when preaching in the synagogue at Jerusalem commenced at Moses and all the prophets, and expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself, and it would be well if people now would follow his example. There could not be the ignorance on Bible subjects that there now is. It is not the design of the gospel to convert the world in this age, that belongs to the age to come. God has visited the Gentiles to take out from among them a people or a body of rulers, and to this agree the words of the prophet, as it is written (after this) "I will return and build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down." If we have our minds occupied with the deep things of God we will have but little time for worldly pleasures and amusements, which are soon to pass away and give place to God's incorruptible and immovable kingdom.

Your Sister waiting for our Elder Brother,

The Promises made Unto the Fathers

Who are the Fathers? Moses was commanded to say to the children of Israel, "The Lord God of your Fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob hath sent me unto you." Ex. iii. 15. And Peter says, "The God of Abraham and of Isaac and of Jacob, the God of our Fathers hath glorified his Son Jesus." Acts iii. 13. These testimonies, one from each Testament, are enough to show that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob are the fathers. But in another place God has clearly enough explained himself and settled the question, saying, "To Abraham and his seed were the promises made." Gal. iii. 16, and because those promises were in substance repeated to Isaac and Jacob they are called the promises made unto the fathers in the plural number.

What are the promises made to them? They are found in the history of the patriarchs, as recorded in Genesis, when Abraham left Mesopotamia and came into the land of Canaan, the Lord said to him, "Unto thy seed will I give this land. Lift up now thine eyes and look from the place where thou art northward and eastward and westward, for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed forever." The Lord made a covenant with Abraham saying, "Unto thy seed have I given this land from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates, I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee and to thy seed after thee. I will give unto thee and to thy seed after thee the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, and I will be their God. Thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. xii. 7; xiii. 14, 15; xv. 18; xvii. 7, 8; xxii. 17, 18; xxvi. 3, 4; xxviii. 13, 14; see Gal. iii. 16; Christ the seed; see Gal. iii. 29, "And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." What was the promise? Was it heaven, as many tell us? Certainly not. It was this land for an everlasting possession. Could Abraham receive this land forever in this mortal state? Certainly not. Only when he puts on immortality he will be like Christ, he will be alive forever more, then he can receive this land for ever. Heb. xi. 13. "These all died in faith, not having received the promises," (but will receive it at the resurrection.) The faith is to believe God, then if we believe that we are going to heaven, and God has not promised us that place, our faith is vain. Then let us believe God, that it may be counted to us for righteousness. There is one faith; that faith is what God has promised, and he promised us this land, he promised us Christ as a Savior, as our King to reign on this earth, to give us life everlasting. "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." If you will search the record you will find out that thing of going to heaven is not good, for Christ says, "Where I go ye cannot come." Then let us believe his Word. He says he will "Come again and receive you, unto myself, that where I am ye may be also." Gal. iii. 16. "If they speak not according to this Word it is because there is no light in them." Psa. xiii. 20. Then let us watch our preachers, and see if they speak according to the Word. Don't believe everything they say without trying them. "If there come any unto you and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him god-speed, for he that biddeth him god-speed is a partaker of his evil deeds." 2 John x. 11. God says, "Search the Scriptures for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they that testify of me." "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth," not heaven. Matt. v 5; Psa. xxxvii. 22-29; Psa. ix. 17; Rev. v. 10-12; Tim. iv. 8; Luke xiv. 14; Phil. iii. 20; Rev. xxii. 12; 1 Pet. i. 5, 7.

In hope of the coming King.

O. M. WOODS.

"I Change Not."

Jesus says the meek shall inherit the earth. Did he mean that they should possess it during their natural life; if so do they possess more than the proud and the rich; if not, will his Word fail, or will they in the future yet receive the inheritance "And dwell therein forever?" David says, "The righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever." Do the righteous inherit more land in this life and dwell longer than the wicked; will this prophecy also fail? David again says, "Wait on the Lord and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land; when the wicked are cut off thou shalt see it." Are the wicked cut off more than others? Do they leave their lands to the righteous when they die, more than to the wicked? Will the servants of God ever receive what is so plainly promised them? Or has God become ashamed of his promises and made new and better ones? What if he should ignore the covenant with Abraham and disinherit Christ, the one Seed. It is as likely he would do this as that he should alter his Word in any particular. God is not slack like men but very patient and plentiful in mercy. A literal fulfillment of the word of the prophets, and of the words of Christ and the apostles, fitly harmonize with God's great plan of the ages. His will must be done on the earth, before a dispensation of glory in which God shall be all in all can obtain. To remove man from the earth, and then destroy it; is to ignore his plan and entire revelation to man, and leave his people without even a conjecture of his purposes without faith or ground of hope. We can know but little of what is in store for us beyond that age to come; but the Scriptures are fruitful with comfort to us regarding that age.

The floating stone is one of the wonders of Corea that travellers have spoken much and often about. The stone is of great bulk, and shaped like an irregular cube. To all appearances the stone is resting on the ground, and is perfectly free from support on any side. If two men, standing at opposite ends of it, each holds the end of a thread they will be able to pass the thread under the stone without encountering any obstacles. The natives consider the floating stone one of the greatest wonders of their land, and have erected a temple in its honor known as the Pon Shih Miro.

Scotland can no longer claim to possess the longest railway bridge in the world. The recently completed bridge over the Danube at Czernavoda obtains this distinction by nearly 3,000 feet. The length of the new structure, exclusive of its approaches, is 13,325 feet, while its principal spans over the main channel of the river are 620 feet, and 455 feet, respectively.

Loving ways are smooth ways.

Poetry.

To Alice, on her Wedding Day.

What give I thee on thy wedding day?
Not costly gifts, from far away;
I lay not gold on the bridal shrine,
Washed from the dust of a planet mine;
Nor sheeny glass, nor the sparkling gem,
But flowers, fresh flowers! for thy diadem,
Flowers! fresh flowers! for thy waving hair,
With their dew-wet petals, and thoughts of prayer
For like to them do I see thee now,
With that pensive light on thy lovely brow,
With the gladdening glance that the pansy shows,
And the sweetness of sweets that the violet bears,
O lovely bride! may thy loveliness
Be missioned many a heart to bless,
Thy light shine out o'er the desert wide
To guide lost feet to the Savior's side!
God guard thy thoughts as he guards the flowers;
That thy steps go right through the changeful hours.
God teach, and heed, till his will be thine,
And his gold be made through thy face to shine.
Such prayers—deep prayers, do I give to thee,
O, Alice sweet! from the bended knee.
Let thy face be turned to the Sinless One,
And like to his, let thy life go on!
I give thee these, on thy wedding day,
And more, far more than my lips can say.
Blessings deep, from the heart-stirred springs
To hover above thee like angel wings,—
O, I would ask from our God above,
His care for thee and his arm of love,
The calm that comes from a chastened trust,
The peace that stays when thy hopes are dust.

"Three Great Fools."

Teacher. The above is the title of a sermon I recently heard, delivered by J. F. Bartlett, Pastor of the Baptist Church, at Austin, Ill.

The discourse was about the rich fool of Luke xii. 16-21, in which it is shown that the rich man had such a bountiful crop that he had no room to store the great increase he had over previous harvests. After deliberation, he concluded to pull down his barns and replace them with larger ones, capable of holding large crops. After these crops were all safely housed, what use did he intend to make of the abundance in his store house?

Carrie. He said it was for the use of his soul.

Teacher. Can souls eat the material fruits of the earth?

Carrie. The rich man said: "SOUL, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, EAT, DRINK, and be merry."

Teacher. What did Mr. Bartlett say about it?

Carrie. Why, he said, the rich man's immortal soul could not possibly have any use for such things.

Teacher. What is a soul?

Carrie. We can know nothing about such a thing except as we find it recorded in God's Holy Book.

Teacher. Does the Bible tell us what souls are made of?

Carrie. Of course it does. See Gen. ii. 7: "And the Lord God formed MAN" (not a house for man) out of the dust of the ground."

Teacher. But how about the soul?

Carrie. Read the remainder of the verse: "And breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and MAN (formed of dust) BECAME A LIVING SOUL."

Teacher. Could this soul eat fruit?

Carrie. Yes, it did EAT FORBIDDEN FRUIT to its sorrow. And because it had thus eaten, God says: "In the sweat of thy face shalt THOU (the soul) eat bread till THOU (the soul) return unto the ground; for out of it wast THOU (the soul) taken; for dust THOU (the soul) ART, and unto dust shalt THOU (the soul) return." Gen. iii. 17-19.

Teacher. I will ask Lad this question: Was this soul immortal?

Lad. It could not possibly be, because it was sentenced to return to dust, from whence the soul was taken. And further on, we read, that the Lord God expelled him from the garden, and that the reason for the expulsion was: lest he put forth his hand, and partake also of the fruit of the tree of life, and eat and LIVE FOREVER."

Then this soul had not yet obtained the power of living forever. Neither had the rich fool's soul. He could eat of the fruit stored in his great barns, and had use for it until he returned to the ground, from whence he was taken.

Teacher. Is the matter of possessing a soul, something exclusive of man, or have animals souls?

Lad. The Bible tells us that man, animals, and trees, have souls.

Teacher. Read us the passages.

Lad. I will.

1. MAN. "The first man Adam was made a living soul." 1 Cor. xv. 45.

2 ANIMALS. "Levy a tribute unto the Lord of the men of war which went out to battle, ONE SOUL of five hundred, both of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep." Num. xxxi. 28.

TREES. "And shall consume the glory of his forest, and of his fruitful field, both SOUL and BODY." Isa. x. 18.

Teacher. Mr. Bartlett said, every man was two, was a dual being. How about that?

Lad. In the same sense that trees are two, or dual, they have "both SOUL and BODY."

Teacher. How is it Arlon, we are told that the difference between man and beasts is, that man was made "a LIVING soul, emphasis is placed on the word "living."

Arlon. There is no force in that, because fish are living souls.

Teacher. Give the Bible for it.

Arlon. Here it is. "Every LIVING SOUL died in the sea." You see "living souls" are not immortal, because they die.

Teacher. Mr. Bartlett says the "sin of covetousness keeps more immortal souls out of heaven than any other sin."

Arlon. Ministers who profess to teach the Bible, should use Bible phrases in their sermons. The phrase "immortal soul" is not once found in the Bible. Mr. Bartlett can have a reward of five hundred dollars if he can find the phrase in the Bible, in either the Greek, Hebrew or English.

Teacher. But how about keeping them out of heaven?

Arlon. Mr. Bartlett as a minister ought to know, if he does not, that no man can enter heaven.

Teacher. Can you find Bible proof for that?

Arlon. Yes, see John iii. 13: "And NO MAN hath ASCENDED UP TO HEAVEN, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man' which is in heaven." I have plenty more Bible on this point, but this is sufficient, as Jesus ought to know whether they are there or not.

Teacher. Mr. Bartlett further said: The sin covetousness is railroading immortal spirits to hell by the thousands."

Teacher. Now, Albert, how about that?

Albert. Well, the Bible is as silent as the grave about immortal spirits as it is about immortal souls, neither has any place in Holy Scripture, it is the invention of pulpit oratory.

Teacher. How about this hell of torment that Mr. Bartlett supposes that covetous immortal spirits are railroaded to?

Albert. That is as big a delusion as his immortal spirits.

Teacher. What makes you think so?

Albert. Because the Bible teaches that the intermediate state between death and the resurrection is one of total unconsciousness, and consequently cannot be one of conscious torment.

Teacher. Read some of those passages.

Albert. I will. See Psalm cxlvi. 3, 4: "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help; for his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that VERY DAY his THOUGHTS PERISH."

Teacher. We are frequently told that the immortal soul, and not the physical organism, is the thinking part of man, are we not?

Albert. We are.

Teacher. When does he cease to think?

Albert. The "very day" "his breath goeth forth."

Teacher. Why is it the case?

Albert. Because "he returneth to his earth."

Teacher. Please give another passage.

Albert. All right, I will, here is one similar to the one just quoted: "In DEATH there is NO REMEMBERANCE of thee." Psa. vi. 5.

Teacher. Why is his memory extinct in death?

Albert. Because his "thoughts perish," when death comes, or when "he returneth to his earth." And being unable to think he cannot possibly remember anything.

Teacher. So far, so good, please give another. I will ask George to respond.

George. Read Eccl. ix. 5, 6: "The living know that they shall die; but the dead KNOW NOT ANY THING." This is the contrast between the dead and living. If "the dead know not anything," they cannot experience conscious suffering.

Teacher. Your conclusion is good, we will close this present lesson by a few quotations on this line, from ancient history:

"The soul, O Grecians, is not IMMORTAL in its nature, but MORTAL, for it dieth and is DISSOLVED with the body, if it be ignorant of the truth."—Totlan, A. D. 172.

"About A. D. 245 the Arabian Christians where Paul had preached were found to be entirely out of the line of false philosophy." "These asserted that the human soul, as long as the present state of the world existed, perished at death, and died with the body, but was raised again at the time of the resurrection."—Eusebius Eccl. History, B. 4, ch. 37.

"MARTIN LUTHER'S BELIEF.—In an old work printed in 1772, entitled Historical View of the Intermediate State, on page 348, when speaking of Luther's belief in relation to the state of the dead between death and the resurrection, it is said that he held "that they lay in a profound sleep, in which opinion he followed many of the fathers of the ancient church." He thus ironically responded to the decree of the Council of the Lateran, held during the Pontificate of Pope Leo X.—I permit the Pope to make articles of faith for himself and his faithful, such as—The soul is the substantial form of the human body—THE SOUL IS IMMORTAL, with all those MONSTROUS OPINIONS to be found in the Roman dung-hill of decretals. (The Baptists borrowed it from that hill) that such as his faith is, such may be his gospel, such his disciples, and such his church; that the mouth may have meat suitable for it, and the dish a cover worthy of it."—Luther's Works, Vol. II. folio 107. WITTEMBERG 1562.

"TYNDALE'S BELIEF. The Translator.—"In putting departed souls in heaven, hell, and purgatory," says Tyndale, "you destroy the argument wherewith Christ and Paul prove the resurrection. What God doth with them that shall we know when we come to them. The trueth putteth the resurrection, which we be warned to look for every hour. The heathen philosophers, denying that, did put that the soul did ever live. And the Pope joineth the spiritual doctrine of Christ, and the fleshly doctrine of philosophers together—things so contrary that they cannot agree. * * And because the fleshly minded Pope consenteth unto heathen doctrine, therefore he corrupteth the Scriptures to establish it. * * If the souls be in heaven, tell me why they be not in as good ease as the angels be? And then what cause is there for the resurrection?"

English Warships.

If the present complication in Oriental affairs portends the crack of doom for any of the great powers of Europe bent on taking part in a post-mortem on China there will be such tests of strength by sea as will sink into utter insignificance any naval fights that have ever taken place in the world's history. If the present imbroglio ever comes to a fight, and it does not seem possible that the present relations between the great powers of Europe can be strained any further without snapping, the history of the Spanish Armada and the battle of Trafalgar will be tame reading compared to what will be written of this next great sea fight. There is very little similarity between the naval warfare of by-gone days and present-day methods. Then it was a test of man to man strength, bravery, and endurance; now it is a test of science, and the number of men engaged is but a small factor.

There has been so little sea fighting in recent times that it is almost impossible to form any idea as to what would be the probable outcome of an engagement between two up-to-date squadrons, the tonnage, horse-power, and number of guns being about equal. The war between China and Japan demonstrated in a measure the endurance and fighting capacity of the modern war vessel, but the navies of these countries are too small and their methods too Oriental to convey much of an idea of a strictly modern sea engagment. Japan, it is admitted, is making wonderful strides in the direction of securing a splendid fleet of war-vessels and it will not be long before her alliance will be courted for her naval strength. She has few obsolete ships, consequently her navy will be concrete and strong in all its parts.

It is said "in time of peace prepare for war," and if account be taken of the colossal preparations that are being made by every European nation in thus making ready for war, it does not seem that it could continue much longer without coming to a struggle for supremacy. It is not reasonable to suppose that human ingenuity and skill and the almost countless millions of treasure will much longer be devoted to this insatiate national appetite without some way soon showing itself to relieve the pressure. Chips have to be carried about on the national shoulder and so many times nearly knocked off that patience and temper will soon be exhausted. And when the time does come it will mean a death duell for some nation, which will find itself weaker than its opponent. The great statesmen of the world know this, as is evidenced by the feverish and anxious haste exerted by them to match each other's squadrons at anticipated scenes of action, gun for gun and man for man.

Concerning these tremendous engines of war it would be interesting to know something more concerning the world's great navies than is usually published. And, considering them in the order of their precedence, Great Britain, of course, stands at the head with a grand total of 632 vessels of all kinds, not including, of course, the many vessels she has subsidized and which she can call on at a moment's notice. These vessels are included in her mercantile fleet, and the Teutonic, Majestic, and Germanic of the White Star line are excellent types of this class.

Of this total of 632 ships, 38 are modern first-class battleships with a tonnage of 349,570 and 472,000 indicated horse power. The Collingwood, Colossus, Benbow, Trafalgar, and Victorious are all splendid types of these battleships. There are 2 modern and ten obsolete second-class battleships having a tonnage of 114,030 and 75,900 indicated horse power. Obsolete ships are those which were built previous to 1880, and they are being replaced by modern vessels as quickly as the capacity of the British shipyards and finances will permit. There are 2 modern and 9 obsolete third-class battleships with tonnage of 77-820 and 57,600 indicated horse power. The general utility of these classes of vessels has never been fully tested, and that there are not more of them when compared with the grand total is considered a tacit admission that their place in naval warfare is somewhat undetermined. This enumeration includes 5 first-class battleships which are now building.

Great Britain is the proud possessor of 157 cruisers, divided into four classes, having 763,830 tonnage and 1,201,300 indicated horse-power. Of the first class there are 21 modern vessels, of 201,050 tonnage and 337-400 indicated horse power, capable of steaming about 20 knots per hour and carrying 12 gunsench. The Blake, which represented Great Britain at the naval review at New York during the Columbian year, is a typical representative of this class.

Of second-class cruisers there are 58 modern and 7 obsolete ships, the total tonnage being 260,020 and the indicated horse power 490,500. These carry 604 guns, and their speed ranges from 12.8 to 20.62 knots per hour. Most of them range between 19 and 20 knots, there being two at 19, sixteen at 19.5 knots, two at 19.7, eight at 19.75, thirteen at 20, and one each at 20.1, 20.47, and 20.62.

There are 46 modern and 8 obsolete cruisers of the third class, with 116-900 tonnage and 272,400 indicated horse-power They carry an armament of 460 guns. Nine of them are capable of making 20 knots per hour, fifteen make 19 knots, one makes 18.6, one makes 17.8, one makes 17.5, two make 16.7, nine make 16.5, and the balance average about 13 knots.

These three classes of cruisers are unarmored. There is an additional class of armored cruisers, consisting of thirteen modern and nine obsolete ships.

Of smaller craft torpedo gun vessels are a most indispensable adjunct of the navy, and of these there are 33 of modern build, with a tonnage of 25,940 and 113,300 indicated horse power.

Then there are 95 torpedo boat destroyers all of recent construction, with 26,980 tonnage and 507,800 indicated horse power. These vessels are comparatively a new invention, and their utility may be judged from the fact that the British navy has 95 of them, this number including 33 now being constructed, and for which provision was made in last year's estimates. These little ships average about 250 tonnage and 4,200 horse-power. Their speeding capacity is tremendous, and they are termed the all-round utility boats of the navy.

Of the first-class torpedo boats there are 75 of modern and 15 of obsolete build, with 6,998 tonnage and 70,520 indicated horse power.

Of second-class torpedo boats there are 53 modern and 23 obsolete vessels, with 930 tonnage and 15,750 indicated horse-power. There are also 24 first-class modern gunboats with 10-420 tonnage and 28,600 indicated horse-power, and 57 other gunboats which would probably not be very effective, as most of them were constructed previous to 1880, and much progress in the building of this class of craft has been made since that time.

There are also 17 modern and 3 obsolete sloops with 20,750 tonnage and 27,250 indicated horse-power. This concludes the list of fighting boats of the British navy. There are in addition 7 training ships for boys, 1 training ship for the naval cadets, 15 ships for purposes of coast defense, 3 royal yachts, 6 special service vessels, 7 drill ships for the use of the royal naval reserves, 1 gunnery school ship, 2 dispatch vessels, 1 Admiralty yacht, 4 tenders, 6 surveying service vessels, 5 river service ships, 2 each torpedo school ships and torpedo depot ships, 3 store ships, 3 each receiving ships and depot ships, and a large miscellaneous collection of craft all useful in their place but hardly worth particularizing in a naval enumeration.

For the maintenance of this tremendous armament there was voted by the British Parliament for the year 1896-'97 a sum equivalent to $113-000,000 in decimal currency and about the same amount was estimated for the year 1897-'98. The various channels into which this enormous sum is put in circulation is a subject of much interest. Wages to officers and seamen takes $23,480,000; victualling and clothing, $9,033,300; the medical establishments and services, $928,880; the enforcement of martial law, $53,375; educational services, $574,575; scientific services, $302,220; the royal naval reserve, $1,250,085; shipbuilding, repairs, maintenance, etc., $47,220,075; naval armament, $13,548,435; works, buildings, and repairs, $8,276,500; miscellaneous effective services, $1,025,885; and the administration of affairs at the Admiralty office, $1,256,500. These amounts represent what is laid out for what are classed as effective services. In addition there is expended for half pay, reserved, and retired pay, $3,808,805; for pensions, gratuities, and compassionate allowances, $5,375,880; for civil pensions and gratuities, $1,088,925; and for additional naval force in Australasian waters, $476,500.

To meet Great Britain's requirements in the matter of defense, and for aggressive action as well, her navy is divided into twelve divisions, known as the Mediterranean and Red Sea, Channel, North American and West Indies, Southeast Coast of America, Pacific, Cape and West Coast of Africa, East Indies, China, Australia, Training, On Particular Service, and the Surveying Squadrons. In addition there are numerous reserve ships in the home ports, as the world was made well aware of a short time ago when the now famous Flying Squadron put to sea on such short notice.

To man these engines of war there were on the active list of the Royal navy in October, 1897, 93,750 officers, seamen, boys, coast guards, and royal marines.

At the present time the world's attention is directed to Chinese waters in view of a possible conflict between Great Britain, Russia, France, Germany, Japan. It has always been Britain's aim to equal in ships and armament any possible combination that could be gotten together to oppose her policy in any part of the world, and it is interesting to know, then, just what her strength is in Oriental waters. Not including a number of vessels of the first class which it is reported are now or will soon be on their way to reinforce the China squadron, the complete list stands as follows: Centurion, first class battleship, 14 guns, 10,500 tonnage, 18,000 horse-power, and capable of making 18.51 knots per hour; the first class cruisers Powerful, 14 guns, 14,200 tonnage, 25,000 horse-power, 21.8 knots, Grafton, 12 guns, 7,350 tonnage, 12,000 horse-power, 20 knots; Immortalite, Narcissus, Undaunted, each 12 guns, 5,600 tonnage, 8,500 horse-power, 18.1 knots; the second class cruisers Iphegina, Pique, and Rainbow each eight guns, 3,600 tonnage, 9,000 horse power, 19.7 knots, and the third-class crusier Archer six guns, 1,770 tonnage, 3,500 horse power, and 16.5 knots. There are also five first-class gunboats—the Peacock, Pigmy, Plover, Rattler, and Redpole; the second-class gunboats Firebrand' Linnet, and Swift, and the third-class gunboat Esk, torpedo boats Fame, Handy, Hart, and Whiting; sloops Daphne, Algerine, and Phenix; receiving ship Tamar, dispatch boat Alacrity, and the storeship Humber.

This squadron is capable of battling with almost any combination which our imagination may conjure up of the several fleets now in Chinese waters, although the other interested countries are rapidly making additions to their forces. But it may be taken for granted that whatever they do in that direction Great Britain will more than duplicate. In case of great emergency Britain could call on her East India squadron, which includes four crusiers, three gunboats, one torpedo boat, one special service vessel, and three coast defense ships. And during this time her Mediterranean squadron could very effectually prevent the ships of Russia, France, or any other country from leaving those waters. So that taking into consideration all circumstances of strategetic location and coaling depots Great Britain has much the advantage.—Tribune.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Indiana Tent Fund.

We the undersigned promise to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purchase and equipping of a tent, to be used in Indiana for the purpose of evangelizing. Said tent to belong to the Indiana Conference, and to be under the control of the Executive Board of said Conference. Said subscription to be paid by the 20th of April, 1898, providing notice is given through THE RESTITUTION that enough has been subscribed with which to purchase said tent. All notices of subscription and all remittances to be sent to A. C. Roberts, Box 340, Plymouth, Ind.

Old as the Emperor of Austria is, he rises at half past 4 in the morning, shaves himself, and is busy being Emperor by half past 5, and it isn't such an easy job, either, when the Reichsrath is considered.

A gigantic bronze statue of Tubal Cain is about to be erected by the men of Pittsburg. The debt of Pittsburg, in the United States, to "the first artificer" in metals is not so great as that of Great Britain. Still, for all that, the obligation is considerable. The statue will be mounted on a pediment of steel and iron, the estimated cost of which will be £40,000. Tubal Cain will be represented in the act of forging, with a mighty hammer, upon a gigantic anvil, some old-world implement.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I thought I would write to the love feast, I hope it is not too late, for the Savior says they that are last shall be first. Dear brothers and sisters of the one faith, it makes my very heart rejoice, to read the loving letters from the dear ones. It makes me rejoice to think there are so many of you that can hear the gospel preached and explained in its purity, while I am almost alone in the one faith. We used to have preaching here, but I hear no preaching now, that is of the gospel. Of course there is a Baptist Church within a mile of me. I don't go to hear them very often, and then there is a Methodist Church in about two miles of us, and you know they preach too much sky-kingdom doctrine to suit the Church of God, and they claim that people go to heaven at death and know more after death than they ever knew here in this life. Dear Church of God, let us not harbor these thoughts for the Savior says, "The living know that they must die, and the dead know not anything," their memories are forgotten. Job also says, "His sons come to honor and he knoweth it not." Now let us be careful and not be led astray, for we learn in the Bible that the "blind will lead the blind and they will all fall in the ditch." I can say for one that I am trying to walk in the narrow way that leads to life everlasting. Pray for me, when it goes well with you, that I may not fall by the wayside. One day there was a man asked my husband, "what had become of our soul sleeper preacher?" and he says, "I don't know, I suppose he is at home." Then the man says, "Don't you know if I was in a meeting house where he was a going to preach, I would just get up and save the house," and if the man had been talking to me I would have said, "that is the way they brought a woman to Jesus to have her stoned to death, and Jesus stooped and wrote on the ground and then he raised up and saw no one there but the woman and Jesus says, Woman, where are those accusers?" then you know the man would leave on account of her guiltiness. Dear ones, when I first started out to serve my Master in my young days, I was about 18 years old, those times we had pretty good meetings. My father was a preacher, he lived and died in the one faith and then I went to meeting pretty often, but that has been several days ago. Now I will soon be 57 years old. Oh, you that have no preachers or no church, I can sympathize with you, but dear brothers and sisters, I don't feel anything like turning back. We can pray for one another and speak words of comfort to each other if we are too poor to hear preaching. I guess that is the reason and we haven't any meeting house and other churches do not want the gospel preached in their churches. I still will try in my weak way to serve my Master. You know Christ says, "Fear not little flock, it is my Father's good will to give you the kingdom."

Your Sister in love,
MRS. R. C. ELLIOTT.

Editor Restitution:

Your remarks regarding some who constitute themselves preachers, are timely and quite in place. If a man cannot provide for his family, is it not better to seek some employment other than making gain of the Truth, and excusing himself on the ground that he is doing good? While it is true that the "laborer is worthy of his hire," yet Paul was thankful that he had made the gospel a charge to no one. He chose rather to make baskets than do so. Would not the interests of the Truth be better served if we follow Paul's example?

Fraternally,
DR. J. H. THOMAS.

Dear Restitution:

The paper is all the preacher we have, we can't get along without it. I have taken the paper for 26 years and still like it, but I would make an appeal for or in behalf of our young people, in place of so many long articles on tithing and kindred subjects, that some of our talented brothers or sisters write a few good articles on faith and baptism. In my mind it would be more edifying and interesting to them at least, that is one thing our paper lacks, more lessons for the young. Of course it is the parents' duty to bring them up in the way they should go, but they would like to hear from the parents some time. We should teach our children to not be ashamed of the little flock, for "'Tis the Father's good pleasure to give him the kingd om." Christ says, "A new commandment I give unto you that you love one another." Then when we have the faith let us add to it virtue. Knowledge puffeth up but charity edifieth. Let love be without dissimulation, abhor that which is evil, cleave to that which is good, be kindly affectionate one toward another, in honor preferring one another, distributing to the necessity of the saints, given to hospitality, bless them that persecute you and curse not; rejoice with them that rejoice, and weep with them that weep; be of the same mind one toward another; mind not high things but condescend to men of low estate; be not wise in your own conceit; be not overcome with evil, but overcome evil with good. I have enjoyed the love feast letters very much although most of the names are strange to me, but the letters have the right kind of sound.

We are ever your Brother and Sister in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes,

W. C. & RUTH NOWLIN.

Dear Restitution:

I have never written before to THE RESTITUTION, but it has been in our home ever since I can remember, and I have read a great deal in it. I have never been baptized, but have been thinking pretty serious about it for the last six months. The nearest Church of God to us is about 30 miles, so I am not able to attend church, and all I have to teach me is my Bible and parents. I have but one sister that is a member of the Church of God, but two more beside myself are thinking of being baptized this summer. I see so many intelligent people say, "God took their child or friend to heaven," and it surprises me to see how ignorant they are of the Scriptures, to think that God kills their children and friends and takes them away from them. I think such a God is a cruel God. I do not think it will be long that we will have to hear people say this, for Christ will come to claim his own.

LIDA NOWLIN.

Bro. Underwood:

Send on THE RESTITUTION I cannot do without it. There are very few of us in this part of the world. I preached last Sunday to a small audience on the "Promises made to our Father Abraham and the inheritance of the saints," but they cannot stand much of this glorious doctrine. Pray for me that I may stand firm in the faith of the gospel until Christ comes.

Your Brother in Christ,
J. H. LEMAC.

Dear Restitution:

I like the paper very much, have taken it for 13 years and the longer I take it the closer I read, and the better I like it. We have no preacher here in Carns, Neb., that makes the paper give me all the more comfort.

Yours in the faith,
JOHN COURTNEY.

Dear Restitution:

I notice a piece in your last issue headed "Question Answered," to explain Matt. xxvii. 51, 52, 53. As to the vail of the temple, we read in Ex. xxvi. 9, that the sixth curtain shall be double in the tabernacle; and in the 32 verse we may learn that the vail in front of the holiest of Holies was to be hung on four pillars. If that vail was a single vail, what necessity of four pillars? I have a Bible dictionary by Philip Schaff, which shows me that there were two vails between the Holy place and the holiest of Holies. So if that was so it was not the vail between the Holy place and the holiest of Holies, but the single vail between the Holy place and the court of the priests; and as it says the vail of the curtain was rent in twain it could not be the two vails, because they were always in twain. As to the passage where it speaks of entering the Holiest by a new and living way, if you look in the Revised Version, you will find instead of its being the holiest of Holiest, it is the Holy place. As to those who were raised from their graves, we must remember the Jews were in the habit of gathering bundles of grain and bringing it to the temple as the first fruit of the harvest and presenting it to the Lord, perhaps this may give us a hint.

Obituary.

Dear Restitution:

My husband went to Montana the ninth of August, his health being poor the doctors advised a higher altitude, having daughters there, thought he would try the climate of Montana. He had the la grippe the winter before and never fully recovered from the effects of it. On the morning of August 23, the great enemy death called him. He was a strong believer in the Abrahamic faith, in the covenant of promise. "In thee and thy seed should all the nations of the earth be blessed." He sleeps awaiting a glorious resurrection. He has taken THE RESTITUTION in all its various forms more than thirty-five years; was a great reader of his Bible. He said to me a few days before his death, "I love such reading." It was his great desire to live to see Christ's coming in the clouds. We sorrow not without hope, for we know if we are only faithful we shall meet where parting is no more, no funeral processions on those golden streets. On the evening of the 23rd my youngest boy and I left Troutdale, Montana, bringing his body with us, arrived here on the morning of the 26th. As Bro. Skeels was away, could get no one but one of the brethren of Preston of the Crisis faith. So we laid him by the side of our dear son that we had laid away sixteen months before.

Oh, may the dear Lord hasten is my prayer.

MRS. S. J. HUCKLIN.

Chicago's Favorite Passenger Station.

Remarkable success seems to have followed the efforts of the Management of the Nickel Plate Road to make the line popular as a passenger line for travel East and West. It is regarded as a favorite by many in making the journey to or from Chicago.

Great satisfaction will be felt by patrons of that line to learn that arrangements are made, effective Sunday, March 6th, for all passenger trains of the Nickel Plate Road to arrive at and depart from the Van Buren Street Station in Chicago.

With the many advantages afforded by this great Union Depot, located in the heart of the business portion of Chicago, and the continued advantage afforded by lower rates than over other lines, with three express trains daily, with through sleeping cars to New York and Boston, and the advantage of superb meals served in the Dining Cars and Eating Houses operated by the Road, when all considered, should show increased travel over the Nickel Plate Road.—mar. 31.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Origin of the Trinity.

BY PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

Teacher. Does the Bible say any thing about a Triune God?

Albert. Not a word.

Teacher. What does it say about a plurality of Gods?

Albert. "I am the first and the last, and beside me there is no God," Isa. xliv. 6, 8.

Teacher. Well, the Triune God is considered the orthodox deity today. When did this doctrine take its rise?

Albert. Not until the mystery of iniquity began to work, and the result is the monster apostasy of our day.

Teacher. What is the history of the rise of the Trinitarian apostasy?

Albert. Consult the Common Prayer Book of the English Church, and you will find three creeds, the first one they call "The Apostles' Creed," in that there is not a single hint about the trinity. The second creed is the Nicene, said to have been formed by the Council of Nice, A. D. 325. In this creed, the Father and Son are deified, but not the Holy Ghost. Here we have a duality of gods. The third creed is ascribed to Athanasius, and is said to have been formed either at the close of fourth, or the beginning of the fifth century. In this the Holy Ghost is made God, co-equal and co-eternal with the Father and the Son. At this point of time we have a full-fledged trinity, not found in the Bible, but the work of creed makers.

Teacher. What does history say about making a Supreme Deity of the Holy Ghost at the time you mention.

Albert. "That Pluvianus of Antioch, having assembled a number of monks, was THE FIRST to shout out glory to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit: but BEFORE HIM, some had said, Glory to the Father through the Son, in the Holy Spirit, which was the more customary form: and others, Glory to the Father in the Son, and the Holy Spirit."—Philostorgius, Lib. iii. Sect. 15, p 426.

So we see the ascribing of Divine honors to the Holy Spirit as to the Supreme Deity was started by a lot of apostate monks. Such a thing was unknown during the purer ages of the church. And such a thing as a Triune God was not known in the Bible nor in the church, until corrupted by a shameless apostacy.

Teacher. But is there not some Scripture on which Trinitarians seek to base their teaching?

Lad. They quote the first chapter of John's gospel: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God" etc.

Teacher. What about the personal pronouns "he" and "him," in that chapter?

Lad. I will quote a learned author.

[Paper read at Ministerial Meeting, Aprostad.]

Clergyman—Layman. Which?

1. A clergyman, according to Webster, is "a man in holy orders; a man regularly authorized to preach the gospel, and administer its ordinances, according to the forms and rules of any particular denomination of Christians." He adds: "In England, none but ministers of the Established Church bear the name of clergymen." The origin of the word "clergy" is about as follows: Clergy is a word derived from the Greek Kleros, which means a lot or portion, inheritance, estate, and the body of those who perform sacred duties." "The application of this word to ministers or ecclesiastical teachers seems to have originated in their possessions, or separate allotments of land."

2. The word "laity" and "lay"—man is derivative of the word laikos, from laos (the people), and according to Webster "pertains to the laity, or people, as distinct from the clergy; not clerical; as, a lay person, a lay preacher" etc.

We believe Webster's definition of these words to be quite correct and to represent the present day conception of these terms. Analyzing these definitions we find that:

1. A clergyman is a man in holy orders.

2. He is regularly authorized to preach the gospel.

3. And to administer its ordinances.

4. That this must be according to the forms and rules of any particular denomination.

5. That in England only ministers in the Established Church bear this distinction and are entitled to its privileges.

6. That the clergy is a class of men [illegible] separated from the people—a distinct and separate class.

7. That only certain persons may become clergymen and all the rest are excluded from this distinction.

8. That those who are not clergymen are laymen, "as distinct from the clergy."

9. That the clergy class are, as it were, a holy class, while

10. the remaining class—by far the greater portion of the people "of any particular denomination"—are regarded as the secular class.

Now, the question arises: Are these distinctions authorized by the Word of God, are they warranted by Apostolic example? We find in the Church of Apostolic days: "Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Pastors and teachers," Eph. iv: 11–13. Besides these we find Elders and Deacons, but a class or order known as the clergy is conspicuous by its absence. No dignified Reverends, nor highsounding Doctors, either for Divinity or Law. Church history says that the constitution (of the Church) in the Apostolic days was very simple. In every larger church there was a number of Elders (Presbyters) or overseers, who were assisted by the Deacons. But also other members served in the churches with their gifts. The distinction between the clergy and laity was entirely unknown. Gradually the consecrated ones (cleros—God's peculiar possession) were distinguished from the laymembers." Ironeus says: "All the righteous have priestly dignity." And Tertullian: "Are not we laymen priests? Where two or three are gathered, though laymen there is the ecclesia."

After the year 150 it developed that among the Elders of the churches in the larger cities one was known as Episkopos (Bishop), and his voice was decisive. Soon enough these Bishops arrogated all the holy functions—many of which were mere human inventions to themselves—to themselves. They claimed the exclusive right to ordain, confirm, and absolve. The Presbyters (Elders) were only their counsellors and assistants. In A. D. 250 Cyprian already assumed for the Bishop successorship to the Apostles in their office. A dangerous circumstance was the fact that these Bishops in all the larger cities, as Rome, Alexandria, Antioch, Ephesus, Athens, Thessalonica, Corinth, were accorded higher honors than those in the smaller cities. Soon enough they began to build the glory of the Roman ecclesia, as founded by the two chief Apostles, Paul and Peter. In this way the foundation was laid for the system which finally developed into Papa (Pope) or Holy Father who is now regarded by the Church of Rome as the head of the Church of Jesus Christ. He is the ultimate outcome, the legitimate fruit and offspring of the distinction made in the early centuries of the present era between the clergy and the laity. From these remarks and from the results of this system it will readily be seen that there is not and never was any apostolic authority in favor of such class distinction.

Last Fall, the writer heard a minister in a protestant church in a sermon say, that ministers have better opportunities than the laymembers, for cultivating the spiritual element, inasmuch as their thoughts are never distracted by secular things. I was made to query with myself: Are tilling the soil and plying the saw and plane, and selling goods over the counter secular things, hence the dignity of the cleric'd class? Is it secular or unholy for a man to work with his hands that which is good that he may have to give to him that needeth? Was tent making, in which Paul frequently engaged between his sermons, secular work? Does God call some men to perform sacred work and leave the others to trudge on in their secular pursuits as best they may, and make them dependent on a clergy for their spiritual meat and drink? From appearances it would seem so, but fortunately there is another, a better way. Paul may preach, but his hearers have the privilege to search the Scriptures whether the things he affirms are so. If they are not "so," it is no breach of propriety, and no violation of the church rules if they differ with him. Is it not the bounden duty of everyone who has heard and obeyed the gospel, to tell the "joyous message" to others. "They that were scattered passed through announcing the glad tidings—the word." Acts viii: 4. As we search the inspired record we find that they who "preached the word" are the 5000 men who up to this time had become believers and members of the church at Jerusalem. Acts iv: 4. The record says that "they were all scattered abroad except the apostles." No waiting here for an ordained clergyman; no holding back, to be ordained or invested with "authority," or advanced with "holy orders" to announce the glad tidings of the coming Kingdom of God. The case was urgent: the people throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria" were in need of the good news, and the hearts of these simple proclaimers of "the word" being filled with the love of Christ they preached the Word.

Encouragement of the distinction between a "clergy" and "the laity" has the tendency to discourage independent study of the Scripture on the part of the hearers. The writer has observed during 6 years of service in a denomination, which fosters a separate class of clerics, that the great majority of the hearers are wofully ignorant of God's plan of redemption. All this because the clergyman is a sort of repository and distributing center of knowledge of heavenly things. This system denies the so-called "laity"—very improperly so-called—the privilege of administering baptism, and the breaking of bread in remembrance of the Lord's death; only the regular clergy are to perform these rites. Why not grant these privileges to the laity? Because they are seculars, and have not been authorized, i. e. ordained by the imposition of hands by the ecclesiastical dignitaries. The believers in apostolic times had no difficulty in this matter, for we read that "they continued steadfast in the Apostles' doctrine (singular), and in fellowship, and in breaking bread, and in prayers." Acts ii. 42. Philip was not an apostle, and yet we find him baptizing. So also Ananias at Damascus baptized Saul of Tarsus. As far as known to the writer Ananias was not even a preacher but an ordinary man—a member of the church at Damascus, and disciple of Jesus Christ. Why not permit any true believer to baptize into the name of Jesus Christ? Why not accord them the privilege, the right to commemorate the Lord's death by the breaking of bread? Yea, why deny any one the right to perform these Christian duties in a becoming manner? The validity of the act is not dependent upon so-called "apostolic succession" or high ecclesiastical authority, or any man-made device. "The word," though presented by "ignorant and unlearned men" in the world's judgment, is not any the less the Word, which Jehovah said should accomplish that which he pleased and prosper in the thing whereto he sent it.

One thought more though before closing. Let every parent observe the Apostolic injunction: "Provoke not your children to anger, but nourish them up in discipline and admonition of the Lord." Eph. vi. 4. Let the Word not only be read, but studied in the home, by all the members of the family. Let a daily Bible reading be practiced, and the results will be truly marvellous. No preaching service, good as it is in its place; no Sunday School, however useful in its sphere; no prayer meeting, however edifying, and no other arrangement, however well adapted to its purpose, can substitute the instruction the children should receive in the home. No one can so fully understand the disposition and needs of the children, and no one in all the world has such access to their tender and receptive minds as the parents. And yet it is a fact that in many families, called Christian, days and weeks pass without a single word from Scripture or a single prayer to God. Brethren, let us exhort one another daily. Let us with our families search daily in the Scriptures, which are able to make us wise unto salvation. No clergyman, no layman, but every one a part of the royal priesthood to offer up gifts unto God, acceptable through Jesus Christ our Lord.

A. H. ZILMER.

Questions Answered.

Was man created mortal or immortal? Some say, mortal, and some say immortal. I would say neither, but they are subject to either, to immortality or eternal life by obedience, or to mortality or death by disobedience. So we see that man disobeyed and brought mortality or death upon himself and his posterity by his disobedience, so death was passed upon all men, for all have sinned. This is the work of the first Adam, also death is the doom of all in Adam. This is all that the first Adam could do, but thanks be to God who gave us the victory over death through our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. God gave his only begotten Son, for the redemption of fallen man. The first Adam was made of the earth earthy, the second Adam was the Lord from heaven. "As is the earthly such are they also that are earthly, and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly." 1 Cor. xv. 47, 48. Now we see that we are of the earthly, yet when we were sinners without God and without hope in the world, God sent his only begotten Son, begotten by the Word, and born of woman. He took upon himself the nature of man, sin excepted, and for sin condemned sin in the flesh. On account of his begottal he could live without sin and in perfect obedience to the Father. Some say that in the first man we forfeited life, and in the second man life is restored again, and the length of this second life depends on our conduct in this life. The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk. money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can send bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

THE date on the first page of this issue should be April 6, instead of 2.

WILL Sister F. L. Smith, who wrote for the "love feast" some time ago, please send us her address?

WE call the attention of our readers to Brother Ramsey's card in this paper. He wishes to hear from you immediately. We expect him to include Plymouth in his list of appointments.

ONE more was added to the church in Plymouth on Sunday, April 3rd. Brother W. S. Hendricks made the good confession, and from this time on will strive for the kingdom. May he be found at last with the overcomers.

THE preparations for war are steadily going on; but no decided action has been taken. "Men's hearts failing for fear" is being verified daily. Thickest darkness seems just ahead. To those watching the signs it is the time to rejoice. Bonar said:—"It is the fragments of broken thrones lying across our path that assure us that our route is the true one, and that the end is near." May we stand firm through all the trials that come to us.

Law or Gospel—Which? No. 4.

When we affirm that we are not under law, but under grace or favor,—and the middle wall of partition between Jews and Gentiles has been broken down,—and that the ministration of death has been done away,—and that we are become dead to the law by the body of Christ,—and are delivered from the law, that being dead, wherein we were held; when we thus affirm we are met with the assertion that "There were two laws, one moral and the other ceremonial,"—and all the Scriptures referred to by us as evidence of the truth of our position, have reference to the ceremonial law only. We both agree that something was abolished; and it is now incumbent upon us to show by additional arguments

5thly, That the Two-law theory is not true. More than 150 times the whole Covenant made with Israel at Sinai is called "THE LAW," (singular,) and laws (plural) not once, to the best of our knowledge.

6th. In Luke ii. 22-24, we read of the law concerning purification, and the sanctification of all the first-born and the sacrifices in these cases. This was not written on the tables of stone, but in the BOOK OF THE LAW, and, as if in anticipation of the departure from sound doctrine in these last days, is called LAW OF MOSES in verse 22, and the LAW OF THE LORD in verse 24, showing conclusively that the Law of Moses and the Law of the Lord were the same law. Moses received the whole from the Lord and gave it to the people. In verse 39 these ceremonies are positively called The Law of the Lord. It says when they had performed all things according to the Law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee." This will rend the doom of the Two-Law Theory with all who want the truth in the premises, and it is for them we write.

7. In Deut. xxxi. 24-26 Moses is said to have commanded the Levites to "Take this Book of the Law, and put it into the side of the ark of the covenant of the Lord." Here is the same of the Book; It is the Book of the Law.

In Joshua viii. 31 this same Book is called "The Law of Moses."

In 2 Chronicles xvii. 9 this Book is called "The Book of the Law of the Lord GIVEN by Moses," and makes all plain.

In Neh viii. 1, 8, 18 this Book is called both "The Book of the Law of Moses," and also "The Book of the Law of the Lord." This exhibits the truth of the unity of the law to all who have eyes to see; we can expect no others to see.

8. The commands written upon the stones are never once called "The Law of God" as is what was written in the Book of the Law. The stones did not contain all of what was written in the Book; but the Book did contain what was written on the stones.

9. In Mal. iv. 4 we have infallible proof that the Decalogue and the statutes and judgments were ALL commanded unto Moses in Horeb at the same time.

10. God himself styles the laws on the tables the law of Moses. Mal. iv. 4. It was God's law also; he commanded it.

11. In Exodus xxiv. 7 the Book is called the "Book of the Covenant," and the covenant was submitted to the people from the Book. And the people agreed to do ALL GOD SAID. Was the Decalogue left out?

12. All the curses (penalties) of the covenant were written in this Book. See Ex. xxiv. Note the words: "Curses of the covenant." There were no curses on the stones (i.e. no penalties) and we are asked to believe that the penalties have been blotted out: the penalties were nailed to the cross. Can the advocates of that theory explain how the law can be operative without penalties? Are we required to set reason and commonsense and experience aside in order to become a law-advocate? How is that, when the Great God invites us to come and reason together with him? Will not every honest and intelligent person decide with us that the blotting out of the penalties of the law nullifies the law?

Perhaps all of our readers may not know that a certain prophetess has lately added a new penalty for the infraction of the Fourth Commandment. She has decided that the keeping of the 7th day is the seal of God's children in these last days; and all others have the mark of the beast. We presume this was because the nailing of the original penalty to the cross left matters in a bad shape for this new community. Jesus and Paul and Peter have no voice in this matter now. The exceeding great and precious promises,—The gospel of the kingdom,—and the gospel of Christ, have since the apostolic age, been proposing faith and obedience as the test, Mark xvi.; but, as if that test was no longer able to select temples for God to dwell in, the law of the Sabbath takes its place. What an awful delusion! It is part of a law which could not give life in the past. Can it do it now? If so, does it not set aside our Life-Giver? It does! We charge it upon the woman that she sets aside the gospel test for the Law Test. And it makes no difference what else she says about the "dear Savior," she makes both his death and his gospel useless things by making Law a test, see Gal. ii. 21, for reference to his death,—and besides that, it is propagating another gospel, which [in fact] is not another, but a perversion of the gospel Paul preached, and therefore the words of the Spirit by him fall upon her as well as upon the man or angel who should presume to do that very thing. What are they? "Let him or her be accursed." Gal. i. 8. "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him who called you into the grace (favor) of Christ unto another gospel." Law and Gospel are at antipodes. To save her life and that of her followers she could not harmonize, or mix law with gospel. There are no Two-Laws to hide behind.

13. In Rom. xiii. 8-10 Paul in quoting from the law, quotes in one sentence from both the tables and the book. So that it is God's truth that the contents of the Book and the Tables constitute one law, or covenant.

14. "Master, which is the great commandment?" Matt. xxii. 36-39. These words were addressed to Jesus. His answer was,—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment, and the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Neither of these two greatest commands are found on the tables, but in the Book. If the contents of the book were abolished, where is the command to love either God or our neighbor? Is it not painful to see it claimed that the ten commands are a perfect moral law,—when the two very greatest are not among them?

15. Jesus had to alter several of the ten commandments to make them comport with the ministration of the Spirit which he was introducing,—but the two great ones quoted from the Book needed no altering. They were incorporated just as they were. What now, about a perfect code upon the tables? We are taking lessons from Jesus now!! Earnestly, we ask, would there have been any need of the ten commands if the two great ones quoted in the last paragraph had been lived up to? Ah, surely Jesus knew why they were the greatest. They involved heart work.

16. Exodus xxiv. 3-8, 12, proves that Moses wrote the ten commandments and all the commands given were recorded from the 20th chapter to the 24th, in the Book of the Covenants and read it to the people before God wrote the ten commandments on the tables of stone. Does not this annihilate the two-law theory? Do not fail to read Exodus xxiv. throughout, reader,—if you want to know the truth.

17. Jehoshaphat sent princes and Levites throughout all the cities of Judah to teach the people, and they had the book of the law of the Lord with them. 2 Chron. xvii. 7-9. Nothing is said about the tables of stone. Paragraph 16 shows they did not need to carry them. The ten commands were in the Book.

18. In 2 Chron. xxxiii 8, Jehovah says that the WHOLE LAW and the statutes and the ordinances were commanded by him, by the hand of Moses. Is there any reason here for two distinct laws, one the Law of the Lord, and the other the Law of Moses? Does this not illustrate what Paul says, The Law was ordained by angels in the hands of a Mediator, and then identify that Mediator for us. Take notice that Jehovah's signature is attached to the above passage.

19. James ii. 10 emphatically teaches us that the WHOLE LAW is broken when one point of it is violated. Do the words "whole law" mean any less than the whole law? If not, then the violation of any part of the law in the Book made one guilty of all written on the tables of stone.

20. James ii. 9 proves that those who respect persons transgress the whole law on the principle stated in verse 10.

21. Respect of persons is not found on the tables of stone, but in the Book of the Law of the Lord. And, as if to once more head off the unwarrantable claim that the ten commandments are a complete moral code, independent of the Book of the Law, and lives after the Book of Law is dead, the Spirit explains on what principle he who respects persons transgresses the whole law; viz: "For [i. e. Because] he who said thou shalt not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. Now, if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill thou art become a transgressor of the law." It is on that principle that one who respects persons breaks the law of the book, which says "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," also breaks the law written on tables of stone relating to murder and adultery. THE SAME GOD commanded those on the tables and those in the book; that is the reason given by James. All go to make up the law; all are of equal authority. Who can deny now that the two-law theory is baseless?

22. After a succession of wicked kings on David's throne came the good king Josiah, who ordered the temple repaired and cleansed, after purging the land of idolatry. While the temple repairs were going on, the high-priest found the "Book of the Covenant," and Shaphan the Scribe read it to the king, who, on hearing the words of the Book rent his clothes and sent to a prophetess to enquire of the Lord concerning it. The answer that came back to him was, that God's wrath would be kindled against Jerusalem, but because his heart was tender and he humbled himself it should not occur in his time. 2 Kings xxii. 8-20 shows that they found the First and Second commands of the Decalogue in the Book "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," and "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image," etc. This they had done, hence the threatened wrath. Where does the two-law theory stand now?

23. In Rom. vii. 4, Paul says, "My brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ," and in verse 6, "But now we are delivered from the law,—that being dead wherein we were held. Is this said of the so-called ceremonial law, given from Sinai? The answer is found in the next verse, where he says, "I had not known sin, but by the law; for I had not known lust except the law had said, thou shalt not covet." No honest person would say the law of verse 6 that was dead, was not the law they were freed from because it was dead. And all know that "Thou shalt not covet" was written on the tables of stone. Here, after fairly disproving the two-law theory twenty-three times, we rest this phase of the case, and try to exhibit

XVI. The weakness of the arguments in defence of the two-law theory, and the ignorance of God's Eternal Purpose that lies back of them.

On p. 13 of "The Two Laws," by J. N. Andrews, we have what purports to be the Distinction Between the Moral Law and the Ceremonial Law, as follows:

1. "The Moral Law was spoken by God." Deut. iv. 12. "The Ceremonial Law was spoken by Moses." Deut. i. 1-6.

Be it known, or if known, let it be remembered, that these are men-given names, to begin with;—and very improper names too, as we expect to show more particularly by and by.

2. Does this mean that Moses was author of the Ceremonial Law because he spoke it? and God was the author of the other because it was spoken by him? The true inwardness of this so-called distinction may be seen from the fact that Moses only spoke what God told him to speak. This is calculated to entrap the ignorant, of course. But truth needs no such Jesuitical methods.

2. "The Moral Law was written by God on tables of stone." Ex. xxiv. 12. "The Ceremonial Law was written by Moses in a book." Deut. xxxi. 24.

Since Moses wrote in a book only what God commanded him to write there, is it the material it was written on, that makes one superior to the other? If not why is it referred to as a distinction? The reason is that it may appear to sanction the assumption of two separate laws, one of which could be abolished, and the other remain to build another apostate church upon. This fallacy we have already exposed to some extent.

3. "The Moral Law was right, true good." Neh. ix. 13. "The Ceremonial was not good." Ezek xx. 25.

Here the God of the Bible is said to have imposed a Ceremonial Law that was not good. We brand this charge as altogether false, to say nothing of the awful presumption of it. "The Moral Law was right, and true and good." The other is said to be not good, and this implies that it was bad,—and bad in this connection means not right, and not true. It is a wicked, garbled quotation, calculated to deceive. We will examine the passage offered as proof that the Ceremonial Law was not good. It reads: Neh. ix. 13, as follows—

"Thou camest down also upon Mount Sinai and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them right judgments, and true laws, good statutes and good judgments, and madest known unto them [what they did not know before, of course] Thy Holy Sabbath, and commandest them precepts, statutes and laws by the hand of Moses thy servant." The fact that the Sabbath was made known to them is suppressed, because that would refute the claim that it had existed from creation. 2nd. Instead of its being only the so-called moral Law that was right and true and good,—The words right and true and good are positively applied to the judgments and laws and statutes, [the very things our author says were not good] and commandments."

We will now examine Ezek. xx: 25, to see what grounds there are therefor saying that the ceremonial Law was not good. Have we not just seen God's decision that the judgments, laws and statutes were good? How, then, can we expect to find from another part of his word that they were bad? Will he stultify himself? Let us see:—

At the 11th verse of the 20th of Ezek. God says he gave Israel the very statutes and judgments and Sabbaths, called good in Neh. ix. 13, 14.

What next? Why verse 13 says they rebelled and would not walk in his statutes, and despised his judgments, and polluted his Sabbaths, and he "said I would pour out my fury upon them, but he withdrew his hand (v. 22) that his name he not polluted before the heathen, in whose sight I brought them forth..... v. 25. "Wherefore [Because of this] I gave them also statutes not good and judgments whereby they should not live; and I polluted them in their own gifts in that they caused to pass through the fire all that openeth the womb, that I might make them desolate, to the end that they might know that I am the Lord."

Words could express it no plainer, that the supposed proof that the ceremonial Law was not good, only mentions the punishments for violating what are called the ceremonial and moral laws. And so we see another gross misrepresentation. But

4. "The Moral Law was a law which if a man do he shall even live in it," Ezek. xx: 11, 13, 21. "The Ceremonial Law was a law whereby they should not live. Ezek. xx: 25.

Here the same verse is pressed into service to make another difference between the moral and ceremonial laws. The remarks respecting it above, are equally applicable here.

5. "The moral law was perfect. Ps. ix: 7. The ceremonial law made nothing perfect." Heb. vii: 19.

The 19th Psalm makes no allusion whatever to the Sinai Covenant. The Psalmist lived in an atmosphere of faith and hope. The ten commandments did not enlighten people in respect to the Eternal Sworn-to Purpose of God in the Covenants of Promise. The Psalmist did not refer to a ministration of death as sweeter than honey, and more to be desired than gold. Was even an Adventist ever known to go into ecstacies because he was told not to steal, nor kill, nor commit adultery? Do they ever sing hallelujahs because the ten commandments never offered them anything to hope for after death for keeping them? If not, then why or how could the Psalmist? He did not. He speaks of the laws, commandments, statutes and charge given to Abraham to be kept in obedience to his faith. Of course the everlasting covenant imposed rules of discipline, whenever the covenant which only offered temporal blessings, exacted conditions.

It was the law, that made nothing perfect, not a portion of it. The Two-law theory is not true. Why is not the truth of the matter in the words following quoted? It shows that although the law made nothing perfect, "the bringing in of a better hope did" [make perfect.] So we see (1) The law had a hope. (2) The nature of the hope prevented it from perfecting anything. (3) The hope of the Law was to be realized in this life. (4) The reason why it would not perfect the conscience was because it was compulsory law; do this or die; to this, or the land will spue you out. Its better could be obeyed while the heart was far off from God. It did not therefore lift men to a higher plane of existence. And, as we have shown, it was the lack of faith that made the Sinai covenant necessary for a time.

Report of Labor.

With permission of the Church, I will try to give a short report of our meeting held at Roll, Indiana.

Bro. D. T. Halstead began meeting February 17th, and continued until the 27th. The weather being very bad all the time, however, as we had not had preaching for a long time, we had a well filled house at every meeting and very attentive hearers. There are a great many people here that do not belong to any church, that think we have the truth. I think all we need is to keep an able minister at work. The people are well informed on the Bible, they all understand when it is proclaimed in the right way. We have worked through the most serious time. We have broken down almost all the prejudice, so that all we have to work against is a small congregation of the Methodist Church.

Bro. Halstead is the father of the Church at Dundee, he with Bro. Hornady organized the Church twenty five years ago. Since that time we have had to fight many battles for the truth of the Bible. Bro. Halstead did some faithful work while he was here. He preached twelve sermons in all. On Friday he baptized two, which were added to the Church. The meeting closed Sunday night with a well filled house, but before parting we had the Lord's table spread, and quite a number partook of the emblems. Then we separated to meet some time in the near future.

We ask the sympathy and prayers of God's people, to remember us that we may be a working congregation once again.

Brethren, What think You?

It is said that from one bushel of corn the distiller gets four gallons of whiskey, which when thinned with water, retails for nearly $17.00. The United States government gets $4.40 in the shape of revenue, the railroad company, for freight on the corn and whiskey, $4.00, the retailer,—saloon keeper—$7.60. The consumer gets drunk, the wife gets a sore and hunger, the children get beaten, and the man who votes for license, to carry on this kind of business, is likely to get his part in the lake of fire, where the beast and false prophet will be found. —Selected by T. E. Adams.

Obituary

Sister Emma C. Hulett, wife of Andrew B. Hulett, died in Liberal, Mo., March 20, aged 34 years, 6 months. She was baptized into the one faith by Bro. Alonzo Adams some four years ago, and her faith was always strong and her trust firm in Jesus. We desire her to rest by the side of her father, till Christ shall call her from the grave. She leaves a husband and six children to mourn our loss, but they mourn not as them that have no hope, for we believe that Christ died and rose again, and them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

Sleep on, dear one, till Christ is coming
To call the loved ones He took home;
And then we'll meet thee, darling one,
We're waiting here for a reunion come.

Under the head of "Biblical Research," a religious paper describes the visit of a lady to Mount Sinai. Is it because the popular idea of Biblical research is thought to be accomplished by travelling in Palestine that so many people know so little of what the Bible teaches? True Biblical research best begins at Genesis, 1 and leaves off at Revelation 22.

One day a scholarly-looking man, plainly dressed, went into a church in Holland, and took a seat near the pulpit. A few minutes later a haughty lady stood up to the pew, and seeing a stranger in it, ordered him by an imperious gesture, to leave it. The stranger obeyed and going into one of the seats reserved for the poor, joined devoutly in the services. After they were over, the lady's friends gathered around her, and demanded whether she knew who it was that she had treated so rudely.

"No. Some pushing stranger," she replied.

"It was King Oscar of Sweden," was the answer. "He is here visiting the queen."

The oldest marriage proposal of which there is definite record is 3,425 years old. This remarkable ancient record, which is in the Oriental department of the British Museum, is a small clay tablet, measuring eight inches by four inches, and contains about ninety-eight lines of very fine cuneiform writing. It is made of Nile mud, and bears upon it the marriage proposal of a Pharaoh for the hand of a daughter of the King of Babylon. It is a duplicate copy of a letter written about B. C. 1530.

Hrouth (Book of Ruth C. V.) Chap. 4.

1. And Booz went up to the gateway and took his seat there, and lo, the nearest of kin was going his by of whom Booz had spoken; and Booz said unto him, Incline out and sit down here between yourselves; and he inclined out and sat down.

2. And Booz took ten men from the elders of the city and said: Do ye be seated here; And they sat down.

3. And Booz said unto the nearest of kin, There is the portion of the field that belongeth to our brother Elimelech, and that was given unto Naomin who is returning from a land of Moaub.

4. And I have said I would uncover thine ear, saying: Do thou acquire it in the presence of these seated here and in the presence of the elders of my laity? If thou be the nearest of kin, assert thy nearest of kinship right; and if thou do not assert it tell me and I shall know that there is no one besides thee to assert this right; and I am next to thee. And he said, I am he, I will assert it.

5. And Booz said, the day that thou acquirest the field from the hand of Naomin and from Hrouth the Moabbitish wife of the dead one, it behoveth thee also to acquire her so as to raise up the name of the dead one over his inheritance.

6. And the nearest of kin said, I shall not be able to assert my right for myself lest perchance I corrupt my inheritance: Do thou assert my right for thyself, because I am not able to assert it.

7. And this was the statute formerly in Israel in respect to the nearest of kinship right and in respect to the exchange thereof in order to establish every word; and the man loosed his sandal and gave it to his neighbor who was investigating his nearest of kinship right, and thus was an instrument of testimony in Israel.

8. And the nearest of kin said unto Booz, Do thou acquire my nearest of kinship right for thyself; and he loosed his sandal and gave it unto him.

9. And Booz said unto the elders and all the laity, Ye are witnesses today that I have acquired all that belonged to Elimelech and all that belonged to Chelaion and to Maalaon from the hand of Naomin:

10. And Hrouth moreover the Moabbitish wife of Maalaon have I acquired for myself for a wife, to raise up the name of the dead man over his inheritance, and the name of the dead man will not have perished from among his brethren and from out the tribe of his laity. Ye are witnesses today.

11. And all the laity who were in the gateway said, We are witnesses; (not eye-witness though) and the elders said, May the Lord have granted that thy wife who goeth her way into thy house may be as Brachael (Rachel) and as Leia, who both of them built the house of Israel and caused ability to be in Ephrathu, and there will be a name in Beethleem:

12. And may thy house have become as the house of Phares, whom Thamar brought forth for Joudas, of the Seed that the Lord will give thee from this handmaid.

13. And Booz took Hrouth, and she became his wife, and he went in unto her: and the Lord gave her conception and she brought forth a son:

14. And the women said unto Noomin, Blessed be the Lord who hath not left thee without an inheritor today, and may he have called thy name in Israel.

15. And he will be unto thee a stayer of life (soul) and for the support of thy grey-head, because the daughter-in-law who loved thee brought him forth, she who is better to thee than seven sons.

16. And Noeman took the offspring and placed it in her bosom, and became his nurse.

17. And the neighbors called his name, saying, A son hath been born to Noomin, and they called his name Obiael. He was the father of Jessai, father of David.

18. And these are the generations of Phares: Phares begot Aminadab;

20. And Aminadab begot Naasson, and Naassson begot Salmaon.

21. And Salmaon begot Booz and Booz begot Obiael.

22. And Obiael begot Jessai and Jessai begot David.

COMMENT ON CHAPTERS 1, 2, 3, 4.

Aside from its divine import and oracular importance as the detailed history of the generation of David the type as well as the forebear of the Greater Son of David, this book is the finest and certainly most unique pastoral poem in all literature. The pictures are true to life and show the master-hand in every detail of finish and color. There is not a stroke too much nor too little.

The golden strand of the divine eminence is so deftly interwoven with the human possibility in the trials, tribulation and hopes of the chief characters herein depicted that in the light of the gospel of our day, it would seem a work of supererogation to do more than call the reader's attention to the fact.

The term or name Hrouth (not "Ruth," as there never was any such Semetic—Hebrew—Greek or any other Semetic named means "red" such a red as a maiden's blush, the same Semitic root in this name as in Broubeen ("Reuben").

The name "Naome" as the reader will observe is "Noomin"—the same Semitic root that appears in Nome's name, corrupted in the C. V. to "Noah" with the additional syllable—"min" which is the old form of the pronoun Dative plural of the pronoun meaning "for you." The whole name meaning "one who apprehendeth for you," and considered a name that had a blessing attending it, as comes out in the narrative here "Call me not Noomin, but call me a bitter thing." We may safely presume that there was a time when these Scriptural names, the patronymics and the prophetic names at least were understood in their divine oracular import—not by the laity generally, nor by all the priesthood but by some, the esoteric few; and we have the general interpretation frequently given us in the Scriptures themselves. For instance in Mark iii. 17 two of the disciples receive from the Christ the significant additional name of "Boanerges" and interpreted to mean "sons of Thunder." Now this is not a translation of the word by any means. The word translated means "An energized cry for help," and is a compound word made up of Boa, a cry for help, and an adjective meaning something energized. The final letter g of the word Boa in the earlier Doric form would be n instead of g and the initial e of the other word would be elided or coalesced with a by a well known euphonic rule. The way the common interpretation comes to be made is this: The thunder according to the knowledge and belief of that day was recognized to be the special manifestation of the divine energy. The gospel call is "a call for help" expressed by this other word. These men were to be used as instrumentalities to raise this cry, and their cry was to be inspired with the divine energy.

Even the names in the closing Davidic genealogy are so twisted in the C. V. and R. V. that no true Semite would ever recognize them. Phares becomes Perez, Esrom becomes Hezron, Aram becomes Ram, Naasson becomes Nahshon and Jonbeed becomes Obed and Jessai becomes Jesse.

The reader will do well to compare the whole, verse by verse, as the variations are too many to call specific attention to in brief, comment such as this must necessarily be.

CHAS. GARDNER.

His Mercy Endureth Forever.

How much is comprehended in these words of David we can only know when we have been lifted up out of some deep, dark place by God's divine mercy and brought into the light of truth again as he was. David wandered away from the right paths, and when he desired to return to the Lord and was welcomed, his rejoicing found expression in the words—"O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good; for his mercy endureth forever," and these words are recorded in the Book of books to which we can turn and read and gain strength and consolation, and renewed faith in the Father of all mercies.

"His mercy endureth forever," and it is extended toward all mankind, with the provision that they submit their erring wills to his divine will. God knows what is best for his children, but he has given each a will of his own to do as he wishes. When man has followed his own will and it has been exercised in a wrong direction and brought him into ill-health or moral wickedness, then if he repent and turn to the Father and surrender his will to the divine will, he will be welcomed with joy and be forgiven, and mercy will be extended toward him, no difference how low he has fallen, if he has not gone beyond the dead line. "For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still." Isa. v. 12.

Though Israel has transgressed his laws and been a rebellious people, and as a punishment have been scattered among all nations, without a king persecuted and driven about from place to place, yet his merciful hand is stretched out toward them still and he will have mercy upon them and bring again into their land, and establish a kingdom and provide a King, a righteous King,—even Christ, whom they will accept.
